The Chicago strike is only one of many the ITU has been waging across the country.

Union sources said that all the strikes called since the enactment of the Taft-Hartley law had cost the union about $8,000,000 in benefits, legal fees and other expenses.

This outlay includes the publication of union-owned newspapers in Trenton, N.J., and Colorado Springs, Colo.

A total of 25 strikes all but two against newspapers, are still in progress although some were started before the Taft-Hartley act was passed.

Places where strikes have been called after passage of the act and are still in progress include, Chicago, Nassau County, N.Y., Jamestown, N.Y., Allentown, Pa., Abilene, Tex., Bartlesville, Okla., Columbus, Ga., Quincy, Mass., Corpus Christi, Tex., Courtland, N.Y., New York City, Huntington, W. Va., Orlando, Fla., Laredo, Tex., and Chesterton W. Va.

Strikes which have started but have been settled since the Taft-Hartley law include those at Philadelphia, Pa., Louisville, Ky., Lockhaven, Pa., Scranton, Pa., Kansas City, Mo., Boston, Mass., Norristown, Pa., Seattle, Wash., Longview-Kelson, Wash., Los Angeles, Cal., Herrin, Ill., Murphysboro, Ill., Warren, O., and New York City and Chicago job shop strikes.

Strikes which started before the Taft-Hartley law became effective and are still in progress include thase at Winnepeg, Can., Nov. 8, 1945, the union's oldest strike and at St. Petersburg, Fla., on Nov. 19, 1945, the union's oldest strike in the United States.

Tippling Teddy

Thanksgiving Tale

By Harman W. Nichols

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—(UP)—This is a Thanksgiving story which never has been told.

It's about a character named "Vic," a stubby little Russian black bear.

Vic was a mascot of our Air Force boys back in 1944 in Hanchung, China. He got his name in a natural sort of way because a white "V" monogrammed the front of his neck.

The teddy cost the boys at the airfield exactly $4.49 in American money. But, according to Maj. John H. Washington, now a liaison officer in the inter-American affairs bureau here, it took a couple bushels of Chinese paper money to close the deal.

Vic became a favorite of the fly boys. He liked the left-overs from the spam cans. And the pilots also knew his fondness for chocolate bars and chewing gum.

Thanksgiving day 1944, came up bad weather. There was no flying that day so the boys wrote all the letters home that would ever get there in months, and settled down to enjoy a Thanksgiving meal.

Canned turkeys were in from the States.

Vic watched un-canning with interest, his black snout turned up.

Before the boys un-canned the gobblers, they chipped in with a few more bushels of Chinese money for some white wine and made a few fine crocks of punch.

The boys did their best on the fine turkeys and the yams and the other stuff. But some wine was left over. So they left it outside in the crocks to keep cool.

Vic, who apparently had just as good a nose for wine as he had for turkey, sniffed. As the boys watched, the bear worked himself off his leash. He sidled up to a tree no bigger than a grown-up pencil and, thinking he had spied a forest, hied off to hide.

The boys went to bed, forgetting to re-leash Vic.

In the middle of the night, Maj. Washington heard a lot of snoring in his room. He rolled over and learned that the source of the noise was right beside him in the same "sack." Somebody had had too much Thanksgiving turkey and too much Chinese wine.

A little black fellow named Vic.

Ray of Sunshine

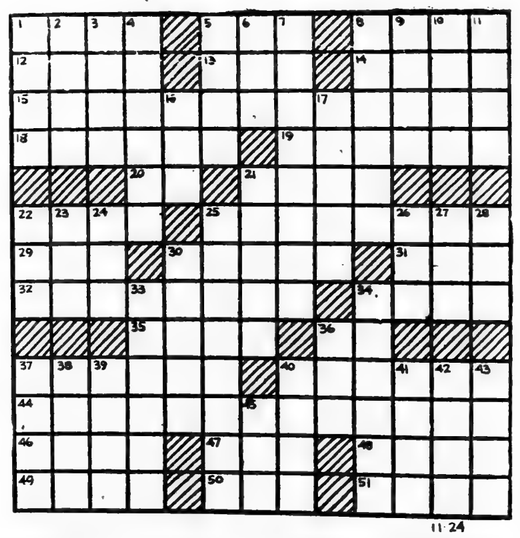
Chief Has It Soft

By Aline Mosby

PALM SPRINGS, Calif., Nov. 23.—(UP)—Today's ray of sunshine concerns the happy life of the police chief of Palm Springs.

Chief Gus Kettmann hobnobs with movie stars who winter at this desert cash register, beats them at tennis, appears on their radio shows and rushes off to Hollywood to be a house guest of Jack Warner, Hal Roach, and other movie moguls.

He also keeps Palms Springs crime under control. This includes hauling drunk celebrities back to their $45-a-day bungalows ("I don't like to lock them up") or pulling some luminary out of a swimming pool that didn't have any water in it.



Gus is broad-shouldered, young and handsome, and he carries out his duties in well-tailored slacks, soft sport shirt and tweed sport jacket.

"I never wear a uniform," he explains. "If I walked into a club in uniform, it would disturb the complacency of the guests."

Kettmann is sympathetic with the tourist business. He runs a small bungalow resort on the side himself.

Last year Chief Kettmann was runner-up in the Palm Springs tennis tournament. This talent has made him honorary member of both the Racquet club and Tennis club, lolling-grounds of movie stars.

"I play tennis with Paul and Charlie and Mousy and Errol," says the chief, meaning Paul Lukas, Charlie Farrell, Mrs. William Powell and Errol Flynn.

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

How to Lose Ball Games

FROM THE LOOKS of the records, football teams who claim through pride or geographical necessity the little town of Chapel Hill as their home port, are a hard crew to beat. The three current residents—the Carolina varsity and freshmen and the local high school—had compiled a combination record of some 20-odd victories this year with a couple of gawdy ties thrown in to break the monotony, and all without a loss.

At least, they were without a loss until Lady Luck stepped boldly in Monday night. That was when the high schoolers lost their first game of the season, not on the field of battle, but by drawing the wront slip of paper out of a hat. That seems to be the way the officials in charge of the state football playoffs settle things these days when everything doesn't run according to Hoyle.

The circumstances behind the draw were simple enough. Chapel Hill and Laurinburg tied last Friday night in the Eastern class "A" playoffs. That left the statewide championship game scheduled for this weekend with more than enough opponents to fill the playoff bill. Laurinburg, underdog in the first contest, refused to engage in another to be played today, figuring its chances were better using hats instead of helmets. They were right.

Bingle, Bangle, Bungle

ALL OF WHICH left Chapel Hill out in the cold, not because of their inability to play football, but because they didn't put the right hand in the right hat at the right time. The whole thing doesn't sound too cricket and it just isn't football either. It is purely the incompetency of the officials in charge to correctly handle situations that have been continually bungled since high school athletics were invented in North Carolina.

One point in favor of the officials—at least, they are consistent. They also fumbled the ball on the Class "AA" playoffs this season. Oue in the western division of this circuit, High Point and Burlington finished the season in complete deadlock. They were told that they could: 1) flip as Chapel Hill did; or 2) play Friday night with the winner taking on powerful Fayetteville the following evening.

That was asking more than the required call of duty, or at least, so thought High Point and Burlington. They refused to do either, forfeiting their chance at the state title, and will playoff for themselves in Winston-Salem Friday night. The state officials will still have a game though, with third place Salisbury taking on titanic Fayetteville.

A Definite Need

NOW, THAT DOESN'T sound like much of a way to run anything short of a college newspaper. Both conflicts occurred because of the lack of foresight on the part of the state officials. The games can't be moved forward a week because of the high school Shrine game in Charlotte next weekend. Preparation should have been made to complete the playoffs last week, but since it wasn't, a very weak high school athletic system in the state receives a further jolt.

Which brings one to the question of what's wrong with North Carolina secondary athletics. There is, of course, a definite lack of funds to conduct a proper athletic set-up. But it doesn't always take money to have the proper leadership and organization to take care and build a high school athletic plan that the state can be proud to point out.

North Carolinians have long taken pride in their great college teams that could fill the state capitol with the honors and trophies they have won. Yet, it is hard to take any pride, with a few exceptions, to our North Carolina high school athletic plants and system. The latter need not only the money of the people, but far more their time and energy to produce more Charlie Justices and give every young North Carolinian every chance at the sport of his choice.

Plaudits Due

THOUGH BOUNCED from the state playoffs by the luckless tactics of some mad hatter, Chapel Hill high school deserves an ovation that the luck of the draw can't take away from them. They have overcome many an obstacle in their unbeaten season. Their biggest opponent wasn't even on their schedule—the nationally honored Tar Heels—for it is hard for any high school team to compete against a major college team for interest and attention.

These Chapel Hill stars of today may be the Tar Heel stars of tomorrow, coming from a school that has already produced one All-American from its small student body. It's hard to win nine games in any league these days, especially in high school football where anything can happen and usually does.

There's nothing like a high school education to help the college man.

Carolina Climbs To Fourth In AP Poll

Williamson Ranks Tar Heels Third In Weekly Ratings

Carolina's convincing 20-0 victory over Duke's Blue Devils pai doff in good dividends for the Tar Heels in this week's Associated Press and Williamson football ratings. Carolina moved up to fourth in the AP poll and was ranked third in the Williamson system.

Coach Carl Snavely's locals polled a grand total of 1,071 votes in the AP poll. Included were 14 first place ballots. Michigan was first, receiving 105 first place votes to 38 for Notre Dame. The Irish, who were inactive this week, held on to second, boasting a total of 1,623 votes.

Army was the only other team above the Tar Heels. Coach Red Blaik's charges mustered out, 1,293 points to edge out Carolina. Army, like Notre Dame, was inactive this week.

In fifth place behind Carolina, was California. The Golden Bears are undefeated and untied this season, but their close squeeze past Stanford, 7-6, this week lost pestige for the West Coact club. California was ahead of the Tar Heels last week.

Rounding out the top ten in the AP ratings were Oklahoma, Northwestern, Soutern Methodist, Clemson, and Oregon.

According to the ratings released by Paul Williamson, Michigan's national supremacy is upheld. The Wolverines had a 98.6 rating compared for the top spot. Ranking next, in order, were Army, Carolina, Notre Dame, Georgia, Oklahoma, Clemson, SMU, California, and Northwestern.

Cotton Think of a Better Match

DOAK WALKER, at right, and Choo Choo Charlie Justice are being widely mentioned as possible Cotton bowl opponents on New Year's Day. With the Rose bowl sealed by a pact between the Pacific Coast conference and the "Holier than thou" Big Nine, and the Sugar bowl still an unknown possibility for the Tar Heels, the center of Carolina interest has shifted to the sunny sands of Dallas. A match between the pictured Junior sensations would be a mighty drawing card and would settle the dispute about the prowess of the SMU eleven.

Tar Heels Drill For Virginians; Ignore Bowl Bids

With bowl rumors at a premium and Carolina in the midst of all of them, the Tar Heels calmly plodded through the mist and mud to Navy field yesterday afternoon. It's Virginia this Saturday and after that there will be ample time to consider bowl bids.

Mud and Snavelv reigned supreme over the Carolina camp again yesterday after the Tar Heels had been granted a welcome respite from the bad weather long enough to whip Duke, 20-0. After giving his charges Monday off, Coach Carl Snavely was back at the helm on Navy field yesterday and had operations in full swing despite the intermittent rains.

Fifty-Third Renewal

Another old rivalry will be renewed on Saturday in Charlottesville, Va., when the Tar Heels meet the Cavaliers. The two teams have battled in 52 games since 1892 and Carolina has won 26 of them. The Virginians have won 23, and three games have ended in ties. The Carolina-Virginia rivalry is one of the oldest in the South.

Virginia Coach Art Guepe is one of the T-formation trail-blazers and his twice-beaten Cavaliers will give the Tar Heels no easy time this weekend. The Old Dominion eleven is built around last year's offensive stars, Joe McCary and Grover Jones, and has a wealth of capable reserves.

Saved the Bones

The Tar Heels came through last week's Duke scrap without any serious injuries and are expected to be in top shape for this week's encounter. The entire squad participated in yesterday's long session and continued to look good.

The Carolina defense continued to sparkle against Duke last week as the Blue Devils were held to less than half the yardage rolled up by the powerful Carolina offensive combine. The Tar Heel blocking, which had been sadly lacking in previous games, was savage last week and looked good again yesterday. All in all, last week's game indicated that the Tar Heels have improved greatly since their 7-7 tie with William and Mary three weeks ago.

Hardwooders Hold Clinic at Winston; Step up Workouts

Carolina's ,yet-to-be-unveiled 1949 basketball team spread a little knowledge and goodwill on Monday with the presentation of a clinical demonstration at Winston-Salem.

Coach Tom Scott and nine of his cagers spent the evening as guests of the Twin City Recreation department in showing the finer points of the game to over 600 high schoolers who assembled from miles around for the lecture.

The Tar Heels stressed new rules and fundamentals to the large group that crowded the Hanes Hosiery gym after the Carolinians had earlier been feted at a banquet at the Hanes high school. Members of the Hanes, Gray, and Reynolds high squads attended the meal.

Upon returning home, Scott announced that basketball drills will continue for the locals through the holidays on a two-a-day basis. Saturday the team will journey to Fort Bragg for a workout and warm-up tilt with one of the post's teams.

Those staying for holiday practice are Nemo Nearman, Coy Carson, John Tsantes, Charlie Thorne, Rip Ryan, Norm Mitchell, Benton Bennett, Hall Ferraro, Dan Nyimicz, Hugo Kappler, Red Wells, Bill White, Sandy Terrell, Terry Holmes, and Bill Miller.

Jayvees To Meet Middies In Annapolis Tilt Tomorrow

A portion of the Carolina football squad will embark on a new adventure today when 25 gridders will journey to Annapolis, Maryland, where they are scheduled to engage a Navy Jayvee eleven Thanksgiving morning at Navy stadium.

Although the Middies maintain a regular junior varsity team and conduct a regular schedule for them, it will be the second clash of the year for a Tar Heel eleven under this distinction. Last year Jayvee relations were resumed between the two schools following the interrupted war seasons and the Tar Heel aggregation got off to a good start in revived rivalry by sinking the Midshipmen, 19-7.

Frosh to Play

Of the 25 man squad, 22 were selected from Coach Carl Snavely's varsity team and three were chosen from Crowell Little's frosh crew. The latter three are eligible to play because their veteran status exempts them from the Southern conference ruling prohibiting first year men on varsity teams, while the major part of the Tar Heel representatives is composed of boys from the varsity squad who do not see consistent action on Saturday afternoons.

The probable Tar Heel starting lineup as selected by Coach George Radman presents a formidable array of talent that should give Navy numerous worries. The Carolina backfield will have Gus Purcell do the passing and a good portion of the running from the tailback slot while Bob Reynolds will start at blocking back and handle the punting. Rounding out the quartet will be Merl Norcross at the important wingback post and Bob Koontz at fullback.

No More Tickets

The Woollen Gym ticket office announced yesterday that there are no more tickets available at Carolina for the tilt with the Cavaliers of Virginia in Charlottesville Saturday. It is not known whether or not the game is a complete sellout.

Carolina students and fans have bought out three separate orders of ducats, and a large delegation from the Old North State is expected to be on hand Saturday for the traditional game with the Old Dominion eleven, the only team still standing in the way of an undefeated season for the Tar Heels.

Coed Hockey to Open On Thursday, Dec. 2

Play in the coed hockey tournament will begin Thursday afternoon, Dec. 2. No girl may play on a team unless she has played before, and everyone must practice a minimum of two times under supervision. Practices will be Monday and Wednesday at four, Tuesday at two and four, and today at two and four.

Names of team personnel must be turned in to the gym by this afternoon.

Flip of the Coin Costs Chapel Hill Gridiron Title

Rain and coins have no doubt become forbidden words in the William Grice household since Monday night. For 'twas on that night this week that the very capable mentor of Chapel Hill high's unbeaten football team journeyed down to Sanford to participate in a coin-flipping which would determine the Eastern representative in the state Class A football finals.

Needless to say, Chapel Hill lost the flip, the Eastern crown, and a crack at Mt. Airy's Western champs for the State title. Rain was the real villain of this gridiron tragedy, however. For last week's excessively heavy dews turned Laurinburg high school's football field into a bog which in turn bogged down the favored CHS Wildcats' potent running attack and forced Grice's bobby soxers to settle for a disappointing 6-6 tie.

Laurinburg then magnanimously volunteered to come up to Chapel Hill yesterday afternoon, but apparently fearing the worst —in the form of a dry field—for their 'bowl' chances, later wisely decided to stake their hopes on the toss of a coin. So Laurinburg and Mt. Airy will meet on Thursday in the finals.

Coach Grice has probably decided by now that you can't do things halfway in his league, you've got to win 'em all, not merely eight of nine. In their eight wins and a tie, the Wildcats racked up a very respectable total of 251 points while holding their foes to a measly 55. 25 of which came in the season's opener.

Tank Meet Slated For Bowman-Gray During Holidays

The first annual Invitational Intercollegiate Thanksgiving swimming meet will begin tomorrow night in Bowman-Gray Pool. Since the meet is not established local officials have had a hard time securing participants, but there will definitely be enough participants to guarantee an interesting meet.

The teams which have already sent in entry blanks are VPI, Duke N. C. State, and Carolina. Entry blanks sent to other teams have not yet been returned, so it is not known what other teams will compete.

The first event will be the finals of the 1500-meter freestyle on Thursday night. This will be the only event of that night. On Friday afternoon the 220-yard freestyle, 200 yard breaststroke, 50-yard freestyle, 150-yard backstroke, and low board diving preliminaries will be held. The finals in all of these plus the 400-yard freestyle will be on tap Friday night at 8 o'clock.

Preliminaries in the 100-yard freestyle 150-yard individual medley, and 440-yard freestyle will begin at 2 o'clock on Saturday afternoon. Finals in these event- plus the 300-yard medley relay and the high board diving will be featured on Saturday night.

Coach Casey's own boys are the favorite in most of the events

Harriers Close Out Season; Virginia Is Final Opponent

By Frank Allston

Carolina's cross country track team will wind up its 1948 season on Saturday morning against the University of Virginia harriers at Charlottesville.

Sam Magill, the ace of the Tar Heel harriers, will not run in Saturday's meet due to a previous commitment. Magill, who has finished first in every dual meet of the season to date, placed third in the Southern conference meet last week.

Coach Dale Ranson will depend on Captain Julian MacKenzie and Frank Hooper to carry the colors for the locals.

Seek Third Straight

In the meet at Charlottesville, the Tar Heels will be seeking their third straight dual win and their fourth of the season. To date the Blue and White has a record of three wins and three defeats.

By comparing performances of both squads against the Duke team, Carolina would appear to have the edge over the Cavaliers. The Tar Heels tripped Duke, 26-29, while the Dukesters turned in a ten-point victory over the Virginians.

Coach Dale Ranson has been pleased with the performance of his team so far and is confident of a win at Virginia.

The local harriers got off to a rather slow start, dropping a 31-26 decision to a strong, well-balanced Virginia Tech aggregation in their first meet. Sam Magill finished first for Carolina.

Again in the ensuing meet the Tar Heels lost, 37-24 to Navy with Magill again first. The next meet found the locals triming State in a decisive 21-35 encounter. Magill, MacKenzie and Hooper finished in a three-way tie.

Knoxville Knocks

Up in Knoxville on the following week end, the locals were walloped, 38-22 by Tennessee although Magill was the first man under the tape. A week later the Tar Heels got back on the path by downing Duke, 26-29 and then repeated their previous State win with a 22-33 score. Magill finished first in both meets.

In the Southern conference meet at College Park, Md., last week, the Tar Heels finished third behind host school Maryland and Virginia Tech. Magill finished eighth after leading for better than half the way only to falter near the end. MacKenzie was 18th and Hooper 20.

Thus the Tar Heels show a record of .500 for the season and a win Saturday could turn what once looked like a disastrous season into a successful one.

It Rained Again

The University of North Carolina will be represented in the Mad Bowl tag football game at Charlottesville Saturday morning by the Graduate eleven, Intramural dormitory division champs, it was announced by the Intramural department yesterday after a meeting attended by members of the Grad and Zeta Psi teams and mural officials. The Mad Bowl, a tag football contest between the Carolina and Virginia mural champions, is a new addition to the traditional Carolina-Virginia football rivalry, and will take place at 10 o'clock Saturday morning in Scott stadium.

The campus championship tilt between the Grads and Zeta Psi was slated to have been played yesterday in Kenan stadium, but the rains came again and the game was washed out for the fourth straight day. The two teams will meet either Monday or Tuesday of next week to decide the campus title.

UP Writer Praises Choo Choo for Fine Work

By Herbert Foster

RALEIGH, Nov. 23.—(UP)—Seven rugged teams had singled out the little North Carolina halfback for special attention this year, and it left him a little battered. But if the Duke Blue Devils thought they had corked up Charlie Justice, they were wronger than a presidential poll.

The pressure mounts on a great individual star as the season wears on. The weight of his publicity is enough to bow his back The fans expect miracles every game. The opposition watches him hawklike to stop those miracles before they start. So it's sometimes tougher for a gridiron genius to do his stuff than if he were some guy named Joe, fresh from the bench.

Working Up Steam

It took Justice two and a half periods to break loose, while North Carolina's big game of the year rocked on as a well-matched deadlock. Duke rested by an easy victory a week earlier, had aimed all year for this game—and pointed at nobody harder than Choo Choo Charlie.

But the little guy broke through all that. He broke Duke's heart—broke it with a twisting, dodging 43-yard shimmy through the whole Duke team. He ran like a benzedrined waltzing mouse, leaving the turf strewn with Blue Devils he had feinted into diving where he wasn't.

Part of the way he had blocking like an artillery barrage. But for seconds in the secondary it was just Charlie and Duke, and it seemed time and again they had nailed him. There are men who will dream years of that broken-field running.

One of the dreamers is North Carolina Coach Carl Snavely, who said that run broke up the ball game.

Snavely Surprised

"Never in my life have I seen a better run," said the gray-haired coach who has seen plenty of them. "It was made tougher by Duke because they shifted the way the play was going. On the bench we thought the play had been checked."

Choo Choo Charlie took the ball on the Duke 43, slid past a lunging Duke lineman and circled right end. He dodged nearly to the sideline, then reversed his field and danced back through the Duke backfield, feinting and sidestepping frantic tacklers. He slipped—and caught himself with one hand on the turf. Then, his interference forming, he kited diagonally downfield to score.

Justice capped his afternoon later with a touchdown pass to end Art Weiner, averaged 45 yards with his punting and even hurled his 167 pounds through the line in picking up 120 yards on the ground.

The little Asheville Express has made longer runs, and perhaps more brilliant ones. But he said himself that he never made one that satisfied him more. For Charlie, the man under the greatest pressure on the field, came through in the clutch.

Dean Fred Weaver Ends Assemblies By Reviewing Subjects of Speakers

Ending the series of freshman assemblies at Memorial Hall yesterday was Dean of Students Fred Weaver, who gave the significance of the assemblies by reviewing the subjects of previous speakers.

Dean Weaver enumerated the mistakes of class members en masse and urged each student to apply himself to better the class.

elections and would accept their opportunity to vote were also expressed.

President of the Student Body Jess Desmond and Orientation Chairman Bill Miller made brief comments prior to the conclusion of the assembly series.

Rendezvous Room Sets Schedule

The Rendezvous room will observe a new time schedule for the rest of the quarter, it was announced yesterday by Thomas Tiscale.

The University's popular night-spot will be open from 2 o'clock until 10:45 Mondays through Thursdays, from 7 o'clock until 12:30 on Fridays, from 7:30 until 12:30 on Saturday, and from 7:30 until 11:30 on Sundays.

Bird Migration To Be Featured At Club Movies

Some of the secrets of bird migration will be revealed in a full-length color movie to be shown at 8 o'clock Monday, Nov. 29, at the Pick theater by Roger Tory Peterson, famous artist, author, and photographer. It will be the first in a series of five wildlife movies to be given here this year under the auspices of the Chapel Hill Bird club and the National Audubon society.

Monday's [illegible] titled "The Riddle of Migration," is the combined work of [illegible] American's ten best wildlife photographers.

The bird club's profits from the series of films will be used to buy books for the Chapel Hill public school libraries. More than $100 worth of books were bought for the school with the profits from a similar series given here by the club last year.

Thirsty

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—(UP)—The cable repair ship John W. MacKay radioed the Coast Guard for help yesterday after the assistant drank the alcohol from the ship's compass.

Police said 18-year-old Walter Ferguson, of Dartmouth, Nova Scotia, went beserk after drinking the alcohol. It took six crewmen to subdue him.

The Coast Guard took Ferguson to shore and turned him over to police who took him to King's county hospital for observation.

YW Committee Makes Request

An appeal for University students to contribute toys, clothes and books for a party to be given by the Human Relations committee of the YWCA has been sent out by Gray Saunders, chairman.

The committee will entertain the children of the Damascus school at a Christmas party, and toys, clothes and books suitable for pre-school children up to 15 years of age are needed by the Human Relations committee.

The articles may be deposited at the Y when brought back after the Thanksgiving holidays.

Party, Dance Being Planned

A Thanksgiving cabin party and a Christmas dance will highlight the fall activities of the Western North Carolina club, it was announced by Monroe Redden, Jr., from Asheville, chairman of the club dance committee.

Tar Baby Harriers Lose to Duke, State

Carolina's freshman cross country team was defeated by Duke and N. C. State yesterday afternoon at Raleigh in what was scheduled to be a state meet but turned out to be a triangular affair when only three teams showed up to run the two and one half mile course in the rain and mud.

The baby Blue Devils were first with 24 points. State was runner-up with 40 points, and the Tar Babies placed last with 60. Gordon Hamrick, outstanding Carolina frosh runner, finished a close second to Bill Tomlinson of Duke. Tomlinson's time was 13:20, while Hamrick crossed the [illegible] at 13:36.

and are expected to walk off with most of the individual trophies. All of the Tar Heel performers are expected to compete even though several of them have been injured most of the year.

The outstanding events as far as most fans are concerned will be the two diving events, featuring Carolina's Bobby Crone and Duke's Jim Connor.

Dr. Baity Presides At Engineers' Meet

Dr. H. G. Baity, head of the department of Sanitary Engineering and president of the North Carolina section of the American Society of Civil engineers, recently presided over a quarterly meeting of the North Carolina section of the organization that was held at State college in Raleigh.

'Religion in Time of Crisis' Slated As Subject of McNair Lecture Series

"Religion in Time of Crisis" will be the subject of the McNair lectures to be held Nov. 30 through Dec. 2 in Hill hall. Dr. Kirtley F. Mather will be the speaker for the three-day session of talks.

Dr. Mather will speak at 8:30 each night. Specific topics will be, "The Challenge of Science," "The Challenge of Marxism," and "Perspective for the Future."

The McNair lectures were started in 1906 through a bequest made in the will of Rev. John C. McNair. The purpose of the lectures is to present "the mutual bearing of science and religion upon each other.

ducted the discussions. He is professor of geology at Harvard university and has a long career of teaching service.

Noted for his lectures on the inter-relation between science and theology, Dr. Mather has written several books and papers on geology and the science-religion relation, and is well-known as a speaker and lecturer on the subjects.

Tar Heels Prepare For Tough Sooners

Students To Vote In General Elections Today

Amendments, Forty Offices Are at Stake

Four Polls Open For Voting Today

By Herb Nachman

Students will wade through political handbills up to their knees today as they head for the polls to vote in the fall general elections.

A total of 40 student offices are at stake along with two constitutional amendments to be ratified or rejected. Polling places are located at Alderman, Aycock and Ruffin dormitories and at Memorial hall.

Five junior class officers and four runoff freshman class officers will be voted on today. Three members of the Women's Honor council and four members of the Coed senate will also be decided.

Al Winn, chairman of the Elections board, said last night that students must bring their ID cards with them when they come to the polls if they expect to be given a ballot.

There are 16 vacancies in the Student legislature for 12-month terms and eight openings for six-month terms. Town men will elect seven for 12-month terms and three for six-month terms. Dorm men will choose eight for 12-months and four for six-months.

Women's dorm district 2 will vote on one six-month and one 12-month term. There are no vacancies in the town women's district.

1. Should the student constitution be amended to allow the Town Girl's association and the Town Men's association to elect one member each to serve in the University club?

2. Should the student constitution be amended to allow the Town Men's association to have one member serve on the Dance committee?

Voters will mark "Yes" or "No" to the amendments.

Where To Vote

Polling places in today's election are Aycock, Ruffin and Alderman dormitories and Memorial hall. The polls will be open from 9 o'clock this morning until 6 o'clock tonight.

Voting will be done in the following order:

1. Residents of Alderman, McIver, Kenan and Spencer will vote at Alderman.

2. Residents of Carr, Smith, Steele, BVP, Old East, Old West, Nash, Miller, Whitehead, and students residing in fraternity houses, sorority houses, Victory Village, the Pittsboro Road Trailer camp, and all other students not living in University dormitories will vote at Memorial hall.

3. Residents of Aycock, Graham, Stacy, Everett, Lewis, Alexander, Quonset huts and the new dormitories will vote at Aycock.

4. Residents of Mangum, Manley, Grimes, Ruffin, Emerson Field house, and Fetzer Field house will vote at Ruffin.

Under the new redistricting bill passed by the Legislature in the spring, there are five men's and two women's dorm districts and five men's town and one women's town districts.

Elections Board Chairman Al Winn last night urged students to know which district they live in when they ask for their ballot.

The districts are as follows: Men's dorm districts: District 1—Stacy, Graham, Aycock, Lewis and Everett; Dist. 2 — Manley, Mangum, Grimes, Ruffin, Emerson Field house, and "C"; Dist. 3—Alexander, Quonsets, Alexander Trailer camp, and "A" and "B" dorms; Dist. 4—Steele, Old East, Old West, B-V-P dorms, BVP trailer camp and students living in miscellaneous buildings such as GM, Memorial hall, etc.; Dist. 5—Miller, Whitehead, Nash and Nash Hall Trailer camp.

Women's dorm dist. 1—Kenan, Alderman and McIver; Dist. 2—Spencer, Carr, Smith and Archer house. The Town Women's district includes all women living in town.

Men's town district 1—Pittsboro Trailer camp, Victory Village, and areas reached from Chapel Hill through the Village such as Mason Farm road and Rogerson drive.

Men's dist. 2—Southwestern section of Chapel Hill bound by Pittsboro road and Columbia street north to the intersection of Columbia street and Cameron.

Dist. 3—Students living in the northwestern section of Chapel Hill including section north of Cameron and West of Old Frat row. It also includes students living in Greensboro, Burlington, Carrboro, etc.

Dist. 4—All students living in the eastern section of town bounded by Pittsboro road, Old Frat row and Columbia street. It includes students living in the direction of Raleigh, Durham, etc.

Dist. 5—Students living in Carrboro, Hillsboro and route 2 between Carrboro and Hillsboro.

Valkyries Take Six Coeds In Early Morning Rituals

In a tradition-filled pre-dawn ceremony this morning, six outstanding senior women were tapped into Valkyries, and will today for the first time wear the golden key of the woman's honor society.

Black-gowned figures, tolling gongs, invaded women's dormitories and sorority houses to tap Lillian Hotard, Randall Hudson, Eloise Jacobi, Edith Knight, Helen Neighbours, and Anne Wells.

Highest recognition given to women, admission to Valkyries is based on outstanding character, effective leadership, fine scholarship, unselfish service, and sound judgement.

Lillian Hotard, of New Smyrna Beach, Florida, is serving this year as chairman of the YWCA's Social Service committee, and as co-chairman of the YM-YW winter conference. She is a member of Honor council, served on the Yack staff, and is a Delta Delta Delta.

From Tarboro, Randall Hudson is president of the Women's Athletic association and assistant circulation manager for the Daily Tar Heel. She is a student adviser and served as secretary for the orientation committee, and is a member of the YWCA. Tarnation staff, Splash club and Pi Beta Phi.

Eloise Jacobi, of Wilmington, was recently elected president of the Carolina Independent Coeds association. She has served as secretary for the Campus party, treasurer of the Wilmington club, a student adviser, member of the Yackety Yack staff, and has worked with the World Student Service fund.

Edie Knight, New Orleans, is a member of the Student legislature and chairman of its Coed Affairs committee. She serves on the Stu-

Rush For Tickets Hits Woollen Gym

Ducats to Go on Sale Tomorrow Say Officials in Athletic Office

By Zane Robbins

As Carolina's undefeated Tar Heels and Oklahoma's once-beaten Sooners prepared to battle on the Sugar Bowl gridiron on Jan. 1, 1949, an instant rush for tickets hit Woollen gymnasium and a flood of optimistic hotel reservations poured into New Orleans, scene of the annual football classic.

Woollen gym was the scene of a mad rush for tickets yesterday as anxious students and Chapel Hill citizens came early and stayed late in a vain effort to obtain ducats for the bowl game.

University officials announced that student coupons, redeemable for Sugar bowl tickets, will go on sale tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock at the Woollen ticket office.

Athletic officials emphasized the fact that the coupons are not reserved seat insurance. Each student will be given a coupon which entitles him to pick up a reserved seat ticket when he reaches New Orleans. The distribution there will be held in the lobby of the Roosevelt hotel from 8 o'clock in the morning until 12 noon on January 1, 1949. Each student must present his identification card before receiving a ticket in New Orleans. All students who placed applications yesterday receive their coupons by mail unless otherwise notified.

Wives of students will be treated as students in the local coupon distribution. The wife must present her athletic passbook in lieu of a student identification card when calling for her ticket in New Orleans.

The athletic department announced late yesterday that each student has priority on only one ticket. Separate orders may be placed by the students if they desire to obtain tickets for their families, but these orders carry no priority and will be handled along with the remainder of the applications submitted by the general public.

University officials stressed the fact that the student coupons are not to be exchanged or sold. If coupon holders fail to identify themselves positively as bona fide students of the University, their coupons will not be honored when presented for exchange in New Orleans.

Tickets will be allotted to the general public in the same manner that they were during the regular season, it was announced yesterday.

Mather to Begin Lecture Series In Hill Tonight

Dr. Kirtley Mather, Harvard professor of geology, will speak on "The Challenge of Science" tonight at 8:30 in Hill hall.

Dr. Mather's talk will be the first of three McNair lectures on the general topic of "Religion in the Time of Crisis" which he is delivering in Hill hall Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday nights.

The McNair lectures, which have been suspended since 1943, were founded through a bequest made by the Rev. John Calvin McNair of the University class of 1849 which became available to the University in 1906. Purpose of the bequest, as stated in McNair's will, is to employ an able scientist to deliver a series of lectures to University students which will show "the mutual bearing of science and theology upon each other, and to prove the existence and attributes, as far as may be, of God from Nature."

Dr. Mather, the 1948 McNair lecturer, is widely known as a geologist and has given lectures, and has written articles and books on the inter-relation of science and religion.

A graduate of Denison university, Dr. Mather received his Ph.-D. at the University of Chicago and has been awarded several honorary degrees from other universities. He has been a geologist with the United States Geological survey since 1919 and has conducted geological surveys in many Latin American nations and in Europe.

Dr. Mather's published works include "Sons of the Earth," "A Source Book in Geology," "Old Mother Earth," and "Science in Search of God." He has delivered lectures on the subject of science and religion at Cornell, Harvard, and Vassar.

Pika Pledges Give Allen Presidency

The 40 pledge members of PiKA fraternity elected pledge officers recently, naming Walter Allen as president; Nick Miller, vice-president; Thornton Long, secretary, and Jim Butler, treasurer.

Tax Symposium Set to Begin Next Thursday

Authorities from this and other states will speak at the eighth annual symposium on accounting and taxation, to be held here and at Duke university Thursday through Saturday.

Held under the sponsorship of the State Association of Certified Public Accountants with the cooperation of the two universities, the symposium will give considerable attention to the federal revenue act, state tax laws, state labor legislation, estate and gift taxes, and income taxes in the addresses and open forum discussions.

Two of the principal speakers will be Percival F Brundage, New York, president of the American Institute of Accountants, and John L. Carey, executive director, also of New York.

Sessions will open Thursday at 10 o'clock in the morning in Gerard hall with Fred G. Eichhorn of Greensboro, president of the North Carolina Association of C.P.A., presiding.

Health Meeting Set to Be Held Friday, Dec. 17

I. G. Greer, executive vice-president of the University business foundation, announced yesterday that the North Carolina Good Health association will hold its annual meeting at the Sir Walter hotel in Raleigh, Friday, Dec. 17.

A feature of the meeting will be a report on the new program of organization of county Good Health councils, which is being sponsored by the Good Health Association and Medical society. Miss Charlotte Nickman, the new field representative, will be present and make a report.

Glee Clubs Will Include Carols In Next Program

A group of traditional Christmas carols will be included in the program of the annual Christmas concert of the Men's and Women's Glee clubs to be presented in Hill hall Sunday and Tuesday nights at 8:30.

The number of requests for the old favorites has increased every year, and the carols selected to be performed by the 300 voices of the combined glee clubs were chosen on the basis of their popularity alone.

Special feature of this part of the program will be original improvisations by organist John O'Steen. These interludes will link the separate carols into an extended festival anthem for the Christmas season.

Admission to the concerts will be by the season ticket, which covers the three concerts of the 1948-49 series, or by separate admissions. The box office is in Hill 109.

Balfour Official To Help Sales Of Rings Today

Lee H. Blackwell, representative of L. G. Balfour Co. will be at the Y tomorrow from 9 o'clock until 3:30 to assist the Senior Ring committee in taking orders for official rings.

Delivery is made in about three months, so orders should be placed as soon as possible for the students who are planning on graduating this year. A deposit of $5 is required at the time the order is taken and the balance due will be payable when the ring is shipped C.O.D.

The rings vary in weight from 10 pennyweight to 16 pennyweight and selections for stones can be made from synthetic ruby, synthetic spinel, and onyx.

Mendel Elected Pledge President

The pledge class of Alpha Pi of Zeta Beta Tau recently elected Don Mendel of Atlanta, Ga., president for the winter quarter.

Other officers of the class are Bob Goodman, El Paso, Texas, vice president; Jerry Sternberger, Asheville, secretary; Bob Raskin, Tarboro, treasurer; Bob Heiman, Little Rock, Arkansas, social chairman; and Bill Karesh, Greensboro, chaplain.

University Hour To Feature Life Of Horatio Alger

For the fifth in series of weekly programs, the University hour will feature a radio version of the life of Horatio Alger, one of the most prolific and widely read authors of the 19th century, and the stories of lesser known writers of North Carolina, former students of the University.

The first part of the program, written by Sam Hirsch, graduate student, will give the general story of the life of Horatio Alger. Alger's father sent him to Harvard to study medicine but Horatio was determined to become a writer. After the publication of his first children's book, his publisher requested three more. Horatio just continued writing children's books that had the same subject of "rags to riches."

The latter part of the program was written by Ruth Wolfe and will present the lives of Mebane Burgwin, Dr. Lodwick Hartley, and Hugh Holman.

Public Tryouts For New Plays Scheduled Today

Public tryouts for three new experimental one-act plays will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Playmaker theater. The plays, all student-written, will constitute the 127th bill of experimental plays to be produced by the Carolina Playmakers.

Kai Jurgensen, who will supervise the bill, yesterday listed "The Winter Harvest" by David Samples, "Deary, You Are a Dreamer" by Mike Casey, and "The Important Thing" by Edna Dooley, as the three new plays to be staged.

Eighteen Oils Are on Display At Person Hall

Eighteen oil paintings by a native North Carolinian, Frank London, and 15 photographs by Man Ray, exponent of art in photography, will be on exhibition at Person hall art gallery beginning this morning, Lynette Warren, curator, announced yesterday.

In conjunction with the showing, John V. Allcott, head of the University Art department, will speak on London's paintings Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

London, who died in 1945, was born in Pittsboro and did most of his painting in Europe. His work has been exhibited in Paris, Bordeaux, New York and throughout the United States. One of his paintings was shown at the New York World's Fair in 1939.

The Man Ray show is from the Museum of Modern Art in New York. He began painting at the Academie des Beaux-Arts in 1908. He became interested in photography in 1920 and since that time he has worked on it in Los Angeles.

The two exhibits will remain on display until the Christmas holidays.

Elizabeth Parker Takes Over New Placement Service Post

Elizabeth Parker, who since July, 1947, was assistant to Dean D. Dewitt Carroll in the Commerce school, will assume new duties as assistant director of Placement service tomorrow. Miss Parker is replacing Kathryn Cook, who left the University this past summer.

Miss Parker received her M.A. in Vocational Guidance in 1948, from Teacher's college, Columbia university, New York. This degree included personnel courses in Columbia's Industrial Engineering school. She also attended State college, and was graduated from Woman's college in Greensboro.

For three years, including 19 months' foreign duty, Miss Parker served in the Women's Army corps. As an enlisted woman she was chief clerk in testing section; and as an officer, her duties included recruiting, claims, administrative, and postal. She was awarded the Bronze Star medal for 14 months service with the Mediterranean theater postal directory. While on this assignment she supervised several hundred men and women.

Miss Parker's office is located in 207 South building.

Eighteen Actors Are Listed In School for Scandal Cast

The 18-member cast list of the Carolina Playmaker production of "School for Scandal," which will open for a four-day run here tomorrow night, was announced yesterday by Harry Davis, director of the play.

The group will take the play, an 18th century comedy, on tour for two weeks in January, playing in North and South Carolina.

Hilda Sharkey, Chapel Hill student, will play the feminine romantic lead, "Maria." Hilda is the daughter of Mrs. Josephine Sharkey, who has appeared in many Playmaker productions. Mac Shaw will play the other romantic lead, "Charles Surface." Shaw, who has appeared in many plays here, worked with the Chapel theater in New Jersey, the Yardley theater in Pennsylvania, and the Clinton Playhouse in Connecticut.

Patricia Peteler, a newcomer to Chapel Hill, will play her first role with the Playmakers, appearing as "Lady Teazle." Before coming to the University to study in the department of dramatic art, she worked with the Actor's Laboratory, Hollywood, the American Repertory theater, Los Angeles, the Showboat theater,

How to Avoid Argument

Today's voting turnout will probably be one of the lightest in the history of campus elections. December elections usually bring out a smaller number of voters than those held in the spring because none of the top offices are involved. However, the fall election is an important one. This year more than half the seats in the student legislature are to be filled in addition to the selection of junior class officers and the runoff of freshman elections.

Cause of the light vote anticipated today will not be due to the unimportance of the election but to its inopportune time. This is not the fault of any one person but to a series of unfortunate circumstances. According to the constitution, the election was to be held on the first Tuesday in December which this year comes on the seventh. This would have thrown the runoff election into examination week, and to avoid this situation Student Body President Jess Dedmond moved the election up a week, keeping it on Tuesday in order that votes might be counted during the week. Now, coming as it does immediately after the Thanksgiving holidays, the election will take many students by surprise, since the political parties and individual candidates involved have not had time to take their causes before the student body and arouse interest in the contests.

Nevertheless, the outcome of today's voting will be extremely important to the future of student government this year. Unless each student realizes the importance of his vote and acts accordingly, the organized fraternity vote will sweep the election and acquire greater control of the legislature. If this happens, it will lead to recriminations by the losing parties against the action of changing the election date.

Obviously the best way to avoid this is for all students to make a special effort to register their votes today.

Answer to Infiltration

The American Veterans Committee at its national convention in Cincinnati last week found a remedy for the Communist rot that was killing it. Although the constitution of the United States protects Communists along with all other citizens in their right to assemble and freedom of speech and press, there is no law which prevents a private organization from kicking out unwanted members. And that is exactly what AVC decided to do.

AVC delegates voted to oust Communist members not because they were Communists, but because they had joined the organization in bad faith, since the doctrine of Communism is unreconcilable with the charter of the veterans' group.

Now the AVC can once again be a rallying ground for liberal thinking veterans without smearing them with the taint of Communism.

This seems to us to be the answer to Communist infiltration into democratic organizations.

Suggestion to Dawgs

Gentlemen:

We have been observing with interest your present tactics in attempting to keep the squirrel population within bounds. In our opinion your Indian approach, which entails crawling and creeping towards some obnoxious denizen of the trees, lacks certain finesse which is essential in your occupation.

Could we suggest a more subtle advance? Why not use the casual, hands-in-pocket routine and stroll up to the unwary creatures whistling something from Gershwin? A few days of this, without hostile gestures, would undoubtedly result in a certain smugness among the bushy-tails, and a secret conference could be held in Hill hall (the Administration would certainly grant use of the hall for such purpose) to determine H-Hour.

If for some reason these tactics are unproductive, we suggest a standing committee composed of a representative from each of the major breeds, and the independents, to decide future campaigns. There are numerous possibilities, for the squirrels are notorious nuts, and you might even dress in tweeds and combat boots and stroll up on your hind legs. They could never tell you from the average student, especially if you neglected to wear a necktie.

Hoping to hear from you on this vital subject in the near future, we remain, Rameses, Jr.

Odds And Ends

By Don Maynard

UMOC. Response to our "Ugliest Man on Campus" contest has met with so much enthusiasm that we have decided to hold it after the Christmas holidays. In the meantime, be looking for the ugly duckling that is "sure to cop the prize."

CRASH DIVE. A scalper hawking on Franklin street before the Carolina-Duke orgy grunted a little disgustedly after a sale: "Huh, those seats were so low down in the end-zone the guy will need a periscope to see the forward wall."

IT TAKES LITTLE TOOT. A sentimental musical note sent through the air via "Our Best to You" was intercepted by us the other night. Dedicated to Lincoln Kan by Charlie Long was "Take a Slow Boat to China."

AMOUR, AMOUR. This notice was sent to us not long ago: "Please tell the Carolina public that the 'Room of Great Lovers' is now open for business at the Sigma Chi house under the able tutorship of Professor Louee Cotton and his undergraduate instructors, Stu Bondurant and Gerry LaSuer."

JUST PLAIN SAM. Wish you could have heard the 88-tickler who was in the main lounge of GM a week ago Sunday. All we know of him is that he is named "Sam," is a terrif pianist, and that he could play the Wedding March five different ways. A man who lets you strike any key on the piano and then proceeds to beat out a song beginning with that note; who can play two melodies at the same time with both hands, deserves recognition. Sam, here's a suggestion—See S & F or Lib Stoney, they want your kind of talent.

APOLOGY. To the Kappa Sigs for not mentioning that they were the sponsors of Yack beauty Claudia Lee, queen of the '49 annual. As a colleague put it, "A gross oversight of a beautiful subject."

AT LAST—WE KNOW. The most convincing explanation for Mr. Truman's win over the Repubs was given in an ad in the Chicago Tribune: "On election day the-man-who-didn't-have-a-chance enjoyed a Magic Mineral Bath and Miracle Massage at the famous Elms Hotel, Excelsior Springs, Mo. You know what happened! You too, can improve your luck, looks and lifeline. . ." Note they put "luck" before "looks."

SIGNS. Taken from November's Coronet. "As seen in a New Jersey theater: 'Coming attractions: Mother Wore Tights, also Selected Shorts.' "

SIGNS. This one on Jeff's scoreboard "Navy plays Army Nov. 27, Army plays Navy the same day in Philadelphia." And how, Navy played Army!

AND MORE SIGNS. Seen hanging from the second floor of Battle dorm for the Duke weekend festivities, a poem by "Meek" Carpenter:

"Po'le Duke is down and out,
The Devil's got the double gout,
While UNC is on her way
To the Sugar Bowl, N. O., La."

CONGRATULATIONS to Paul Fitzgerald, Beta, and Nancy Brown, a Kappa Kappa Gamma of Alabama on their engagement. Also to Mark Barker and his swellagant wife, Jim, on their third anniversary. Three months, that is. . .

SOME FOLKS sink and don't swim, others swim for the glory of winning and still others for the value of the gold cup they might win, but Ted Wood of Virginia Polytechnic Institute swims for the joy of swimming.

Though Wood was not the best in Bowman—Grey pool Saturday night, he didn't place in any event, he won a gold cup—in recognition of his love for sports and competition.

Leaving his teammates at V.P.I., Wood paid his own bus fare to Chapel Hill and back, to be the only out-of-state swimmer present against three North Carolina schools.

A sophomore at V.P.I., Wood, when asked why he came so far at his own expense said, "I came down to see how you boys swam."

This Changing World

Put Away Stars And Bars

By Bill Robertson

(The circumstances of the world are continually changing, and the opinions of men change also.—Thomas Paine)

At the recent Carolina-Duke game, everybody in the Carolina student section had a wonderful time. This was natural because Charley "Choo-Choo" Justice made one of the best touchdown runs of his career and the team as a whole played as one of the top-ranking teams in the country should play.

However, the well-known "Carolina spirit" took certain forms which we feel should be severly criticized. In particular, we should like to comment upon the large number of Confederate flags exhibited during the game.

The Confederate flag is the banner of a government which defended the barbarous institution of slavery. This government engaged in armed rebellion against the fundamental principles of American democracy; and, for this reason, there is no essential symbolic difference between the Stars and Bars and the Nazi swastika.

On the other hand, the American flag, although it is being dragged in the dust today in the interest of American big business in such faraway places as Greece and China, has been the symbol for many generations of an advanced, democratic spirit. American democracy is something worth defending, and it should be defended on all fronts.

Concretely, it should be defended by educating our people as to its true nature. It is something which has been won through bitter struggle. The flag of our country was first unfurled in one of the truly revolutionary wars of history, and it was also victorious against the institution of slavery.

Today it is still the symbol in the hearts and minds of millions of our people of things which the Southern slaveholders and the Nazi barbarians detested although it is coming to be hated in other parts of the world as the symbol of the almighty dollar and the money-changers of Wall Street. It is our patriotic duty to fight against the enemies in our midst who twist and distort American ideals to protect capital investments in foreign countries and to restore the world in our country and our flag.

The prominent display of our flag on all public occasions in which democratic principles are not being attacked, and a bitter struggle against the ideas which were and are symbolized by the Confederate flag will render solid support to the preservation and advancement of democracy. At the same time it will make possible the establishment of good relations between all nations and nationalities all over the world.

National Convention

AVC Gets Rid Of Commies

By Henry Adams

The 1948 annual convention of the American Veterans Committee, which met in Cleveland during the Thanksgiving holidays, accomplished something almost without precedent in the American liberal movement. Seriously threatened by Communist infiltration, AVC removed the principal threat to its continued existence by decisively voting to get the Communists out and keep them out.

Communists have moved in before on many liberal non-Communist organizations and destroyed their effectiveness by rule-or-ruin tactics. During the past two years they have unsuccessfully tried to get control of AVC. Failing in this, they have sought to wreck the group by open defiance of its rules and policies, by expensive hearings, and most recently by a costly lawsuit. AVC's liberal programs, for public housing, getting out the vote, and fair non-discriminatory treatment of every veteran, were hampered by this internal split.

Membership and prestige were declining so fast that it appeared the Communist ruin tactics would soon bring AVC's death. The delegates who attended last week's convention were determined to make a final showdown.

Glenn Fisher, Louella Van Every, and I represented the local chapter at Cleveland. Our chapter had voted by a 2-to-1 majority for a proposed amendment to the national AVC constitution which would bar Communists.

Even so, there were doubts expressed by the local group that such an amendment could be fairly interpreted. Some said that AVC would be compromising its own principles.

These objections I think have been adequately met by the action on Communism which AVC took. The original amendment was tabled and in its place was a resolution which declared that previous conventions had already explicitly stated that membership in both AVC and the Communist party was fundamentally incompatible. Communists in AVC have known this all along and have acted in bad faith by continuing their memberships. The resolution adopted at Cleveland points this out and instructs the national officers to remove all known Communists.

In practice there will be few formal expulsions. Communists will be removed gradually from the organization by refusal to accept their dues payments when their present membership expires.

As was expected, some colossal fireworks broke loose on the convention floor when every question relating to Communism was brought up. The anti-Communist delegations were clearly in the majority and determined to put through a strong resolution. The minority saw themselves outnumbered and tried every obstructionist tactic in Robert's Rules of Order. Points of order, points of information, and rhetorical questions from the floor delayed actions for as much as a whole day. The business was far behind schedule. All this accomplished nothing, for the majority carried the meeting and overrode obstructions by sheer weight of numbers. They got what they wanted: the Commies will go.

AVC is thus one of the first big liberal groups to assert itself and remove a totalitarian bloc which threatened its very life. It did this by out-thinking, out-working, and out-voting its internal opponents. and it will continue to live and serve a democratic society.

Write Away

Empty Headed Kids

Editor:

I was reminded of Bill Robertson, as well as other hammer-and-sickle boys, when I read a passage in "I Chose Freedom," written by Victor Kravchenko, a Communist party member for 20 years and a leading official in Russia, who escaped in 1946 to plead the cause of anti-communism. Said he of some American Communists-in-knee-britches, "They were upset by the inequities of life in their own country and needed consolations, in the way that a child in pain is consoled by a shiny, noisy toy . . . If only such people could attain the intellectual clarity and the moral balance to realize that injustice in America must not be made an excuse for supporting injustice elsewhere! . . . The prevailing American notions about the wonders of Sovietism in practice were truly extraordinary. Great chunks of the communist reality—like slave labor, police dictatorship, the massive periodic purges, the fantastically low standards of living, the great famine of 1932-33, the horrors of collectivization, the state-organized child labor—seemed to have completely escaped American attention."

Have they escaped Robertson's and Scales' attention? If so these local glorifiers of Soviet Russia are empty-headed children and know so little Russian history that they are completely unqualified to deliver their harangues.

If, however, they do know the truth about the suffering, downtrodden people under the Soviet system, I charge that they are deliberate liars and enemies of public welfare and human freedom! Tell us, Robertson, Scales, and you other "kept men", if you have or have not thoroughly studied the workings of the Soviet power, that we readers may know whether you are film-eyed dreamers or believers in mass slavery.

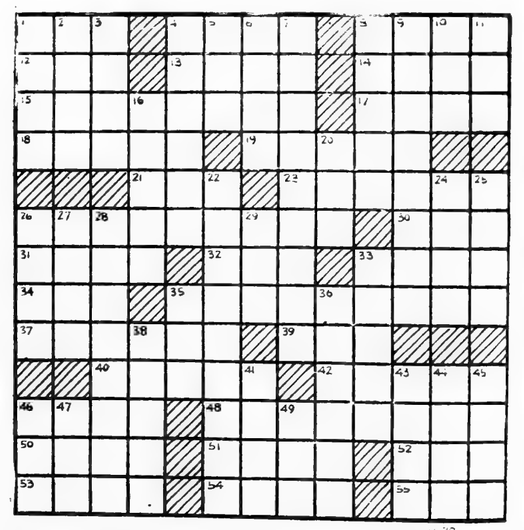
TMA Says Vote Yes

Last Wednesday Jess Dedmond advised students to vote NO on the Town Men's association's having membership on the Dance committee. As president of the TMA I would encourage the students to vote YES.

While reorganizing the TMA last spring, I talked to Dedmond about the proposal and at that time he was all for it. At the same time I talked to several members of the Dance committee who had no objection but did suggest that the TMA wait until it was a more organized group than it was then. The association members now feel that they are a well organized group and are asking for membership on the Dance committee.

In its pre-war years the TMA had a representative on the committee and lost it when it was forced to disorganize in 1943 due to the lack of men in school. When the constitution was drawn up, there was no TMA and it could not be included in the Dance committee. We are not seeking any honors as we fully realize that the committee does a thankless job.



Dormitory students are represented on the committee through the Inter-Dorm council; fraternity men through the Inter-fraternity council. We admit that the TMA is not a representative group as are those two councils, but many non-member town students look to the TMA to represent their interests on the campus. At present 2,000 men have no part in one of the most powerful student courts on the campus.

Dedmond requested to see the amendments before they were introduced in the legislature. He saw them and at that time expressed no opposition. On the Sunday before his comments, he told me that he wanted to talk to me concerning the Dance committee as he felt that he was opposed to it. Nothing more was said about it and the next thing I knew about it was when his column appeared.

Town students deserve membership and would not lessen but would strengthen "a time-honored organization whose membership is carefully governed" and whose "fine conduct of our dances speaks sufficiently for its work."

The Town Men's association asks the students to vote YES on both amendments.

Tar Heels Whip Wahoos; Climb To Third In AP Poll

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

The Kitchen Sink

AN UNIDENTIFIED VIRGINIA football manager received the singular distinction last Saturday of being the only man in Charlottesville who did something with the football that Charlie Justice didn't—he pumped it up. For, the little Choo Choo did everything else under the sun that shone down like a spotlight while some 25,000 fans looked on in wonderment of just how All-American one man could be.

Literally, hypothetically, and numerically Justice became the difference between the teams. The final score ran to 34-12 for the benefit of the uninitiated, which left a differential of some 22 points symbolic of a great football player who led a great Tar Heel grid team to their first unbeaten season since 1898. It might be worth waiting another 50 years to see another Justice.

Though Justice was the star, he was not the whole show. The rest of the Tar Heels were as equally on hand, using their best block and tackle to raise themselves to the victory pinnacle. The Carolina line that had overpowered opponents with the ease that some college lines overpower coeds, supported the Asheville Ambler to wherever his heart desired.

A Bit of Heaven

THUSLY CHAPERONED, Justice was, to say the least, unstoppable. He rendered unto Virginia two easy lessons on how to run 80 and 50 yards for touchdowns though hotly pursued by would-be tacklers, help drive the length of the field for another and then passed for two more teedees to complete the Cavaliers grid education for the day.

He also punted once for a casual 67 yards with the ball stopping dead on touching the turf and leaving the fans to wonder if Charlie had used a No. 9 iron or a wedge. And then, to explode the theory that he wasn't a defensive player, Justice made off with a Virginia pass intended for the wrong set of hands in the wrong end zone, and might have brought it back all the way had not he slipped on an insignificant piece of dampened turf.

Virginia, in their effortful efforts to stop all these offensive carryins-on, threw their backers into the front lines, but when the Choo Choo came into a momentary station to let off a little steam, there were others to take up the cause. Hosea Rodgers, the Bull of the Campus, was one such gentleman who split middles while wingback Bob Kennedy continually rounded the ends on wide reverses to the undershifted weak side of the Virginian forward wall.

Too Many Holes

THERE WERE JUST too many holes in the Wahoo dike to plug from the start as the tides of Justices rolled in and out on regular schedule. The first time the ball reached the hands of the Tar Heels they went all the way with 11 clips covering the required 56 yard distance.

Justice, as usual, was the spark that set the Tar Heels afire, running one end and then the other, leaving the visible trade mark of strewn players which signified that "Charlie Justice Swept Here." A penalty finally moved the ball graciously to the Virginia 5, from whence Rodgers carried the ball and two less elusive Cavaliers into the end zone for two free rides and a Tar Heel touchdown. Mr. Cox came, kicked, and left.

Ten minutes later the mean old Tar Heels were at it again. It turned out to be reasonably painless though, with the forementioned Justice fading, but merely to pass from the Virginia 40, then throwing long to Art Weiner, who was being carefully mothered by Joe McCary on the 21. Weiner, perturbed by existing conditions, leaped from the arms of his would-be captor, snatched the ball from the sky, and then ran home free while Mr. McCary sat it out in a comfortable but embarrassing position. Cox again was the man of the minute.

All the Way

AFTER THAT, the Tar Heels switched the Choo Choo back on the main line for another run. A touchback gave the Tar Heels the ball on their own 20 and then moments later Justice gave the referee back the ball in Virginia end zone. The play covered 80 yards on the nose and took about as much time to enact as it does to say, "All the way, Choo Choo!" He went that way, gentlemen.

The whole affair started out to be a quick pass up the middle, with Justice feinting a toss and then striking up the middle in true Cavalier style. Dancing through a hole that mistakenly must have been opened for Stan Marczyk, the Tar Eel parried the Virginia linebackers and then thrust into the visible open.

There were those who had their chances, but they were fleeing ones like the feet of the Justice who pushed the pedal down into the carburetor and left the Cavalier secondary moving like a slow boat to China as he made a teedee line for the Virginia end zone. Only his shadow could hold the pace, and even it remained a respectful step to the rear. Mr. Cox appeared and departed.

The Vanishing Virginians

THE VIRGINIANS, who bear a few well-chosen words at this point, felt the three mentioned indignities were more than they could stomach. They struck back in the second and third quarters and left the Tar Heels wondering if these lads knew exactly who they were pushing around the environs of dampened Scott field. The Cavaliers, who pride themselves on native-born ball players, let one of the FFP—First Families of Pennsylvania—loose on the Tar Heels in the form of John Papit, who played like he was from Pennsylvania.

Young Papit teamed with team mate Mike Michels, who meant well and threw better and together the pair had Virginia all but back in the ball game when the fourth quarter rolled around. That's when the Cavaliers got back in the rear seat and returned the wheel to this Charlie Justice fellow. Justice, who had done more than his share, put the shoulder back to the wheel or better said, to the ball in another exciting aerial display.

This outing had begun back on the Tar Heels' 35 to where Justice had returned a punt, been tackled out of bounds, and then awarded 15 more yards for his trouble. He and Rodgers moved the thing to the Virginia 31, from where running to the right, the Choo hit Cox some 30 yards down the field, but running also to the right place for six more points.

The Final Touch

THEN CAME THE FINAL piercing of the resistance—a Justice masterpiece which left no doubt that the NEW YORK SUN will never set on its failure to pick Justice as All-American. It all started as a simple punt that Bob Kennedy fielded around midfield and then ran back into Tar Heel territory to where Charlie Justice was getting a running start for 54 beautiful yards of stepping.

He took the ball from Kennedy and whirled down the near sidelines behind a screen of Tar Heel blockers who made dead sure that no one would lay a hand on their beloved Choo Choo. Justice may be pretty coming, but there's nothing like seeing him going.

The punt return, like the mouse trap play that earlier had sent Justice the 80 yards, were the traps of perfection that had the scouts of three major bowls beating a path to the Tar Heel door.

Oklahoma, which played for long runs in New York, may have to play for them again come New Year's day in New Orleans.

Tag Playoffs

The campus tag football championship has again been rescheduled—this time for today at 4 o'clock in Kenan stadium.

Yesterday, for the fifth day since the mural season ended, the Grads, the dormitory winners, and the Zetas, the fraternity victors, had to wait for the weather.

The teams will try again this afternoon, weather permitting.

Harriers Top Virginia, 26-32; Locals to Run in Sugar Bowl

Carolina's cross country track team captured its fourth dual meet of the season last Saturday by whipping the University of Virginia harriers, 25-32 in a meet at Charlottesville.

The Tar Heels, running without the services of their ace, Sam Magill, failed to garner either of the first two places. However, Coach Dale Ranson's crew took the next five places to provide the winning margin. Frank Hooper was the first Tar Heel home, finishing in the number three spot.

Winner of the meet was Virginia's Marshall Evans, who did the stint in 21:18.1. Evans was followed by team mate Dan Ely, who completed the course in 22:09.

Following Hooper, whose time was 22:17, were Jim Hunt, Julian MacKenzie and Ken Mattox in a three-way tie for fourth in the time of 22:18. John Ross followed the leading four Tar Heels across the line.

SUMMARY: 1. Evans (V), 21:18.1; 2. Ely (V), 3. Hooper (UNC), 4. Tie between Hunt, Mattox, MacKenzie (all UNC); 7. Ross (UNC), Blakely (V), 9. Lewis (UNC); 10. Randall (V).

Tar Heels to Enter Three Events at N. O.

Dale Ranson, Carolina track coach, yesterday announced the events and entries for the Tar Heels in the Sugar Bowl invitational track meet to be run at New Orleans on December 30.

Dick Taylor, ace Tar Heel timber topper, will compete in the 120-yard high hurdles while Julian MacKenzie will do the two-lap, 880-yard run. A mile relay team will also be entered in the meet, which is an annual event on the Carolina track agenda.

The four-man relay team will be composed of the four fastest quarter milers Coach Ranson can find. Ranson said yesterday that "any student in school was eligible". Leading candidates on the track squad are: Laddie Terrell, Bob Black, Clarence McLain, Bill Cummins, Stan White, Jack Moody, Bill Miller, Bob Morrow and Percy Flowers.

TAR HEELS TO FEAST

Carolina's undefeated football squad will be treated to a banquet by the Durham Tar Heel club tomorrow night at the Hope Valley country club, starting at 7:30. Some 175 persons are expected to be in attendance.

The Bowl Outlook

Sugar bowl, New Orleans: Carolina vs Oklahoma

Cotton bowl, Dallas: SMU vs Oregon

Orange bowl, Miami: Georgia vs Texas

Rose bowl, Pasadena: California vs Northwestern

Gator bowl, Jacksonville: Clemson vs Missouri

Dixie bowl, Birmingham: Wake Forest vs Baylor

Delta bowl, Memphis: William and Mary vs Oklahoma A & M

Mad Bowl Champs

Carolina's Graduates, dormitory division Intramural champs, made it a clear cut Tar Heel victory over the University of Virginia with a 27-13 victory over the St. Anthony intramural gridders Saturday morning at Charlottesville in the first annual Mad Bowl tag football game.

Playing under worse conditions than the Carolina varsity encountered in Scott stadium that afternoon, the Grads came from behind in both halves to win the wild contest, which the 500 fans present agreed should have been called the Mud bowl instead of the Mad bowl.

Touchdowns by Ike Carr and Ken Black gave the Grads a 12-7 edge at intermission, but that didn't phase the Virginians, who bounced back early in the second half on Eli Tullis' score for a 13-12 lead. However the Grads countered with a safety and went on to "ice" the tilt on six-pointers by Ray Smook and Jim Hayworth late in the game.

Cagers To Open Thursday Night

Basketball comes to Woollen gym Thursday night when the Tar Heels open their 1948-49 hardwood campaign against Lenoir-Rhyne.

Thursday's game will mark the beginning of a four-game home stand for the Carolina hoopsters, who will climax their early season labors by meeting Arizona in the Camellia Bowl in Louisiana December 28.

The Tar Heels will face Lenoir-Rhyne, Guilford, Elon, and Catawba here and then encounter Hanes Hosiery in Winston-Salem.

Although the battle with Lenoir-Rhyne officially opens the season, Carolina's cagers have been busy and hold an unofficial win over the Fort Bragg quintet.

The locals played the Soldiers Saturday night and came out with a 56-22 decision. Coy Carson was high scorer with 22 points and was followed by Hugh Kappler with 12.

This afternoon the Carolina varsity will visit Laurinburg and participate in a cage clinic in the afternoon and a rules demonstration in the evening before engaging in an intra-squad contest.

The Tar Babies will also open their 18-game slate eight less than the varsity, tomorrow night by meeting Louisburg Junior college in a curtain-raiser to the varsity scrap.

The frosh will have an ambitious schedule on tap and their opposition will come mainly from junior college quintets and the yearling outfits of the Big Four.

The reserves of Elon, Catawba and Guilford will furnish the opposition for the Carolina freshmen in the preliminary contests before the varsity engagements.

Justice Top Man On Snider's Team; Weiner Mentioned

By Steve Snider

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(UP)—Final All-America football memo:

A tabulation of 11 weekly memos for the 1948 season revealled today that Charley Justice of North Carolina led four players from the Midwest, three from the South, two from the West Coast and one each from the East and Southwest as the man who drew the most raves in on-the-spot-reports out of the pressboxes around the nation.

Three backs were standouts — Justice, Doak Walker of SMU, and Jackie Jensen of California. Justice was listed in our personal "Backfield of the Week" seven times, Walker five and Jensen four.

The fourth place in the "Backfield of the Year" was a standoff among Johnny Rauch of Georgia, Stan Heath of Nevada, Frank Tripucka of Notre Dame and Lou Kusserow of Columbia. I'll cast the deciding vote in favor of Tripucka, who may not get many other All-America votes but certainly should in my book.

DeRogati at Tackle

Most mentioned linemen of the year were Dick Rifenburg of Michigan and Dick Wilkins of Oregon at the ends; Leo Nomellini of Minnesota and Al DeRogatis of Duke at the tackles; Bill Healy of Georgia Tech and Bill Fischer of Notre Dame at the guards, and Chuck Bednarik of Pennsylvania at center.

Runners-up in the tabulation: Backs—Heath, Rauch, Kusserow, Gil Stephenson of Army. Ends—Art Weiner, North Carolina; Jim Martin, Notre Dame. Tackles—Al Wistert, Michigan; Bert Aton, Army. Guards — Buddy Burris, Oklahoma; Marty Wendell, Notre Dame. Center — Alex Sarkisian, Northwestern.

Justice Was Terrific

Justice was terrific last Saturday, as he had been 10 Saturdays before and most of the distance between. He scored twice, pitched two touchdown passes and set up a fifth score as the Tar Heels walloped Virginia, 34-12.

He led the week's best backfield including Tripucka, who completed three passes, all for touchdowns, against Washington; Ed Finn of Brown, who flipped three scoring passes against Colgate on Thanksgiving day, and Bill Hawkins of Navy, who scored two of Navy's three touchdowns in the rocking 21-21 tie with Army.

Linemen of the week included: Ends—Barney Poole, Mississippi; Tommy Bishop, Florida; Bill Kellum, Army; Gene Lorendo, Georgia; Red O'Quinn, Wake Forest.

Tackles — Ernie Stautner, Boston College; Scott Emerson, Navy; Porter Payne, Georgia.

Guards — Bill Healy, Georgia Tech; Bill Fischer, Notre Dame.

Center — Chuck Bednarik, Penn.; Laverne Torgerson, Washington State.

Tar Heel Tankmen Capture Honors In Holiday Meet

Tar Heel swimmers completely dominated the first annual Thanksgiving swimming meet which was held here during the holidays. They won all events except the two diving events which Jim Connor of Duke captured.

Dick Twining, local sprinter, set a new pool record in the 100-yd. freestyle, and Floyd Drew turned in the second best 50-yd. freestyle time ever registered in the local pool. The closest competition of the meet was in the 220-yd freestyle. Carolina's Bob Hutton nosed out Billy Kelly of State in this event.

Individual trophies were presented to all first place winners, and Ted Wood for VPI was given the outstanding swimmer trophy.

The summary:

1500-meter freestyle-Thomas, UNC; Hutton, UNC; McCauley, UNC; Norwood, UNC. 20:53.

100-yd. freestyle-Twining, UNC; Osborne, UNC; Brackney, Duke; Overdorff, Duke. 53.8 (New pool record).

440-yd. freestyle-McCauley, UNC; Hutton, UNC; Basescue, UNC; Norwood, UNC. 5:23.

400-yd. freestyle relay-UNC, State, Duke. 2:42.

Michigan Wins; Irish Are Second Sooners Fifth

Carolina regained their old third place position in the final Associated Press football ratings this week by decisively whipping Virginia while Army, last week's third place eleven, was falling victim to Navy's first venture from the losers' column.

The Tar Heels gathered in 2,281 votes while mighty Michigan held 3,448 votes, good for first place, and Notre Dame had 3,325 ballots and remained in second. California and Oklahoma rounded out the first five.

Oklahoma, Carolina's opponent in the New Year's Day Sugar bowl game, moved into the elite from a sixth place spot last week. Army dropped into the sixth position.

Michigan garnered 192 first place ballots to 97 for the Irish. Carolina made off with 31 and Oklahoma surprised by pulling down 30 of the top votes.

Seventh place in the ratings went to Northwestern's Rose bowl squad. Georgia, Oregon and Southern Methodist rounded out the top ten in that order. Georgia polled five first place votes while eleventh place Clemson received six.

Orange Bowl Names Texas to Meet Ga.

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 29—(UP)—The University of Texas, thrice beaten and once tied, accepted a bid today to oppose the University of Georgia in the Orange bowl here New Year's day.

Texas was defeated this season by North Carolina, Oklahoma and Southern Methodist. They wound up their schedule Saturday with a 14-14 tie against Texas A. & M.

University of Washington, and the Call Board theater, Hollywood.

James Geiger, who is making his 39th appearance with the Playmakers, will play "Sir Oliver," and Claude "Slats" Rayborn, popular for his many excellent comedy roles, will appear as "William."

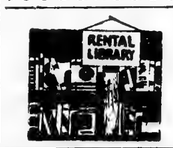
Several new students are playing their first roles with the Playmakers in "School for Scandal." Hal Shadwell, who worked with the University Players and the Town theater in Columbia, S. C., will play "Joseph." Graduate student Mike Casey, who taught dramatics at Williams college, Mass., is acting "Careless," and Charles Blenkner will portray "Sir Harry."

Other newcomers include Nancy Curtiss as "Lady Sneerwell" and John Kirkman as "Snake."

Lynn Gault, staff scene designer, is acting "Sir Peter Teazle," and David Samples will play "Crabtree." Others include: William Buckley as "Rowley," Marty Jacobs as "Moses," James Byrd as "Trip," Sue Davis as "Lady Sneerwell's Maid," Estelle Ritchie as "Mrs. Candour," and Murray McCain as "Sir Benjamin."

Many of the cast members are doubling as technicians for the production in order to simplify touring problems. Director Davis and Associate Professor John W. Parker, business manager, will accompany the touring company in January, when the Playmaker troupe will visit eight North Carolina towns and one in South Carolina.

The production here in the Playmaker theater is slated for Wednesday through Saturday evenings, December 1, 2, 3, and 4, at 8:30. Reserved seat tickets for the play are now available at Ledbetter-Pickard's and at the Playmaker business office, Swain hall.



The place of the action in the comedy is London, and the time is 1777, the day of colorful clothes, powdered wigs, and beauty spots. The intricate wigs for this production were designed by Sue Davis, and Irene Smart designed the costumes.

7,200 years of college . . . and still learning

THE Bell Telephone Laboratories is known as a leader in communications engineering. On its staff are 1,622 engineers and scientists with college degrees. Among them they have 7,200 years of college training . . . and they are still learning.

They study many things. How to speed your voice across the street or around the world. How to keep your voice natural in tone and volume. How to make central office equipment capable of switching your call even faster. How to produce in laboratories the materials which are hard to get in their natural form—quartz, for instance. How to conserve the scarce metals which go into wire and cable, by making one circuit carry many conversations.

From such studies they learn how to make your service better and better, and keep its cost low.

UP Takes Lead In Legislature Balloting

Long's Attempt To Invalidate Fall Elections Fails To Carry

Council Rules Voting Stands Despite Laws

Long Petitions To Void Vote

By Cam Sanders

The Student council voted unanimously yesterday to uphold the validity of the fall quarter general elections, which were challenged as unconstitutional by Charles Long, former speaker pro tempore of the Student legislature.

Long's petition, presented to the council at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, held that all candidates seeking election to the Student legislature were doing so in violation of the constitution and that they "should not be declared elected until they had achieved election under the provisions of the constitution."

Long pointed out that Article I. Section 2 of the constitution provides that, "The Student legislature shall be composed of 50 members half of whom shall be elected annually at the general campus elections in April and the other half of whom shall be elected annually on the first Tuesday in December on which the University is in session."

The date of the elections was moved from Tuesday, Dec. 7 (the first Tuesday of the month) to yesterday, Tuesday, Nov. 30, by Jess Dedmond, president of the student body, in order that runoff elections would not conflict with final examination week.

"The inherent danger," Long commented yesterday, "in a democratic government such as ours cannot and must not be overlooked. If the officers of our government see fit to violate the constitution, then we must assume the burden of checking those violations."

Dedmond, in an address to the Student legislature last Oct. 14, brought out the fact that pushing up the date of the elections was not in accord with the constitution. He contended at that time the extenuating circumstances of the situation should warrant the violation of the letter of the law.

He explained that if the elections were held on "the first Tuesday in December" as specified in the constitution, the runoff elections would fall on the second day of final examinations. On the basis of this conflict, Dedmond said, he had decided to move the date of the elections in spite of the constitutional requirements.

The Student council ruling on the matter stated that the change in date was "unavoidable and in the best interests of the student body." The council stated, however, that by holding the elections valid it was not in any way condoning the practice of changing constitutional provisions by executive decree, legislative action or council decisions.

"In the future," said Bill Mackie, Student council chairman, "this body will not uphold any similar violations."

Stubborn

NEW YORK, Nov. 30—(UP)—Sander Katz, 24, headed for jail for a year and a day today because he would not change his mind.

Federal Judge Harold Medina sentenced the youth 11 days ago for failing to register for the draft but gave him 10 days to change his mind.

Katz declared that he opposed the draft on humanitarian grounds and would rather go to jail.

NIC Puts Off Racial Issue To Next Year

Two Students Go From Here

Consideration of the question of what to do in regard to racial discrimination among college fraternities was postponed one year by the National Interfraternity conference held Nov. 26-27, in New York, Fred Weaver, dean of students, said yesterday. Weaver, Charlie Loudermilk and Jack Thompson represented the University at the 40th annual session of the conference.

The Undergraduate council recommended that a committee be appointed to study "the changing conditions concerning fraternity membership."

The resolution asserts the right of a fraternity to select its own members free from any domination or pressure. In cases not governed by national restrictions or by custom or tradition binding upon the chapter, the conference, according to the resolution, would recognize the right of the chapter member to vote upon prospective members as he sees fit.

National Officers Of Phi Kappa Psi Back Suspension

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—(UP)—The suspension of the Amherst college chapter of the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity for admitting a Negro to membership was upheld by national executive officers of the fraternity.

The suspension was ordered by Howard L. Hamilton, national president of the fraternity, after the Amherst chapter pledged Thomas W. Gibbs, 19-year-old Negro student from Evanston, Ill.

After its suspension, the Amherst chapter adopted the name Phi Psi and initiated Gibbs at a ceremony last Tuesday night.

In a statement issued after its meeting, the executive council said that it "unanimously sustained" Hamilton's action.

"The council found that at its national convention at Estes Park, Colo., in July, after numerous individual members protested the pledging of the young man in question, the Amherst chapter's delegates voluntarily agreed that for the sake of harmony he would not be initiated," the statement said.

"The Phi Kappa Psi fraternity is primary a social organization, and the executive council found that the overwhelming majority of its chapters and alumni associations firmly opposed such initiation."

Ticket Mad?

Ticket mad students will have a chance to buy coupons for the Sugar bowl classic today.

The coupons will go on sale at the gym at 9 o'clock this morning. Officials announced that the coupons will be redeemable for reserved seat tickets in the lobby of the Roosevelt hotel in New Orleans from 8 o'clock in the morning until noon on Jan. 1.

Students who placed applications Monday will receive their coupons by mail.

Phi Beta Kappa Slates Ceremony Next Tuesday

Fifty-eight seniors and recent graduates will be initiated into the honorary scholastic fraternity, Phi Beta Kappa, next Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock in Gerrard hall, Dr. E. L. Mackie, faculty secretary - treasurer, announced yesterday.

Chancellor R. B. House will be the speaker at an informal banquet following the ceremony at the Carolina Inn at 7 o'clock. All members of Phi Beta Kappa on campus, students and faculty are invited to both the initiation and banquet.

Reservations for the banquet may be made with Mrs. W. H. Branch, 104B South building, until noon Saturday.

Bull's Head Tea Scheduled Today

Using a Christmas theme, the December tea at the Bull's Head bookshop will be conducted this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the library staff room with W. P. Kellam, assistant librarian, as speaker.

Kellam, a collector of "The Visit of St. Nick" or "'Twas the Night Before Christmas," will give the background and history of Clemson Moore's poem.

During the tea Kellam's collection of the approximately 60 editions of the poem will be on display, and at the bookshop there will be new books for children on display. Students, faculty and townspeople are invited to attend the tea and view the collection.

Included in the results of Kellam's hobby are editions of the poem in motion pictures, on a recording.

Balfour to Aid In Senior Rings

Lee H. Blackwell, representative of L. G. Balfour co., will be at the Y today to assist the Senior Ring committee in taking orders for class rings. Orders may be placed between 9 o'clock in the morning and 3:30 in the afternoon.

McNair Lecture Series Is Started By 'Challenge of Science' Speech

The crisis of our time is the result of recent trends in science, technology, politics, economics and social attitudes," declared Dr. Kirtley F. Mather, professor of geology at Harvard University, in the first of the McNair lectures, entitled "The Challenge of science," which was held at 8:30 last night in Hill hall.

The crisis, he contended, is the challenge of science to religion in modern time. In the midst of a world where men have learned physics and chemistry, he continued, the pressing unsolved problems are in the area of human relations and are problems of morals and of ethics.

"Something must be added to the intelligence of science," the visiting lecturer continued, "and that something may best be designated as good will, or the discerning love, of high religion."

Religion, he said, must take advantage of the technical mastery of things achieved through application of the scientific method to their study, but it must insist upon the recognition of science as but one of the avenues to knowledge.

January Draft Quota Sliced To Meet Budget Limitations

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—(UP)—Defense officials announced today that the January draft call will be cut from 20,000 to 10,000 and that the February call will be only 5,000.

The Defense department said budgetary limitations for fiscal 1950 caused the cuts.

President Truman has ordered the budget for the fiscal year starting July 1 kept to $15,000,000,000.

It had been expected that draft calls would be increased each month until they reached 30,000 a month. The November call was 10,000 and December 15,000. The January call was to have been 20,000.

The February draft call, under the old plans, was expected to reach 25,000 to 30,000.

The authorized strength of the Army as of June 30, 1949, is 790,000 plus 110,000 in the 18-year-old group of one-year enlistees. The actual strength of the Army as of Nov. 1 was 645,067.

The Army already has the money to build up to 790,000 under this year's budget. But next year's budget, $600,000,000 of which must be used for stockpiling critical materials, probably will make it impossible for the Army to reach the ultimate authorized strength of 837,000, it was said.

Neither the Navy nor the Air Force has called on Selective Service thus far for any draftees. Both operate with volunteers.

No cut is anticipated in the immediate future in the volunteer recruiting program of either the Army, Navy or Air Force. Both the Air Force and Navy are on recruiting quotas.

February Call Will Be 5,000

Extra Night Scheduled For Playmaker 'School'

The Carolina Playmaker production of "The School for Scandal," which will open tonight at 8:30 in the Playmaker theater, will be held over past its scheduled four-day run for an extra performance Sunday evening, it was announced tonight by John W. Parker, business manager.

"The School for Scandal" is the Playmakers second major production this year, and will be taken on tour in January.

"We still have a few tickets for Wednesday and Thursday evening," Parker said, "but Friday and Saturday evening are sold out except for standing room."

The decision to hold the play over for an extra night was made at noon yesterday, when it became apparant that heavy ticket demands from Durham, Raleigh, Greensboro, and Burlington would keep many students from seeing the play unless an extra performance was added.

"Out-of-towners" always seem to request tickets earlier," Parker explained, "and many students wait until the last minute to order tickets."

"We would like for everyone who wants to see our productions to see them, but with our small theater and crowded scholastic schedule, we can only add the one extra performance for popular plays."

YW Group Hears Reverend Yates On Education

"The college is a hot house, and the plants grow and change fast," the Rev. David Yates, pastor of the Episcopal church, told the members of the YWCA cabinet Monday afternoon in the Y office.

He explained that the one thing in college which is the most overlooked is the change that takes place in the students, listing four traits he thought the most important in making this growth upward. These four traits, he said, are sincerity, humility, unselfishness, and courage.

"There is nothing more destructive than a lack of sincerity," the pastor said, and the test of our sincerity is our conduct, choices, and our consistency in living up to what we profess."

The issue is met, he said, in wanting to be a Christian and also wanting to be worldly.

Just a Rumor

Oklahoma missed the first break of the Sugar bowl game yesterday when Charlie Justice's supposed attack of appendicitis turned out to be a mere upset stomach.

Rumors flew through the campus during the day that the Choo Choo had suffered the attack and was resting comfortably after an emergency operation.

A call to the University infirmary proved the tales were mere exaggerations. Justice was admitted Monday night with a stomach ache and was released yesterday morning fully recovered.

Dedmond Calls Special Meet

Jess Dedmond, president of the student body, last night called an urgent meeting of 30 students for 3 o'clock today in Roland Parker lounge 1 of Graham Memorial. Dedmond said the meeting was for the purpose of discussing University legislation.

Voters Give Amendments Green Light

TMA Gains Seat On Dance Group

The student constitution, just two and one-half years old, had two more amendments tacked to it in yesterday's fall general elections.

Campus voters balloted yesterday to give the Town Men's association a seat on the University Dance committee and both the Town Men's and Town Girls' associations seats on the University club. Membership in both organizations is defined by the constitution.

The two amendments were the sixth and seventh to be added to the constitution since its ratification in the spring of 1946.

The first change on yesterday's ballot, to give the TGA and the TMA seats on the University club, passed by a vote of 1,369 ayes to 239 noes. The second amendment, to place a member of the Town Men's group on the Dance committee, had a harder time getting by. The vote was 1,119 for and 486 against. A two-thirds vote is required to amend the constitution.

President John Van Hecke of the TMA said last night that he was happy that the two amendments had passed. He added that they were two of the three main objectives in the reorganization of the association last spring. He said the third objective of the group had been accomplished already—to place a member of the TMA on the Graham Memorial board of directors.

Jess Dedmond, president of the student body, waged an unsuccessful campaign to defeat the amendment concerning the Dance committee. He had, however, endorsed the other constitutional change.

S & F Will Hold Party Tomorrow

Sound and Fury will hold a social affair tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in Roland Parker lounges 1 and 2 in Graham Memorial.

Dan Morgan, social chairman, said the affair will be for the members of the cast of Mardi Gras and campus touring group. The party will include dancing and refreshments, Morgan said.

Announcements concerning plans for a winter show will be made during the evening. Technical crew members and any other committee workers for Mardi Gras are invited.

Chapel Hill Christmas Decorations Will Be Put Up Within Coming Week

Christmas decorations in the business districts of Chapel Hill and Carrboro will be put up within the next week, the Christmas Decorations committee of the Merchants association announced yesterday.

Decorations this year will consist of several large cedar trees fully decorated with colored lights, placed at strategic locations throughout the business districts of the two towns.

Tentative locations for the trees to be placed are in front of the Methodist church, at the Baptist church corner, on the bus station lawn, the lawn in front of the former munitions plant in Carrboro, and one or more sites still to be selected.

A number of businesses expect to have lighted outdoor trees and other decorations incorporated in their displays. Carrboro Woolen Mills officials are planning this same type of decoration on their lawn in Carrboro.

The Chapel Hill Garden club is sponsoring a home decoration contest this Christmas, with Mrs Whatley Pierson chairman. The association, in cooperation with the Garden club will offer prizes for the best home and merchant displays.

Only 1,634 Cast Ballots In Election

Ten Vacancies Still Undecided

By Herb Nachman

On a light vote of only 1,634, the University party swept 10 seats in the Student legislature for nine 12-month terms and one six-month term in yesterday's fall general elections.

A total of 27 vacancies in the legislature were open. Next Tuesday's runoff will place six 12-month terms and four 6-month terms at stake with 19 candidates battling it out for the positions.

For the remaining seven seats, the Campus party took one 12-month term, the Student party took one, an SP-CP nominee took one and one fell in the SP-UP bracket. Two six-month terms went to the SP, while the other short term was captured by an SP-CP double endorsement.

The legislature vote breakdown is as follows:

Women's dorm dist. 2—Gower (UP), 33 votes and Sewell (SP), 36 votes in Runoff for 12-month term. Page Dees (SP), 57 votes, elected for six months.

Men's dorm dist. 2—Horton (SP), 64 votes; Kirby (UP), 76; Nearman (CP), 68; and Twine (UP), 64 in runoff for two 12-month terms.

Men's dorm dist. 3—Clements (UP), 147; O'Neal (CP), 104, and Prince (SP), 108 elected for 12-months. Allston (UP), 86; Kimerling (SP), 93; and Smith (CP), 85 in runoff for two six-month terms.

Men's dorm dist. 4—Gwynn (UP), 62 and Lineberry (SP), 51 in runoff for one 12-month term. Southerland (SP), 59 and Transou (UP), 51 in runoff for six-month term.

Men's dorm dist. 5—Bowers (SP), 20 and Manning (UP), 22 in runoff for 12-month term. Best (SP), 21 and Smith (CP), 25 in runoff for six-months.

Town men's dist. 1—Taylor (CP-SP) elected with 32 votes for 12-months. Patterson (CP-SP), 27 and Tenney (SP), 24 elected for six-months.

Town men's dist. 2—Fox (UP), 76 and Williams (SP-UP), 32 elected for 12-months. Harris (UP), 88; Plager (UP), 66, and Roberts (UP), 74 elected for 12-month terms.

Town men's dist. 4—James (UP), 87; Lee (UP), 77 and Mebane (UP), 85 elected for 12-month terms. Clewis (UP), 85 votes elected for six-months.

Town's men's dist. 5—Ford (UP), 3 votes, elected for 12-months over McLaughlin (SP) with 2 votes.

Complete results on the minor and freshman class elections and the Women's Honor council were not available at press time last night.

Medical Draft?

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 30.—(UP)—Physicians gathering here for the interim session of the American Medical association were warned today they must volunteer in the armed forces in sufficient numbers or face a special draft.

Dr. James C. Sargent, chairman of the AMA council on emergency medical service, said, "Many doctors are going into uniform in the months ahead—make no mistake about that."

Can Tests Be Compulsory

Open Letter to the Dean of the General College

Dear Dean Spruill;

We would like to make a suggestion that entails an enormous amount of work and expense, but which, in our opinion, would offer a firm foundation to the student body in the selection of a major and a career.

We refer to vocational guidance employing psychological tests which sample aptitudes, interests and personality. If these tests were given each sophomore under the direction of a competent psychologist, it might eliminate some of the indecision and bad vocational choices of those leaving the General College. We believe the average sophomore needs an evaluation of his talents, his interests and his personality upon which he can make the best possible decision.

If this was made obligatory, it would require enlargement of the present Counseling staff, but if the students were spaced from September until May, the additional salaries should stay within reason. The fact that each student would face his last two years knowing just what he could do, and what is almost as important, what he could not do, should counterbalance the additional financial burden.

On the whole, the students would not object to this arrangement, for the University has as much right to demand a psychological measurement of its students as it has to demand a transcript of their high school record. After the initial objections to the time taken by the tests, the intelligent student will realize their invaluable aid in planning his career and the selection of his electives.

We submit this suggestion in the hope that it may aid the student body and prove of assistance to those members of the faculty who advise the students. We would be grateful if you would reply and give your thoughts on the matter

RAMESES

Reds and Madame Chiang

In the editorial pages all over the nation, writers are discussing whether to give aid to the presently beleaguered Chinese Nationalists and the reasons for and against any aid.

Also prominent in the connection of stop-gap aid is the flying visit of Madame Chiang Kai-shek, the lovely and personable wife of the Generalissimo who is desperately trying to stem the tide of the Chinese Communist advance with ineffectual arms, armies and a host of corrupt civil and governmental aides.

We feel that many of the comments so far voiced have missed the point. The attitude so far taken is that is is a family brawl and that one side is just as bad as the other. Other editorial comments are resigned expressions of what can we do now? It is too late and any way the stuff we could send might be lost to the Chinese Communists.

The real question we must ask ourselves before making any decisions one way or the other rests upon what we believe this conflict to be. Is it firstly a family brawl, or is it a direct encroachment by an ideology which is repugnant to us who believe in Democracy even though the present Chinese version leaves much to be desired?

We think that answer is obvious. Communism is moving under the guise of liberal reform in order that it might set up firmly a future buffer state in a hot war against Democracy when the military forces of Communism are ready. Communist leaders know that in the event of a war with the West, they must deny access to bases as close to their heartland as is China.

Therefore it serves the Communistic forces well to have an internal revolt by groups favorable to their cause or desirous of their help to gain personal powers. Later these puppet groups can be decimated at will with ease.

It would be wise we think, that we should consider every phase of our future in all our planning whether long range or short range, before we come out with a flat no to the Chinese appeal for help. It may be that on helping the lesser of two evils the Kuomingtang, we may be indirectly helping ourselves.

As to what form of aid we should agree upon, the decision will be in the hands of diplomats and soldiers who may be able to help China . . if that is the case . . without precipitating a hot war for this generation to fight again.

These Days

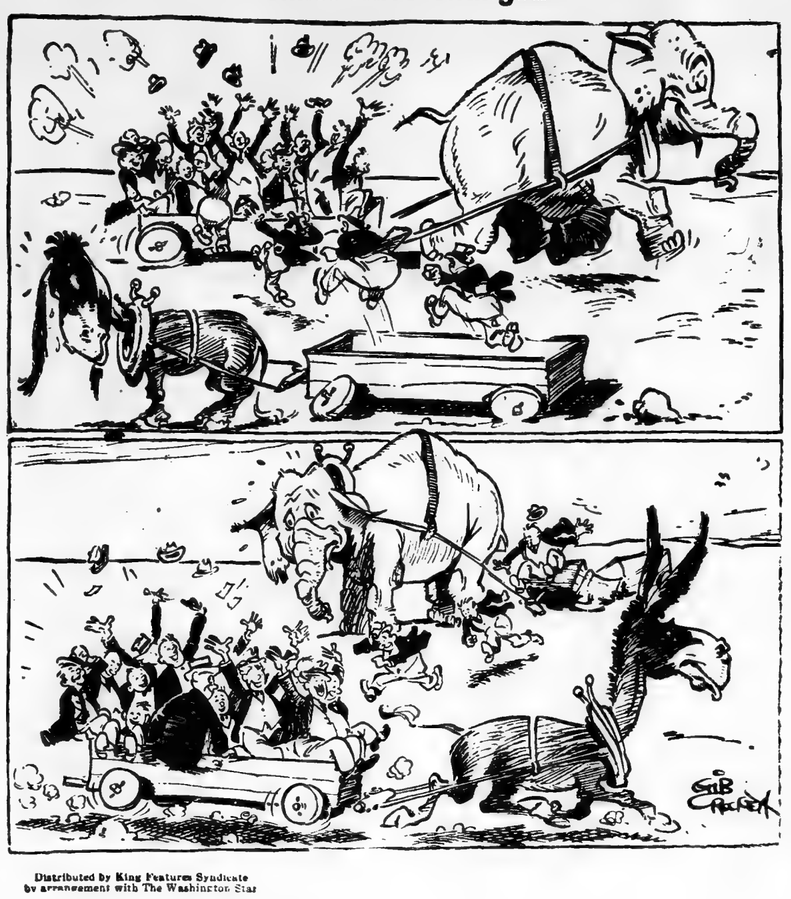
The Play's The Thing

By George E. Sokolsky

The theater this year has been so inadequate that I have read the reviews of the professional critics more regularly than heretofore. Most of them hit down a play by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber entitled "Bravo!" George Jean Nathan, who has been of the theater it would seem forever, seemed to find the play good entertainment. So I went to see it—and spent as delightful an evening as I have known these past five years.

I wondered whether I had lost all sense of joy and could be amused by anything, or whether the critics had gone collective and had eaten tainted crabmeat together on the same night. Therefore, between the acts, I meandered about the lobby, talking to some I know, and listening to others, and found a general agreement that this Bravo" is a good play, that the audience is interested, amused, stirred to laughter and to pity, absorbed by interest in how it will work out in the end.

Of course, it was obvious that Kaufman and Ferber wondered about that too, for as experienced playwrights they undoubtedly know that it is easier to begin than to end a play, which is also true about all forms of writing, particularly columns. So they drag in the deus ex machina, as the ancient Greek dramatics did so effectively, by the simple device of a telephone conversation with Bernard Baruch—a conversation so full of pathos and humor that it gives to Oscar Homolka, who plays the role of a refugee dramatist, an opportunity to do such acting as is rarely seen in these days of underdone articulation by players who are trained more for soap operas on the radio than for the theater. That telephone conversation is real theater.



Well, I could not help wondering what happened to my confreres, the critics, when they saw this play. Of course, they will say that I should stick to my last and write of dull economics and disappointing politics. Still, man and boy, I have been going to the theater regularly now for a matter of more than 40 years. I have attended many kinds of theaters in many countries. I have seen Joseph Jefferson and Sothern and Marlowe and John Drew and Maude Adams and Forbes-Robertson. I even recall a farewell of Sarah Bernhardt and I saw Nazimova when she could only play in Russian—and then I ran the gamut of Ibsen with her in English. And let it not be shouted in the highways—I played for a short period as a child and took what I could learn from such an artist as Emma Sheridan. I saw actors start at Miner's on the Bowery or its neighboring Thalia Theater where greatness was portrayed in Yiddish—and rise to glories on Broadway before neon signs were born.

So, no one can deny my experience as a spectator—and it is as a spectator, who buys tickets because he wants a relaxing evening, that I write. And as such I say that "Bravo!" is a good play, interesting, amusing, stirring a nostalgia for other days when Galsworthy wrote gently of human problems and Barrie stirred the imagination by the softness of his characterizations.

This is not a blasting play. It is soft and gentle. It has only one horridly mean character; the rest are nice people in trouble. They do not produce sharp, noisy climaxes but rather move bewilderedly through the tough moments of life. And yet there is joy in their hearts—and a wonderful kindliness. There is still much to be done with kindlines in the theater, even in this hard-boiled age of little children who learn to talk like "The Fat Man" of the radio.

Coeds Move Into Politics

By Jess Dedmond

The male segment of our campus probably stays in a quandry about what the girls are going to do. They might well raise their eyebrows about present coed political activity. The male politicoes usually concern themselves each spring with the possibility of the coed vote going their way, but with the returns in the coeds are left to go their own way, politically speaking, until spring rolls around again. This year may make a change in coed affairs. Certain coed leaders, notable among whom are Edie Knight, Fran Angus, Emily Baker, Patsy McNutt, Helen Bouldin and others, are making a real effort to get out the coed vote. Theirs is a new aim-an aim to get out the independent vote. It will be a noteworthy accomplishment if they succeed in their efforts.

By the time this is printed some of the results may have been seen. If they are not as desired, the coeds will have another opportunity to show their male contemporaries their political heels by setting the pace in a revival of interest in campus elections. Last year's male vote in the fall elections was about ten percent of the qualified voters. The girls will have little distance to go to better that record. It is possible for them to better it by eighty-five percent. Their leaders think they will. We all think they can.

Our male politicoes might well take a lesson from the coed leaders. For three weeks they have held dormitory and mass coed meetings to discuss their candidates and the coed's role in campus affairs. They have even rounded up some independent candidates of their own who are matching their wits against party nominees in the vote getting game. We may well wonder if we do not have a fourth party in the making—the Coed party. Whatever the outcome of their efforts, some of the coeds have done their bit by providing a new spark of interest. The final result may be measured after the December 7 run-offs.

Mephistopheles Cordon

And So They Were Married

By "Wink" Locklair

When it was announced last week that Norman Cordon was to be soloist with the University symphony, I recalled a rather special, if somewhat hectic night in 1939 while I was "employed" as a boy soprano at St. Peter's Episcopal church in Charlotte. We sang one Sunday service and attended two weekly rehearsals, all for what was considered the slave wage of one dollar a month, plus transportation.

One Saturday morning, Mr. Whiddit, our director, announced that he had a phone call from Miss Deane Van Landingham a member of the church who was prominent in Charlotte society. Mr. Whiddit went on to say that we had been asked to sing at Miss Van Landingham's wedding to Norman Cordon of the Metropolitan Opera on May 17th. He also said we'd each receive a silver dollar plus bus fare, and this announcement brought about a demonstration lasting just a little shorter than the one the British put on outside Buckingham Palace a few weeks ago. We also learned that Cordon was once a St. Peter's choir boy, but the chance of any of us hearing him on the opera broadcasts was very slim, since a large majority found themselves fighting cattle rustlers on Saturday afternoons with Hoot Gibson and Ken Maynard at the State. However, we were eager to sing our best for them.

The choir's contributon was to include Mozart's treacherous, trill-filled "Allelujia," the Lohengrin bridal procession, and the intonation of The Lord's Prayer. The Wednesday and Saturday rehearsals grew longer and longer because Mr. Whiddit demanded polish and perfection in everything.

When May 17 finally arrived, everyone connected with the wedding was in a mixed state of agony and anxiety. A large crowd of the curious was firmly entrenched across the street from the church when I arrived at seven-thirty. In the dressing room, our Choir Mother, her mouth filled with straight pins, was carefully buttoning collars, fixing ties and robeing the boys. She was being assisted by several nervous, hastily-recruited Mothers. Most of the choir seemed fully aware of the dramatic tenseness of the occasion. For that reason, the horseplay, which had one memorable Sunday morning resulted in one black eye, two torn cassocks and fines dangerously close to fifty cents, was kept at an absolute minimum.

We got our first look at Mr. Cordon a few minutes before 8 o'clock. He loomed over us like Mephistopheles himself. However he had a warm, intimate smile, and assured us that he was more nervous than we were. He gave us some autographed pictures, then disappeared.

Out front," as we called it, the pews were rapidly filling, and as we marched down the aisle behind the crucifer, Tiffany-tinselled dowagers stage-whispered their approval. All the music came off beautifully and since we had memorized all of it, our stock with the audience rose considerably. The wedding itself was a great success, landing on the front page of the Observer. After the ceremony, one of the boys told me he felt sure Mr. Cordon had "made a good deal."

When St. Peter's choir alumni get together these days-and there are a good half dozen here in Chapel Hill - the talk will almost certainly include some mention of the Cordons. Their wedding was a rare opportunity to enhance a unique reputation already widely recognized, as well as put some badly-needed money in our pockets!

Editor:

As a former cheer leader please let me say congratulations to the fine cheering and to the card stunts. This was not only a fine game last Saturday but a wonderful display of clean sportsmanship by both teams and student bodies. I graduated from Duke after graduating from Carolina but found myself pulling hard for Carolina's greatest team in years. Sorry I did not get to speak to my classmate Kay Kyser who beat me out a chief cheer leader my senior year.

Again my congratulations to the coaches, team and to your cheer leaders and to the Carolina student body which has a tradition of fine sportsmanship.

No Need for Shoes

(The following story which appeared in the Washington, D. C., Times-Herald on Nov. 24 raises the question of whether all Carolina troops who made the trek to Washington got back safely. The story came to the Daily Tar Heel from a girl named Betty via a boy named Cliff, last names unknown.)

Alexandrians pushed to their telephones yesterday following the appearance in the Alexandria Gazette of a "For Sale" notice which advertised: "One pair of brown shoes. Size 9½. Just like new. Cheap. Heading back to North Carolina."

As far as anyone could find out last night, Alexandrians were still at their telephones, index fingers poised over their dials, puzzlement wrinkling their old-colonial brows, cold linoleum numbering spots the size of quarters on the soles of their ill-shod feet. Transfixing them thus was the ad's unconventional ending.

"Call * * * *" was all it said. There wasn't even a footnote to explain what the asterisks meant.

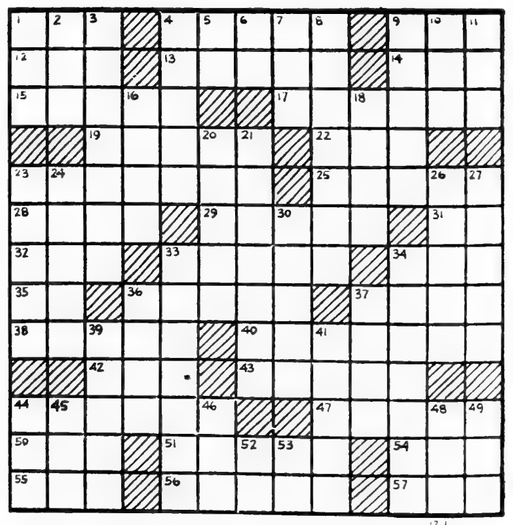
A spokesman for the Gazette, who said he had been speaking steadily for the Gazette since its doors opened yesterday morning, explained last night that:

The first asterisk meant the Gazette management had noticed the ad too late to do anything more than obliterate the telephone number: the second asterisk meant that the Gazette doesn't believe North Carolinians have no use for shoes; the third asterisk meant that the Gazette has had trouble with the same shoe salesman before over what it believes to be the same pair of shoes, and the fourth asterisk meant exactly what every fourth asterisk ever means:

"You should live through the job I've got!"

The Old Army Food

By Louis Cassels

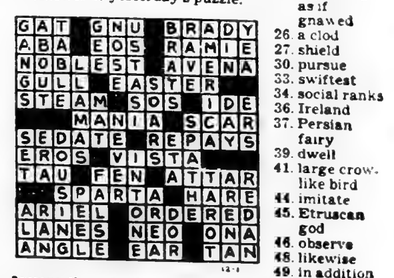


WASHINGTON, Nov. 28—(UP)—The army has adopted a new and "superior" field ration for its troops, it announced today.

It is an improved version of the "C ration" familiar to millions of World War II servicemen, and bears the official designation "ration, individual, combat, C-4."

Developed by the Quartermaster corps after extensive research on new types of foods and containers, the C-4 ration has been tested on hungry soldiers and found "highly appetizing and acceptable," the army said.

Ex-GI's, who studied the six different menus provided in each 40-pound ration package, agreed with the army that it includes a "wide variety" of meat, vegetable and fruit preparations as well as such comforts as cigarets, soluble coffee, sweets, gum, soap and toiler paper.



But they also noted a continued heavy emphasis on the old army standby, beans. In some form or another, beans appear on all six menus.

Justice Garners All-American, All-Southern Honors

Walker Nips Choo For Top Position In National Poll

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—(UP)—The United Press today presents its 1948 All-America, the 11 collegians selected by sports writers and sports broadcasters from all sections of the nation as the finest football players at their positions this year.

Every section of the country is represented with the Midwest leading with five players, followed by the Far West and Southwest with two each and the South and East with one each.

Five of the players came from three of the four unbeaten and untied major teams with two Midwest powerhouses, Michigan and Notre Dame, landing two places each on the first team. California got one berth and only Clemson of the unbeaten Giants failed to capture a place on the mythical eleven.

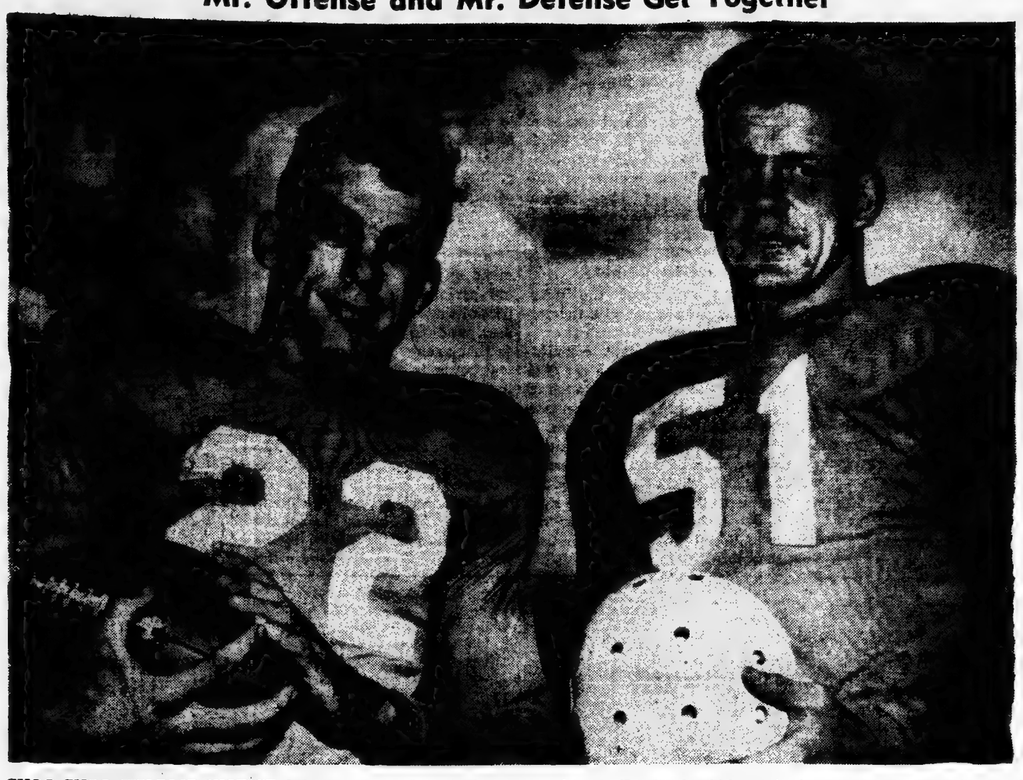
Notre Dame's All-Stars are end Leon Hart and guard William Fischer while tackle Alvin Wistern and end Richard Rifenberg are the Michigan representatives. Jack Jensen was the California player honored.

Leo Nomellini, the 250-pound Minnesota tackle, was the fifth Midwest player honored. From the Southwest are back Doak Walker, who polled the highest number of votes, and Paul Burris, Oklahoma's star guard. Charles Bednarik of Pennsylvania was the only Eastern player to make the team while in addition to Jensen, Stan Heath, Nevada's great back, came from the Far West. The South's representative is Charles Justice, the North Carolina backfield ace.

Fischer, Walker and Bednarik are repeaters from the United Press 1947 All-America team. One player who made that club, end George (Barney) Poole of Mississippi, fell back to the second team this year.

Walker polled 2,820 out of a possible 3,267 while Justice totalled 2,740. Bednarik led the linemen with a total of 2,335.

We Disagree, But . . .



NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—(UP)—Doak Walker, Southern Methodist's great All-America halfback, today was chosen to receive the annual Heisman Memorial trophy as the nation's outstanding college football player of 1943.

Walker, the first junior ever to win the trophy, was chosen by the nation's sports writers and broadcasters and will receive the award at the Downtown Athletic club of New York on Dec. 7.

Walker, who ran third behind Johnny Lujack of Notre Dame and Bob Chappius of Michigan last year, received 778 votes. His nearest competitor, Charlie (Choo Choo) Justice of North Carolina, got 443. Chuck Bednarik, Pennsylvania center, was third with 336 votes.

Next in line were Jack Jensen of California, 143; Stan Heath of Nevada, 113; Norm Van Brocklin of Oregon, 83; and Jack Mitchell of Oklahoma, 68. Emil Sitko of Notre Dame, 73;

CHOO CHOO CHARLIE JUSTICE, left above, and Len Szafaryn are the two Tar Heel gridders who have received many honors for their 1948 grid performances. Justice, the Tar Heel offensive threat, yesterday was placed on the United Press All-American team and was second in the balloting for the Heisman trophy. Both Justice and Szafaryn, the outstanding defensive player in the South, were picked on the first team All-conference eleven.

Justice's Virginia Performance Brings Praises From UP Writer

By Steve Snider

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—(UP)—A pair of tie games came just about as close to being the "upset of the year" as anything collegiate football produced in 1948.

Underdogs by 20 points, Navy held Army to a 21-21 draw and William and Mary spoiled North Carolina's brilliant record with a 7-7 tie.

Those were shockers as great as Missouri's 20-14 victory over Southern Methodist, Pittsburgh's 7-0 triumph over Penn State and Tennessee's 13-6 victory over a Georgia Tech team which then was being hailed as king of Dixie.

Disappointment of the year—Purdue, which played its heart out losing to Notre Dame in the opener, 28-27, and never again reached full playing strength.

Surprise of the year—Cornell, unsung at the start, sprung a group of underclassmen that lost only to Army. Only three men graduate.

Best single winning performance by a back—Charlie Justice of North Carolina against Virginia. He scored twice, threw two touchdown passes, set up a fifth by running and passing. North Carolina won, 34-12.

Best losing performance by a back—Ray Dooney of Pennsylvania against Army. He scored twice, passed for a third touchdown. Army won, 26-20.

Sheer murder — Oklahoma, which had two major challengers for the Big Seven title—Missouri and Kansas. The Sooners blasted Missouri 41-7; slaughtered Kansas, 60-7. Convincing enough?

Top record-breaker — Stan Heath of Nevada, who passed for more distance and more touchdowns than any man in history. His opposition wasn't major league, but one pro coach who'd like to have him said: He must be good to hit receivers. A lot of guys can't hit that many in practice."

Biggest off-field debates—the two-team system and the Rose bowl pact. And it looks as if the people who were against them fought a losing battle. Virtually unrestricted substitution is almost a cinch to be retained and "second best" Northwestern will be at Pasadena on New Year's Day.

COED HOCKEY

Coed hockey has been postponed because of unfavorable weather and the poor condition of the field. If possible, a hockey tournament will be held during the winter quarter.

Basketball Team Opens Tomorrow

The 1948 Tar Heel basketball squad will be unveiled to the public tomorrow night in Woollen gymnasium when they engage Lenoir Rhyne college. A freshman game will preceed the varsity contest.

Tomorrow night's game will mark the beginning of a four-game home stand which will find the locals facing Guilford, Elon and Catawba of the North State conference in addition to Lenoir Rhyne.

Yesterday afternoon Coach Tom Scott took his cagers down to Laurinburg where they participated in a basketball clinic. After the clinic and a rules demonstration, the team engaged in an intra-squad game.

The Tar Heels returned home late last night and will wind up their pre-game practice sessions this afternoon.

Probable starters for tomorrow include Coy Carson, Hugo Kappler, Nemo Nearman, Dan Nyimicz and a fifth man to be chosen from the trio of Howard Deasy, Charlie Thorne and Rip Ryan.

Player of Year

GREENSBORO, Nov. 30.—(UP)—Charlie Justice, North Carolina's terrific tailback who triple-threatened the Tar Heels to their best season in half a century, was picked today as Player of the Year in the Southern conference.

Choo Choo Charlie chugged away from all competitors in selections of the Southern conference sports writers association. He got 31 out of a possible 37 votes from the newspaper, wire service, and radio sports scribes.

Szafaryn, Weiner Join Local Star On Mythical Club

GREENSBORO, Nov. 30—(UP)—The Southern conference sports writers association today announced its all-conference team with everybody agreed on one man—Charlie Justice.

Choo Choo Charlie, who hauled North Carolina to its first unbeaten season in 50 years and its second Sugar Bowl date in his own brilliant career, was unanimous choice for the first team.

The squad was picked by 37 voting members of the association—newspaper, wire service and radio sports writers.

Other choices on which most of the writers agreed were John O'Quinn of Wake Forest and Art Weiner of North Carolina at ends. They got 32 first-place votes and five second-place ballots.

Nine of the first team will play in New Year's day bowl games.

Ends—O'Quinn and Weiner; Tackles—Len Szafaryn, North Carolina, and Louis Allen, Duke; Guards—Frank Gillespie, Clemson, and Bernie Watts, North Carolina State; Center—Tommy Thompson, William and Mary; Backs—Justice, Bobby Gage of Clemson, Jack Cloud of William and Mary, and Bill Gregus of Wake Forest.

The second team, in some cases only a vote or two behind the first-string men, included:

Ends—Lou Hoitsma, William and Mary, and Jim Duncan, Wake Forest; Tackles—Al DeRogatis, Duke, and Ray Krouse, Maryland; Guards—Bob Mitten, North Carolina, and Charlie Musser, North Carolina State; Center—Hal Saunders, North Carolina State; Backs—Hosea Rodgers, North Carolina, Bobby Thomason of VMI, Andy Davis of George Washington and Fred Folger of Duke.

The sports writers nominated 15 ends, 17 tackles, 19 guards, nine centers and 27 backs for the team.

Dr. Graham Comes Back From Dallas After Addressing Teachers' Meeting

Dr. Frank Graham returned from Dallas, Texas last night after addressing a dinner session of the Texas State Teachers association during the Thanksgiving holidays.

Stressing the urgent need of legislation to provide federal aid to state schools President Graham told the group that "the only agent which can redress the imbalance between the largest per capita concentration of children and the largest per capita concentration of wealth is the federal government."

The crisis in the schools is "basically related to the crisis in the world," Dr. Graham said. "Education, intelligence, democratic morale, and spiritual insights were never more desperately needed than now. With a crisis in the schools and in the world and with a tremendous national debt we cannot pinch our way out. We must invest in intelligence and the human spirit and 'reason our way out.'"

Officials of Student Council Release Report on Duty Breach Jurisdiction

Student council spokesmen yesterday released the following report on original jurisdiction in cases of alleged breach of duty by members of the Student legislature:

"The Student council has been asked by Mr. Don Scroggins to issue a ruling on the following question: What branch of student government has original jurisdiction in cases involving alleged breaches of duty on the part of duly elected members of the Student legislature?

Having considered the question, the council submits the following ruling:

1. That the student constitution clearly delegates to the student legislature original and final jurisdiction in alleged non-performance or malperformance of duty by a legislator or any other officer elected by the student body, in that the constitution grants to the legislature the right to impeach any such officer and execute all procedural pursuant thereto.

2. That the only other action in such matter can be taken by the legislator's constituency by the exercise of the power of recall or of the right to vote.

3. That non-performance of duty does not constitute an "offense against the student body" as defined in the constitution in delegating final jurisdiction in such cases to the Student council.

4. That the Student council has authority to call to the attention of any agency of student government any non-performance or mal-performance of duty on the part of that agency or of its members, and to recommend action to that agency or to the Student legislature in the performance of its constitutional duties. The Student council does not have the authority to act as an arbiter between or among individual members, groups or agencies of student body.

5. That each agency of student government is responsible for the performance of its duties by its members, and shall make rules governing its members and their official functions and conduct as provided in the constitution."

Lovett Warns Force Cannot Push U.S. Out

Acting Secretary Gives Reds Answer

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(UP)—Acting Secretary of State Robert A. Lovett warned the Russians today that "they are mistaken" if they think the United States can be chused out of Berlin by force.

He told a news conference that this country is not going to be intimidated by the Soviets' latest maneuver in setting up a separate Communist city government in their sector of Berlin.

To make his point emphatically clear, he authorized direct quotation of this statement:

"If the Soviets feel that this action on their part alters our determination not to be driven out of Berlin by force, they are mistaken."

His warning reaffirmed the policy laid down last July when Secretary of State George C. Marshall asserted the United States "will not be coerced or intimidated in any way" out of its rights in Germany.

Lovett refused to go into the implications of the new Soviet move in Berlin.

But other State department sources made it plain that they think the maneuver makes a solution of the Berlin problem more difficult, if not impossible.

The Soviet-sponsored Berlin government is illegal and does not represent the will of the German people, they said.

Fitzgerald Keeps Council Position By Clean Sweep

Earl Fitzgerald was unanimously re-elected president of the Debate council at a meeting of the group Tuesday night.

Other officers chosen were Pete Gerns, vice-president (Phi representative); Don Shropshire, publicity director (Di representative); and Blanton Miller, executive secretary.

A debate with the University of Pittsburgh will be held in Chapel Hill sometime in February. The topic will be "Federal Aid to Education." Dave Pittman and Herb Yates are to argue the affirmative, and Herb Mitchell and Paul Roth will take the negative.

Raleigh Group Will Have Dance

The Raleigh-Carolina club met Monday night in Gerrard hall to make final plans for its annual Christmas dance. The affair will be held Wednesday night, Dec. 22, in the Virginia Dare hall-room of the Sir Walter hotel.

Johnny Satterfield and his orchestra will play for the dance. Eaddie Terrell and Charlie Bryan, co-chairmen of the ticket sales committee, announced that tickets are now available through representatives in all dormitories, fraternity and sorority houses.

Each member is entitled to one guest bid with the purchase of his own dance ticket. The last day these tickets may be obtained is Dec. 13. The small dance floor of the Sir Walter limits the supply of tickets.

Veterans Leaving Must Check South

All veterans leaving school at the end of this quarter are cautioned by C. F. Shepherd, veterans advisor, to check by the veterans office in South building before leaving.

Also, all veterans now taking a reduced study load who will take a full load during the winter quarter are advised by Shepherd to notify the veterans office.

Failure to notify the office of a change in veteran training may result in fraud charges, Shepherd said.

German Police Battle Communist In Berlin

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—(UP)—Club-swinging German police battled tonight with Communists who tried to break up a political rally of the Socialist party in the United States sector of Berlin.

Police headquarters said that several Communists were arrested. No mention was made of casualties. The Russian-licensed ADN news agency said that one "worker" was badly beaten.

The police said that "Organized interference groups" of the Communist (SED) party invaded the Socialist meeting near the Hermann platz in the U.S. sector, and These hecklers were thrown tried to shout down speakers. out by the Socialists in the meeting. About an hour later they returned with reinforcements and were thrown out again when they started to disrupt the meeting.

The Communists then massed in front of the meeting hall and started to sing the Red anthem Internationale.

Police moved in with their nightclubs swinging and broke up the gathering. The Communists regrouped at a nearby subway station and started singing again, and the police broke them up with another nightclub charge.

ADN reported, but police did not confirm, that there was another fight between police and Communists when about 100 Reds gathered in the American sector, formed a column and started marching through the streets singing the Internationale.

Western Allies Remind Russia Of Berlin Stand

PARIS, Dec. 1.—(UP)—The United States, Great Britain and France reminded Russia today that they reserve full right to take such measures as may be necessary to protect their position in Berlin.

They said also that they must see and study any report by United Nations Security council experts on the Berlin currency situation before they approve it.

The Western Allies said that in recent weeks especially Russia has "consistently and continuously resorted to further measures directed against the (Berlin) city administration which have brought about an increasing split in the city."

"The three Western Powers can not agree that they should be bound to submit to all Soviet measures which add to and intensify the Soviet blockade or which interfere with the city administration, while the Soviet Union remains wholly uncommitted to any restraint," they said.

Enough Evidence Is Not Available To Make Arrests

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 1.—(UP)—Gov. Herman Talmadge said today his Georgia Bureau of Investigation does not have enough the murder of Negro Robert Mallard.

When and if it obtains such information, and the local prosecutor at Lyons, Ga., feels that he has a strong enough case to take to court, "The GBI stands ready to make all such arrests as may be indicated," the governor said.

The investigation of the ambush-killing of the 37-year-old Negro mortuary supplies salesman appeared to have bogged down.

Sheriff R. E. Gray at Lyons, seat of Toombs county where Mallard was killed, said he was prepared to ask a grand jury for indictments against a number of white who may have been involved.

First Lady of China Arrives In Capital to Request Aid

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(UP)—Mme. Chiang Kai-Shek arrived here today to ask a skeptical American government to save her husband's Nationalist China from Communism.

Still fresh and smiling after her 11,000-mile, three-day flight from Shanghai, she landed at National airport at 10 o'clock this morning and drove away silently with Mrs. George C. Marshall, wife of the secretary of state, to her temporary guest quarters in the Marshall's Leesburg, Va., home. Marshall was in Walter Reed Army hospital for a physical checkup.

A welcoming crowd of several hundred Chinese and a sprinkling of American officials were on hand to greet her.

But the welcome was shadowed by an almost tangible air of official reserve that contrasted sharply with the tumultuous reception accorded China's first lady almost six years ago when she captured the nation with a dramatic plea for help against the Japanese invaders of her homeland.

This time, she is expected to ask for another billion dollars of American arms and economic supplies; for an all-out declaration of support for Generalissimo Chiang, and for a top-rank American soldier to take command of the Chinese Communists.

(The American Foreign Service journal said today the United States has supplied $3,498,200,000 in aid to China since the start of World War II).

Kappa Alphas Robbed of $70

The theft of $70 early yesterday morning from residents of the Kappa Alpha house was reported to local police who began a complete investigation.

Victims of the robbery, which occurred sometime between 1:30 and 6:30, were all occupants of the second floor. One KA, Handsel Butts of Natchez, Miss., remembered that he was awakened during the night by the sound of a door being closed. Butts sat up and saw the door quietly close. Thinking it was a fraternity brother wandering harmlessly through the building, he looked at the time, 5 o'clock, and went back to sleep.

Four of the 11 rooms on the second floor were entered. Losses at present are as follows: Art Jones, Daytona Beach, Fla., $10; Dick Ferguson, Roanoke, Va., $20; Lester Martin, Mocksville, $8; Tom Urquhart, Mocksville, $23; and Buddy Gentry, Norfolk, Va., $9. Gentry and Urquhart are roommates.

. . . Three, Kick!

Three well-known students will provide an exhibition of "Tap Dancing for Boys and Men" tomorrow afternoon as an hors d'oeurve to a conference sponsored by the North Carolina association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation to be held here through the weekend.

The three terpsichorean performers are varsity football players Sid Varney, Bob Mitten and "Twinkle-toes" Bob Cox.

Truman Receives Honorary Title From D. C. Board

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(UP)—President Truman got a new title today because he waits for a green light before crossing the street his way to work.

It was "Honorary Pedestrian-of-the-week." The title was bestowed by the District of Columbia Traffic Advisory board, which is conducting a pedestrian traffic safety drive.

"Your firm decision to wait faithfully for a green light before crossing Pennsylvania avenue demonstrates your genuine interest in the promotion of traffic safety," the board said in a letter to Mr. Truman.

The president is living at Blair house, across the avenue from the White House, until the executive mansion is repaired.

Special traffic lights to stop all traffic when he crosses the street were installed at first, but after two days Mr. Truman ordered them discontinued. Now he waits for a green light like everybody else.

Fog Bank Moves Out of Britain; Goes to Germany

LONDON, Dec. 1.—(UP)—The massive Europe-wide fog bank moved slowly eastward late today, bringing Britain into the sunlight and burying Germany and Czechoslovakia under gloom 1,000 feet thick.

British ports and airports buzzed with activity but the Berlin airlift was fogged out at 2 o'clock after 54 planes had landed 540 tons of supplies in the blockaded city. The center of the fog apparently had moved to Praque, which was experiencing its mistiest night in history.

Scattered areas of Britain at midnight passed their 117th consecutive foggy hour but a strong wind from the south was rapidly cleaning London. Movies played to full houses for the first time in a week.

Thousands of liners, launches, ferries and fishing smacks, feverishly crisscrossed British harbors and airliners took to the air in swarms in an attempt to catch up on a huge passenger and freight backlog. Paris, Stockholm and Copenhagen prepared to return normal tomorrow.

At Southhampton, the sun shone through the grey, choking mist that has hovered over most of Europe for more than four days, and the liners Queen Elizabeth, Queen Mary and Aquitania sailed for North American ports.

UN Committee Adopts Plan For Palestine

Group to Settle Boundary Lines

PARIS, Dec. 1.—(UP)—The United Nations political committee tonight adopted the first parts of the American-supported British plan which would set up a commission to help Arabs and Jews negotiate their own boundaries in Palestine.

Moving slowly toward a solution after three weeks of debate, the committee approved the first four out of 30 paragraphs of the British resolution creating a conciliation commission to promote final peace in the Holy Land.

The committee however refused to reaffirm last year's partition boundaries, voting down an Australian proposal to make the original plan the "starting point" of any UN effort to bring arabs and Jews to a settlement. The vote was 24 to 13 with 12 abstentions.

Earlier, the United States, speaking out in support of Britain's new proposals, told Israel in effect that if it wants to keep conquered Western Galilee it might have to give up at least part of the Negev.

The committee adjourned at 11:30 tonight with the most important paragraphs still to be voted upon, but the trend appeared to be toward approval of the British plan. Committee approval would virtually assure the plan a two-thirds majority in the general assembly sometime during the remaining 10 days of this session.

The four minor paragraphs adopted were in the preamble which recalled the UN has approved partition, noted the truce in the Holy Land and the mediator's proposals for reviewing the original partition program. The original program awarded the Negev desert to the Jews.

Dorm Check Lists Must Be Signed

Men now living in University housing must indicate whether they wish to retain their rooms next quarter before Monday, the housing office warned yesterday.

Managers of the dormitories have a list that must be signed by the individual students, or the room will be given to some one now on the waiting list, J. E. Wadsworth, housing officer said.

The deadline for signing is next Monday.

Mather Says Human Relations Will Meet Marxist Challenge

Dr. Kirtley Fletcher Mather, delivering the second in his series of three John Calvin McNair lectures in Hill hall last night said that "to meet the challenge of Marxism is to demonstrate our loyalty to the democratic way of life by confidently trusting to its principles of human relations."

Dr. Mather, noted authority on the relation of science and religion and professor of geology in Harvard university, declared, "The most effective answer to that challenge would be the thoroughgoing, whole-hearted application of democracy in every aspect of American life."

Dr. Mather will deliver his final lecture tonight at 8:30 in Hill hall, dealing with "Perspective for the Future," the third in the series of discussions on "Religion in This Time of Crisis."

Dr. Mather said that "to meet the challenge of Marxism intelligently and therefore with real strength, it is necessary to perform the difficult task of distinguishing between the conflict of ideas concerning the organization of men into societies and the rivalry of the Soviet Union and the United States as competitors for spheres of influence, for economic power and for military bases."

"The better reaction to the challenge of Marxism," he declared, "is a rediscovery of true Christianity, a deeper social consciousness that evokes a stronger sense of interdependence of men of all vocations and a humble desire to be of service to all our brethren."

Finances Outpunch Touring Texans

NAPLES, Italy, Dec. 1.—(UP)—The 26 cowboys and cowgirls who tried to bring Texas to Europe today sadly admitted that finances had out-punched them. Their bags and saddles were in hock, their animals were slaughterhouse-bound, and officials of three nations were picking over the remains.

The Netherlands had joined the United States and Italy in trying to untangle the monetary knots which hogtied Capt. Larry Sunbrock's touring Texas toupe. Tonight:

A Milanese financier named Giordano Sacchi was counting himself out the 700,000 lire (about $1,215) with which he said he financed the troupe's departure by request from Switzerland and its subsequent trip to Italy. Swiss police at the time said there had been a fracas in a local arena, and ordered the troupe out of the country.

The Napoli hotel was holding the troupe's equipment and demanding 500,000 lire ($860) for room and restaurant bills. Neapolitan publicity men were pressing hard and master of ceremonies Mario Mieli said he plaintly [illegible] hadn't received a lire (about a fifth of a cent).

Police said Sunbrock wanted to take his boys and girls to "Egypt or Spain" but the cows and horses had already been sold and then seized by police pending clarification of the matter. The purchasers, meantime, were demanding the animals or their money back.

Not all the troupers were pure Texan. Three were from New Jersey and two of the cowgirls were Belgian.

Only Sid, the unrideable Bull, was content. Big, tough and mean, Sid was unsold, unwanted and plainly [illegible]

Junior, Freshman Classes Choose Washington, Ruffin

By Herb Nachman

Washington was doubly endorsed for the post by the Campus and Student parties. He polled 50 votes more than his opponent Charlie Smith, University party candidate.

The other four UP candidates on the junior class slate went in with sizeable majorities. Dick Boren was elected vice-president with 259 votes; Muriel Fisher, secretary, 264 votes; Bob Montgomery, treasurer, 314 votes and Eleanor Young, social chairman, 298 votes.

In the freshman class runoff, Dalton Ruffin from Fort Lauderdale, Fla. took the nod for the presidency over Davis Byrd, the CP candidate. Ruffin running as an independent, took 284 votes.

Allen Tate (CP) took the secretary's post with 225 votes; Joe Privott (CP) was elected treasurer with 226 votes and Betsy Ross (UP) went in as social chairman with 192 votes.

For the three positions open on the Women's Honor council, the following four coeds will battle it out in next Tuesday's runoff; Ann Chandler, with 157 votes; Sara Helen Epps, 98 votes; Barbara Lowe, 122 votes and Gussie Young, 103 votes.

The Coed Senate runoff will see five candidates in the race for the four openings. They are Julia Compton with 122 votes; Pat Denning, 93 votes; Muriel Fisher, 98 votes; Charleen Greer, 144 votes and Marie Nussbaum, 114 votes.

Draft Quota Reduction Is First Budget Slash

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(UP)—Defense officials said today the draft cutback is only the first of several economy moves necessitated by President Truman's ceiling on military spending.

They expressed belief that the $15,000,000,000 budget set by the president is some $3,000,000,000 short of the amount needed to back up the nation's stop-Communism foreign policy.

For lack of funds, the January draft call was cut in half to 10,000 men. The February call, previously expected to be 30,000, will be only 5,000.

High-ranking officers point out that the new budget will actually amount to only $14,400,000,000. The remaining $600,000,000, they said, is earmarked for stockpiling strategic raw materials.

These sources said this is what the $14,400,000,000 budget will buy:

Air Force: 51 enlarged air groups instead of the present 57 or the 70 the Air Force contends are necessary to provide the nation with air security.

Army: Six divisions in battle readiness backed up by six National Guard divisions, instead of the 12 combat ready regulars and six National Guard units planned.

Navy: 770 naval craft including only 12 fleet carriers, 278 combat ships and 480 other types. Only 8,000 combat planes instead of 14,500. One super-carrier.

Defense officials feel they need at least a $17,600,000,000 budget. Even that, they said, would not give them everything they would like to have. Contrary to Mr. Truman, they don't believe such spending would put too great a strain on the civilian economy.

Meanwhile, state Selective Service directors met here to talk over draft problems with Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national director. High on the list of topics for the three-day conference were expected to be the Army's curtailed draft calls and the question of deferments for men married just prior to induction.

Home Destroyed, Four Children Killed in Fire

CHEROKEE, Ia., Dec. 1.—(UP)—Four children, ranging in age from eight months to four years, were burned to death today when fire destroyed their makeshift two-room on a farm near here.

Cherokee firemen were called but did not go to the fire because of a city ruling that they may not go beyond the city limits. They also said they did not realize the seriousness of the fire.

Today's victims were Michael, 4, Sharon, 3, Karen, 2, and Robert, eight months, children of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Devall.

Cause of the fire was not known, but Mrs. Devall said she had been heating some water on a coal stove. She was having coffee a short distance away at the home of her father-in-law, Fred Devall, when the fire started.

The children's bodies were found in the bedroom. Authorities said the position of Michael indicated he had been trying to escape.

Five other children were in school. Devall was at work on the farm.

TMA Will Elect Group Officers Today at Meet

The semi-annual election of officers for the Town Men's association will be held this afternoon at 4:30 in Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial. John Van Hecke, out-going president of the group announced yesterday.

Candidates running for offices are: For president, Nelson Taylor, Dave Sharpe and Skip Hoyle; for vice-president, Bob Padrick, Dan McGlaughlin, and George Rodman; for secretary, Dan McGlaughlin and John Taylor; for treasurer, Gran Childress, John Taylor and Bud Freeman.

Candidates running for the executive committee are Ralph Hebb, Skip Hoyle, J. C. Jordan, Harry Pendergraph and Jimmy James. Three members will be elected to the committee.

Van Hecke pointed out that final plans will be made for the TMA party, to be held Friday night at the Terrace View supper club. Costs of the party will be fifty cents and any TMA member is eligible to attend with or without a date.

TMA representatives to join the University club and the Dance committee will also be elected at the meeting today. The positions were authorized in the campus election this week. The TMA won the seats with a 1,369 to 239 for the University club and 1,119 to 486 for the Dance committee

Graham Believes Educational Aid Will Be Passed

"I believe favorable action on federal aid to schools has a better chance of passing this Congress than ever before," said President Graham yesterday after his return from Dallas, Texas, where he addressed a dinner session of the Texas State Teachers association during the Thanksgiving holidays.

Under the provisions of the federal aid bill, the money would be granted to the states and subject to local and state control North Carolina's apportionment would be approximately $24,000,000, which would go chiefly toward increasing the salaries of teachers.

Dr. Graham stated that the 5,000 to 6,000 teachers who met in Dallas are themselves actively supporting the bill. "I believe that the entire North Carolina congressional delegation will support the bill to provide for federal aid to education," said Dr. Graham.

Virginia Urges Little More Tact

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 1.—(UP)—A little more tact, please, said the state Chamber of Commerce today to Virginia's traffic officers.

Also some reasonableness and a little courtesy.

In letters to every Virginia mayor, the chamber said, "Nothing creates ill will faster or more permanently than unreasonable fines or bond requirement for minor traffic violations."

Motorists have memories that could remind elephants, the chamber said, and they sometimes brand communities and entire states as speed traps.

"If they feel they have been dealt with unjustly, they will never forget the incident and will give our state a black eye on all possible occasions," mourned the chamber.

Durham Group Elects House to Position

Chancellor Robert B. House was elected second vice-president of the Durham Executives club at a recent meeting in Durham.

Other officers elected were C. C. Council, president; Eric L. Tilley, first vice-president; H. B. Belvin, secretary; and L. Stacy Weaver, treasurer.

The club has been organized for only one year and has already exceeded its membership quota of 200 and has a long [illegible]

Constitutional Confusion

Growing out of the fall campus elections held Tuesday was one of the most confused and confusing situations yet to arise in connection with the student constitution. That document clearly states that half the members of the student legislature shall be elected on the first Tuesday in December on which the University is in session. This year, however, this clause would have placed the election runoffs on the second day of final examinations, a most inopportune time.

In face of this situation, student body president Jess Dedmond conferred with Al Winn, Chairman of the Elections board, and the two agreed the best solution was to violate the letter of the constitution by advancing the election date one week. This Dedmond announced publicly, and, no voice being raised in protest, the election was duly run off on Tuesday.

But Tuesday morning while votes were being cast, Charles O. Long, acting as a student of the University, petitioned the Student Council to declare the election void because of its unconstitutionality. The council met Tuesday afternoon, deliberated, and ruled the election valid by interpreting the spirit rather than the letter of the constitution. Nevertheless, in handing down the ruling the council stated that it was not condoning the changing of constitutional provisions by executive decree and that in the future it would not uphold similar violations.

From the standpoint of the best interests of the student body, the council's decision was good, but from the standpoint of law the decision was confusing, to say the least. First, it raises the old question of how a constitution should be interpreted—and in this case the liberal interpretation was stretched to the breaking point, since the wording of the provision was disregarded entirely. Secondly, the decision disregards the legal precept of using precedence as a basis for decisions, since the ruling sets a precedent and then declares that this precedent will never again be followed.

Another piece which is hard to fit into the jigsaw puzzle is the role played by Long in contesting the election. If he was interested only in seeing that the constitution was not violated, it is hard to see why he did not act in his capacity as a member of Dedmond's cabinet to council the student body president against changing the election date. He also had the alternative of asking the student council to issue a writ of mandamus restraining Dedmond from acting against the provisions of the constitution. (Whether the council has, like other courts, the power to issue such a writ is another doubtful point.)

Two fundamental facts poke their noses through the confusion of technicalities: First, the Student constitution is as yet scarcely a year and a half old; it still has many imperfections which must be discovered and corrected as test cases arise. And too, in a small, homogenous community such as the University student body where government is highly personalized and the danger of abuses small the old adage of "Least government is best government" still holds true—and sometimes the law of common sense is the best law to follow.

The Greatest Freedom

Thanksgiving is a memory now and Christmas an expectation soon to be realized. Among many meanings, both of these occasions serve to remind us of what we have and why we should be thankful for what we have.

We of America have more to be thankful for than the people of most other nations. Among all our great blessings, we have the four freedoms. But what most of us do not realize, is that we have one other freedom which we have ignored in our counting. That is the Freedom of Choice.

The freedom of choice means that we have the right to pick our own course in our daily lives. It has given us the right to accept or not to accept political theories, religious interpretations, and ways of life. Here at Carolina we have had the opportunity to exercise these rights. We have the privilege of listening to all shades of opinion and of making up our minds as to what we wish to investigate and study further. In this free and liberal University, we have chances for self-expression not found elsewhere.

For all this we should be thankful. The freedom of choice is the greatest of all freedoms. L. K.

Odds And Ends

By Don Maynard

WHEW, JUST MADE IT. It's a good thing the Thanksgiving breather came along when it did; campus-lites couldn't have taken the grind much longer. As Les Davis put it, "Even the dogs in my Ec class looked like they needed sleep."

HOLIDAY REMINISCING. We saw Joe Morton starry-eyed with his dreams of the girl of his life whom he met in a diner near his home last Friday night. . .And Roy Moose still wondering how only four of the twelve autos in the mixup at Charlottesville were wrecked, with an injury list of just one scratched face. . . Chuckles are still echoing in the halls of Everett after inmates saw and heard Jim Mead tell his story of Choo-Choo at Virginia: A young woman grabbed Justice's sleeve as he walked to the locker-room after the game and cried, "You were wonderful, I want to take you with me!" After Jim had separated the two, our heroine simply gazed after Charlie and said in an awed voice: "Gawd. . ."

A SUGGESTION to the intramural wrestling dept. that they have two distinct classes for the wrestlers, for, as one breathless athlete gasped after a match—"What this school needs is a party-boy division and a non-party-boy division."

CONGRATS to Old East; specifically Hurshell Keener and Charlie Dixon, for taking the intramural debating crown and cup. Incidentally, for putting on such a fine display of oratorical showmanship the two boys have been given berths on the varsity debating team. Present members Herb Mitchell, Paul Roth, Dave Pittman and Herb Yates have finished a very successful northern swing and have been complimented by experts as a "very outstanding team." A la Winchell; "orchids" to a little publicized team bringing more glory to UNC.

FIFTEEN CHEERS for Tenn Mason, popular gal of the campus last year who is recovering from her session with polio and planning to return to Carolina's pathways next fall. Tenn's headed for Warm Springs, Ga., for awhile to rest up. She and all the other polio victims who are making a fighting comeback deserve the award this week for the "Most Valuable Player" in the game of life.

MORE RED "BONES." The papers recently carried an article by one of the news services that told of the Russian discovery of some hitherto unknown "diner-sore" bones. The Reds found these relics in the Gobi desert, possibly while searching for some new salt-mines for their "American" agents who are not faring so well—in the press.

WANTED: A SAMARITAN. Martha Manning and Ed Davenport want to get hitched, all that's needed is an apartment for them to live in and raise little "couches." Isn't there someone in the audience who could help them out?

BIG DOIN'S The Beta pledges of UNC, Duke and State are going to get together at the Washington Duke hotel tomorrow and Saturday, dancing to the strains of Roy Cole and Co. Carolina will be the guests of the Duke chapter, The theme of the dance should be, "Pease check your shoulder-holsters with the girl out front while the music is playing."

ODE TO A COED? Quoting "Anon:" "It takes a lot of experiences for a gal to learn to kiss like a beginner. . ." And remember twenty more shopping days till X-mas—But only SEVEN more schooling days till X-ams.

Lines on Literature

Renaisance On The Wing

By Roy C. Moose

Writing in the forthcoming issue of the Carolina Quarterly Dr. Hardin Craig propounds what he believes to be the major factor that is holding back a new "Golden Age" of American literature. In a frank and penetrating article entitled "A Literary Revival" Dr. Craig states that "the chief obstacle, one would say, to intellectual, artistic, and moral progress throughout this country is an almost universal self-satisfaction."

Certainly there is great validity in Dr. Craig's criticism. For years there has been promise of a revival of good writing in the United States. Young authors have delivered good "First Books." Styles and subject matter have become varied and original. But, there has always been that failure to follow up the great PROMISE shown. Self-satisfaction has seemed to pervade the authors singled out.

One of the most pathetic examples has been the descent of Carson McCullers. In 1940 her "Heart is a Lonely Hunter" astounded the critics. Then in 1941 she further established herself with "Reflections in a Golden Eye." She was one of the brightest of new writers; many called her a genius. But since that time Miss McCullers has not seen fit to put her pen to another page. She has the ability; there is no doubt about that. She could easily have led the young writers to greater heights. Instead she has floundered in success.

Following the war, a fair young genius from New Oreans was hailed to lead the people in literary appreciation. Like Miss McCullers he had just turned 20; also like her he was a great success. Truman Capote's "Other Voices, Other Rooms," overwhelmed the critics. But Mr. Capote, thinking perhaps that he had no more literary worlds to conquer, set sail for France and ever since has enjoyed the new-found field of European dilettante.

Then Russ Lockridge wrote "the great American novel" called "Raintree County." It was a wonderful piece of work and was compared favorably with Joyce's "Ulysses." Here at last seemed a good family author that might give stability to the literary world. But Mr. Lockridge had written his guts out and so committed suicide.

At present there are at least a half-dozen fine new authors on the horizon, youngsters such as Norman Mailer, Thomas Heggen, Irwin Shaw, and John Horne Burns. Each has written a praiseworthy first novel; each has shown the ability to produce good writing. But, before we can judge them as forerunners of a literary revival we must wait for their subsequent works. For in a real sense their first novels were not CREATIVE works; they were, for the most part, drawn from their actual experiences. Perhaps in these novels they have written their guts out and the well is dry. Or perhaps they will fail to continue production, dazzled by fame and money. Perhaps they, too, will become complacent.

However, on the basis of the works this year—which have been the best in a decade—we must reiterate our belief expressed many months ago that a new literary age is approaching. It is a conclusion reached also by Dr. Craig in his lucid criticism: "One would have to conclude that the United States, in spite of its generally half-baked, commercialized, mediocre, unproductive culture, has a full fledged, national renaissance now on the wing."

Full House

Grand Opera A La Bowery

By Leo Turner

THE 750 BAR & GRILL, THIRD AVENUE, NEW YORK, —(UP)—The opening of the Metropolitan opera played to a full house here except for the two people at the end of the bar. They were only half full.

"I like opera," said Florence Ryan, who was a concert singer in Sydney, Australia 30 years ago. "Thanks. I'll have rye and water."

The opera was televised for the first time on the opening night. The bar's television set was at the end of the room beside the sign reading "Not responsible for hats, coats, umbrellas or lost weekends." The price of admission for Otello was one 10-cent glass of beer.

Things started off quiet. There were 13 patrons in the bar when the curtain went up. All were drinking beer except Flo Ryan's friend, Margie Connolly. She was drinking wine.

"I just dropped in tonight to get something to cheer me up," said Flo, who carried considerable weight. She was wearing a black dress and an oversized tam.

"I've been dropping in here for seven years," she said at the first intermission. "It's a nice, homey place."

The master of ceremonies was George Essock, 29 owner of the 750, who wore a green and white striped shirt, a soiled apron and a broad smile. George rapped a sleeping drunk on the knuckes at one point and said:

"Hey, wake up. This is opera."

On the front row was Harry Roberts, wearing cotton work clothes and a leather jacket, and his girl friend, Kitty Damico, in a stunning tan suit and black hat. They were eating fried potatoes with their beer.

"I wasn't watching," said Harry.

"So, this is opera," said Kitty.

By this time the second act had ended and Harry and Kitty departed. More drinkers drifted in and the crowd turned from beer to whiskey.

Smoking his pipe and watching the crowd was the Sarge, John O'Keefe, member of the Lost Battalion in World War II, late of the post office department.

"Now I have all of Caruso's records at home, I have," said the Sarge. "But I don't believe opera will ever appeal to the television audience. Lookit. All of then throwing their hands in the air. What the hell does that mean to you? The pubic is too moronic, I say, to appreciate opera. So you've been to the opera. So you understand it. I say give the people something simple like Mickey Mouse, or boxing and wrestling."

"Me, I think it is wonderful," said Danny Kane, who wore a red and black hunter's cap.

Flo moved over to the adjoining stool. "Ialways like that joining stool. " I always like that line of Iago's where he says 'put something in my purse,' " she said. "Isn't that just like a man?"

The figures on the television screen were small and shaky.

Bill Decker staggered up. "I think it's wonderful, but I can't see it," he said.

"Son of a gun," she said. "Isn't that just like a man?"

This Is Carolina

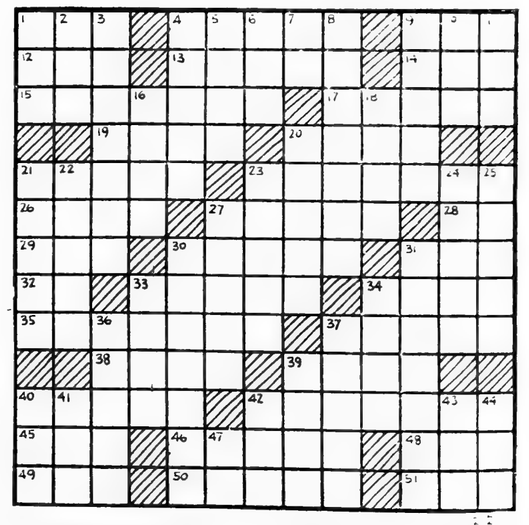
Last Of the Series

By Lincoln Kan

The overline "This is Carolina" may appear again in the ceeding issues of the Daily Tar Heel, but the by-line will changed. We will be leaving all of you at the end of this quar with the sheepskin firmly clutched in hand, and pleasant mories buried deep within us to be pulled out someday in future and mused over fondly.

At the start we had intended to write about all the organitions which go to make up our Carolina. Unfortunately and the many organizations did not fit in with each other that we have been able to review only a few. Our apologto organizations as yet not written about. Perhaps our succe will get to all of you.

But before we leave we would like to write about the greatest organization of all here at Carolina—our student body. We been here during the pre-war days and now the post-war da We have seen men and women pass through here ranging fro fuzzy-cheeked hopefuls to grizzled oldies of vintage and deter mination. (We still haven't got over the shock of seeing baby advertisements in the DTH and strollers on the campus paths.) After these years of observation we are convinced of one thing—we have the greatest student body in the world.



Every bit of fame the University has today has been inspired, worked for and upheld by the students of Carolina. We are not trying to detract from the excellent work by the faculty and administration, but we know that the vase is only as good as the potter's clay. It has been the students' strong characters that enabled us to have the best student government known to any university. It has been the mental honesty of the students which has enabled the University to evolve into one of the citadels of liberal and progressive thinking. It has been the fine sportsmanship of our student body which has spurred our athletic teams to national honors and recognition.

The development of our great student body has been a long and patient task by student predecessors and by teachers who dedicated their lives to the education of youth. It all started when a faculty of two began the task of teaching forty-one aspiring students on February 12, 1795. The foundation of what we have today was laid then, and through the long years that have since slipped into the pages of history books, students and faculty have learned together to give us the moral and spiritual strength that makes Carolina great.

Each day we see our Carolina student body in action, through the decisions of our student leaders and the cooperation of our faculty. At the beginning of each quarter, the Orientation committee indoctrinates new members of the student body on Carolina's traditions and meaning. Through the terms, student leaders carry out the responsibilities of governing themselves. The publications and their editors fulfill their duties to the campus and its students, daily, monthly and yearly.

In the different organizations, student members add to their personal knowledge and exchange information with fellow students on world, local, and home-town affairs, all of which goes to building up a reserve of learning which in turn helps broaden their thinking and thus makes each a better member of the student body. The students have bettered relations with other institutions of learning, and governed by a campus code of their own choosing they have shown others what true sportsmanship can be.

This is the Carolina we are leaving. We sincerely hope and believe that this Carolina will remain unchanged spiritually if not physically. We have already learned in part, but it will not be until much later, that we will fully know how much we have really gained.

Poo-Pooing The Polls

POLLS HAVE BEEN on the receiving end of a great many slanderous remarks during the past few weeks. First it was the Gallup poll which went all-out to prove little, save the fact that a man can be elected president of this great country of ours with well over 50 percent of the voters against him. Now it is the Associated Press football poll that is reaping a harvest of complaints.

The poll has been nurtured along with all the painstaking care afforded a three-month-old baby by a proud mother. Still it fails to function as well as it might.

There is no doubt that the AP poll is conducted in all fairness to every section of the country and with good intent. Nevertheless, it must be recognized that certain sportswriters who take part in the weekly voting are merely using the poll as an instrument of exploitation for their own favorites. This fact is true in all sections of the country, although the favoritism is more evident in some sectors.

What's To Be Done?

IF THIS METHOD of balloting is allowed to continue it will soon engulf the entire country. Should this happen the whole venture would collapse like a toy sailboat in a windstorm. A typical ballot serves as ample proof for the above statements.

The results of one of the more recent polls showed Texas and Georgia Tech only a point above a comparitively weak Appalachian State eleven. The poll also showed Alabama on an even keel with the Teachers and rated William and Mary above Wake Forest, a team that beat the Indians earlier in the season. In the same poll Santa Clara was rated even with Texas and Georgia Tech.

Looking over the teams with first-place votes we find Clemson with eight ballots for the number one position. Michigan State collected three as did California, and Georgia was given one first-place vote. This in itself is more than enough evidence to prove that unfounded partiality is present among the voters. No fair-minded scribe could cast a first-place vote for any of the above teams with Michigan, Notre Dame, Carolina, and Oklahoma going like wild-fire all season.

Remedy For The Plague

A SIMPLE REMEDY for the plague would be to appoint several representative voters in each section of the country. This would abolish a greater degree of the conflict that inevitably arises when everyone with a press card casts a vote. A few of the older and more seasoned grid observers would naturally vote more fairly and without much of the prejudice carried by the younger scribes.

Another beneficial step toward the betterment of the poll would be to install a uniform voting system. Many of the writers base their votes on the previous week's performances, while others vote on the basis of year-round play. One of the methods should be adopted and conformed with by all pollers.

The weekly performance system seems to be the better of the two methods. If this system is eventually adopted, the results published each week would merely indicate a team's national rating on the basis of the preceding week's performance. At the end of the year, all votes would be tabulated in order to determine each team's yearly rating. This, it seems, would in the long run prove to be a much better way of selecting the mythical national football champion.

Introducing Mr. Brains

STEP UP AND MEET Mr. Brains. You'll be hearing a lot about this boy from now until January 1, 1949. We are, of course, referring to Oklahoma's great quarterback, Jack Mitchell. The Sooner wonder boy has been the subject of yards of newspaper copy during the past few days, and it is only fitting that Carolina students should be well versed on the subject of Oklahoma's top back.

Texas Christian scout Walter Roach, who saw plenty of Mitchell before TCU's clash with the Sooners, and too much of the Oklahoma gentleman during the battle, said of him, "He's probably the finest field general in football." And that comes from a man who knows.

Mitchell is a master ball handler and has an uncanny ability for concealing the ball from the prying eyes of onrushing linemen. He has been tackled on several occasions after he has handed the ball off to a teammate. On a number of other occasions, Mitchell has tossed shovel passes to his backs after being hit by eager tacklers. He is a master at making the dreaded split-T click.

Another of Mitchell's favorite tricks is that of feinting would-be tacklers out of position with fake pitch-outs and then skirting the opponents' ends. This he does frequently and with apparent ease.

Never Misses A Trick

NEVER ONE TO miss a trick, Mitchell is seldom thwarted by an unexpected shift in the opponents' defense. He is one of the few signal-callers sharp enough to call his shots after approaching the line of scrimmage. If a defensive lineman or line-backer shifts in anticipation of a coming play and by so doing creates a situation which Mitchell was not prepared for in the huddle, the Sooner quarterback calmly checks his signals and proceeds with the new play without returning to the huddle.

Oklahoma Coach Bud Wilkinson thought seriously of using his "Golden Boy" at a halfback post at the beginning of the season. Mitchell is an extraordinary runner and passer and Wilkinson feared that his talents might be neglected at the pivot post.

There was no other capable ball-handler in the Oklahoma camp, however, and Mitchell was soon back at his old quarterback post. All is well at the Western university now, however, as special plays have been installed which feature the "Whiz Kid's" running. And he's no slouch as a passer.

Carolina has faced other men of many talents, however, and all have been subdued.

Cagers Entertain Lenoir Rhyne Tonight

Fast, Scrappy New Squad Will Debut Before Hoop Fans

By Lincoln Kan

Carolina's cagers will begin their season against Lenoir Rhyne tonight at 8 o'clock after having swished to a 56-24 triumph in a practice game against the Fort Bragg quintet last Saturday.

Coach Tom Scott said of his squad which has lost 8 of 11 lettermen, "We have a fast, scrappy and aggressive team. As to our conference chances, it is too early to tell and will depend on how speedily the boys can function as a unit."

Nemo Nearman, a letterman from last year's squad will start at center tonight. Waiting for the tip-off will be forwards Coy Carson and Hugo Kappler. The guards will be "Rip" Ryan and Dan Nyimicz. Coach Scott's reserves, among others, will be 6'5" giant Howard Deasy, Charlie Thorne, Norman Mitchell. John Tsantes and "Red" Bennet all of whom showed up well in an intra-squad game at Laurinburg last Tuesday night.

The Tar Heel hardwood men are under the usual college basketball height with an average of only 6'1." With the exception of three lettermen and one regular from last year's squad Coach Scott will be working with an entirely new bunch. Scott said, "Height doesn't bother us much, as there are other factors involved which go to make a good team."

On defense the Carolina quintet will be on the lookout for All-conference guard Bill Wells of Lenoir Rhyne. The Bears are led by their team-captain Lew Kasaanorski of New Kensington, Pa. The Hickory cagers coached by Fred Emerson will have in their lineup Kasaanorski and Anthony Sellari as forwards; Welles and Sammy Aterra, guards; and Jimmy Newsome at center.

The freshman squad will tackle Louisburg junior college in a preliminary game tonight beginning at 6 o'clock. This will be the Tar Babies' first engagement.

The $7,000 Question

TUCSON, Ariz., Dec. 1—(UP)—University of Arizona football players have demanded $175 apiece for playing in the New Year's day Salad bowl game, a source close to the squad told the United Press today.

The squad reportedly voted unofficially to ask for 40 shares which would amount to $7,000, more than half of the $12,500 guarantee given the University by bowl sponsors.

Participating players, it was pointed out, already get wrist watches and room and board during the squad's stay in Phoenix.

Eleven Tar Heels Named on UP List Of All-Americans

North Carolina's mighty Tar Heels were well represented in the annual All-American selections released yesterday by the United Press.

Although only the versatile Tar Heel ace, Charlie Justice, was named to a first team berth, no less than 11 gridders from the southern school received distinction by being chosen for third team or receiving honorable mention from the sportswriters.

The other half of the potent Carolina air attack, Art Weiner, was tapped for a third team end position while defensive stalwart Len Szafaryn gained a third team tackle spot.

Coach Carl Snavely, blessed with an abundance of capable flankmen, saw both Joe Romano and place kicker Bob Cox given honorable mention.

Another Carolina tackle, Ted Hazlewood, was accorded honorable mention along with guards Bill Wardle, Larry Klosterman and Bob Mitten. This formidable array of talent spelled trouble to opponents all season along.

Hosea Rodgers, the pile-driving fullback who co-operated with Justice on the offense to give the Tar Heels an undefeated season and also a bid to the Sugar bowl this New Year's day, received honorable mention while scatback Johnny Clements was also honored in the UP poll.

Zeta Psi Upsets Grads, 13-7, To Win Campus Football Crown

By Joe Cherry

Zeta Psi fraternity's smooth-working tag football team took the campus Intramural grid crown yesterday afternoon in Kenan stadium with a hard fought 12-7 win over the powerful Graduate eleven, winner of the dormitory division and victor in the Mad bowl game at Charlottesville, Va., last Saturday.

The Zetes, on the tail end of a 7-6 score at halftime, staged a determined comeback after intermission, with John Gregory climaxing the rally when he snagged a short pass in the end zone for his second touchdown of the afternoon, and the ball game. A Zeta score on the previous play was nullified by an offsides penalty.

The Grads and the fraternitymen battled on even terms throughout most of the hotly contested tilt, played before a small but enthusiastic crowd. The grads took an early edge in the game when Frank Murray intercepted a Zeta pass on the midfield stripe and tossed the pigskin to Jim Hayworth. Hayworth then lateralled to Don Calloway, who earned the singular honor of being the only opponent to cross the Zeta goal line all season when he stepped into the end zone.

Heath Alexander put the fraternity winners back in the running when he hit Gregory with a touchdown pass shortly before the half was over. The attempted conversion was wide and the Graduates left the field at intermission with a 7-6 advantage.

The Grads broke up a Zeta scoring bid early in the second half when Jim Edwards intercepted a frat pass, but the next time the Zetas got the ball they moved 30 yards on a pass and Gregory took a short heave in scoring territory for the winning marker. This time Alexander's kick was good and the score was 13-7 in favor of the Zetas.

Justice Makes AP All-American As Scribes Cheer

The Associated Press announced its 1948 All-American selections yesterday afternoon. As could be expected, Choo Choo Charlie Justice was named to a first-team backfield position. End Art Weiner, tackle Len Szafaryn, and fullback Hosea Rodgers received honorable mention in the AP balloting.

Commenting on Justice, Ted Smits, Associated Press sports editor, stated, "Justice is modest off field, but a terror on it." Smits cited Justice's performance against Georgia as a typical example of his prowess.

Smits said, "Justice scored all three touchdowns, one on an 84-yard punt return. He completed 13 out of 22 passes for 198 yards, and averaged 42.5 yards on four punts."

The AP sports editor ended his commentary on the Carolina Choo Choo with the following words of praise, "Justice is a tricky runner, accomplishing by shiftiness and hip-weaving what others do with bull strength."

Smits also stated that Justice and Doak Walker of SMU are "probably the only genuine, dyed-in-the-wool triple-threat all-round performers left in this day of specialists."

Justice was the smallest man picked on the AP first team.

Other first team selections included: Dick Rifenburg, Michigan, and Barney Poole, Mississippi, ends; Leo Nomellini, Minnesota, and Bill Fischer, Notre Dame, tackles; Paul "Buddy" Burris, Okahoma, and Rod Franz, California, guards; Charles Bednarik, Pennsylvania, center; and Justice, Walker, Bobby Jack Stuart, Army, and Art Murakowski, Northwestern, backs.

Stuart was the only senior named in the backfield. The other three are juniors. Franz and Nomellini were the only juniors named to first team line positions.

NO WAA MEETING

Women's Athletic council will not meet tonight, President Randall Hudson announced yesterday. The group will meet next Thursday night in Women's gym.

Frosh Cagers Open Tonight

Coach Jim Hamilton will display his freshman basketball squad to the public this evening at 6 o'clock when the Tar Babies engage Louisburg junior college in a preliminary to the varsity contest.

The yearling mentor, a Tar Heel cage ace of several years past, has pared his active squad to 15 and from this crew he has selected a starting five consisting of John Bowersox and Jim Reuning at guards; Buddy Johnson and Dick Harter at forwards and Lenny Guyes at center.

Hamilton has also indicated that he has plenty of capable reserves and from these Frank Eckert, Ham Crowder, Frank Redding and Lawrence Cheek will probably see action.

FROSH GRIDDERS

All members of the freshman football team are to report at Fetzer field in game uniforms this afternoon at 4:15 for Yackety Yack pictures. In case of rain they are to meet in gym.

'State Was Off' Says Case

With John Dillon, Bob Paxton, and Don Anderson, a trio of former Carolina basketball stars, showing the way, a strong Hanes Hosiery cage outfit handed Coach Everette Case's highly-regarded State College quint its first defeat of the season, 49-38, last night in Winston-Salem.

The loss was the worst for State in two seasons and was the lowest point total in the same period of time for the Wolfpack. Dillon, and Anderson were top point men with nine each. Paxton followed with eight.

Coach Case, a bit philosophical after the game, commented that "It's probably a good thing to get that bad game out of our system now, rather than during a crucial Southern conference game." We did some of everything poorly," he added, "and the team was not the caliber of club we expect to field this season."

The two teams meet again in Raleigh on Friday night, and Dillon, Paxton, and Co. will be hoping to gain further revenge. They still remember those three defeats the Wolfpack hung on them at Carolina last year.

Baldwin Made Member Of UWF Student Group

Russell Baldwin, junior from Leland, was elected to the National Executive council of the student division of the United World Federalists at the recent national convention of that organization in Minneapolis, Marie Wicker, president of the University Student Chapter of UWF, announced yesterday.

Baldwin is a former president of the student division at the University and former state chairman of the United World Federalistsf student division o North Carolina.

Baldwin reports the following goals for 1949 as decided by the national convention: (1) A declaration by the United States government of its intention to seek the transformation of the United Nations into a limited world federal government. (2) The initiation by the United States of negotiations with all members of the United Nations for the purpose of Charter revision and (3) The preparation for American participation in an unofficial international conference on a world constitution.

The convention at Minneapolis, attended by over 200 students from nearly every state in the union, elected two other North Carolina students to serve in national offices. Ralph Fleming, Jr., student at Duke and present chairman of the North Carolina student division of the United World Federalists, was elected to the position of national chairman of the student division. Jack Matlock, also a student at Duke and presently chairman of the Duke chapter, was elected to serve on the natidnal executive council.

Baldwin will discuss the convention today at an open house to be given at the home of Jake and Marie Wicker, 209 West Franklin. All numbers of United World Federalists and everyone else who is interested is invited to come between 5 and 6 p. m.

Draft Cutback Means Reprieve For Thousands

Registrants Scheduled for Induction To Get Some 30-60 More Civilian Days

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—(UP)—The cutback in draft calls will mean a reprieve for more than 100,000 men originally slated for induction by next July.

It will also mean 30 to 60 days more of civilian life for many registrants who were scheduled to be called up in January and February.

These estimates were made today by some of the state Selective Service officials now holding their semi-annual conference at national headquarters here.

The Army orginally had planned to take 20,000 men in January, 25,000 in February and presumably the same in the succeeding months. That would have provided 170,000 new soldiers via the draft route by July 1.

But the Army announced earlier this week that for lack of funds, it will take only 10,000 in January and 5,000 in February. If it sticks to the 5,000-man quota in the succeeding months, it will enter July with only 60,000 draftees in uniform. An Army source said, "There is no prospect for an increase in the quota."

Registrants 23 and younger apparently will benefit most from the draft curtailment. The November and December calls in many states exhausted the available manpower in the 25 and 24-year-old age groups. A total of 10,000 men were inducted last month and 15,000 are scheduled to go this month.

Paradoxically, the cutback will mean more work for local draft boards. An official at the national Selective Service headquarters explained it this way:

"When you're drafting everybody, you are taking nine out of 10 men. But when the draft call is small, you are examining 10 men to get one. Consequently, there is more paper work with less results."

Professor Whitaker is a graduate of the University of Tennessee with a doctor's degree from Harvard university. He has taught at Harvard, Tennessee, and Cornell, and travelled extensively in Latin America.

Professor Whitaker's address is sponsored by the Institute of Latin American Studies and the political science department. The Spanish club will also assist in the arrangements for his lecture.

Christmas Party Planned by UVA

A University Veterans association Christmas party will be held in the UVA club house this evening from 8 to 12 o'clock, Hugh Wells, president, announced yesterday.

The party will feature square and round dancing, Christmas music, a floor show, door prizes, and free refreshments. Everything will be completely on the house, Wells said.

Santa Claus will be on hand to give away door prizes. Music for the square dancing will be furnished by Norwood Robinson and his "Natural Five."

First Aid Course Will Begin Soon

A "combined" course in First Aid for beginners and instructors will start in Howell hall on the first day of the winter quarter.

Ellis Fysal, a former member of the University football squad and now assigned to Red Cross work in Atlanta, will be instructor. There will be 10 sessions of three hours each at 7 o'clock, and the meetings will continue for two weeks, through January 14th.

Cops Puzzled Over Series Of Robberies

Bus Station Is Ransacked

Local police were still puzzled late yesterday over two robberies, one at the bus station and the other at the Morehead planetarium, both of which took place early yesterday morning.

Officers reported that the bus station was entered sometime between midnight and 7 o'clock in the morning. The thief came and went through a window in the front of the ticket office.

Apparently the window was left open the night before, since there was no evidence of force. Everything in the station was ransacked and $6 was discovered missing from the desk in the ticket office.

An official of the bus station who reported the robbery said that the thief tried to enter the lunch room but failed in the attempt.

The other robbery took place sometime during the morning on the site of the Morehead planetarium. Two night watchmen did not seem to bother the thief who made off with a roll of sheet lead with apparent ease. Employees of the Garrison-Hopkins Co., reported that the lead was worth between $100 and $200.

Police said yesterday they were working on several leads in the two robberies. However, no arrests had been made by 11:30 last night.

The Carolina chapter will act as host to the IZFA chapters of Duke, State and the Woman's college at the subregional meeting, program plans will be discussed, in addition to the report from the region executive committee.

DR. K. F. MATHER

Mather Finishes McNair Lectures In Final Address

"It will require the good will of religion as well as the intelligence of science to take full advantage of the opportunities that are available in this age of potential abundance," Dr. Kirtley F. Mather, noted Harvard university geology professor, declared in his third and final address on "Religion in This Time of Crisis" here last night.

Dr. Mather who delivered the John Calvin McNair lecture series here this week, used "Perspective for Tomorrow" as the topic of his last address on the relation of science and religion.

"At the moment, there seems danger of unwarranted pessimism concerning the future of man than of too much optimism," said Dr. Mather.

He explained this pessimism as being the result of the "increasingly widespread acceptance of the 19th century philosophy of Malthus."

Malthus taught that population tends to increase faster than the means of subsistence, and that poverty is inevitable unless late marriage or prudent restraint lower the birth rate, and so check population.

Mankind is hardly justified in hoping and working for a world in which all men everywhere may live together in peace, prosperity and security if the Malthusian principle is valid," he said.

Dr. Mather was introduced by Dr. Arthur C. Nash, head of the Department of Religion. Dr. C. B. Robson of the Political Science department presided over the final lecture.

Hill Hall Getting Even Noiser As Groups Prep for Concert

By Tom Kerr

Hill hall is an even noisier place than usual these days as Director Paul Young whips the combined men's and women's Glee clubs into shape for their annual Christmas concert.

Scheduled for Sunday and Tuesday, the Glee club concert expects to again sing to full houses. The Christmas concert, now a recognized campus tradition, drew packed houses last year and had to turn away several hundred from the repeat performance.

By popular demand the concerts will add a new feature to their traditional program format. A group of favorite Christmas carols, chosen by popular request, will follow the intermission.

The program will lead off with the stately and eloquent "Stabet Mater" by Pergolesi, sung by the Women's Glee club with Barbara Young and Virginia Johnson as soloists.

As the final selection before the intermission the clubs will join in the Credo from Palestrina's "Pope Marcellus Mass, a beautiful work done in difficult six-part counterpoint.

After the intermission the combined glee clubs will sing a group of the most popular present day carols followed by several secular songs and carols of other countries. In these groups baritones Milton Bliss, John von Cannon, Dick Cox, and Tenor Carl Perry will be featured as soloists in the Sunday concert. In the Tuesday concert a different set of soloists is planned.

Tickets are still on sale for both concerts at the box office, 109 Hill hall or from members of the glee clubs. All holders of both season and single concert tickets are reminded that their tickets must be exchanged at the box office for reserved seats before seven o'clock the night of the performance.

Tickets on Sale For Club Program

Tickets are still on sale for both the Sunday and Tuesday concerts of the combined Men's and Women's Glee club Christmas program. They may be purchased at the box office, 109 Hill hall, or from any member of the glee clubs.

Holders of both season and single concert tickets are reminded that their tickets must be exchanged for reserved seats before 7 o'clock the night of the concert.

Special Sugar Bowl Train To Head For N.O. Dec. 30

A special train for Sugar bowl-bound University students and other football fans planning to attend the Carolina-Oklahoma gridiron battle in New Orleans on New Year's day will be operated by the Southern railroad, company officials announced yesterday.

A Southern spokesman said passengers on the special train will be allowed to use their Pullman cars as living quarters while they are in New Orleans.

Sections of the football special

Southern R. R. Releases Plans

will be run from Goldsboro, Selma, Raleigh, Durham and Burlington. The trains will leave Raleigh at 2:20 Wednesday afternoon before the game on Saturday, It will be routed directly to its standing location in the Crescent city at 3:30 Thursday afternoon, Dec. 30. It will leave New Orleans at 11:30 Saturday night and arrive in Raleigh at 5 o'clock Monday morning, Jan. 3.

Spokesman for the railway said round trip tickes from Raleigh will cost $90.79 for an upper berth, $98.39 for a lower, $222.13 for two people in a compartment, $257.98 for two people in a drawing room, and $324.57 for three people in a drawing room.

Reservations may be made by telegram or telephone. Information may be obtained in the Graham Memorial travel agency on campus.

House Committee Announces Plans For Next Quarter

Gene Turner, house discussion chairman for the YMCA, yesterday reported the completion of the committee's program for the first quarter and plans for a more extensive program for the second quarter.

Designed to promote better fellowship among students and between students and faculty, as well as to provide information on the topics discussed, the sessions were begun last week and will be continued on a larger scale next quarter.

Groups reporting favorably on discussions already held include Sigma Chi, discussing labor relations with Prof. H. D. Wolf as leader; Delta Kappa Epsilon, host to Chi Omega for a discussion on problems of marriage with Mrs. Arnold Nash as leader; St. Anthony hall, discussing national political trends with Congressman Carl Durham as leader; and Phi Delta Theta, host to Pi Beta Phi for a discussion on marriage problems with Mrs. Nash.

On the basis of the success of these discussions a meeting has been planned for 2 o'clock Thursday when representatives from each fraternity and men's dormitory will meet to outline plans for the second quarter.

Each house will be asked to choose a house discussion chairman, select topics that it would like to discuss, recommend leaders, and indicate dates desired, after which the committee will plan a schedule for consideration of the houses. Turner stressed that each house will determine the subjects it will discuss and that his committee will endeavor to secure the desired leaders.

Town Men's Party Scheduled Tonight

The Town Men's association quarterly party will be held tonight at 7 o'clock at the Terrace View supper club. All members who wish to attend should be at Graham Memorial at 6:45 where rides will be furnished.

Any members who furnish transportation are also asked to bring their cars to transport couples. A flat charge of 50 cents per person will be made and members may or may not bring dates as they desire.

Nurses Requested To Fill Out Forms

All registered and practical are requested to fill out a questionnaire listing essential information which can be made available to doctors and Red Cross officials in case of local disaster.

Mimeographed forms may be obtained at Eubanks drug store and left there after completion or mailed to Box 624, Chapel Hill. Such information as employment status, hours available and past experience is necessary.

Controversial NSA Bill Gets Legislature Nod

Completely disregarding its own by-laws, the Student legislature last night discussed heatedly and then passed a bill introduced by Finance committee chairman Jack Girard (UP) to reimburse local delegates to the NSA convention this past summer.

A bill introduced by Rules committee chairman, Thurman Williams (UP) to unseat any member of the legislature who incurs more than one unexcused absence was passed.

The new bill states that any member missing two or more meetings must furnish a written excuse and if the excuse is considered unsatisfactory, the erring member will be called before the assembly for impeachment proceedings.

The controversial NSA rimbursement bill was opposed first when Tom Kerr (SP) pointed out that a bill passed several weeks ago specified that all bills reported out of committee had to be mimeographed and 75 copies made available.

Acting speaker, George Rodman (UP) upheld Jack Worsham's (CP) decision that the bill was correct when presented in triplicate. An attempt to appeal the chair's decision was defeated.

Kerr then pointed out that the Legislature's by-laws state in article VIII, section IV that, "No other bill for appropriation of money that is presented to the legislature shall be voted upon on the night on which it is first presented to the legislature if said appropriation is in access of the sum of ten dollars."

Rodman upheld the by-laws, but a motion from the floor appealed the chair's decision to the legislature members. After a heated debate in which it was pointed out that the bill, if passed, would violate the by-laws, the chair's decision was voted down and the bill was passed.

The NSA delegates, Jess Dedmond, Al Lowenstein and Jim Godwin attended the convention in Madison, Wisconsin this summer at their own expense when it was believed that an appropria-

Local Professor Is Contributor To Recent Book

Arthur Palmer Hudson, professor of English, is among the contributors to a "Literary History of the United States," published several days ago by the Macmillan company.

Three former members of the faculty contributed to the three-volume work. They are Howard Mumford Jones, L. B. Wright, and J. D. Wade, who has lectured here during summer sessions.

Yack Information Must Be Complete

Yack editor Bill Duncan released the following names of students whose pictures are in the Yack office, minus the information cards necessary for writeups in the '49 annual. Duncan urged all those students listed to come to the Yack office in Graham Memorial today between 2 o'clock and 5:30 this afternoon.

Veteran Transfers Should Notify VA

Student-veterans wishing to transfer to another school should notify the Veterans administration at least 30 days before making the change, Wilson Honeycutt, veterans adviser, announced yesterday.

Seven Students Are Arrested In Pre-Game Attack on Ala.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Dec. 2.—(UP)—The heated rivalry between Alabama and Auburn flared early today with the arrest of seven Auburn students picked up on the University of Alabama campus.

Campus Marshall A. O. Rayfield arranged their release several hours after they were detained on charges of disorderly conduct.

The incident was the first reported pranks being played by the students since the announcement was made that the football teams of the two schools will meet Saturday in Birmingham in the first game in 41 years.

Two of the seven students were caught around the huge pile of trash arranged for a bonfire that will open the Alabama pep rally tonight.

Those two were traced back to an automobile containing five other students. A quantity of gasoline and kerosene, presumably to be used in lighting the bonfire prematurely, was confiscated.

Also, campus leaders said apparently other raids were made on the campus by Auburn students.

Mock Lawsuit Is Scheduled For Tomorrow

Lenoir Scuffle Results in Suit

A scuffle in Lenoir dining hall resulting from the discovery of a libelous letter the day after the national elecions has produced a suit and a counter-suit which will be tried tomorrow morning in the Law building before Justice S. J. Ervin, associate of the North Carolina Supreme court.

The case involves Jack Chambers, who wrote an unpublished letter to Daily Tar Heel defaming the character of William Hannah. On Nov. 3, Hannah, who had seen the letter, encountered Chambers during the dinner hour at Lenoir hall. Harsh words were exchanged and a scuffle followed.

Members of the Phi Alpha Delta legal fraternity happened to be on the scene, and the litigants agreed o submit the dispute to a jury for trail. Chambers is bringing suit against Hannah for assault and battery. Hannan is counter-suing Chambers for alleged defamation of character.

Attorneys participating in the trail are all third year law students. Representing Hannah are Jesse Sigmon, Jr., Bob Rouse, Jim Pritchett and Jim Chestnutt. The case for Chambers will be handled by Paul Ridge, Arthur Utley, Ray Summerall and Harvey Luck.

Papers have been filed with Robert Swain, clerk of court, and Hannah and Chambers have agreed to abide by the decision of the jury. The trail will be open to the public.

Whitfield Asks For Cooperation About Parking

A dozen or so very humble students, mostly fraternity men, were charged costs in Recorder's court Tuesday after a lengthy lecture by Judge Henry A. Whitfield regarding sidewalk parking.

"I let the boys off as light as I could," Judge Whitfield said. "I don't even like to see them up here at all, but they must cooperate with us if we hope to relieve the situation."

"What we're trying to do is call it to the attention of all the boys that the pedestrian has to have somewhere to walk and the sidewalk is the only place," Whitfield said.

He explained, "A dangerous situation has developed because of sidewalk parking, mostly on Columbia and Cameron streets. We've had a lot of complaints.

"Of course there's nothing we can do about it but call it to the attention of the boys and hope that they are right thinking people and that they will cooperate.

"We have a bad situation here on account of limited space and a large number of cars. It just requires a little of the golden rule on the part of all to make it safe for everyone."

Baptist Church To Hold Supper

The Baptist church is having its annual church fellowship supper tonight at 7 o'clock. Following the supper there will be a business meeting of the church at which time officers will be elected for the coming year.

One-Act Comedy by Local Playwright To Be Televised for New York Show

"Close Quarters," a one-act play written by Catherine McDonald and produced last Summer by the Carolina Playmakers, will be presented on the Chevrolet television theater next Monday night. Miss McDonald, who received $150 for her play, will go to New York Friday night so as to be on hand when the play is televised.

Known to the Playmakers as "Cat," the Chattanooga, Tenn., graduate student is at present studying playwriting under Prof. W. P. Eaton. "Close Quarters" is the first play she has had produced. Prior to entering the University she was a society reporter for the Chattanooga News-Free Press. During the war she served overseas with the American Red Cross.

The inspiration for "Close Quarters" is found in the trailer camp which is situated near the Medical School on the Pittsboro Road.

Rembert of Art Department Captures Award for Painting at Raleigh Show

John Rembert, assistant professor in the Art department, has won a purchase award of $200 for his canvas, "By the Winds Grieved," Lynette Warren, curator, announced yesterday.

The painting, which is included in the 12th annual North Carolina artists' exhibition in Raleigh, is one of three purchased from a group of more that 80 works shown this year.

Rembert's wife, who is represented in the current show, won an award last year which is similar to that given her husband's painting Wednesday. Mrs. Dahlia Rembert of Raleigh, mother of the prize winner, also has an entry in the exhibition, which is on display in the State library.

Chapel Hill residents represented in the show are Ben Williams (sculpture), Arnita Joyner, Joseph Bolt, Marianne Manasse, J. Louis Cobb, Archie Daniels and Paul Sanl.

Swearing Is an Art

A large group of English words and phrases goes unheeded by grammarians, but suffers little in general popularity from the lack of proper classification and analysis.

No doubt the elimination of all swear words from the English vernacular would leave a large part of the population, college students not excepted, literally speechless. The usage of strong language, whether as literary seasoning or as a verbal crutch for weak vocabularies, has continued undiminished since the days of Chaucer's tales and long before.

Because of its importance to expression, it might be well to state the functions of cursing. They are:

1. To act as a sort of safety valve for pent-up feelings.
2. To lend emphasis to speech.

The annual savings in doctor's bills, court fees and property damage due to the free exercise of swearing is inestimatable. A woman can both cry and curse but the poor male, to deserve his name, can only curse. The man who complimented his preacher for the damn fine sermon can testify to the usefullness of an oath in ordinary conversation.

Somehow swearing trandescends the limits of mere words. It is a form of sweet sinfulness, whose indulgence, in moderation, calms savage spirits and lends to the utterances of kindly old ladies, the emphatic virility of the sailor and sand-hog.

But because in excess it defeats its own purpose, the guardians of our language's purity frown upon cursing and refuse to sully their pens with its mention. It falls to us then to point out the pitfalls inherent in the overfunctioning of this part of our speech. Swearing is like money in some respects. It is subject to a quantity theory, which states that the value of each word as an emotional safety valve diminishes with each succeeding one. Also cursing for emphasis' sake soon reaches a point of diminishing returns and may even come so to dominate the user's vocabulary that it is reduced to a gibberish of ten or twelve words. The oath emphasizer should know that nothing he has to say can possibly be so important that it requires constant underlining and italicizing.

What most people, grammarians and laymen alike, fail to realize is that cursing is as much an art as music and few excel at it. No one likes to hear a beginner bang on a piano and even a great pianist saves his recitals for a receptive audience. —B.F.

It's Time to Cram

Along about this time of the fall quarter there comes a letdown in student activities and a feeling of discouragementment sets in upon many students. All during the quarter the excitement of football season, aided by big dance weekends following each other in close succession, has kept students in a keyed up state. Always there has been some good (at the time) reason for postponing scholastic duties until later.

Then suddenly, football season is over, the quarter is over and examinations loom up like a giant wall about to topple down upon hapless souls hopelessly stuck in a quagmire at its base. Suddenly that guilty gnawing at the back of the mind, so carefully suppressed until now, can no longer be disregarded and blooms forth as the full realization that exam time is here and the student is not prepared and there is not enough time left to become prepared.

This situation is not new, nor is it limited to this quarter or to this school. It happens every quarter or semester at all schools, and as often as it takes place the lesson is never learned. At this late date there is only one remedy. Cram. Forget movies, and beers and dates and sleep and everything else and cram. And maybe with a lot of work and worry and luck most of the student body will be back to go through the same process again next quarter.

These Days

Yard Stick Of Policy

American imperialism has been achieved as a by-product of war and without the consent of the American people. It is because the American people have neither a tradition of imperialism nor a national desire to meddle in the affairs of other countries that the policy of this country is uncertain, unfocused, experimental and at times meaningless.

For instance, no country which anticipated an expenditure of $5,000,000,000 a year for the purpose of maintaining a bloc of friendly states in Europe would have issued JCS 1067, which paralyzed the industry of Europe and which hampers, if it does not prevent, the arming of Europe. In a word, because of JCS 1067, we are forced to employ the Marshall plan to help reconstruct what we agreed should be dismantled and we shall have to contribute an even larger sum to arm the countries which cannot arm themselves because we knocked down and permitted the Russians to dislocate the principal arsenals of Europe.

It does not seem possible that such a paradox could have been policy. In spite of the discovery of our errors, we continue to make them. For instance, our policy concerning the Ruhr should be to require both France and western Germany to find a program for joint economic development of the Ruhr. It does not make sense for us to contribute tremendous sums to both countries if they will quarrel over an iron and steel industry which is essential to both. If they cannot agree on essentials, why should we underwrite their quarrels?

Yet, both can point to the ridiculous order JCS 1067 which directed General Eisenhower to "Take no steps (a) looking toward the economic rehabilitation of Germany, or (b) designed to maintain or strengthen the German economy." The cost of this order to the American taxpayer is calculable only in billions of dollars and that cost can only be lessened by restoring productive efficiency to the Ruhr.

Similarly, as regards China, the United States at Yalta recognized Soviet Russia as the successor to Japan's rights and claims in Manchuria. In 1915 when Japan issued the Twenty-One Demands, the United States was the first to reject them. Again, when the Japanese repeated that at the Paris peace conference, we rejected them except for the Shantung clauses. Again when Japan occupied Manchuria on September 19, 1931, we issued the Stimson doctrine of nonrecognition and we were prepared to intervene in partnership with Great Britain—a partnership which Sir John Simon refused on behalf of his country. The Far Eastern War did not begin at Pearl Harbor but has been in the making more or less since 1911 when the Japanese took umbrage at American racial discrimination.

So far as the United States is concerned, this lack of a yardstick of policy, this opportunism, this hit-or-miss diplomacy, this failure to measure American policy by American interests may finally isolate us more than anything any America Firster proposed. We can find ourselves an island surrounded by states in the Soviet federation with whom we shall have no contract, no trade, no interchange of any kind. We may be separated not by an Iron Curtain but enclosed in an iron box.

The crux of this is the China problem. As we handle that, so will our future be.

'Council Unfit To Serve'

By Charlie Long

The headline on Wednesday's Daily Tar Heel should serve as a signal warning to the entire campus that things in student government are beginning to stink to high heaven. Constitutional law at Carolina has become a hollow mockery and a plaything of governmental leaders.

First warning of what was to come was given last spring when Jess Dedmond, president nominee of the CP and UP stated that the basis of student government at Carolina was the Campus and Honor codes. That view represents a serious falacy in the thinking not only of Jess Dedmond but of too many others on the campus who feel that they are walking constitutions.

For the benefit of all let it be said that there exists (barely) on this campus a supreme law, ratified by the student body, approved by the administration and the Board of trustees. That law can be changed only by the legislature and a two-thirds vote of the students.

Approximately two weeks ago by executive order the date of the fall election was changed to Nov. 30. On Nov. 30 the election was held and on that same date contested.

It was cotested because you, the student body, said in the constitution that the election would be held on the first Tuesday in December. If the president of the student body and his henchmen felt so little regard to their duty to you and their sworn oath to uphold the constitution, then it had to be contested.

If you think that interesting just wait until you consider what the Student council, designated grand protector of the constitution, had to say about changing the constitution by decree.

"The Student council wishes it to be clear to all concerned that in holding the elections to be valid it is not in any way condoning the practice of changing constitutional provisions by executive decree, legislative acts, or council decision. In the future of the council will not uphold any similar violations: the executive and legislative branches should see to it that none occur."

If there is one person on this campus who considers that the statement of an intelligent group, let him stand forth and be counted.

The statement says that we don't condone constitutional suspension, but we do condone constitutional suspension. We do think the constitution is violated, but we are not going to do a damn thing about it. In simple words we will tolerate something if it is too much trouble to change what has been done.

The Student council reached that decision, fellow students. They are the final court on this campus. By their action they announced to you that they did not consider it necessary to enforce that law of the land prescribed by you in your constitution.

What has been done is done. The precedent has been set. Based upon past history we can but expect more "rule by decree" plus the evils that result.

It is no wonder that certain people on the council consider themselves unfit to serve as a court of appeals. On the basis of Wednesday's decision we wholeheartedly concur that they are not fit to serve, period.

Lo, The Poor Indian Head

By Charlie Joyner

What this country needs is a good five-cent piece!

Seriously, it's almost come to the point where the fast vanishing American nickel is hardly worth a cent. The shoe string I've been living on all quarter (five nickels, that is) went broke the other day and I remember thinking as I walked into the Five and Ten to get a new pair that a couple of shoestrings were probably the only things left in the store that still cost just a nickel.

When I pulled out one of my last "unseen friends," old Tom blinked at the light as if he'd just stepped out of his cabin on the other side, and smiled with pride at the thought that he was going to pay for something at last with no help from any other "coiny" characters. His joy was short-lived, however, for just then the clerk handed me my two scrawny shoestrings and murmured, "Ten cents, please."

By the lord Harry let's hope the Democrats do something to rebuild Jefferson's lost prestige before they have to change Monticello to the Hermitage!

How dear to my heart is the old fashioned nickel, when fond recollection presents it to view: the Indian head nickel, the buffalo nickel, no more will it buy ev'n a small glass of brew! The hot dog, the popcorn, the half-pint ice cream cone, and many loved things which my infancy knew: the big bar of candy, the ride on the subway, all these one small nickel will no more buy for you. That poor worthless nickel I once hailed as a treasure, for often of yore when I got one from Dad, I found it the source of an exquisite pleasure, the purest and sweetest I thought could be had. How ardent I seized it, with hands that were glowing, and quick to the store on the corner I ran; there soon with a schooner of beer overflowing, and dripping with coolness I paid off the man; the buffalo nickel, the old fashioned nickel, which once bought a beer now won't pay for the can! And, now, far removed from the loved nickel trickle, the tears at my heart will intrusively tug, as fancy reverts to the old fashioned nickel, and sighs for the five-cent suds in a mug; the old fashioned nickel, the Indian head nickel, the buffalo nickel that now ain't worth a plug!

Answer to Rameses

Editor:

Attention Rameses, Jr.

While strolling across the campus today I ran across a Daily Tar Heel. It was opened to the editoral page, and as I read on I came across the letter to us dogs. I am answering this letter since evidently you know nothing about dogs) as a representative of the Campus Canines.

There are several reasons why we dogs don't use more subtle attacks on squirrels. The main one is: if we were subtle in them we would soon kill all the squirrels (they don't multiply as fast as rabbits) and there wouldn't be anything to do on the campus.

You students have physical education at the gym, but on last trip there I noticed signs saying "No Dogs Allowed." So that we are excluded from the gym, how else can we keep in shape for spring if we don't chase squirrels?

However, Rameses, I appreciate your thoughtfulness for the campus dogs. If there is a food shortage at Lenoir hall this winter, I shall call a meeting of all my friends and relay to them your brilliant suggestions.

Yours for more hydrants at U. N. C.

In the Wrong Pew

Editor:

While we certainly admit the right of Mr. Bill Robertson to have an opinion, and further admit his right to express that opinion, we feel that matter of such highly offensive nature as his article of Nov. 30 should appear in the "Write Away" column of the paper rather than in the regular editorial section.

We make this suggestion because we do not like to see such poor taste presented in any manner such that DTH readers not familiar with the ways of Chapel Hill might assume that the majority of the students of this University are in accord with Mr. Robertson's feelings on the subject at hand.

We should like to point out that this is not the first time Mr. Robertson's material has met with unfavorable reaction on the campus.

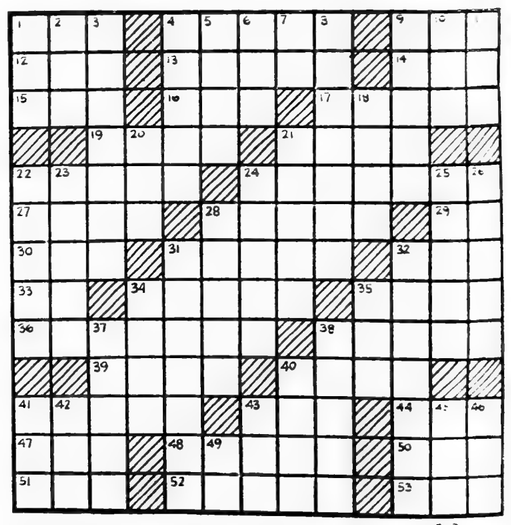
I Have a Bad Cold



Editor:

In past editions of the Tar Heel there have been many articles on Communistic trash by a certain member of the Tar Heel staff. In a particular part of a column written on last Tuesday by this same person he said that there is no essential symbolic difference between the Stars and Bars and the Nazi swastika. In reply to this rotten hunk of red herring I say that there isn't and never will be any essential difference between the forces of Soviet Communism and 'LOWER' Paradise Lost. In short that is a four lettered word.

In regards to this person's slurs on the great flag of the Confederacy and the great men that fought under it, I say that at least the rebels had MEN—who went and died for that flag and not little boys who stayed at home and wrote about all those good little yankees with their five year plan. Would you, if necessary, die for papa Stalin? If your ideals were half as good as the Confederate dollar you wouldn't have to try and convince us so hard.

The remainder of this writer's article seemed to have pretty good sense about it, but listen comrade——The next time you find time to blow your nose on the Stars and Bars, REMEMBER, have a bad cold.

Tar Heels Top Lenoir Rhyne In Opener; Frosh Win

Carson Notches 28 to Lead Carolina to 68-51 Victory

By Buddy Vaden

With Coy Carson hitting for 28 points, Carolina's Tar Heels opened their 1948 season with an impressive 68-51 victory over a scrappy Lenoir Rhyne quint in Woollen gym last night.

Lenoir Rhyne captain Leo Kantorski sent his mates into a short-lived lead with a charity shot in the opening minutes of the game, but Dan Nyimicz came back with two free baskets to put Carolina ahead. Wells sank a free shot for Lenoir Rhyne and the game was all tied up at 2-2 after three minutes of play.

"Nemo" Nearman dropped two free baskets, Wells came back with the first field goal of the game, Carson slipped his first two field goals through the net, and Carolina was off to the races.

Carson Hogs Show

Rip Ryan and Nearman swished the fibers with action baskets after Kantorski had scored on a push from the left side for Lenoir Rhyne. Carson began his one man show at this point and completely dominated the play during the remainder of the first half. In the ensuing 14 minutes, the Asheville hotshot slipped 21 points through the hoop to give his mates a 37-20 half-time lead

The Tar Heels held a 17-point lead at intermission, and with Coach Tom Scott substituting freely in the last half clung to their margin throughout the final stanza to win by 17 points.

At the beginning of the second half, Nyimcz again inaugurated the scoring with a neat set shot from way out after 2 minutes had elapsed. Ryan followed with an action basket to give Carolina a 41-20 lead, and the visitors began their biggest splurge of the night.

During the next two minutes Kantorski staged a one-man show, scoring seven points to bring the Bears within striking range of the Tar Heels. But the Tar Heels, with floor shots by Charlie Thorne, Nearman and Carson, managed to maintain a good lead.

Battle on Even Terms

With four minutes and 20 seconds of the second period gone, and with the Tar Heels sending in reserves, both teams were on even terms. Carson scored from the floor to make it Carolina 43, Lenoir Rhyne 31. Newsome sank one for the Bears and Nearman countered with two foul shots. Carson added two more and the Bears kept the Tar Heels in reaching distance with two of their own shots.

But with eight minutes gone the Tar Heels had a substantial 16 point lead. Shots by Hugo Kappler, Norman Mitchell, and Howard Deasy put the Tar Heels 19 points up with only four minutes left in the game.

In the next four minutes Tommy Wells got hot for Lenoir Rhyne and added two foul shots and a field goal and teammates Newsome and Kantorski added a shot apiece. Carolina came back with three two-pointers to make the score 68-51 as time ran out.

Carson's first half show was the greatest point-scoring spree seen on the Woollen gym floor in many a moon. In his 25 minutes of playing time he colected 28 points, 22 of which came during the innitial period. Of 29 shots from the floor attempted, he made good on 12 to give an accuracy percentage of .413.

Next home game will be on Saturday evening when the Tar Heels face Guilford oCllege at 8 o'clock.

The lineups and summary:

Carson (28)	F	(10) Kantorski

A GREAT FLOOR GAME, and some fine backboard work were Nemo Nearman's main contributions to the Carolina cause last night. In addition, his 10 points was second highest for the Tar Heels.

Tar Heels Honored by Rivals

Two of Carolina's 1948 grid opponents, Wake Forest and William and Mary, announced their All-Opponent teams yesterday. Five Tar Heels were named on the Wake Forest list, while four Carolina landed on the Indians' most-feared team.

Charlie Justice received unanimous acclaim from the 22 Deacon voters. William and Mary's center, Tommy Thompson, was the only other man given this honor by the Demon Deacons of Wake Forest

Art Weiner polled 21 of the Baptist votes while Len Szafaryn was named on 20 Wake Forest ballots. Guard Sid Varney and fullback Hosea Rodgers were the other Tar Heels honored by Wake Forest.

The William and Mary Indians placed Justice, Rodgers, Weiner, and Szafaryn on their All-Opponent eleven. Full particulars concerning the Virginians' voting was not available late yesterday.

With All-American teams going the rounds these days, Len Szafaryn has been finding his name on quite a few of them. He has been named among AP, UP, and Collier's All-American teams, but his latest honor was a great deal different from any of the previous laurels that had been heaped upon him.

An All-American Glamour team was announced yesterday and Szafaryn was named to a first-string tackle berth on the "Dreamboy Team." The team was picked by Miss Mary R. Weir of West Chester, Pa.

Frosh Swimmers Drop First Meet To State College

Carolina's freshman swimming team suffered defeat in its first outing yesterday at Bowman Gray pool, losing to State college, 46½-26½.

The visitors copped six of 10 first places and rolled up enough seconds and thirds on the side to easily outdistance the locals.

Kirby Ambler paced the losing cause turning victories in the 50 and 100-yard freestyle events.

50-freestyle: 1-tie between Ambler (C) and Lojko (S); 3-tie between Williamson (C) and Capro (S). 0:24.9.

100-breaststroke: 1-Smith (C); 2-Lewald (S); 3-Raskin (C). 1:14.5.

150-individual medley: 1-Martin, (S); 2-Easkin (C); no third place. 1:55.5.

Justice Is Honored By Norfolk Sportsmen

It was revealed yesterday that Charlie Justice has been given another grid honor by enthusiastic football fans. This time it was the Norfolk sports club that heaped honors upon the diminutive Carolina tailback.

He was picked by the Virginians to receive the Leigh Williams Memorial trophy which is awarded annually to the "most outstanding player within the boundaries of the Southern conference."

Justice is expected to journey to Norfolk on December 13 to receive the trophy in the annual sports club jamboree.

Justice Only Tar Heel Named On Collier's 1948 All-America

By Frank Allston

In the day of the wholesale selection of All-American teams, many people have learned to take most of the teams with a grain of salt. But there are four big ones that carry the most prestige. They are the Associated Press, the United Press, Grantland Rice's and Collier's Coaches' All-American.

The latter of these, the third of the big four to be released, came out yesterday. Like most of the others, Collier's 59th All-American eleven was paced by Carolina's little triple-threat tailback, Charlie Justice.

But as readers thumb through the December 11 issue of Colliers, one thing becomes most apparent. This team is very much different from other All-American teams. It's different in several ways.

Mentors, Movies Decide

First and foremost is the fact that this team of eleven gridiron stalwarts was selected by the coaches themselves and not by the sportswriters, who sometimes have cause to become somewhat prejudiced. Eight of the more prominent of the pigskin masters spent three days reviewing movies and conferring on the relative merits of the different players.

The eight are very representative of the coaching fraternity. They were led by the brilliant Frank Leahy, coach of the 1947 mythical champion Notre Dame eleven; Minnesota's Bernie Bierman; Lou Little, of Columbia; "Weeping" Wally Butts, of Georgia; SMU's Matty Bell; Southern Cal's Jeff Cravath; Harvey Harman, of Rutgers and Tuss McLaughry, of Dartmouth round out the expert board of selections.

Walker and Burris Chosen

True, Doak Walker, SMU sensation and winner of the '48 Heisman trophy, and Buddy Burris, Oklahoma's star guard, made this team like most all of the others. But the rest of the boys, with one or two exceptions, may come as a big surprise to most readers.

No other All-American team selected Sam Tamburo, Penn State's great end; or Georgia Tech's star flankman, George Brodnax, or Notre Dame's Marty Wendell, a terror in the center of the Irish forward wall. Few picked back Clyde Scott, of Arkansas.

Chuck Bednarik, Penn's outstanding center, and fullback Jackie Jensen of California were also picked by the coaches for their '48 team. The tackles came as a surprise to some with Al Wistert, of Michigan and Minnesota's Leo Nomellini as the choices.

Collier's sports editor Bill Fay said of Charlie Justice:

"Justice of North Carolina: . . . a breakaway runner, especially dangerous on kickoff and punt returns. A deft ball handler, particularly artful at faking ball to another back on the "crossover" after catching punt. Runs with ball behind hip. The only solution for puzzled opponents is to try to tackle Justice and his twin safety man. This attempt to get both safety men spreads defense and gives Justice opportunity to get under way in open field. Top punt return: 84 yards for touchdown that whipped Georgia. Splendid passer, especially on optional plays to right that develop into pass or run. A real triple threat."

Kids to Benefit

TUCON, Ariz., Dec. 2.—(UP)—Arizona university's football team today agreed to play Drake in the Salad bowl—but only after getting an okay on its demand that the gate receipts go to charity.

Actually, the demand was largely unnecessary because profits of the Phoenix, Ariz., New Year's day game already were earmarked for an underprivileged children's fund.

The team at first was reported to have demanded a cash share for each player for participation in the game.

Justice, Weiner, Szafaryn Named On All-Southern

Results of the Southerner Magazine All-Southern football poll announced yesterday showed three Tar Heels on the first team and one on the third team. Charlie Justice, Art Weiner, and Len Szafaryn were the Carolinians named to first-string berths, while Hosea Rodgers landed on the All-Southern third team.

The poll was conducted throughout 16 states below the Mason-Dixon line, and the final results showed Justice leading the list of Dixie grid greats. Barney Poole, of Mississippi, now in his seventh year of varsity competition, was runner-up in the magazine poll. Georgia Tech's brilliant guard, Bill Healy, placed third in the balloting. Justice was a near-unanimous choice for the All-Southern eleven.

Buddy Burris and Jack Mitchell of Oklahoma, Carolina's Sugar bowl opponent, were also named on the team. Burris received a first team guard berth, while Mitchell led the third team backs.

Tar Babies Win Over Louisburg By 76-53 Score

By Lew Chapman

Carolina's freshman basketball team inaugurated their season with a roaring start last night at Woollen gym when they decisively trampled Louisburg junior college by the runaway score of 76-53.

Although a preliminary to the varsity contest, the game provided the assembling crowd with some fast and deadly shooting that would be equal to midseason form.

The action started slow as both fives were slightly nervous, but after several minutes the pace picked up and a pair of future Tar Heel cage greats, Buddy Johnson and Johnnie Bowersox, combined to give the Tar Babies a close 17-15 first period lead.

That proved to be Louisburg's brightest moment for from then on it was all Carolina. Coach Jim Hamilton's yearlings then mixed up smooth functioning plays with a devastating fast break that left their opponents reeling. Carolina led 40-23 at the intermission and lengthened the margin to 61-32 at the three quarter mark.

The lineups:

Carolina (76)	Pos.	(53) Louisburg
Harter (12)	F	(10) Cole
Johnson (17)	F	(13) Ussery
Guyes (6)	C	(4) Cooper
Reuning (2)	G	(7) Gaster
Bowersox (11)	G	Evans

Carolina substitutions: Pascal (2), Smith, Eckert, Cheek (8), Redding, Hill, Crowder (11) Slemp, Gradman (2), Godwin (2). Barr (2). Louisburg substitutions: Carter (6), Griffin (10), Snyder, Miles (1), Shotwell (2), Thomas.

Holdash Honored

Irv Holdash, Carolina's top line backer and defensive center, has been chosen as the sophomore of the week in the Southern conference by the Associated press.

Holdash has been playing top knotch defensive ball all year and will be counted one heavily in the Sugar bowl contest. Holdash's nomination as the sopn of the week followed his performance in the 34-12 win over Virginia last Saturday in Charlottesville.

Royall Denies Army Sugar Bowl Rumor

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—(UP)—Secretary of Army Kenneth Royall, replying to a statement that he had given Army permission to play in the Sugar bowl football game, said today that he had done just the opposite.

"The question of the Army team playing in the Sugar bowl was discussed with me by Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, Superintendent of the Army Military Academy," Royall said. "It was decided negatively after careful consideration of all of the factors involved."

Earlier, Hap Glaudi, sports editor of the New Orleans Item, said that Royall had given Army permission to play in the Sugar bowl but that Coach Earl (Red) Blaik refused because of the possibility that the opponent might be Notre Dame.

Blaik, he said, "considered, hesitated, then refused."

In New York, Blaik, who was there to accept the Lambert Memorial trophy, emblematic of Eastern football supremacy, said that "For the past several seasons, Army has received invitations to play in the Sugar, Orange and Cotton bowl games."

"These invitations have been declined with thanks," he said, "because Army's policy is against post-season games."

"Permission for Army's participation had been granted by Royall, a North Carolina alumnus, who is a Sugar bowl admirer," Glaudi said.

"He also assisted in securing a chain of approval of all academy officials until the invitation finally reached Coach Blaik."

Y Courters See Local Terrier Have Convulsion

By Lincoln Kan

Y court frequenters had a bad scare at 10:30 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Watched by wary students and curious mutts of all sizes and shapes, a little white and black terrier with a brown head circled and rolled in front of the South building steps in a convulsion.

An unidentified student dashed into South and called the police on the phone at the information desk, presided over by Mrs. Gustave A. Harrer. As soon as the police call was completed she called Mrs. A. M. Jordan, the local chairman of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

When Mrs. Jordan arrived, minus her St. Bernard, she took over from a nervous policeman who handed the dog over to her gingerly. As soon as the dog was placed in the trunk of the car, "for safety reasons" as Mrs. Jordan said, she took the pup down to Dr. L. L. Vines, the veternarian on Durham road.

The diagnosis was malnutrition, worms and convulsions caused by indigestion. Vines said, "This dog has possibilities of being a very good pet as it is still very young. I am keeping him in hopes someone will want him." For the past week Mrs. Jordan and Bill Buchan, the student Dog foundation head, have been rounding up many stray dogs for care and treatment.

Mrs. Jordan said, "I hope, we can take care of all of them; however, we will need help. If the students see some dog in need of care, I would appreciate their telling me. I'm in the phone book."

Hypnotism Can Begin as Hobby, End as Obsession

By Don Maynard

"Hypnotism can begin as a hobby and soon become an obsession," Tom Shetley declared before giving his demonstration of the powers of hypnotism before the Boy Scouts of Troop 39 Wednesday night in the Episcopal church.

After an introduction to the troop by Gene Benjamin, assistant scoutmaster, Shetley explained just what he was going to attempt and reassured everyone "you cannot be hypnotized against your will, nor can you be forced to commit any act against your beliefs or moral code."

Shetley then proceeded with his demonstration, with the assistance of Snady McEachern, showing how a person may retain his abilities to walk, talk and follow directions even though sound asleep.

By the use of post-hypnotic suggestion he had Scouts singing "Happy Birthday" for no explainable reason, and even went so far as to turn the audience into a cage of "monkeys."

When told upon awaking they would find a cage full of jibbering monkeys before them, two of the scouts almost doubled up with laughter at the "monkeys," antics.

In another demonstration of the ability of the sub-conscious mind to retain incidents long past, Shetley sent Senior Patrol Leader Jack Bright back to his days in the first and fifth grades. Asked to write his name, Jack first scrawled in the uncertain hand of a six-year-old, then in neat, smooth longhand.

tion from the student budget would be impossible. A later audit showed a surplus and the bill was introduced to reimburse the men.

Other bills discussed included two amendments to the constitution which would have given the legislature authority to fix the membership of the Dance committee and the University club.

Dortch Warriner (SP) and Kerr both spoke in favor of the bills after an amendment to the amendment was passed stating that a two-thirds vote of the legislature would be required to change the membership of either group.

Both bills passed by a wide majority.

A bill to form a Town Students association, introduced some weeks ago by Al Lowenstein (SP) was tabled on Lowenstein's motion.

AT NEW YORK'S IDLEWILD AIRPORT, a big trans-Atlantic passenger plane taxis over the world's first roadway underpass built to permit the simultaneous movement of aircraft and surface vehicles. The underpass is described as a "concrete boat," since it is built to withstand pressure below sea level. It sustains two taxiway bridges, each capable of supporting 300,000 tons and took 18 months to build.

U.M. Board Raises Bans On Negroes

Officials Approve Limited Program

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Dec. 3—(UP)—Curators of the University of Missouri today gave limited approval to a plan to admit Negroes at state institutions of higher learning.

But Dr. Frederick Middlebush, university president, and Allen McReynolds, president of the board of curators, made it plain any revision of the law regarding segregation is the business of the state legislature.

Middlebush and McReynolds appeared before the Missouri house committee on equal rights equal rights.

They recommended that the law be amended to permit certain Negroes to attend tax-supported institutions of higher learning which offer courses not now available at Lincoln university, the state school for Negroes at Jefferson City.

"It would be presumptuous for us to give you a warning as to how wide the door should be opened," McReynolds said. "We feel our job is to give you the facts."

A COLLEGE Student, James Newton Garver 3d, 20, is shown in Philadelphia just before he was sentenced to serve a year and a day in prison for refusing to register for the peacetime draft. The son of a Buffalo, New York, banker, young Garver said he did not register because of the dictates of his conscience.

Faculty Talk To Be Given By Prof. Huse

'Divine Comedy' To Be Subject

Professor Howard Huse of the romance languages department will deliver the faculty lecture in humanities Wednesday night in Gerrard hall at 8:30.

The lecture, one of a series sponsored by the undergraduate division of humanities, is open for the entire university community.

Professor Huse will lecture on "Dante's Divine Comedy." He plans to describe and appraise this major monument so as to inform a general audience about it.

Prof. Raymond Adams of the English department has said that perhaps the most quoted remark about Dante is Carlyle's "in him voice." In saying this Carlyle could hardly have been more ten silent centuries found a wrong, Adams said, for the ten centuries preceeding Dante were far from silent. And Dante was quite as much a forerunner of the Renaissance as he was the culmination of the Middle Ages.

But even so Adams continued, Carlyle had a grain of truth in his sentence. One can hardly know the Middle Ages, that period which underlies modern times, without knowing something about Dante. The lecture by Professor Huse will help toward that knowledge.

A graduate of the University of Chicago with a Ph.D. from the same institution, Huse has been here since 1920. He has been serving as chairman of the department of comparative literature since its organization a decade ago and was for several years chairman of the Humanities Division in the Liberal Arts college.

He is author of several books, among them "Psychology of Foreign Language Study," and his latest book, "Reading and Speaking Foreign Language." The book which perhaps attracted greatest attention was his "Illiteracy of the Literate."

Groups Will Ask Selective Service To Defer Students

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—(UP)—Selective Service headquarters will be asked soon to recommend deferments for most college students, it was revealed today.

The appeal will be made by five committees composed of educators, engineers, geologists and other scientists.

National Selective Service headquarters urged its local boards a month ago to grant one-year deferments to professional students of the healing arts those who are studying to be doctors, dentists, veterinarians or osteopaths. This request was based upon recommendations of a healing arts educational advisory committee.

The new committees now are preparing their recommendations on deferments for students in the agricultural, biological, engineering, physical and social sciences, and in the humanities. Since the humanities classification include students of literature, languages, philosophy and other liberal arts subjects, the recommendations would apply to a majority of college students.

The five committees will meet jointly to pool their recommendations under the chairmanship of Dr. M. H. Trytten of the national research council as soon as the preliminary work is done.

Justice S.J. Ervin To Sit As Moot Court Judge

State Supreme Court Justice S. J. Ervin will sit as judge in the Chambers versus Hannah suit and counter-suit trial, sponsored by Phi Alpha Delta, law fraternity, this afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Law building.

This is the first time that any extra-curricular body of the law school has had an opportunity to prepare a case of this kind from actual incident. The trial will be conducted by graduate members who have had trial and appellate practice and courses in evidence.

One trial will involve an assault and battery charge as well as one of libel. An exchange of blows in Lenoir hall Nov. 3 over a letter written by Jack Chambers allegedly defaming the character of Bill Hannah is the basis for the trial. The affair was witnessed by members of the University legal fraternity, and the two combatants agreed to settle their differences in court.

The trial is being put on by the fraternity under no official sanction or order. The decision of the jury ends the matter for all parties involved.

All interested students are invited to attend.

Former Student Dies in Blast From Shotgun

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—(UP)—Ascorned suitor opened fire on police last night in his girl friend's apartment and killed one officer before he himself was slain.

The dead were Robert S. Wilkerson, 34, a crane operator, and Police Cpl. Grady A. Beacham, 40.

Beacham was a native of Kitty Hawk, N. C., and attended the University of North Carolina.

Mrs. Elizabeth Armstrong, 34, telephoned police as she had several times before that Wilkerson was annoying her. When Beacham and Pvt. Harvey C. Womble, arrived at the apartment, they found Wilkerson barricaded in a bedroom.

Beacham kicked in the door and was greeted with a shotgun blast that caught him in the chest. Womble emptied his pistol at Wilkerson, the latter reeling and dropping on the bed. Mrs. Armstrong and her three children, who stood only a few feet from the shooting, were uninjured.

Tri Delt Alumnae Will Meet Monday

Hillel Foundation To Hold Banquet For Anniversary

A buffet supper, appropriate ceremonies and a dance tonight in the Pine room, Lenoir hall, will highlight the 25th anniversary celebration of the first Hillel foundation, Rabbi Samuel Perlman announced yesterday.

Students from Duke, North Carolina State and Woman's college, Greensboro, will join with University Jewish students in the observance. Administration officials, local ministers and leading B'nai B'rith leaders throughout the state have been invited. Bertha Kaplan, chairman of the social committee, has made elaborate preparations for the evening.

The Hillel foundation, which was established at the University of Illinois in 1923, is designed to meet all the needs of Jewish students on the campus.

Chapter Picks TEP Officers

A new set of officers, headed by newly-elected Chancellor Gene Heiman, was named by the brothers of Tau Epsilon Phi at their chapter meeting Wednesday night.

Heiman, first-year law student from Miami, Fla., was chosen to head the fraternity for the remainder of the year replacing Wally Robinson of Brooklyn, N. Y., who graduates this quarter.

Ted Adler, Norfolk, Va., was named to replace Heiman as scribe and the position of bursar was assumed by Ellis Levinson, Gastonia. Other officers elected were: Harvey Colchamiro, Brooklyn, N. Y., pledge master; Irv Greenspon, Newport News, Va., warden; and Joe Brady, New York city, chaplain.

At the same time two members-at-large were named to the executive committee. Irv Silver, High Point, and Sol Jaffa, Charlotte, are the new committeemen.

Zoology Head In World Group

Dr. D. P. Costello, chairman of the zoology department of the University, had just been notified of his appointment as a member of the "Institut International 'Embryologie," at a meeting at Le Laboratorie Hubrecht, Utrecht, Netherlands.

Fifty-five new members were elected, bringing the total membership to 75. Of the new members, 20 elected were from the United States, four each from France, Switzerland, Russia, England and Sweden, three each from Belgium, China and Italy, two from South Africa, and one each from Denmark, Germany, Finland and Norway.

This organization is establishing an international center for research in embryology at the Hubrecht Laboratory at Utrecht. It is affiliated with UNESCO.

Henry Ford Says Private Schools Have to Compete

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(UP)—Henry Ford II, president of the Ford Motor company, said today that private colleges and universities must compete with tax-supported institutions to keep education from becoming a government monopoly.

"I am very much against an educational system that depends entirely on the state with a capital "S"—that is, centralized under government control or supervision," Ford declared. "I am against it because I don't think it would be any good. I don't think it would be worth what we would pay for it. It would suffer from all the faults of every monopoly. It would grow fat and unimaginative. It would continually take the easy way. But worse than that, it would tend to teach the views of the government in power."

N. C. Solon Says Education Aid Will Be Passed

WINSTON-SALEM, Dec. 3.—(UP)—Sen. Clyde R. Hoey, (D-N.C.) today predicted that Congress will pass a bill providing for federal aid to education "without federal interference" and placed his own approval on the proposal.

Hoey spoke today at the dedication of the new Mineral Springs high school near here.

"I am in favor of providing federal aid to education," said the senior Tar Heel senator. "I think education is a national responsibility but should be administered, directed and controlled on a state basis. Every child in each state should have comparable educational opportunities.

"The last Senate passed a bill providing federal aid without federal interference," said Hoey, "but the House failed to act upon this measure. I think the present Congress will pass this bill."

Faculty Hears Talk by Waynick

Capus Waynick, campaign manager for governor-elect Kerr Scott and chairman of the state Democratic Executive committee, spoke before the members of the Faculty club at a luncheon Wednesday.

Speaking of State government problems, and of persons and incidents in the recent presidential election, Waynick mentioned the parallel between the Lincoln campaign and Truman upset.

"In 1862, the prevailing forecasts were that Lincoln would not be reelected, and in August 1864, three months before the election he put down in writing that he did not expect to win.

"The difference between Lincoln and Truman was that Truman did not agree with the forecasts. When I talked with him in Raleigh he told me he thought he would win, and I was convinced and still am, that he really did think so."

Waynick spoke with the President when Mr. Truman visited Raleigh last October. Waynick has had a long-standing acquaintance with the President, and it was evident to Waynick's listeners at the luncheon that he held him in high esteem.

"Some people have criticized President Truman for what they have called his 'littleness' and 'ineptitude'," he said. "I think these critics are mistaken in their estimate of him.

Christian Reply Will Be Theme Of Conferences

"The Christian Answer to Communism" will be the theme for this year's ninth annual Intercollegiate Student conference which will be held in two separate and identical one-day conferences today and tomorrow.

Today's conference will be held at St. Augustine's college in Raleigh and tomorrow's will be at Livingstone college in Salisbury. The same speakers and program will be used at each place.

Leaders for both conferences are Rev. Carl Key, newly elected executive secretary of the North Carolina Council of United World Federalists and John M. Swomley, a Methodist minister from New York, who is associate secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation.

Last year's student conference was held at Chapel Hill with approximately 10 different colleges represented by 150 students.

Mag Says MacArthur Stand Should Arrouse Protest Cry

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(UP)—The magazine Editor & Publisher said editorially today that Gen. Douglas MacArthur's barring of the press from the executions of seven convicted Japanese war criminals "should arouse a cry of protest from the American press."

"The people of the world who suffered because of Japanese aggression are entitled to know intimately the manner of their fate," the editorial said. "The English-speaking people, particularly the Americans, who sacrificed so much in human life and economic wealth for four years to defeat these militarists, must be told the true story of the executions."

Editor & Publisher said rumors already were being spread as to the status of the convicted Japanese, including reports of suicides, and that "such stories will multiply with the telling."

In its news column, the magazine recalled that the United Press, the Overseas Press club of Japan, and the Tokyo Correspondents club have appealed the MacArthur ruling but that Army Secretary Kenneth Royall said the matter was up to MacArthur.

The article pointed out that press correspondents, who at first were barred from witnessing the 1946 hangings of 11 Nazi war criminals at Nuernberg, finally broke down official resistance and attending the executions on the basis of two representatives from each of the four powers.

"The reversal of the military edict came after a series of editorials and of messages to the War department, spearheaded by the United Press," the magazine said.

Newcomers Club Will Hold Tea

The Newcomers club invites all faculty women to a tea Tuesday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock in the Monogram club. Hostesses for the tea will be Mrs. Frank Graham, Mrs. Robert House, and Mrs. William Carmichael.

The club is composed of faculty women and wives who have been in Chapel Hill less than three years. The group now numbers over 130 women.

Officers of the club are Mrs. Gerald Barrett, president; Mrs. John O'Neill, vice president; Mrs. Wayne Bowers, secretary treasurer; and sponsors consisting of the following women: Mrs. Frank Graham, Mrs. Robert House, Mrs. English Bagby, Mrs. Albert Koontz, Mrs. R. J. M. Hobbs, Mrs. John Wright, and Mrs. M. J. Rosenauer.

Moravian Feast Set for Sunday

The Wesley foundation and the University Methodist church invite students and Chapel Hill residents to a Moravian Christmas Love feast at 7 o'clock Sunday evening, Dec. 12.

Bishop J. Kenneth Pfohl of Winston-Salem will deliver the principle address, and the service will be directed by Rev. J. Howard Chadwick, minister of the Fairview Moravian church in Winston-Salem and state director of Moravian student work.

The Methodist church choir and members of several Winston-Salem choirs will combine in the singing of Moravian carols. Bach's "Break Forth, O Beauteous Heavenly Light," Yon's "Gesu Bambino," the Moravian anthem, be used.

Moravian students at the University will serve as ushers and serve the specially prepared buns and coffee which are a traditional part of the Love feast. The service will be climaxed by the lighting of individual beeswax candles.

Brundage Says Falling Buying Power Is Cause of Increased Money Supply

Falling buying power of the American dollar is due mostly to the increased money supply since the war, Percival F. Brundage, president of the American Institute of Accountants, said here yesterday.

Brundage spoke at a meeting of the annual symposium of accounting and taxation, held under the sponsorship of the North Carolina Association of Certified Public Accountants. Duke and the University also acted as co-sponsors.

Brundage placed the blame for decreased dollar value also on the treasury's "cheap money" policy and relaxation of wage and price controls.

"Up to now no one has been willing to take energetic steps to stop the decline because of the expected opposition of labor and the farmers," he said.

NCEA Recreation Group Has Conference at Woollen Gym

Teachers and students of Physical education and recreation from throughout the state gathered here yesterday for a working conference of the North Carolina Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreational department of the North Carolina Education association.

The conference, which continues through today, got underway yesterday afternoon with a roundtable discussion on "What's Happening in Colleges?" led by Charles Spencer of the State department of public health.

Following the discussion was a series of demonstrations of teaching techniques in which students from the University, from Chapel Hill schools, and from the visiting colleges participated.

Miss Bettye Doss, instructor in the physical education department, was in charge of a demonstration of composition in modern dance. Participating were the following students: Eleanor deGrange, Barbara Austin, Ann Marshall Emmert, Phyllis Ferguson, Ann Kessler, Dorothy Sloan, Marilyn Stanley, Susan Trumbo, Effie Westervelt, Mary Deane Williams, Harriet Ann Williamson and Nancy Young.

At a dinner session last night, Dr. I. G. Greer, executive vice president of the North Carolina Business foundation, spoke on good health.

Seven UNC Officials Attend Association Meet At Memphis

Seven officials represented the University at the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, and several other sessions of related groups this week in Memphis, Tenn.

They were Roy Armstrong, dean of admissions, W. W. Pierson, dean of Graduate school, Guy Phillips, dean of the education department, Arnold King, E. W. Knight, W. C. Ryan, and Arnold Perry.

Armstrong reported that it was one of the best attended meetings he had seen, with approximately 1,000 members present.

The convention consisted mainly of open forum discussions groups. The work of the association was divided into commissions, and Dean Pierson was a member of a session that dealt with higher education. The group gave a party in Pierson's honor, as he had been on this commission for 24 years. Both he and King are still in Memphis, attending session of the deans of Southern graduate schools. Other school officials returned to Chapel Hill yesterday.

One of the highlights of the meeting, according to Armstrong, was the panel which presented objectives of the Southern governors regional compact. A former member of the sociology department, John Ivey, is director of the regional council for education.

Alumni Register Already Exists

Dear Rameses:

Your open letter addressed to me in November 24's Daily Tar Heel suggested that a register be maintained at some place on the campus next fall when those whom you choose to call "old grads" return for football weekends.

You say: "Let's inform the alumni and alumnae that the first thing they do when they get to the Hill . . . is sign in on a register" for the weekend, giving name, permanent address, temporary address for the weekend, possibly what fraternity house he or she will be visiting after the game, etc. etc.

A good suggestion, Rameses! The Alumni Office (in the Carolina Inn—not in Alumni building) does keep (and has been for many years now) a register at homecomings, commencement reunions, etc. Many, many alumni come by the Alumni office headquarters at football weekends too.

The plan could hardly be perfect. Even alumni might not "sign in" and tell where they will be all during the weekend. One thing I think you can count on—they will be "at the game." In fact, Kenan stadium is about the only place all of them could assemble at any one time. Needles in haystacks can be found easily, because needles do stay put.

Seriously, you are right in expressing the wish of the average "old grad" who returns to Chapel Hill. He or she wishes to see "everybody," talk with "everybody," hear about "everybody." The Alumni office (again, in the Carolina Inn—not the Alumni building) is a pretty good place to do that. Rameses, please come by yourself sometime and see our up-to-date (as we can keep them) address lists of more than 40,000 former students, our files with individual "jackets" for every former student and every present student, and our Register in which guests and visitors have been signing for years and years. You'll be surprised how many "old grads" know about these things.

The job of making visitors to Chapel Hill feel "at home" is a job for students, faculty, townspeople, and even the dogs. A kind word to strangers (such as you gave your newfound alumnus acquaintances) is most helpful. All Chapel Hill is in effect a home and a reception center for "old grads."

Spike Saunders

Something to Be Proud of

It's almost over now, and we look back over the past season and consider it successful in more ways than one. In a football season where your team is undefeated, even if tied once, it's a feat to know that you have played two arch rivals and still have not had any vandalism.

Vandalism, often described by scribes as something like a snake which rears its ugly head before every traditional game, has been kept practically nil again this year.

Much of the credit for this has to go to our student leaders, but the majority should go where it belongs, to the students themselves. Everyone knows that if a few hard-boiled students had wanted to go to Duke or State and do a little painting they would have done so, regardless of the penalty that hung over their heads. This is why the whole student body should be commended. The fact that the students this year have shown enough maturity to think before acting is a fact to be proud of.

In Tuscaloosa, Alabama, seven students were arrested Thursday for pre-game vandalism. The game, between Auburn and Alabama, is the the first one scheduled in 41 years.

We went 10 games, several of them with rivals that will equal the Auburn-Alabama rivalry, and had na vandalism. It's something to be proud of.

—S.G.

Die when I may, I want it said of me by those who knew me best, that I always plucked a thistle and planted a flower where I thought a flower would grow.

—Abraham Lincoln.

Good Word For South

George S. Schuyler is an editor and columnist of the Pittsburgh Courier, one of the leading Negro publications of the United States. A journalist of skill and courage and essential honesty, he wrote:

"Most of what is said and written about the South is untrue. Today it is not a place of terror and persecution, nor has it been in many decades. I am always amused when friends express fear and sympathy because I am going south, assuming wrongly that I am endangering my life. Actually I think no more of visiting the heart of Mississippi or Texas or South Carolina than I do about visiting Minnesota, Maine or New Mexico.

"I have gone into large towns and small villages in every one of the Southern states and have always been treated as well as anywhere else by both white and colored people. True, there are Jim-Crow laws, the existence of which I deplore, but I obey them, and their existence (which irks me) does not blind me to the opportunities Negroes have there. For all the faults of the South, it must be admitted that colored people are better off there than any other minority elsewhere with comparable background—and I believe I have more information about the position of minorities in other countries than most people.

"Right now the South is prosperous. Negroes everywhere can purchase homes and farms, and they are doing so. Nowhere is there studied insult or discourtesy within the social framework of the section, and everywhere Negroes tell me that persecution and police brutality are rarely encountered—and they should know."

These are three paragraphs of a long article, but nothing is taken out of context. He ends his article with this paragraph:

"Since most Negroes are going to remain in the South, their leaders will have to learn to act like it, and to push programs of gradualism with greater skill and statesmanship unswerved by emotional claque from 'abroad.'"

The article, published on November 6, created a stir in the Negro world, particularly as it ran counter to the usual propaganda. Hodding Carter, editor of the Democrat Delta-Times, Greenville, Miss., had quoted Schuyler on a Town Meeting discussion, thus attracting more general attention to the fact that a Northern Negro editor spoke up that conditions were actually improving in the South.

So Schuyler wrote another piece in which he said:

"As I have stated previously, the nearly eleven million Negroes in the South today obviously wish to remain there, else they would have long departed from the section because no one has stopped them from doing so. It is an insult to these people to say that they are terrorized and persecuted, and nevertheless remain, when the price of bus or railroad coach fare would place them above the Potomac and Ohio Rivers. Since they elect to stay there, they must try to get along there and better their conditions there, which certainly cannot be done by antagonizing the people amongst whom they must live."

It strikes me that this is constructive and sensible American citizenship. True, his newspaper on the same day that the second piece appeared saw fit to back-track by failing to assume responsibilities for his views. No one expects a newspaper to be responsible for a columnist's views, even if he happens to be an editor as well. But George Schuyler's views are so sound that they reflect favorably upon and strengthen the newspaper that publishes them. In speaking to his own people frankly and constructively, he prophetically shows them the way to a better life.

Wilbur Takes Last Swing

By Bill Buchan

My friend, Wilbur Amberson, packed his bags this week, waved goodbye with a quick smile, and set sail west to Pasadena, California. Why he made the move was a mystery to me until I got him in a corner and made him explain in detail.

Wilbur, You may remember, was one of these "extra-curricular kids" who made "A's" in politics, publications and other organizations, but produced low "C's" and "D's" in his actual class grades.

"But that isn't the main reason I'm leaving," Wilbur said. "I just think it's time for a change of scene. I've gotten into a rut here, lost interest in classes and have just been loafing around. Soooo, for the benefit of myself and the University, I'm heading for new territory."

"In the middle of the quarter?" I insisted. "That's foolish. You've got only ten days of school left. Take your exams, then leave if you must."

Amberson wasn't to be persuaded. "My mind is made up," he stated decisively. "I've got the idea of going. I've arrranged a nice set-up out there. Later, if I decide that I need to finish school, I'll enter some smaller college in California. For the time being, though, it's going to be work, work work."

"And since I'm going," he added, "I might as well get in a few farewell punches. Personally, I think the political scene on campus smells to high heaven. The boys in all three parties have either to straighten up and fly right or student government is headed straight into the gutter."

I'd never heard him speak of our local political scene in such degrading terms, so I asked for more. "What do you mean, good buddy?"

"Well," he continued, "Take the Student party. They sit up and scream and rant and rave about what is or is not right here and yet a close glance at their inner circle and you'll find the biggest wide-open split they've ever had."

"There's another purge brewing there, even bigger than the one that gave birth to the Campus (we can always be last) party. And the ironical part about it is that the same man is responsible this time."

"However," he went on, "they still have the opportunity of a life time to come out on top here. A little neat organization and a little less idealistic dreaming and they're in for good."

"Now take the University party," he said, "they're in trouble and they know it. They came out all right in this election but barely. The biggest fight is yet to come. They've got a lot of new life, —fair life, at that—which may make them really a representative party. Some of the older leaders are withdrawing from action and that's good."

"About the Campus party? Well, it's nice to have a third party around for conversation and they sometimes double-endorse worthwhile candidates which is a little extra help to elect those persons. They'd be wise to merge with one of the other parties."

"Personally, as I said before, I think the leaders from Dedmond on down, are doing their job well. Jess' choise of Dortch Warriner for his attorney general is one of the best he's made to date. I still insist, Mackie or no Mackie, that Warriner is the best man for the presidency this spring. He'd make an excellent vice-president too, but the best man should be in the most responsible position."

"And my nomination for the most disappointing wheel on Campus? A little boy called Charlie Gibson. Criticism, I suppose, has persuaded him to stop his "Chollie's Follies." Charlie is a promising guy with great possibilities. He just cuts his own throat too often."

"My watch says it's time to go, Buchan, so I'm off for the wild and wooly west. You hang on here to what you have and if you have time, relay my opinions to the persons mentioned."

After the long attack on his own party, I was a little stunned and didn't quite realize that my good buddy was saying goodbye. But when he stood up and got his bags, I realized that he really meant to go through with it.

"It certainly has been," he said with a slight sad note in his voice. "I'm going to miss the hill and all the very, very serious problems that come up here. See ya, Buck."

And suddenly, my good friend of many long conversations was at the door, quick like Santa Claus, and with one last shout, "See ya at the Rose Bowl," he was gone.

You know, maybe Pasadena wouldn't be so bad after all.

Man Who Made Work Famous

By Wink Locklair

The name, Archibald Lee Manning Wiggins, Class of '13, has an impressive ring and dignity that almost immediately identifies its bearer as a man of distinction. And his recent appointment to the board chairmanship of both the Atlantic Coast Line and the Louisville and Nashville railroads, after tendering his resignation as Undersecretary of the Treasury, would seem to bear this out.

But Lee Wiggins's story, as told by J. P. McGee in the Reader's Digest, is the rise of an ambitious, hard-working Carolina student through the ranks of the Coker family interests in Hartsville, South Carolina, to department store and newspaper management and, eventually, to his fascination for banking which won for him a national reputation.

By pugnacious effort, he became vice-president of the Bank of Hartsville and director of the Trust company of South Carolina, both in 1920. Mr. Wiggins has always asserted that the small town bank is the backbone of private enterprise which he considers necessary for post war survival of business on its present basis. His knowledge of this field brought to him the presidency of the American Banker's association in 1943.

The years Mr. Wiggins spent in Chapel Hill - 1909 to 1913 - were remarkable in many ways. He was editor-in-chief of the Yackety Yack, an associate editor of The Tar Heel, and a member of the Golden Fleece and the Di society. In addition to these activities, he managed the University Press for two years, ran a boarding house, sold shoes, did some reporting for Durham papers and got his A.B. degree. Lee Wiggins really earned his keep after his freshman year, and graduated with $1,000 saved from his numerous enterprises. A note in the yearbook said that "ALM is the man who made work famous. Anybody who can do the things he has and still be about the best egg on campus is more than a freak or genius."

It's A Grand Flag

Editor:

I was quite amused at part of Kremlin stooge Bill "Robertsniski's" column of Tuesday in which he momentarily lays aside the hammer & sickle and begins to wave flamboyantly the American flag in denouncing the "barbarous institution of slavery." Yet in the country whose government he endeavors to defend there are 15 to 20 million people in physical bondage—and many millions more in virtual servitude—both mental and physical. Yes Willie, "the circumstances of the world are continually changing," but mighty slowly in some parts.

The part of Willie's literary effort which was not amusing was his impetuous denunciation of the Confederate flag. I don't intend to rehash and discuss the causes of the Civil War, but I would like to say this regarding that conflict. Hundreds of thousands of good Americans (on both sides) wept with sorrow when the stars and bars replaced the stars and stripes in the South. It was not easy for brothers to array themselves against each other in mortal combat. Both sides lost tens of thousands of brave and courageous men who profoundly believed their cause an honorable one. Both sides wept with joy when the fight was over and Americans were again united under one flag. The ramifications leading to that struggle were many and intricate. No thoughtful person is qualified to disparagingly judge one side in favor of the other.

Mr. Editor, the Confederate flag symbolizes the profundity and courageousness of conflicting American thought in a turbulent era gone by. It's a beautiful flag; and honorable one; and I'm proud of it, suh!

This Southerner now sincerely joins his fellow Americans in singing the grandest hymn of them all—"The Stars & Stripes forever."

Appeal for Safety

Editor:

This letter is not a gripe on our living-quarters (Quonset Huts) which aren't exactly the best on the campus, but rather a complaint on the haphazard manner the University has allowed the safety of us who reside here to go, apparently, unnoticed.

In this complaint I have two questions I would like to confront the responsible people with:

1. Are these oil heaters inspected and approved periodically?
2. Why aren't there any fire extinguishers placed in readily accessable locations?

If these heaters are inspected regularly we need to change inspectors, because no stove that should be condemned has been done so yet. A good stove will not flare up or explode, endangering the property of the University and of the students and endangering the lives of those who are quartered in the huts. It's HELL to sleep in a potential crematorium. These stoves are continuously catching fire. There have been numerous instances this falls. When these fires do break out there are no fire extinguishers to fight these flames. Sure I know there is plenty of water, but did you ever attempt to extinguish an oil blaze with water—carrying it in coke bottles?

I am appealing to the University and the responsible people in behalf of the occupants of the Quonset huts for some safety measures to be instituted immediately.

Rockets' Elroy Hirsch Claims Highest-Paid Water Boy Title

By Steve Snider

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—(UP)—Elroy (Crazy Legs) Hirsch, injured backfield star of the Chicago Rockets, probably is the highest paid waterboy in pro football . . . Victim of a concussion early in the season, Hirsch was declared out of action for the season but volunteered to help out where he could . . . He does most everything in the way of odd jobs—and with a smile.

President Avery Brundage of the American Olympic committee, reported ready to resign, nevertheless is looking forward to a trip to Rome in April to see what can be done about getting the 1956 Olympic games for Detroit.

Sight-seer — Dazzling Doak Walker of Southern Methodist finally got a good trip for himself when he won the Heisman Award and will come to New York to accept it . . . So far in his varsity seasons, SMU twice has been host in the Cotton bowl —right in his own home town of Dallas . . . Meanwhile, Texas, twice runnerup, got a loser's bonus of fancy trips to the Sugar bowl last year and to the Orange bowl this year.

Shrine Game Sellout

Sellout—Tickets for the East-West Shrine game at San Francisco went on sale in mid-summer and could have sold out almost twice over before the season ended . . . Three "unidentified" players will be added to the East squad after Saturday's games and the three undoubtedly will be Notre Dame's Frank Tripucka, John Panelli, and Leon Hart.

Height of something or other in this bowl business was an invitation to the Harbor bowl received by Navy—victim of eight straight defeats and a tie with Army.

The Brooklyn Dodgers, with a huge load of player talent, are looking for more baseball farm clubs at a time when many others are tightening up . . . Addition of a Hollywood agreement gave the bums three Triple-A clubs (St. Paul and Montreal are the others) but Branch Rickey insists he still needs more.

Change Helps

Dick Bartell, new coach of the Detroit Tigers, fell victim late in his career to a mysterious streak of wildness . . . When the Chicago Cubs got him in a deal with the New York Giants, Bartell suddenly found he couldn't make the throw from shortstop to first base without conking a half-dozen customers in the front boxes of the upper stands behind first base . . . When he was traded to the Tigers, his control returned and he never did find out what caused his trouble.

Tuss McLaughry of Dartmouth, who has been coaching a long time, recently reminded Andy Kerr that he played high school football against Kerr-coached teams 40 years ago . . . "And you looked a lot older then, Andy, than you do now." . . . Kerr, dropped from Colgate when he passed retirement age, is coaching at Lebanon Valley and both he and McLaughry are Bernie Bierman's assistant coaches for the East-West game.

Army Coach Explains Refusal Of Post Season Football Tilt

By Oscar Fraley

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(UP) — Stern with indignation, Army football Coach Earl (Red) Blaik vehemently denied today that he had "anything" to do with refusing a bowl bid—of which Army had three — because he feared a possible meeting with powerful Notre Dame.

Blaik, who has turned out three undefeated teams at Army within four years, insisted that he "never was much of a bowl man." and he disclosed that when he coached at Dartmouth he personally had turned thumbs down on a Rose bowl bid.

The Army coach was tight-lipped and grim-eyed as he refuted a New Orleans report that he had turned down a Sugar bowl bid after Secretary of the Army Kenneth Royal and top Academy officials had okayed the trip.

"On Nov. 9, Gen. (Maxwell D.) Taylor announced that we were not interested in post-season games," Blaik said. "Later Secretary Royal called and asked Taylor what was our stand. Gen. Taylor told him we were against such games and it was Taylor's decision—not Blaik's."

Must Pass Exams

"We are different from any other institution," the dark-haired coach added. "Our boys don't get to go home often. Christmas week is about the only time. Then, too, they have their written mid-year examinations in December — and it doesn't matter whether you play football or not if you fail them."

"Football still is incidental at West Point," he said. "And it should be. I believe the purpose of going to college is to get an education. These games extend the season but, more important, they might cause some cadet to flunk out of the Academy. It wouldn't be worth it if one boy failed."

Blaik made these statements as he appeared to accept the Lambert award for Army as the outstanding team in the East this season.

Next Year Tough

"But I don't think we'll be back to claim it next year," he grinned, fondling the huge silver and gold trophy. "Remember, we start with Penn State and Michigan."

He also defended the two-team system as "progressive" football and credited his coaching staff with much of this year's success. And then, asked who was the best player he had seen this season, the Army coach lauded Navy's Bill Hawkins, the fullback from Richmond, Va., who scored twice to give Navy a tie last Saturday.

Tar Heel Cagers Meet Guilford Tonight

Quakers to Field Top-Notch Quint For Woollen Tilt

By Larry Fox

Some more of the wrinkles in the Carolina basketball machine will get ironed out starting at 8 o'clock tonight when the Tar Heels play host to anorther North State conference foe, Guilford college, in Woollen gym.

Thursday night the local cagers opened the season by soundly thumping Lenoir Rhyne by a 68-51 count.

Coy Carson stole the show against the Bears by dropping in 28 points to pace both teams. Carson averaged over a point a minute; notching his 28 markers in 25 minutes of action.

Although the Tar Heels were in complete charge throughout the contest, they exhibited evidences of stage fright and were often guilty of pressing too hard.

Hugo Kappler, who played a fine defensive game in his first encounter for the Blue and White, was hampered a bit by "opening-game fever" as were many of the others.

It took the first string several minutes to get started and when Coach Tom Scott sent in his second quintet, he had the same problem. With more games under their belt, the Tar Heels should develop a smoother aggregation.

Coach Scott did credit the boys with playing a "scrappy, hustling game." He also stated that the cagers would have to improve their defense a bit.

The same lineup which opened against Lenoir Rhyne will start against the Quakers, but the second five is due to see extensive action as the Kansas mentor experiments with his lineup.

Carson and Kappler will open in the forward slots with Nemo Nearman at center and Dan Nyimicz and Rip Ryan at guard. Howard Deasy, Charlie Thorne, Red Bennett, John Tsantes, and Norm Mitchell will also do a lot of playing.

Frosh Cagers Meet Quaker Jayvee Five

Carolina's Tar Baby cagers, fresh from a convincing 76-53 win over Louisburg college in their season's opener, will be after victory number two when they meet the Guilford college junior varsity tonight at 6 o'clock in Woollen gym in a preliminary to the varsity's 8 o'clock with the baker hardwooders.

The frosh five had little trouble stopping the Louisburg five Thursday night, with forward Buddy Johnson and guard Johnny Bowersox leading the way.

Coach Jim Hamilton is expected to start the same quint that took the floor Thursday night: Harter and Johnson, forwards; Guyes, center; Reuning and Bowersox, guards.

Another Asheville Scoring Threat

COY CARSON, Tar Heel forward, proved that being from Asheville does wonders for a man when he tossed in 28 points in the season's opener Thursday night. Carson stands an even six feet.

Notre Dame-SC, 'Bama-Poly, Top Games of Football Finale

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(UP)—Notre Dame and Clemson were heavy favorites today to wind up the long football season tomorrow as members of a tight circle of perfect record teams.

Casualties were heavy among the potential giants during the 12-week season and only California and Michigan so far have finished their campaigns with neither a defeat nor a tie.

But the Irish of Notre Dame, unbeaten in 27 straight games, were favored by 20½ points to join them with a victory over Southern California. Clemson, last of the south's unbeaten elevens, was a prohibitive choice over cellar-dwelling Citadel in the Southern conference.

Although Notre Dame may be regarded as "upset proof" Coach Frank Leahy would have reason to fear the Trojans as a jinx, if nothing else. Notre Dame's last record winning streak, 26 without a defeat, was ended by a spectacular Southern California rally in 1931.

A scattering of other regular season games and several bowl games are coming up.

Vanderbilt, winner of seven straight since its slow start, was a 28-point favorite over Miami at Miami tonight and a renewal of the Alabama-Auburn rivalry after a lapse of 41 years tops the rest of the slim Saturday schedule. Alabama was favored by 13½ points.

Richmond plays at Rollins, New Mexico State plays Arizona State of Tempe and Utah State takes on San Diego State.

Florida Students Putting up Battle To Keep Ray Wolf

Gainsville, Fla., Dec. 3.—(UP)—The bulletin boards, classroom blackboards and walls of the University of Florida campus were scrawled with signs of "We Want Wolf" today in a fervent effort of students to retain Raymond (Bear) Wolf as head football coach.

And the State Board of Control which supervises Florida's colleges, was bombarded with petitions and letters demanding that Wolf's three-year contract, which expired at the close of the 1948 season be renewed.

There had been reports that the pudgy, genial Wolf would be dismissed and Wally Butts, present head coach at Georgia, was being sought as his successor.

Some 1,500 university students held a mass rally in front of the gymnasium yesterday and presented the popular coach with a wrist watch inscribed: "To Ray (Bear) Wolf. A great fellow. A Great Coach."

Petitions were posted conspicuously in dining halls, dormitories, fraternities and boarding houses throughout the school and by nightfall more than 4,500 signatures had been collected. Leaders of the drive hoped to have 9,000 names by today. The enrollment at Florida is approximately 10,000.

The petition accused a "very small group of alumni in one of our Northern cities" of attempting to oust Wolf.

Some People Will Never Learn; Justice Trails Walker Again

NEW YORK, Dec. 4—(UP)—Doak Walker, the handsome triple-threat halfback who led Southern Methodist to the Southwest conference championship, today was named football player of the year in a United Press poll of sports writers and broadcasters from every section of the nation.

Walker, a junior who still has another year of college eligibility, was picked by 101 of the 280 persons participating in the poll. He also was named back of the year, receiving 139 out of 294 votes cast in that poll.

The SMU runner, passer and kicker received two other major honors this week. On Tuesday, he was chosen for the Heisman Trophy, awarded annually to the nation's outstanding collegiate football player. On Wednesday, he was named on the United Press All-America team for the second successive season.

Choo Choo Trails

Charlie (Choo Choo) Justice of North Carolina was second but far behind Walker in both polls. The North Carolina star received 50 votes as back of the year, 37 as player of 1948.

Charles Bednarik, the Pennsylvania center, with 30 votes, and Stan Heath, Nevada's passing ace, with 22, followed Walker and Justice in the player of the year voting.

Others who received player of the year votes were Jack Mitchell, Oklahoma back, 11; Jack Jensen, California back, seven; Norman Van Brocklin, Oregon back, and Pete Elliott, Michigan back, six each; William Fischer, Notre Dame guard, Leon Hart, Notre Dame end, and Chuck Ortmann, Michigan back, five each.

Gil Stephenson, Army back, received four votes and Emil Sitko, Notre Dame back, and Art Murakowski, Northwestern back, got three each; while Alex Sarkisian, Northwestern center; Johnny Rauch, Georgia back; Frank Tripucka, Notre Dame back; Bobby Gage, Clemson back; Arnold Gallifa, Army back, Lynn Chandnois, Michigan State back and Dick Wilkins, Oregon end, got two each.

Jim Crow Case Appeals Will Be Heard Dec. 14

The appeals of four defendents, two white and two Negro men, twice found guilty of violating existing state laws regulating the seating of white and Negro passengers on common carriers, will be heard by the state Supreme court Dec. 14, Raleigh officials said yesterday.

The four men, Edgar Roodenko and Joseph A. Felmont, white and Andrew S. Johnson and Bayard Rustin, Negroes were arrested and removed from a bus in Chapel Hill on April 14, 1947.

Roodenko was sentenced to one month on the Orange county roads, but appealed and posted $100 bond; Felmont was also sentenced to the roads, but posted a $50 bond upon appeal; and Rustin, who was fined costs, appealed and posted $50 bond.

Roodenko, according to the record compiled by Adrian Newton, clerk of the state Supreme court, gave his address as New York city. The addresses of the other three defendants were not given.

According to the testimony of the two previous trials, the two Negroes, after boarding a bus at Chapel Hill took window seats on opposite sides near the front. Roodenko and Felmont then took aisle seats next to the Negroes. The white men refused to move when Chapel Hill officers arrived to arrest the two Negroes who had ignored the driver's request to take vacant seats at the rear of the bus.

Witnesses for the State at previous trials were Ned H. Leonard, driver of the bus; D. B. Roberts, C. E. Durham, and W. D. Blake, Chapel Hill policemen.

Bus Segregation Causes Shooting; Five Wounded

CLEVELAND, Tenn., Dec. 3.—(UP)—Three men and two women are recovering today from pistol wounds received when an argument whether a Negro should sit beside a white man on a bus ended in a gun fight.

The white man in the argument, Jack Bennett, of the nearby Calhoun community, received a flesh wound in the shoulder. The others wounded had not been involved in the argument.

Sheriff Bud Cash arrested both Bennett and James Phillips, the Negro, charged each with felonious assault, and set their bonds at $5,000 each. Phillips was not wounded.

Edward Thomas, of Cleveland, and D. L. Stanberry, of Charleston, were listed as being in a serious condition by Cleveland hospital attaches. Mrs. Grady Duggan and Mrs. J. M. Preasman, both of Charleston, were not believed to be seriously wounded.

The shooting occured late yesterday afternoon when the Charleston-bound bus was four miles North of Cleveland.

YMCA to Review Quarter's Work

A review of the accomplishments of the YMCA during the fall quarter will be presented at a Dutch supper Monday at 5:45 o'clock in the Baptist church.

All members of the Y are cordially invited to come as a step toward the more active participation of membership in the organization.

Charge for the supper will be approximately $1. Anyone planning to attend is requested to inform the Y Information office by noon today.

EAL Announces Express Flights To Florida Area

J. W. Godwin traffic and sales manager for Eastern Airlines, yesterday announced the beginning of the first four-engined express service between the Raleigh-Durham airport and Florida.

Flight 633 originates in Boston. It leaves the Raleigh-Durham airport at 8:05 each evening stops briefly at Jacksonville and Orlando, Fla., and arrives in Miami at 12:48 o'clock in the morning.

For the last two years there has been no express service to the Florida area from the Raleigh-Durham airport. The addition of the new 36 passenger planes to Florida is expected to be popular with winter vacationists this season.

Eastern Airlines has also added a new northbound flight. Flight no. leaves the Raleigh-Durham airport at 7:19 o'clock each afternoon, stops at Richmond and Washington, and terminates in New York. This flight originates in Jacksonville, Fla.

A total of 16 flights is now being operated by Eastern airlines into the Raleigh-Durham airport. These flights include four schedules with large four-engined 56-passenger planes.

Mumford Says World War III To End Planet

Architect Delivers Hill Hall Address

"The destruction started by the World War II will be finished all over the planet by the third world war," Lewis Mumford, internationally known architect and city planning critic, declared Friday night before an audience of about 200 in Hill hall.

Mumford is serving as visiting lecturer at the North Carolina State college School of Design.

Following his lecture on "Metropolitism versus Regionalism," Mumford expanded his "prediction" of another great world struggle, saying "There is not a possibility but rather a probability of a third world war if we do not exert heroic efforts to avoid war." He blamed this possibility on the world's present mode of living.

Defining metropolitism as an "attitude of mind," a name for forces that have been dominant in political economic life since the 16th century, Mumford startled his audience with the view that "metropolitan civilization . . . as a result of war, of bombing, is already in a visible state of disintegration. For example look at the bombed cities of the world, Berlin, London, Paris and Munich, to mention a few."

UVA Party Draws Capacity Crowd

A capacity crowd waded through the mud and rain Friday night to attend the University Veterans association Christmas party in the UVA club house.

The party began at 8 o'clock and lasted until 12. Everything except cigarettes was on the house, and John Eason and Allan Cannon did a land office business at the refreshment stand.

Late News Bulletins

Rocked by Quake

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 4.—(UP)—Southern California was rocked from Ventura to San Diego today by a stronger but far less damaging earthquake than the one which wrecked Long Beach in 1932.

Volcano Feared

Last Performance Playmaker Show Scheduled Tonight

The Carolina Playmakers' second major production of the season and 40th touring play, "School for Scandal," will be presented in the Playmaker theater for the last time tonight at 8:30.

"School for Scandal," directed by Harry Davis, has played to full houses on each of its originally scheduled performance nights, but John W. Parker said yesterday that tickets for tonight's extra performance would be available.

The play will be taken on tour by the Playmakers during January. The troupe will give performances in eight North Carolina towns and in Spartanburg, S. C. It is the first play to be toured by the Playmakers since 1941.

Costumes for the production are by Irene Smart, and the 18th century style settings were designed by Lynn Gault.

NSA Starts Drive To Educate DP's

The National Student association of the United States has begun a drive to enable displaced persons to attend American colleges next fall, association officers announced yesterday.

The NSA has been assigned the task of finding housing, part-time jobs for self-support, and scholarships or tuition-waivers for DP students by the president's commission for administration of public law 774.

The NSA sub-commission at Harvard university is in charge of the program and has begun sending instructions to the 265 NSA member colleges and universities on how to arrange for the DP's at their institutions.

The NSA committee on campus, composed of Don Shropshire, chairman, Barbara Lowe, Ben Jones, and Al Lowenstein, will meet in January to make plans to have some of the DP students admitted to the University.

Group Announces New Fellowships

The Henry Fellowships for 1949-50, grants of 600 pounds (about $2,400) for five American students to study in English universities, were announced yesterday by the American committee of management for the Charles and Julia Henry fund.

Open to both men and women, the fellowships provide for a year's study at either Oxford or Cambridge university. Recent college graduates and students graduating from American colleges this spring will receive preference in the selection.

Applications must be submitted on or before February 15, 1949 to the office of the secretary of Yale university or the secretary to the corporation of Harvard university.

Oldest Graduate Sends Ball Team Congratulations

Judge George McCorkle of Tuscaloosa, Ala., oldest living graduate of the University, took time out on the eve of his 91st birthday to write the Alumni office.

"I send my congratulations," he said, "to the University and her fine ball team and its capture of the honor of being disignated to meet an honorable opponent at the great Sugar bowl event in New Orleans the first of January next."

Judge McCorkle was 91 on Nov. 30, three days after announcement was made that North Carolina would meet the University of Oklahoma in the Sugar bowl classic. He is a native of Newton, but has made his home with a daughter in Alabama for the past two years.

He was graduated at Chapel Hill in 1887, 70 years ago, and for 25 years before his retirement in 1944 was an attorney with the Federal Trade commission in Washington.

At commencement last June Judge McCorkle was given rousing applause when presented at the annual alumni luncheon.

Point System Is Released By Dean Wells

Formula for Use In Final Grades

William Wells, dean of College of Arts and Sciences, yesterday released the formula for calculating averages as approved by the faculty at Friday's meeting.

To be eligible for graduation, a student enrolled before September, 1947, must secure a grade of C or higher on at least half of his work. A student first enrolled in or after September, 1947, must secure an overall average of C or better in order to graduate.

The formula for calculating averages is as follows: The grade of A on a full course, one of five or six quarter-hours yeilds 3 grade points; B, 2 points, C, 1 point; D's F's E's I's, and absences yield no points.

A student's average is computed by dividing the total number of courses taken at the University for a specified degree into the total number of grade points earned by those courses. If the result of this division is 1.0, the average is C; if it is 2.0, the average is B.

Transfer students on or after September, 1947 must make an overall average of "C" on the work taken here at the University. Grades secured before entering the University do not count toward the required C average.

Half courses of less than five quarter hours are pro-rated. These courses receive half the quality rating of a full course.

Wells said the change in requirements for graduation were long overdue. He said it was necessary to bring the University in line with other schools of equal standing and reputation.

RIL Week Planners To Meet With House

University students working on plans for Religion-in-Life week will meet this afternoon at 3:30 in the home of Chancellor R. B. House.

Reports will be given on the progress made by the various committees, and suggestions will be made for bettering the outline for the week.

Religion-in-Life week will be held Jan. 24-27.

Ervin Says Red Name-Calling Is Libel in Moot Court Case

By Sally Woodhull

Justice S. J. Ervin of the North Carolina Supreme court, sitting on the case of Hannah versus Chambers, yesterday handed down a decision to the effect that calling a man a Communist is libelous per se.

Jack Chambers, sophomore from Asheville, who had been charged with writing a letter naming William Hannah as, among other things, a Communist, was found guilty of libel and ordered to pay to Hannah $1500 compensatory damages by a jury of undergraduates and townspeople.

Staged by Phi Alpha Delta legal fraternity before a crowd of nearly 200 in Manning hall, the trial was run as nearly like an actual as possible. Neither attorneys, witnesses, nor general public knew that the facts of the case had been pre-arranged until after the trial when J. W. Alexander, justice of the fraternity, announced that each event leading to the charges had been planned.

A counter suit brought by Chambers against Hannah on charges of assault and battery resulting from an alleged altercation following Hannah's receipt of the letter was postponed to the next session of "court" because of insufficient time.

Jesse Sigmon and Norwood Robinson, attorneys for the plaintiff, submitted a letter to the editor of the Daily Tar Heel written by Chambers Oct. 25, which charged Hannah with being "a confirmen Communist . . . a professed atheist . . . a subversive worm which burrows in our midst" and with having no "moral code."

Although Chambers admitted having written the letter, his attorneys, J. A. Jones, Herbert Small and Maurice Braswell, attempted to prove that the letter could not have damaged the plaintiff, since it was never published in the Daily Tar Heel, and was read only by Jeeter Pritchett.

Red Armies Reported to Be Retreating In Battle Above Nanking, Shanghai

NANKING, China, Sunday, Dec. 5.—(UP)—Communist armies were reported falling back under heavy attack all along the Huai river front above threatened Nanking and Shanghai today, but the Reds claimed to have encircled 104,000 Nationalist troops farther north.

Nanking's new military commander, meantime, took drastic steps to halt the flight of essential officials from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's imperilled capital. The cabinet supported him by ordering a 400 per cent increase in railway fares for unofficial refugees.

A national defense ministry communique said 10 Communist columns—roughly 100,000 men—were withdrawing northwestward from the rail hub of Pengpu, 100 miles north of Nanking, under heavy pressure from reinforced Nationalist forces.

The communique also confirmed that Nationalist forces "voluntarily abandoned the government base of Suchow, 200 miles north of Nanking Friday and are fighting their way south, slashing into the rear of Red forces on the Huai river front.

The Communist radio in north Shensi claimed Communist armies have trapped 104,000 Nationalist troops under Gen. Huang Wei in a tightening ring southeast of Suchow.

Glee Club Concert Scheduled Tonight

Tonight's Christmas concert of the combined Men's and Women's Glee clubs was reported sold out yesterday, as students and townspeople continued to flock to the Hill hall box office for tickets to the Tuesday night performance.

PAUL YOUNG

The combined clubs, under the direction of Paul Young, are climaxing a full quarter's practice today in their fifth annual Christmas concert. To add to their traditional program the clubs will sing a group of ever-popular carols chosen from the many requested in previous seasons.

The program, scheduled for 8:30 tonight, will lead off with the Women's Glee club singing the "Stabat Mater" of Pergolesi. The men's group will follow with a set of four short religious works appropriate to the Christmas season. Palestrina's "Credo" from the "Pope Marcellus Mass," sung by the combined clubs, will round out the first half of the program.

After the intermission, the clubs will sing eight popular carols. The program will conclude with a group of six carols of foreign lands, in which Barbara Young, soprano, Carl Perry, tenor, and baritones John von Canon and Milton Bliss will be featured as soloists.

Hill Hall Claims Christmas Tree Largest in Town

By Jim Dickinson

The gigantic Christmas tree which now enhances the lobby of Hill hall will soon hold on its branches some 450 ornaments bearing names of members of the Men's and Women's Glee Clubs for 1948-49.

Approximately 300 of the names belong to students of this year's glee clubs who tonight and Tuesday will give their annual Christmas concert under the direction of the music department. Some 150 names from last year's glee clubs were placed on the tree as "starters," with names of this year's group being added daily.

The huge cedar tree stands directly in the center of the Hill hall lobby and towers some 30 feet through the circualr space which leads to the sky-light of the second story. The tree has a diameter of about 15 feet at the base.

Members of the music department claim that theirs is the "largest Christmas tree in Chapel Hill," besides serving as a cradle for the ornamented signatures of a host of altos, tenors, sopranos, and basses.

Credit for bringing the tree into captivity goes to two tenors of the Men's Glee club. Bob Hurley and Lanier Davis, who went deep into the forest, cut down the mammoth cedar, and dragged it back to the campus. Then eight men from the University buildings department built a base for the tree and installed it in Hill hall.

Glee club member's names have been inscribed on ornamented tricycles, deer, dolls, bells and other colorful figures. These hang from the tree's branches and supplement the lighting system of 25 strings of bulbs.

The department plans to have a yearly departmental Christmas tree, exhibiting the names of old members of the Men's and Women's Glee clubs.

SC Trojans Mar Record of Irish With 14-14 Tie

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 4.—(UP)—As their immortal predecessors of 1931 had done before them Southern California's Trojans turned Notre Dame's football supermen into mere mortals today, putting on a last period two-touchdown rally to score a magnificent 14 to 14 tie, ending the longest winning streak in Irish history at 21 games.

And though victory was not theirs—it might have been but for the indomitable spirit of the Irish, who roared back to score a final tying touchdown in the last minute of the ball game after Southern California had gone ahead, 14 to 7 with just two minutes to go.

Even though the Irish lost much of their lustre by failing to cope with the 21-point Southern California underdogs as they had all of the other opponents on their schedule for more than two seasons, they proved conclusively that the legendary spirit of Notre Dame is no small factor.

For when they faced defeat in that last fateful moment, they had the wherewithal to salvage at least a tie.

Clemson Cops Crown, Perfect Grid Season

CHARLESTON, S. C., Dec. 4.—(UP)—Clemson's Gator-bowling Tigers wrapped up their first perfect season in 48 years today with a 20 to 0 rout of little Citadel and a skittering halfback named Ray Mathews engineered a personal coup.

Mathews scored every touchdown to run his season's total to 78 points, shading North Carolina's Charlie Justice as Southern conference scoring champion.

The victory gave Clemson the Southern conference title. Had the Tigers lost, North Carolina—with only a tie marring the record—would have claimed the crown.

Shrine Bowl Stars Fight to Deadlock

CHARLOTTE, Dec. 4.—(UP)—Bogged on the ground by a soggy Memorial stadium turf, high school all-stars from North and South Carolina battled to a 7 to 7 tie today in the 12th annual Shrine bowl game.

Summer Program Being Expanded Between Nations

British universities, in cooperation with the Institute of International Education, New York, and the British council, are expanding their program of summer schools for overseas students in 1949.

Nine universities are arranging schools for the next year, and as they have for the past two years the schools will all run from July 10 to Aug. 20. The courses will range over a wide field covering studies of English social life. English literature, democratic government in Britain, British industrial development, town planning, modern European civilization and ancient Greece. Held in various parts of England and Scotland, the schools will afford opportunities for American students to see much of Britain.

Courses are intended primarily for graduates and teachers who have made previous study in the subjects offered, but in some cases undergraduates in their junior or senior years, with good academic records, will be able to attend.

Durham Club Plans Meeting Tomorrow

The Durham-Carolina club will meet tomorrow evening at 7:30 in Gerrard hall to elect officers for the coming year.

Plans for the Durham Christmas dance will also be made. Club spokesmen said all students from the Durham area were urged to attend the meeting.

YWCA Campus Affairs Group To Discuss Coed Government

The Campus Affairs committee of the YWCA will discuss "Women's Government Association versus Integrated Student Government" tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Y. Anne Wells, chairman, announced yesterday.

The committee will discuss the position of the coed in student government and how coeds can cooperate in student government.

Twig Branch, Fran Angas, Helen Boulding, Edie Knight, and Mrs. M. H. Stacy, former dean of women, will lead Monday's discussion. Julie Compton, in charge of compiling questionnaires on student government in other State universities, and Page Dees, in charge of programs, will be presented as co-chairman of the group for the winter quarter.

Other meetings at the same time Monday afternoon include a number of talks and planning meetings. Emily Baker, chairman of the public affairs committee, announces a talk by Sam McGill on China. Chairman Faith Adams of the careers committee will open discussion on the coed party. And the social service committee, headed by Lil Hotard, will make plans for two Christmas parties, one for the Negro community center in Carrboro and the other for children in the ballet class.

The Human Relations committee will adjourn to Damacus school on Wednesday to teach handcraft to the school children. The committee is also planning a Christmas party for school children in conjunction with University fraternities and sororities. Each fraternity or sorority member will be asked to contribute toys, candy, clothes, or the equivalent in money.

Council Plans To Be Formed At Meet Today

Group To Work For All Schools

By Sam McKeel

Student representatives from the three branches of the Greater University will meet here today to discuss plans for the Greater University Student council.

With two sessions behind them, the group is striving to make plans for meeting with state representatives during the Christmas holidays. These meetings would be on an individual basis with all students contacting as many representatives as possible.

The council under proposal would work for the benefit of all schools involved. Meeting three times a year, it would try to iron out mutual difficulties and discuss different phases of student government.

Jess Dedmond, president of the student body, explained yesterday that such a council might to some extent standardize student government proceedings and enhance the social life of the University, North Carolina State college, and Woman's college.

The idea for the council arose from a meeting with State college representatives in an attempt to stamp out pre-game vandalism.

Comptroller W. D. Carmichael will talk to the group on the feasibility of such a plan.

Present at the meeting will be the presidents of the three student bodies, Dedmond, Martha Fowler of W.C., and Fred Kendall of State.

Mountain Gifts Slated for Sale

Handwoven linens, hand made jewelry, pottery, and other articles of native craft from the Smoky Mountains will be on sale Tuesday at the annual Arrowcraft sale at the Pi Beta Phi house, 109 Hillsboro street.

Benefiting the Pi Beta Phi settlement school at Gatlinburg, Tenn., the sale is held each year under the direction of the Alumnae club. Mrs. W. E. Caldwell is in charge of the sale for the alumnae, with the assistance of Molly Blackburn from the chapter.

The settlement school, first altruistic project undertaken by any national fraternity or sorority, was founded in 1912, and includes a fully staffed school through high school in addition to craft workshops, stores, and an inn.

The sale will be conducted at the local chapter house from 9:30 to 5:30, and is designed to provide an opportunity for Christmas shopping. In addition to purchases of the articles on display, orders will be taken for future delivery.

Students Offered Travel Aid Abroad

Faculty members and students planning to travel abroad to study in foreign countries can receive travel aid and information from the newly-established Educational Travel division of the American Express company.

The new travel division is headed by Dr. B. W. Van Riper, scholar and world-traveler, and is designed to aid people traveling abroad each year for foreign study. Advice on scholastic requirements, fees, academic calenders, dormitory space, and other questions can be answered by the Travel division.

The American Express company has prepared a booklet entitled "To Study Abroad," which may be obtained at any office of the company.

Testing Service Is Ready

Dear Rameses:

Your open letter to Dean Spruill interested me, and I would like the privilege of commenting on your idea of compulsory tests for all students in their sophomore year.

I am anxious to answer your letter because it gives me an opportunity to tell you and other members of our student body about vocational guidance opportunities which are available for all students here at the University. One of the functions of the University Testing Service is academic and vocational planning for students based on series of interviews and tests. Our vocational advisers are professionally trained men, and we are equipped to administer and interpret some 300 tests in theh fields of interest, personality, achievement, general ability, and specific aptitudes. We are anxious to work iwth all students, and up to the present time our staff of twelve has been able to take care of those students who have requested this service. We operate in Peabody building Monday through Friday continuously from 8:30 until 4:30 o'clock and until 12:00 o'clock on Saturdays.

In commenting on your idea as to a compulsory testing program for the sophomores I would like to say that until now all of our students have come to us on a voluntary basis, and we believe advisement is much more effective when conducted on that basis. If, however, the students and the administration of General College wish to give a test to all sophomores, the University Testing Service will be glad to cooperate in this project.

I would suggest a general interest test which could be given in a regular class period. These tests could be scored and returned to the students for study. If the student then wished to continue a study of his interests, personality, general ability, and aptitudes in regard to his academic major and eventual occupation, he could request vocational advisement from our organization.

We believe that after some group testing in the field of general ability (the University administers the American Council on Education on Psychological Examination to all new students during freshman week) and interest, additional testing for the correlation of personality and specific aptitudes and occupations should be done on an individual basis. We prefer to construct batteries of tests for students only after personal interviews.

In closing, let me point out that the General College in the past has given the Cooperative Sophomore Testing Program which included tests in English, general culture, and contemporary affairs. The results came to the advisers late in the sophomore year, and the large number of students for each adviser made any series of conference impossible. It was primarily for these reasons that the former Sophomore Testing program was discontinued.

And, Rameses, for your January 1st information, we have a "Guess Who" test.

W. D. Perry, Director
University Testing Service
103 Peabody Hall

Advice Still Applicable

'Nothing is more essential than that permanent, inveterate antipathies against particular nations and passionate attachments for others should be excluded, and that in place of them, just and amicable feelings toward all should be cultivated. The nation which indulges toward another a habitual hatred or a habitual fondness is in some degree a slave. It is a slave to its animosity or to its affection, either of which is sufficient to lead it astray from its duty and its interest. Antipathy in one nation against another disposes each more readily to offer insult and injury, to lay hold of slight causes of umbrage and to be haughty and intractable when accidental or trifling occasions of dispute occur. Hence frequent collisions; obstinate, envenomed and bloody contests. Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence, the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake, since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of republican government. But that jealousy, to be useful, must be impartial."

Odds And Ends

TAKE TEN. If everyone adopts Chuck Lineberry's scheme for living, benzedrine will be forced to take a back seat, for Chuck is certain his idea will work. What he proposes is that everyone stay awake all the time instead of sleeping seven or eight hours per night, replacing the "lost forty" with a ten minute rest period every hour. Sounds good, but what happens if a person has classes at ten and eleven, eh?

ONE MORE CHANCE. Just a reminder to you readers who have not yet seen the stage success "School for Scandal" at the Playmakers theater: there is an additional show tonight at 8:30. Be sure to see it, for tis Shawly a hit.

LOOKUT the NAMES! We heard a rumor that a few of the alumni of Belmont Abbey had a fine time at their Alma Mater's annual Christmas formal, so we checked, and look: Steve Neely, Joe Fesler, George Freeman and "Wink" Locklair were among the faithful; plus a few PiKA's that went along: Sam Craver, Bill Allison, John Wolhar, Bill Garrison, Jim Cloniger, Rex Kennedy and Bob Gaines. Certainly looks like the Russ Carlyle dance was a whoopin' big success.

SCOOP! No doubt you all have read the article in Thursday's DTH about the robbery at the K house. What you don't know is who took the seventy-odd dollars—but we do. Through shrewd deduction and aid fro man inside source we narrowed the field down until the fickle finger of suspicion pointed at just one man. He is the man who lifted a typewriter from A dorm this fall, the scoundrel rooming between two of his brother KA's who were enlightened of their money whilst he went unscathed. Shades of stolen typewriters, we accuse—Charlie Gibson.

HOW MANY? Apparently the party that sent the following wire to one of our beloved brother-students doesn't realize the sugar rationing program under way: "If you want to attend the Sugar Bowl game get six tickets. Two for you, two for us and two for cousins. . ."

And one for the little boy who lives in the lane? ? ? ?

HOW COULD SHE. "She" being the WC collegette importer by one "Scoop" Campbell. Scoop's connections clicked over the Duke weekend and said import was able to dine with the Charlie Justices before the game, sit with Mrs. Justice and Dr. Frank during the game way up in the press box, and finally double-date with Kay Kyser and Georgia that night. After all was said and done and someone asked her what the final score was, she stammered and gave up. She couldn't remember. . .

HOOKED HER FISH. Readers will remember Catherine Lea Holt of Burlington, class of '48, a Tri-Delt and May queen, and James L. McCormick of Sanford, a commerce grad. They were married recently, according to the society pages. Well, it happens to the fleetest of us, here's our best to the bride and the fish-that-didn't-get-away.

UNDIES!

Quick NOTES. A flash—word just came in from Spttzzburg, a shmoo has confessed stealing the K A's seven eagles. Our humblest apologies, Cholly, 'twas our folly. . . Remember, seventeen more shopping days till Christmas, but only FIVE more school daze till "X" day. . .Keep you eyes open for a very interesting issue of a new "Y" mag, due out early this week. . . A parting blow: A gentleman's word is his bond, but his written word—to a lady—can be his bondage.

FROM OUR SIDE. "Americanism is that quality of mind and heart that causes a citizen to fight for the right of another man to be free." Does that quote "pain" you, Commies?

What To Do About Spain?

By Marvin Nathan

Tonight at 8 o'clock in the Grail Room of Graham Memorial, members of the Carolina Political Union and guests will endeavor to study the present domestic and international problems of Spain. One of the major reasons for her prevailing adverse conditions is the long term domination by incapable monarchies and militarists of the last 150 years. Oppressed by its rulers, the unsatisfied and poverty stricken peasantry attempted to rise to power via revolutions.

The major causes for the revolutions during the 19th century were: (1) A rebellious peasantry made poor by the unequal agrarian structure; (2) expression by the revolutionists against the rich and corrupt church which controlled education; (3) an inefficient army; (4) a privileged aristocracy.

These circumstances reached a peak in the elections of February, 1936, when the Popular Front party won a majority of the seats in Parliament. The Popular Front represented the working class and revolutionary forces. Consequently, a group of Spanish militarists, backed by the wealthy upper classes, revolted against the government on July 17, 1936.

Although many battles were won and lost by both sides, neither force was prepared to wage a decisive war. From 1938 to the end of the war, the Soviet Union constantly shipped food and supplies to the Loyalists. This greatly needed aid helped the Loyalists to stay in the fight, but it could not compare with the tremendous quantities of men, food, and supplies given by Germany and Italy to the Rebels. Intervention by Hitler and Mussolini, plus the absolute neutrality of the European democracies, resulted in the overthrow of the government by the armies of General Franco.

Since Franco has been dictator of Spain, the country has seen many conditions worse than those before the revolution. She has been suffering from very low production in all industries, acute food shortages, fast rising prices along with low wages and a widespread black market.

On the international front, Franco has displayed some very unwise policies. When the Axis powers appeared to be sweeping to victory in the early stages of World War II, Franco commended Hitler and stressed the importance of an Axis victory. Nevertheless, the Allies won, at which time Franco declared Spain to be a peace loving nation under the guidance of a democratic constitution. Contrary to this statement, he has followed all roads leading to a stronger Fascistic state.

An immediate problem facing Spain is her relationship to the numerous disputes between the US and Russia. Meanwhile, the question arising with the US statesmen is whether it is necessary to consider Spain as a friendly western nation and whether the US should establish friendly relationships with Spain.

Spain's international problems soared to drastic heights when she was excluded from the United Nations in February, 1946. The General Assembly passed a resolution requesting all countries to withdraw their ambassadors from Spain until Franco attempts to place his country on democratic standards. This action was taken by the General Assembly after it received a report from the commission it appointed to scrutinze Spain. Certain unfavorable items appeared in the report, such as the fact that all political parties are outlawed except the Falange Espanol and that Spain is harboring Nazi refugees. The report also stated that Spain has not held an election since Franco became dictator ten years ago.

Thus it can be concluded that Spain still remains in a very fluctuating state. Spain is in great need of billions of dollars to buy food, establish and improve her industries, rebuild devasted areas, set up new and better schools, sanitation systems and housing projects. Aside from these serious home problems, in order for Spain to regain a position as a respected nation, she will have to revise her attitudes and policies, either by a peaceful or a violent revolution.

Playmakers Review

'Scandal' Fails To Click

By Tom Kerr

Richard Sheridan's "The School for Scandal" a play that would require a perfect production to come off at all received hardly that in the Playmaker's current presentation.

Worthy of any real note at all were the sets by Lynn Gault and costumes by Irene Smart. Mr. Gault's sets were excellent, though from a technical side it seemed the actors had a little trouble with the draperies on their entrances and exits. The costumes, colorfully and tastefully done by Miss Smart were enhanced by the beautiful wigs, handled by Suzanne Davis.

But no production can stand on only its sets and costumes. Unfortunately the director, Harry Davis missed or was unable to convey to his actors the facility and ease necessary to carry off a play so full of repartee. With few exceptions the cues were caught a split-second too late to make the witty lines seen at all clever. A period piece such as this demands a good deal of affectation to sustain the cleverness. The players just passed off their witicisms with complete lack of any delight in their own creations. The result was a mass of dialogue from which the audience was forced to catch what bits of wit it could.

Though the comedy of words fell through miserably, two of the characters brought laughs, and eventually the situation became a laughable farce. Lynn Gault as Sir Peter was quite convincing in the part of a rather aged batchelor recently married to a socially ambitious young wife. And Estelle Ritche played Mrs. Candour, one of the leading gossipers, with a real punch. Of the rest of the cast it might be said that the potential was there, but little or none of it was realized.

After two and one half hours the curtain finally fell, on some confusing moral regenerations and chaotic poetic justice to leave a good many laughing, at least one couple yawning, and everyone seemingly ready to get out even into the rain.

No Test of Virtue

Editor:

The gentelmen of the right wing of the AVC are now preening themselves the glory of their recent "victory" over the "Commie" They should realize that chasing Communists in this day of reaction is about as great a test of courage and virtue as denouncing Jews in Nazi Germany. They should also realize the effects of Red-baiting on liberal organizations.

AVC has now succumbed to a mental disease which is destroying effective progressive action in America and is thereby aiding reaction which AVC claims to oppose. The test of true liberalism in our day has been the attitude toward the Soviet Union and socialism. Our government, during the reactionary 20', refused to recognize Russia; under Roosevelt and the liberalism and the 30' Russia was recognibed and there was cooperation between our two countries. Now, in a period of revived reaction, Russia is again being called a menace to peace, and liberal organizations are hunting Communists in their midst. A labor union indulging in this sport of reactionaries is not much threat to management; an organization which spends all its time fighting the Red issue is likewise no effective force for progressivism.

Hence, AVC stands in a fair way to neutralize itself as a progressive, forward-moving, organization, and eventually to wither away as do all futile debating societies. Veterans are not interested in debates; they want houses, low prices, social security, and peace. Any group that works actively for those things is bound to find itself allied with Communists, and if it wrinkles its delicate nose in disgust every time anybody says "Red," it will soon find itself to complete ineffectiveness. This eventuality is, of course, exactly what the reactionaries want, and anybody who helps bring it about is their ally.

Seeking Pen Pals

Editor:

I came across your interesting and famous journal address in a certain booklet, and as such, I seize the opportunity to write you these few lines in order to give me a space for publication.

First of all, I am a Nigerian youth of 5 feet 6½ inches tall 135 pounds in weight, and with black hair, and hazel eyes too.

My main reason of writing to you, and is that all the while I was looking for pen pals from United States of America, and I have not even had a single one, by that I hope you should have the kindnes of publishing my name and address for pen pals.

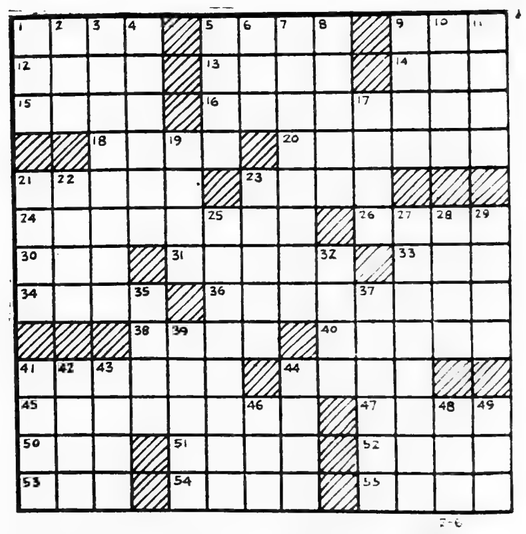
I never knew much about America but I always hear it from many people every now and then.

These are my chief hobbies: swimming, fishing, hunting, and with some others. I again have an interest in exchanging things of my country with those of United States and I also collect U S paper money and with coins.

Editor, if you will do this obligation for me, and I don't know how I shall thank you. Any how, may God help you in your busines and you and your staffs shall keep longer, and your press establishment shall keep on improving more and more in P. T. O. every day life. Amen.

I do hope you shall kindly publish this my article in your interesting and famous journal.

With many thanks for early attention and I wish you and your staff good lucks.



Hoping to receive many mails from your country (North Carolina.)

Hoping to close for now, and be[illegible] of my request.

MONOGRAM MUSINGS

By Bill Pritchard

Trophy Cases at Last

It seems that at long last the greatly-neglected trophies of the University will be encased, according to a report from a Monogram club committee headed by Jack Moody, and including Dick Taylor, and Laddie Terrell. These fellows have been working on the problem of suitable means and places for displaying said trophies for the better part of this term and have formulated plans, which should take shape in the not-too-distant future.

There are over one hundred athletic trophies and plaques in storage in the gym, at present. All they have been doing for several years is gathering dust. However, as soon as the cases can be made and obtained they will be put out for public display in the lobby of the gym and in the Monogram club.

Mr. Carl Boetcher, the brilliant artist who is responsible for the beautiful carvings which adorn the Monogram club at present, is assisting the committee with the design and construction of the cases. This within itself is assurance of an excellent job.

Tentative plans call for a case to be modeled after the Old Well-glassed in, of course—to be placed in the middle of the lobby in Woollen gym. This would constitute an appropriate and decorative way of displaying some of the finer and more representative trophies of the school for the general public. The overflow will be taken care of by other cases placed in the Clubhouse.

Ih is a fine undertaking and should be completed as soon as possible.

Alumni Dinner Is Success

The Alumni Buffet Dinner, which the Monogram club held for all returning monogram alumni and friends on the Duke weekend, went off in an overwhelming manner. Over 475 plates were served, and nearly 300 old letter-winners signed the register. It was a much larger crowd than anticipated, but Mr. Frank West and his dining room staff handled the affair in fine style and no one went away hungry.

All sports were represented on the register with some dating as far back as the 1898 football team. Quite a few notables were present such as Kay Kyser and his beautiful wife, R. Mayne Albright, Mr. Billy Carmichael, Jr., Congressman G. A. Barden, and many others.

A large vote of thanks goes to Gus Johnston and all of the club members who helped to make the occasion possible, and to Mr. West, his staff and the large number of others who assisted in the affair. Everyone present seemed to agree on two points: 1) the dinner was one of the best ideas ever put forward by the club and should become an annual event, and 2) Carolina would beat Duke. It is the opinion of this column that both ideas should be definitely established as annual occurences. Why not?

Organizational Meeting

The newly-formed Board of Governors for the Monogram clubhouse will hold it's organizational meeting in the dining room of the club tonight. The meeting will feature a supper for the board members beginning at 6:30, to be followed by the initial conference.

As stated previously, the board will form all policies and rules concerning the clubhouse, and will be, in effect, the governing body thereof. Any requests or affairs concerning the clubhouse, proper, not the Monogram club, will have to be approved by this board.

After many delays and cancellations, the club will definitely show the Maryland and Virginia movies next Tuesday night in Memorial Hall. The Maryland game will be shown first, in the doublefeature billing, and will start promptly at 7:30. The entire show should last about an hour and a half and will be well worth the admission fee of $.25, again being charged for the benefit of the very worthy polio fund.

Also, as previously announced, Art Weiner will be on hand to narrate the movies and add witty dialogue.

INTRAMURAL SUMMARY

The Intramural department wishes to complete the wrestling tournament by Thursday, the 9th of December and to do this it will be necessary to hold the following matches tomorrow at 3:00. However, if it is impossible for the individual to wrestle at this hour, he is required to call the Intramural office at F-3321 before 1:00 on Monday.

Basketballers Defeat Guilford, 52-32

Meet Elon Here Monday Evening In Third Outing

By Buddy Vaden

Coach Tom Scott's Tar Heel cagers gained victory number two last night at the expense of Guilford College, 52-32, in a rough and tumble affair in Woollen gym. Tar Heel forward Coy Carson again led the scoring parade with 19 points.

Tomorrow night the Tar Heels will face Elon College on the Woollen gym floor. Tipoff time is 8 o'clock.

Guilford was the first to score in last night's contest. Rick Ferrell started the ball rolling with a foul shot after two minutes had elapsed. But the Quakers' lead was short lived, for Nemo Nearman sank one for the Tar Heels from the floor and from that point Carolina stayed ahead with a sizable lead.

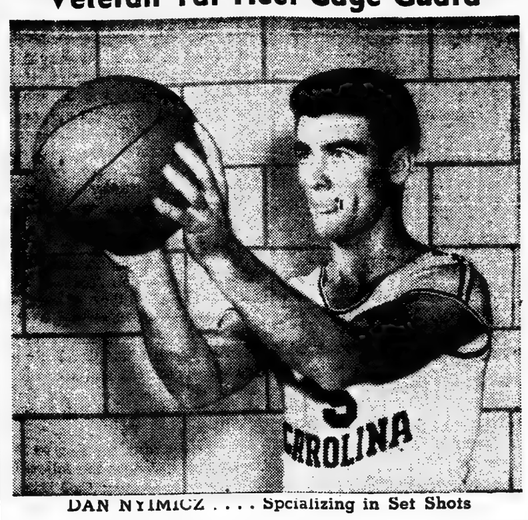
The Quakers never seriously threatened the Tar Heels who managed to maintain at least a ten point lead throughout the game. At halftime Carolina was leading, 24-14 and managed to increase the lead to 20 points before the final gun.

Carson was the standout for Carolina. His 19 points were good for top scoring honors and his excellent ball handling and rebound work was a major factor in presenting Carolina with the win. Rip Ryan, guard, put on another flashy show of ball handling passing the ball over, around and under the Quaker defenses.

A free throw and a field goal in the opening minutes of the second half put Guilford in reaching distance of the lead, but successive shots by Nyimicz, two by Carson, and Nearman boosted the Carolina lead to 18 points. With fifteen seconds left in the game Charlie Thorne added a field goal to give the Tar Heels a 20 point victory margin.

The summary:

Carolina		Guilford
Carson (19)	F	Hall
Kappler (5)	F	Mann
Nearman (7)	C	Venable (5)
Ryan (4)	G	Ferrell (3)
Nyimicz (7)	G	Ralls (6)



Substitutions: Carolina—Tsantes (2), Mitchell (2), Bennett (2), Thorne (4), Deasy, Wells. Guilford—Johns (5), Chatham (11), Goertner, Lawhorn, Coward, Hanzard (2). Halftime Score: UNC 24, Guilford 14.

Alabama Crushes Auburn by 55-0

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 4.—(UP)—Wild man Eddie Salem and a rampaging Alabama Crimson Tide made up for every year—and then some—of the 41-year competitive lapse with Auburn today by whitewashing the helpless cross-state Tigers 55-0.

More than 46,000 fans watched the game, a far carry from the last one in 1907 when Alabama befuddled the Auburn defense with a revolutionary "varsity two-step" to gain a 6-6 tie.

Freshman Cagers Gain Victory Over Quaker Jayvees, 63-39

by Lew Chapman

The potent Freshman basketball squad launched proceedings yesterday evening at Woollen gym on a happy note as they treated a small crowd to a pleasing brand of ball in overpowering a hapless Guilford junior varsity team, 63-39 in a preliminary to the varsity clash.

It was the second runaway triumph in as many starts for the Tar Babies who are guided by Jim Hamilton, and prowess the yearlings displayed over their opponents last night may be indicative of a successful season for the Carolina frosh.

Try as they may, Guilford was never in the contest. John Bowersox, the Tar Babies slender guard, connected on several sets at the outset and then Carolina never stopped in lengthening their margin.

Bowersox and his unerring long shots paced the Tar Babies to a comfortable 35-17 halftime lead and following the intermission Buddy Johnson, a forward with a great future, assumed the scoring role to notch 12 points in a brilliant second half scoring spree.

Johnson emerged with 20 well earned points and was followed by Bowersox with 14 credits.

The lineups:

Carolina	Pos	Guilford JV
Harter (9)	F	(4) Ringler
Johnson (20)	F	(5) Simmons
Guyes (5)	C	(2) Tyson
Crowder (5)	G	(3) Mauitsby
Bowersox (14)	G	(2) Osteen

Substitutions: Carolina—Eckert (4), Cheek, Pascal (2), Hill, Reuning (2), Gradman, Slemp. Guilford—Covington (4), Atwood (2), Wright (3), Rebman (1), Ingram (8), Whitcomb.

Early Track Practice Keeps Fetzer Field Busy

Fetzer field, and its track, too, were cluttered up with hustling athletes this fall. While coach Marvin Allen's Southern conference shinbusting champs got the most immediate publicity for their exertions, track Coach Dale Ranson expects the effort which his unheralded charges expended on the cinder oval during the past few months to pay off in headlines next spring when his defending loop champs open the defense of their title.

Four intrasquad meets highlighted this pre-season practice session. Although the squad was hampered by rugged participation—only 22 of 74 listed members took part in the four events—Coach Ranson was able to uncover several outstanding freshmen prospects and also to find out what some of the returnees could do in the events that they hadn't tried before.

According to Ranson, the turnouts were held down by participation in other sports, labs, and afternoon classes.

Among the men singled out by Ranson for their outstanding performances was freshman Frank Scott, an outstanding performer in the 100 and 220 yards dashes, the high and broad jumps, the pole vault, and the low hurdles.

Other pace setters in the various events included high jumpers Gil Joyner, Bill Byatt, Jack Moody. Fred Sanders; broad jumpers Clarence Terrell, Moody. Clarence McLain; shot putters George Verchick, Bob Seligman, Fred Ogden Bennett Perry Roscoe Hansen. Yelmers Bill Baldwin. George Harris. John Moseley. Bob Payne. Robert Kirk

Grid Practice

Practice for the New Year's day football game with Oklahoma in the Sugar bowl is scheduled to get underway tomorrow. Coach Carl Snaly's charges will practice this week, take next week off for exams, and resume on December 20. They will leave around the 22nd for Louisana training quarters.

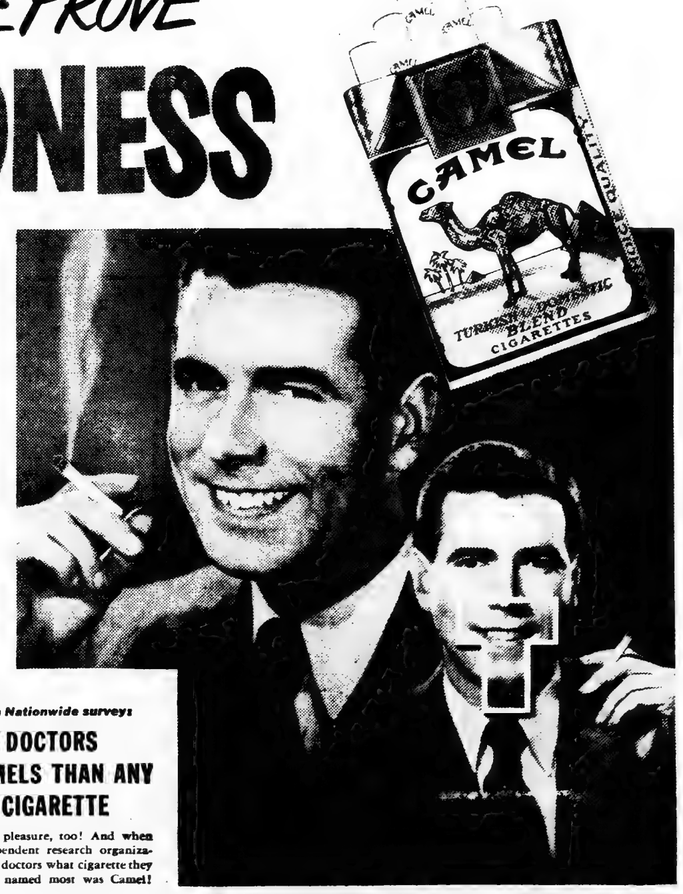
Make the Camel 30-Day Test—PROVE



CAMEL MILDNESS IN YOUR "T-ZONE"!

SMOKE Camels for 30 days . . . it's revealing – and it's fun to learn for yourself.

Let YOUR OWN THROAT tell you the wonderful story of Camel's cool, cool mildness. Let YOUR OWN TASTE tell you about the rich, full flavor of Camel's choice tobaccos—so carefully aged and expertly blended.

In a recent national test, hundreds of men and women smoked Camels, and only Camels, for thirty consecutive days—an average of 1 to 2 packs a day. Noted throat specialists examined the throats of these smokers every week (a total of 2470 examinations) and reported

NO THROAT IRRITATION due to smoking CAMELS!

Money Back Guarantee!

Try Camels and test them as you smoke them. If, at any time, you are not convinced that Camels are the mildest cigarette you ever smoked, return the package with the unused Camels and we will refund its full purchase price, plus postage. (Signed) R. According to a Nationwide survey:

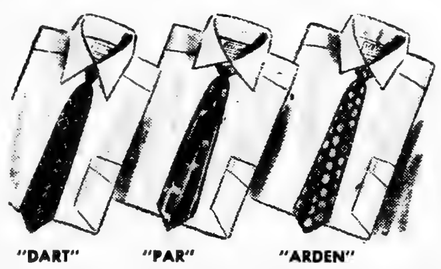
MORE DOCTORS SMOKE CAMELS THAN ANY OTHER CIGARETTE

Doctors smoke for pleasure, too! And when three leading independent research organizations asked 113,597 doctors what cigarette they smoked, the brand named most was Camel!

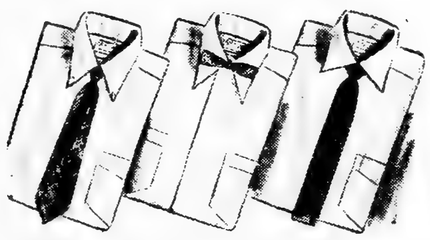
Holiday Theme Used In Church Programs

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN: Both worship services of the Congregational Christian church today will be held in the church hut directly to the rear of the building because a new furnace is being installed in the main building. Children's Sunday School will be at the home of the minister, the Rev. Mr. Munger, 232 McCaulie Street at 10 o'clock. At the 11 o'clock service Mr. Munger, beginning a series of pre-Christmas sermonns, will speak on "The Sign of Christmas." at the evening service at 8 o'clock he will deliver the first in a series of thru sermons on the general theme "The Gifts of God."



BAPTIST: Sunday school for students will be taught this morning at 9:45 by Mrs. Taul B. White, Chapel Hill. At 11 o'clock the Rev. Mr. Habel will speak on "Something for Something." Discussing "A Religion in Labor" tonight at the student supper meeting at 6 o'clock, Glen Fisher, graduate student in economics, will speak.

EPISCOPAL: Holy Communion will be observed this morning at 8 and 10 o'clock. At the latter service the Rev. Mr. Yates will speak on "Dress Rehearsal for Judgment Day." During the service Sunday School is held for children below the first grade, and there is a nursery for children under two years old. Tonight at 8 o'clock Mr. Yates will speak on "Judgment Ethics." A specially arranged Christmas program will be given Tuesday night at the Canterbury club.



PRESBYTERIAN: Regular services will be held this morning at 9:45 and 11 o'clock, with the Rev. Mr. Charles Jones speaking at both services. Dr. Phillips Russell, professor of journalism, will speak tonight at Westminster Fellowship at 6 o'clock, and married students will meet in the Presbyterian annex building to continue their discussion on Moses. "Preacher" Jones said this group would get out of the bullrushes soon.

METHODIST: "What Does It Mean to be in the Kingdom?" will be the title of the Rev. Mr. Ruark's sermon this morning at 11 o'clock. Preceeding this service Sunday School for students will be held at 10 o'clock. Dr. Epps. Professor in the Greek Department, will speak to the Wesley Foundation tonight on "The Story of Christmas Carols." Next Sunday night the Methodist group is planning a Moravian program which will be conducted by both Moravians here on campus and a group from Winston-Salem. In keeping with the Christmas season the theme will be a Christmas one, and an effective program of carols and worship is being planned.

Bowl Preview Spirit Spikes Radio Program

By Caroline Bruner

With the pre-Sugar Bowl spirit prevailing on the campus the Rendez-vous Room "troubadours" made the Sugar Bowl festivity the theme of their Friday night floor show.

Following the broadcasting of the first part of the musical entertainment which featured the music of student composer Frank Matthews, senior from Hemingway, S. C., the floor show was set in a New Orleans cabaret.

Coline Smith, one of the three featured soloists, gave University students a preview of what they will see in the wild, wild middle-west in January. Singing an old western "party" song, she gave a modern touch to the traditional bar room scene with all the trimmings.

The University quintet, composed of Lanier Davis, Bob Hurley, Jack Clinard, Dick Smith, and Milton Bliss, added another touch to Carolina spirit, this time set in the mountainous regions somewhere between here and New Orleans. An old bootlegger, caught by the revenuers; pleads to go back to Carolina: to walk through the Arboretum, instead of the lonesome pines.

Since University students going to the Bowl game have already bought their tickets, Frank Matthews, in his original composition on ticket scalping, could make a joke of it. He musically predicts great rewards for giving last minute "bowlers" a chance to see the game.

The broadcast before the floor show featured romantic and swing numbers, a novelty number on the wild, wild west, and others. In addition to the soloists Sam Greene, Coline Smith and Forest Covington and the quintet; a trio, composed of Gene Stryker, Jimmy Teressi, and Jack Clinard, took part in the program.

Fraternities Have Elections, Name Officers; Hold Parties

Six fraternity pledge groups have recently elected their officers. Chi Psi's twenty-four pledges conducted their elections in their last meeting at which Banks Talley was chosen president. Other pledge officers are Tommy Steed, vice-president; Lew Chapman, secretary; and Bill Jones, treasurer.

France Buckanan was chosen president of the Chi Phi pledge group. Charlie Burns, vice-president; O. G. Pennington, secretary-treasurer, and Bob Johnson, historian, are the other officers.

President of the Sigma Nu pledge class is Doug Phipps. George Darden and Buck Small are vice-president and secretary-treasurer, respectively. Bill Boyer, "Pot" Burton, and Bill McKay are Beta Theta Pi pledge officers.

At the Tuesday meeting of Phi Delta Theta pledges the following officers were elected: Carl Harris, president; Fred Kutts, vice-president; Jack Blalock, secretary; and Johnny Edwards, treasurer.

Tommy Maness is the new Kappa Sigma fraternity pledge group president. Bill Sanders is vice-president of the group, while Bill Badgett holds the position of secretary-treasurer.

Sigma Nu pledges and actives from three neighboring chapters gathered in the Washington-Duke hotel ballroom last night from 8 to 12 o'clock for a joint formal pledge dance. Pledges from the State, Duke, and Carolina chapters were introduced with their dates in the figure.

Sigma Phi Epsilon honored its pledges Friday night with a buffet supper and cabin party at Webb's cabin on the Hillsboro road. Entertainment for the affair was furnished by the pledges.

Bob Montgomery, junior from Raleigh, was elected president of the Alpha Sigma chapter of Chi Psi. Other new officers are Max Abbott, vice-president; Roy Gillikin, secretary; and Bob Evans, treasurer.

Nine Chi Psi pledges, pledged last spring, were initiated in formal ceremonies this week. A banquet for the new active brothers on Friday night concluded the week's activities. Chi Psi Walt Spearman, now professor of journalism here, was the guest speaker.

The new actives are; Bob Cathey, Asheville; Dan Boney, Raleigh; John Wilson, Raleigh; Walker Worth, Raleigh; J. F. Colvard, Durham; Percy Flowers, Clayton; Bill Hovis, Charlotte; Paul Keenan, Chicago, Ill. and Bob Watson, Elizabethtown.

Chi Phi activities for the weekend included a present wrapping party Saturday afternoon. The gifts will be presented to the children of Elon College Orphanage at a party to be given by the fraternity next Sunday afternoon.

Members of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity participated in a basketball game with the Duke Alpha chapter yesterday afternoon at Duke. After the game refreshments were served to the visiting Phi's.

Last Tuesday night Mrs. Arnold Nash, social psychologist of Chapel Hill, spoke to the Phi Delt's and their Pi Phi visitors on the subject of the psychological aspect of marriage. Members of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity entertained the Chi Omega's at a similar discussion group on Monday night.

Engagements in the Sigma Chi fraternity are in evidence this week. Joe Ruzicka plans to marry Margaret Hoffman from Guilford College before Christmas. Jim Caudill and Mary Jane Bradford from Greensboro will also walk down the aisle in December. Bob Scott Langley will marry Roberta Huffman, a Pi Phi, on June 11. Gus Purcell has given his pin and a ring to Bonnie Thrash, ADPi. Their plans are for April.

Recent pinnings include: George Grover, Chi Psi to Katherine McCoy, Greenville, S. C., and Chi Phi Joe McLeod to Barbara Cronk, Kappa Kappa Gamma at the University of Georgia from Atlanta. Also on the list are Ben Wood, DKE, and Sarah Gobbel, Tri Delt.

Bids for the Charlotte Carolina club Christmas dance will be available in the "Y" from 9 until 1 o'clock every day between Dec. 6 and 10. Lem Whitsett has said. This will be the only time that invitations will be distributed to University students.

Cica Has Ceremony For Six Initiates

An impressive candlelight ceremony marked the initiation for six new Carolina Independent Coed association members Wednesday night in the "Y."

After the new girls entered the candle lit room, Audrey Branch, assistant Dean of Women, explained to them the purpose and meaning of the association motto, "United in Friendship."

The old members presented their lighted candles to the new members after CICA president Eloise Jacobi administered the oath. This exchange of the candles signified the joining of the new with the old.

After signing the roll the members were presented bracelets with the associati and motto. ard, who was to have delivered it to the editor, but instead showed it to Hannah.

Jeeter testified that he had read the letter and showed it to Hannah, and Justice Ervin ruled that this constituted publication since it was read by some person other than the author or the person about whom it was written.

In attempting to prove the truth of the statement in the letter, the attorneys for the defense brought in a conversation between Hannah and Chambers at which, it was testified by both Chambers and Walter Allen, present at the time, Hannah urged them to vote for Wallace and, according to Chambers' testimony, implied Communistic feelings of his own.

Character witnesses for the plaintiff, including Thomas Ray, Cyril Barnette, and Robert Breese, testified that his reputation both in his home town and on campus was excellent, that he was "a man of standing, who professed no atheism and is known not to be a Communist" and that he was a "pillar of the Baptist church."

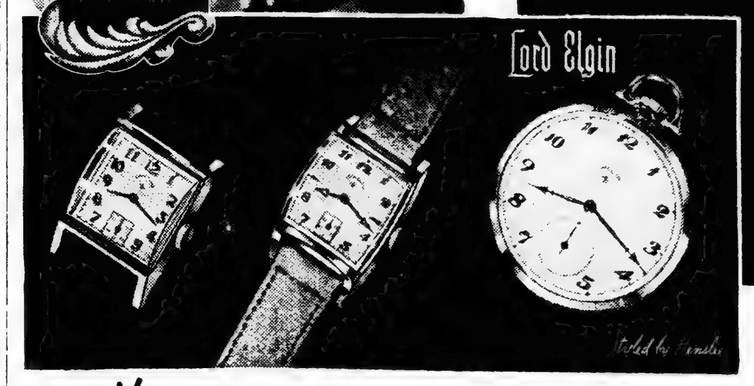
Chambers testified that he had written the letter in good faith, believing that Hannah Communist and that stude others who would associ him should be informe fact.

Jeeter Ervin ruled t communication was which is privileged since no paper has not the power to suppress. Compromise only if Chambers were in good faith to a delegate agent could his comm be considered privileged.

The issues presented judge to the jury were Did the defendant publ letter in question? (2) W accusations within the true? (3) What should amount of compensatory and fourth, amount of p damages."

Having found that the was published by the de and that the letter was not true, the jury awarded the compensatory damages the plaintiff, but refused no punitive damages.

This was the first time legal fraternity has stated a case, but students said yesterday that they to make a trial a yearly act with actual cases rather than ed affairs.



"Handsome, yes...but that new mainspring makes history!"

said ROBERT MONTGOMERY when he learned the facts on the new DuraPower Mainspring in ELGIN Watches

"BEST-DRESSED MAN" Robert Montgomery co-starring in "The Saxon Charm" Universal-International Picture

You wear an Elgin Watch with assurance that it is superbly smart in its styling, for Elgins are acclaimed by "best dressed" men and women everywhere. But there's an inside story that will excite you too, just as it did Robert Montgomery. It's Elgin's exclusive DuraPower Mainspring. Here in the part that runs the watch is truly a history-making achievement.

This miracle mainspring will never rust—and rust is the greatest cause of breakage. It will hold its "springiness" for a constant accuracy never before possible in any watch. Eliminated are 99% of all repairs due to steel mainspring failures!

The one who is buying a watch for you will appreciate a hint—"an Elgin with the DuraPower symbol 'dp' on the dial." It's sure to be smartly styled!

Lord and Lady Elgins are priced from $67.50 to $5000.00. Elgin De Luxe from $47.50 to $67.50. Other Elgins as low as $29.75. All of these prices include the Federal Tax.

Negro Leader Will Protest Court Ruling

Appeal Is Aimed At Oklahoma Law

OKLAHOMA CITY, Dec. 6—(UP—A Negro leader said today he will seek immediate review by the U. S. Supreme court of a decision that the University of Oklahoma is not discriminating against its only Negro student by seating him apart from whites.

Thurgood Marshall, New York, attorney for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, announced this next move in his race's long fight against Oklahoma's segregation laws during a telephone conversation with Federal Judge A. P. Murrah here.

Murrah and two other judges made up a special court which held that O. U. was not denying G. W. McLaurin his constitutional rights by requiring him to sit apart from white students in classrooms, the library and cafeteria. The same judges earlier handed down a ruling that opened McLaurin's way into O. U. Graduate school but denied admission for Mrs. Mauderie Hancock Wilson.

Runoff Election Today To Fill Legislature, Council Positions

Coed Senate, Council Posts To Be Decided

Women's Ballot Has Seven Names

Three seats available on the Women's Honor council and four seats open in the Coed senate will be decided on in today's runoff elections.

Candidates in the runoff for the Women's council are Ann Chandler, Macon, Ga.; Barbara Lowe, Sara Helen Epps, Monroe.

Five names will appear on today's ballot for the four seats in the Coed senate. The candidates are Charleen Greer, Tulsa, Okla.; Julie Compton, Fort Bragg; Marie Nussbaum, Louisville, Ky.; Muriel Fisher, Miami, Fla.; and Pat Denning, Coral Gables, Fla.

All nine candidates are juniors in the University.

CHARGED WITH SHOOTING to death Arthur King, 64-year-old woodchopper, because he refused to aid their scheme for playing hookey from school, these three boys are held by State Police of Vanderbilt, Mich. They are (l. to r.): Harry Damer, 10, alleged to have fired the fatal shot; Robert Black, 12, and Richard Damer, 11. According to the official, the boys ordered King to chop a tree so that it would fall across a power line which provided current for the school. When he refused, police say, the lads shot him with a gun they had stolen.

Ten Seats In Balance For Solons

Polls Will Open For Nine Hours

By Herb Nachman

Runoffs, the last word in campus elections, will get underway in the five men's dorm districts and one women's dorm district for Student legislature, when the four campus polling places open their doors at 9 o'clock this morning.

Voting places are Ruffin, Aycock and Alderman dormitories and Memorial hall. Polls will be open from 9 until 6 o'clock tonight. Al Winn, chairman of the Elections board, reminded voters yesterday that they must bring their ID cards with them if they expect to vote.

The battle for control of the Student legislature will be decided today with the ballot stacking up like this: Of the 27 seats available in last Tuesday's general election, the University party took 10, SP and CP together took seven.

There are still six 12-month terms and four six-month terms available. In order to win a majority in the Student Legislature, a party must have 26 seats.

For the remaining 10 seats, UP has candidates in the runoff for eight, CP placed candidates in runoffs for four seats and SP for seven.

In last Tuesday's election, UP took nine 12-month seats and one six-month seat. SP and CP each took one 12-month seat. SP-CP took one and SP-UP took one for 12-months. Two six-month terms went to the SP, another was captured by an SP-CP double endorsement.

Candidates for the six 12 month terms: The UP has nominees on the ballot for all. SP placed candidates for four seats in the runoff and CP placed two. In the six-month division, UP will fight for two, SP for three and CP for two.

The complete breakdown: Three are six 12-month terms and four the original 27 seats. UP took 10, SP and CP together took seven. On today's ballot, UP is in the running for eight of the 10 remaining seats, CP for four and SP for seven.

The official ballot is as follow: Dorm dist. 1 - Carnes (CP) and Bell (UP), for 12-months. Dist. 2 Kirby (UP), Nearman (CP), Horton (SP), Twine (UP) for two 12-month terms. Dist. 3 - Kimerling (SP), Allston (UP), Smith (CP) for two six-month terms. Dist. 4 - Gwyn (UP), Lineberry (SP), one 12-month term; Southerland (SP), Transou (UP), one six-month seat. Dist. 5 - Manning (UP), Bowers (SP), one 12-month term, Smith (CP), Best (SP), one six-month term.

In the dorm women's legislature race, Emily Sewell (SP) will face Jane Gower (UP) for one 12-month term. Dorm women's dist. 2 has no vacancies in the legislature.

WHERE TO VOTE

Men's dorm dist. 1—Votes at Aycock. This district includes Aycock, Graham, Stacy, Everett and Lewis.

Dist. 2—Votes at Ruffin. This district includes Manley, Mangum, Ruffin, Grimes, Emerson Field House, and "C" dorm.

Dist. 3—Votes at Ruffin. District includes "A", "B", Alexander, Quonsets, Alexander Trailer court.

Dist. 4—Votes in Memorial hall. District includes Steele, Old West, Old East, B-V-P dorms and B-V-P Trailer court, and students living in miscellaneous buildings.

Dist. 5—Votes in Memorial hall. District includes Nash, Miller halls, Nash Trailer court and Whitehead.

Women will vote in the following order: Women's dorm list 1 votes at Alderman. The district includes Kenan, Alderman and McIver.

District 2 votes at Memorial hall. It includes Spencer, Carr, Smith and Archer house.

The town women's district votes at Memorial hall. The district includes all women living in town.

Three-School Council Program Is Planned

By Sam McKeel

The Greater University of North Carolina Student council, composed of members from the three branches of the Greater University, met here Sunday afternoon and discussed ways and means of contacting members of the state legislature during the Christmas holidays.

The council is to contact as many of the legislators as possible, and will get as many students as possible to contact their representatives. Working as one compact unit, the council has in mind the betterment of the three schools. Legislators will be asked to support, as far as possible, any general bills or appropriation bills that concern the Greater

Jess Dedmond, president of the student body, yesterday invited all interested students to meet tonight in room 208 Pharmacy building to discuss plans for contacting state legislators over the Christmas holidays concerning University legislation. Dedmond said Controller W. D. Carmichael, Jr., would be present to explain plans.

Eleven Seniors To Be Initiated Into Fraternity

Eleven seniors of the Commerce school will be initiated into Beta Gamma Sigma, national honorary scholastic commerce fraternity, tomorrow at 5 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge 1, Graham Memorial. Both faculty and student members in the Commerce school are invited.

This organization, which is comparable to Phi Beta Kappa in arts and sciences, was started here in 1933. Since then junior and senior commerce majors who have done outstanding scholastic work have been initiated.

Students Answer Hurry Blood Call For Freshman, 19

Six fellow students of 19-year-old freshman Marx Hugh Deal of Rockingham, answered a blood-donation call last night required to save him from an internal intestinal hemorrhage attack at Duke hospital.

Miss Peggy Kimrey, laboratory technician at the infirmary, said Deal's blood type was "O" and his RH factor was negative. "Deal needs blood immediately and badly as there is very little of this type blood left in the Duke blood bank," said Dr. W. G. Morgan.

Anyone having type "O" blood with a negative RH factor is urged to contact Dr. Morgan at the infirmary, to phone F-428 or his home, 9141, or call Miss Kimrey at the infirmary laboratory. A spot check can be made on prospective donors who are not sure of their type.

Phi Beta Kappa Slates Ceremonies Tomorrow

By Margaret Gaston

Fifty-nine seniors and recent graduates will be initiated into Phi Beta Kappa scholastic fraternity tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock in Gerrard hall. After the initiation members are invited to an informal banquet at the Carolina Inn. Chancellor R. B. House will be guest speaker for the occasion.

Student officers of the fraternity will initiate the new members. The office of president and vice-president goes to the two students with the highest averages, and the recording secretary is elected. Officers chosen last spring are Howard Thacker, president; Joseph Jones, vice-president; Herman Colman, recording secretary; and Dr. E. H. Mackie, dean of student awards and scholarships, corresponding secretary-treasurer.

To qualify for membership into the fraternity, a student attending the University for four years must maintain an average of 92.5 on the first 126 quarter hours taken. Students attending the University for the junior and senior years must maintain an average of 94 on 75 to 100 quarter hours work.

Phi Beta Kappa initiates are: Joseph Albertson, Robert Barr, Mary Blumen, Frederick Bow-

Glee Club Slates Last of Series

The second and final presentation of the fifth annual Christmas concert of the combined Men's and Women's Glee clubs will be given tonight at 8:30 in Hill hill. The first performance, given Sunday night, was a sell-out, and a capacity crowd is expected for tonight's performance.

A few tickets for tonight's concert were still available yesterday but holders of tickets were asked to get their reserved seats early as another sell-out is expected. The box office in Hill hall 109 will be open from nine to five today and will open at seven tonight. Telephone reservations will be held until 8:15.

Room Changes Deadline Set

All requests for room changes in men's dormitories for the winter quarter should be turned in to the housing office before Friday, J. E. Wadsworth, housing officer, announced yesterday.

Veterans Group Slates Session For Tonight

The American Veterans committee meeting will be held this evening at 7:30 o'clock in the Presbyterian church on Franklin street, spokesman Henry Adams announced yesterday.

The principal item on the AVC agenda for this evening will be a report on the Cleveland national convention by local delegates Glenn Fisher and Henry Adams. The delegates will give reason why AVC voted to remove Communists from the organization. The recent Communist factional dispute in the AVC will also be reviewed.

First Carolina Quarterly Issue To Make Campus Debut Today

By Charlie Gibson

As the youngest University publication, born only last year of blood, sweat, and jeers, the Carolina Quarterly debuts on campus today.

"The new literary magazine," according to Editor Bill Sessions, "will be put on bookstands throughout the campus and state. We shall let its sales rest on the merits of, first, the best in creative endeavor by student writers and, second, critical articles by such well-known local authors as Paul Green, Archibald Henderson, and Hardin Craig."

For 50 cents Quarterlies may be obtained today at Abernathy's and Bull's Head bookshops, Lenoir hall, the Scuttlebutt, Danziger's, and the post office. They will also be sold in the YMCA lobby from 9 o'clock in the morning till 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Subscriptions will also be available for students at $1.00 per year and for all others at $1.25.

The initial Carolina Quarterly will contain five articles, four short stories, seven poems, and a book review section. Green, a Pulitzer Prize winner, contributes an essay on Hollywood movies entitled "Custodians of Greatness." "George Bernard Shaw and Communism" is by Henderson, official biographer for the celebrated British playwright. Craig, renowned Shakespearean authority, offers a prediction called "A Literary Revival".

The major-length short story is "Gramp and the Giverment," a comedy with a Tar Heel setting by Roy C. Moose, University senior from Mooresville. Other fiction includes "The Cobblestone Streets on Mars" by Louis Stevens, Asheville; "The Red Angel" by Charles Brockman, High Point; and "Bass Notes," a sketch on college jazz orchestras by Joe Terrell, freshman from Raleigh.

War Began Seven Years Ago But Old BOQ's Are Still Here

By Lincoln Kan

The dateline on today's paper reads Tuesday, December 7, 1948.

Domestic news features spy hearings in Washington. The international news tells of Berlin elections which swept Communists off their feet in the Western zones. The weatherman predicts fair and warmer.

On campus, election news holds the main attention of the student body, but not for all of the student body. As some walk to classes dressed in "greens" and khaki glancing at BOQ's, mess-halls and PX's converted into temporary lecture rooms, they will remember a quiet Sunday morning seven years ago.

Seven years ago, the Sunday quiet was broken on campus and in the homes of students away on weekend. Sunday comics and sports sections were left where they were dropped, as emotion-filled voices of a thousand radio commentators flooded rooms with the words, "Pearl Harbor has beens bombed!"

Seven years ago today, telephones were jammed by voices asking, "Have you heard. . . . turn your radio on. . . we've been attacked!" On the campus, roommate looked at roommate and said. "This is it. I'm going if they will take me. . ." Others said, "At least they could wait until I finish this quarter."

Today is the six-day mark before exams begin. Today students will worry about campus elections. Today students will glance at the international news and wonder, and then hurry on to their classes. Today there are people being born, living starving, getting shot at and dying in China, in Palestine, in Greece, in Germany and in the United States. Today is Tuesday, Dec. 7, 1948, seven years after Pearl Harbor.

Seven Sorority Women Are Present At Panhellenic Meeting in Durham

Seven sorority girls from the University attended the meeting of the Panhellenic Association of Sororities held at Duke university Saturday.

Mrs. Julia Fuqua Ober, national editor of Kappa Delta, was the featured speaker at the meeting. She addressed the sorority women on "We Made a Convenant," after Mrs. Ober's talk a forum was led by Nancy Robinson of Concord on "Alumni Relationships."

Members of Cosmopolitan Club Sing National Songs; 50 Attend Meet

Students from nine countries singing their nations' traditional folk songs featured the program of the weekly meeting of the Cosmopolitan club Sunday afternoon. Included were songs by students from India, England, the Philippines and Iran.

Entertaining approximately 50 club members, the foreign students were joined in song by members of Sound and Fury who contributed such American folk melodies as: "Old Man River," "St. Louis Blues" and "Sweet Kentucky Babe."

Isha Bangdiwala of India sang his people's song to a man on the night of his marriage for the second time; Ken Lawry of England contributed "Serenade to a Sow;" Benito Bernado of the Philippines rendered a tagalgo serenade and S. Haroutinian demonstrated Iranian dances.

Membership in the Cosmopolitan club is open to all foreign and American students, faculty members and their wives.

Song for the Singers

Probably no group on campus works as long and as hard with as little individual recognition as do the University glee clubs. And probably few groups have their work as generally appreciated.

Only three times a year do the choristers present themselves to public attention — once when the men's and women's glee clubs combine to give their annual Christmas concert (as they are doing tonight) and again in the spring when they give separate performances and go on a brief singing tour. But the number of their appearances is not the criterion of the effort they put out; the polish of their performances is the proof of that. And the full auditoriums and prolonged applause which they continually draw is evidence of the appreciation which their singing deserves and receives.

Much of the credit for the University's fine glee clubs is owing to their director, Paul Young, who is not only an expert musician but an expert in designing and presenting his concerts as well. Perhaps the greatest factor in his success is his ability to be a hard task master yet at the same time a beloved one.

Much credit is also due the 113 women and 159 men who give up time and effort in rehearsals not through a desire for personal recognition but simply for the pleasure of singing, for the joy of giving life to something that is beautiful.

Class Attendance

Professors differ widely in their attitudes toward attendance in their class sessions. Many believe that a student need not attend the class regularly if he can comprehend the material by reading the text. Comprehension is measured, of course, by the success of the student on tests. The professors who follow this line of logic seem to have the attitude of fairness to the student more than the ones who insist on class attendance regardless of the student's abilities of comprehension.

Why should a grade depend partly upon attendance if the student is mature enough to learn thoroughly enough to write a good test paper? In many cases the student who attends every meeting of the class gets less from his work than the one who studies well on his own. Penalties for absences in these cases seem most unfair.

Instructors who have told their students that they do not penalize for cutting do not find themselves facing a room of empty seats because the students will, for the most part, attend to learn the "little extras" which the instructor can give them concerning the subject matter.

Students appreciate a flexible absence rule in their classes so that if they feel they can gain knowledge from the subject outside the classroom they will not be forced to abide by a childish requirement to listen to subject matter which is of little benefit to them in recording good test scores.—Purdue Exponent.

Odds And Ends

By Don Maynard

WASHINGTON CAPER. And then there's the story wafting on the Carolina autumn breezes of the three couples who stopped at a gas station enroute to the Maryland game. Two of the girls found it necessary to stop and press their shoe-laces in the little girls room. Once inside, they found they couldn't get out, the door was jammed. About that time, the third co-ed found her laces in need of a little perking-up. There was nothing to do but send her to the little boy's room, and post a guard outside. All's well, we are proud to report, the girls were all released and arrived safely in Washington pert and pretty in their freshly pressed laces.

OF MEN AND . . . Spencer coeds. We are wondering if pandemonium would have broken out with the discovery of an elephant under the Spencer breakfast table last week instead of just a tiny dead mouse. At any rate, femininity's time-honored reaction was put to use when Margery Williams made a spectacular leap atop the table and let out a milk-curdling scream. The new look's purpose was defeated as skirts went up, unfortunately no males were present to appreciate the revelation.

ROOTS OF TRADITION. Watching the campus groundkeepers plant young dogwood trees in the arboretum reminded us of a little thought. "If a dogwood, would you?"

BAFFLING. Several men on campus were puzzled by this headline announcing registration of nurses: "Nurses Requested to Fill Out Forms." They date the girls from Duke hospital steadily and have no complaints . . .

KNIFE GOING, FELLOWS. Yes indeed, in UNC it's S&F that has the edge in improvisation. Caught with a piece of cord and without a knife to cut it with the stage crew was at a loss. Feverishly hunting for a pair of scissors, a cutting remark or even a sharp tie, they stumbled across a mirror. They're doomed for 13 years, but after all, they were at the end of their rope. . .

TWO ANNOUNCEMENTS. One is that the Yack can use all the typists they can get, you 42 keys-and-a-space-bar players can do Bill Duncan a big favor by running over to the office in GM and volunteering.

T'other is an appeal to script-writers from S&F to get out their quills and write the material for a show to be produced right after the holidays. All contributions will be carefully read, those not used will be put on file for future use. Entries must be in by the first day or three in January.

IF AT FIRST. . .Trying to contact Randolph Scott the actor and invite him to the KA roundup of prominent brothers to be held in February, Ken Bland first called Scott's mom in Charlotte, drew a blank. He then called directly to Hollywood but ran into a very stubborn district supervisor of the telephone company who would not divulge Scott's private phone number. In desperaton Ken threatened, "If you won't connect me, I'll call Brother J. Edgar Hoover in Washington, he'll get results." Heh, heh, Ken couldn't get Hoover's private number either. Better give up Ken, talk may be cheap, but not over long-distance. . .

TIME AWASTIN'. Only 16 more shopping days till Xams, FOUR till exams. It's not too late to cram, "Never despair, but if you do, work on in despair," and just "remember Jonah when you are down in the mouth—he came out all right."

This Changing World

Dissent Isn't Disloyalty

By Bill Robertson

I had the somewhat unpleasant experience Friday morning of waking up to read in the newspaper that my column would end with the quarter. It was a surprise, considering that the editor had said two weeks earlier: "As long as students write (anti-Robertson letters) he will be serving the purpose for which the day before, the editor had (justly) expressed pride in our Freedom of Choice, "the privilege of listening to all shades of opinion."

What hideous crime of mine caused the sudden reversal? On November 30, I attacked the custom of displaying the Stars and Bars; this apparently offended the sersibilities of certain persons.

I have no apology to make for that article. I was under the impression that the Civil War was over, and its institutions and leaders can now be subjected to the pitiless dissection of history: I submit again that the Confederacy is nothing to be proud of. I say this even though I was born in its capital, Richmond, and even though some fine men, like R. E. Lee (who, incidentally, hated slavery) fought in its ranks.

If it is bad taste to dare utter these thoughts, then I must go. Perhaps future generations of students, reading these pages, may be amused at the irony of a Marxist columnist, accused (falsely) of advocating the overthrow of the U. S. Government being dismissed for attacking the flags of those who took up arms against it.

Without my column, the DTH can again present a solid front of adherence to our government's foreign policy. Gone will be the freedom of choice to read both sides of the major questions dividing mankind (which is, after all, the function of the columns, rather than to present only the point of view of the majority.) I trust this will have a salutary effect on the blood pressure of Messers. Wharton, McReynolds Sowell & Co., some of whom have attacked me with a vulgarity quite unworthy of UNC students. Perhaps it was asking too much of such hot-blooded gentlemen to stand by with tolerence while one columnist (out of 12 published per week) looks at life from a different approach than theirs—an approach which a few Nobel prize winners have not deemed beneath their dignity to espouse.

Why did many of my columns arouse such furor? I am told it was because of my "general attack on U. S. policies." Does that prove disloyalty? Some believe (this columnist among them) that they can prove their loyalty better by trying to reverse a foreign policy they consider suicidal, which has the blessing of every Nazi, and is bringing upon our country the hatred of the French mine worker and of the Indo-Chinese and Israeli fighter for independence. My ideal of loyalty is best expressed in the words of John Quincy Adams:" I disclaim all patriotism incompatible with . . . justice."

For a while, we were asked to support the bi-partisan foreign policy as the "hope of free people everywhere." This position has now become so ludicrous that it isn't pressed hard any further. One doesn't fight for freedom with Chiang-Kai-shek and Krupp as allies. We are now merely asked to support "our side" This has made foreign policy sacro-sanct.

Yet the bi-partisan foreign policy is merely the policy of a group of men, responsible to the American people. If they are unwilling to face opposition and defend their policy on its merits, it is their loyalty to the Constitution rather than mine that is suspect.

Some of those who were moved by their unbounded faith in the free exchange of ideas to offer paying my fare (one way) for you-know-where obviously ignore the meaning of good citizenship. A loyal American, like this columnist, does not abandon America to Truman, Dulles and associates. He works for his country, "right or wrong;" if right, to keep from going wrong; if wrong, to set it right.

Loyalty demands attachment to the general principles of the Constitution. One cannot find any quotation in which I have attacked our institutions of democracy. Beyond that, each man is free to determine for himself how he can best serve this country. Dissent is not disloyalty.

The Critical Ear

Glee Clubs Make Big Hit

By Don Shropshire

Of the hundreds of music enthusiasts who jam-packed Hill Hall Sunday evening for the fifth annual concert of the combined Men's and Women's Glee clubs, there was no doubt that the Christmas season had been ably ushered in with the best program to date.

As disappointed late-comers bemoaned their fate around a giant, lighted tree in the lobby and looked with dismay at a prominent "Sold Out" sign at the ticket office, the Women's Glee club set the pace for the program with the "Stabat Mater" by Pergolesi. The clubs seemed to have little trouble in holding the interest of their audience throughout the entire series, which was climaxed by the well-known and tremendously exciting "Shepherds' Story" by Clarence Dickinson.

Taken individually, the Men's group decidedly held the edge in popularity, but this seemed to be due to a better selection, rather than the quality of singing. The tone for both groups was good, and very seldom was there trouble in the words coming through.

There was a noticeable tendency, however, not to give the director undivided attention. This led once to the first tenors "jumping the gun," and other divisions did not come in exactly as directed at other points. The shuffling of music and the noise attributed thereto also worked unfavorably in the total program.

One of the most amazing parts of the series was the skillful way in which the combined clubs handled the traditional Christmas carols. Familiar hymns, which are generally "murdered" musically by well-meaning people across the land, suddenly took on a quality never before beard. John O'Steen is due special recognition for the splendid and highly effective original improvisations at organ for this set.

Orchids certainly go to Director Paul Young, whose magic direction can cause even the most indifferent to go all-out for the success of the task at hand. Little known is the fact that in spite of that very formal appearance to the audience, he is at all times conveying unique facial expressions of encouragement to his club. His ability to smile through error and to get that certain "twinkle" in his eyes for special emphasis causes renewed determination. That is why it is possible to see smiles on the faces of both men and women before each number, especially if it is to be particularly gay.

The three encore numbers demanded by the enthusiastic audience were reserved, and subsequently of the more popular group. "The Twelve Days of Christmas" caused some to have their hands ready for applause before the number was even finished. "Silent Night" sent the people home with thoughts of an eventing well spent.

Virginia Johnson, Milton with thoughts of an evening Bliss, Dick Cox, John von Canon, and John Brinegar were excellent choices for featured soloists. Barbara Young, soprano combined quality and unusual expression to capture the administration of her audience.

Political Spotlight

Salute To A Real Leader

By Charlie Long

Seldom, if ever, is the Spotlight given over to one man but, today's column will, I believe justify itself.

At the end of the quarter Ernie House leaves the University and it seems fitting and proper that some tribute be paid to the "Colonel" for services rendered.

To work with House as friend or foe was to respect his ability and devotion to duty. Through long and tiring sessions of such committees as finance traffic and ways and means he labored that students at Carolina might have a better government.

He has held many positions on the campus, but chief among them was his service as a veteran legislator. Unlike many, when an issue presented itself, he never tried to side-step or ride the fence. If he thought it was important he weighed the pros and cons and took his stand, fighting for the side he thought right with an exceptional courage of convinction and high integrity. Time after time in the halls of the legislature he assumed stands that could have jeopard-sized his political life, but when the battle was over he found, that instead of loss, he had gained in the respect of his colleagues.

Nor should it be said that he was so strong in his views that he could not see the other side. Many times after consideration and debate the Colonel was known to go over to the other side because he felt the weight of the argument lay there.

During the fateful year of 1947-48 he guided the first student budget so that when the final figure was written, in spite of numerous bad breaks and wrong information, the budget read $8,000 surplus.

Other men will come to replace Ernie, but none will be the same. In every respect he seems to personify that oft-used phrase "Carolina Gentleman.

Present and future leaders would do well to study the record of our smiling "Colonel" and profit thereby.

As you leave Carolina, Ernie, remember that, though we are slow to say so, we appreciate what you have done for student government, and the pleasure that work and play with you brought. Au revoir. Good luck.

Write Away

Is It Sour Grapes?

Editor:

Cousin Long seems to be spellbound by his own oratory.

Instead om making his ivtuperative assault on the Student council in his column Friday he might have tried to appraise the student body of the facts concerning the election so each men could form his own opinion. The facts are as follows: Having noticed the propinquity of the December elections and exams Jess Dedmond and I got together in the last of October to discuss the conflict. We found that the first Tuesday in December fell on the 7th, and the 10th was to be the last day of classes. Therefore, if the primary were held on the 7th, the runoff would fall on December 14.

Realizing that most people would be more interested in studying for finals than in voting or tabulating ballots, we decided it would be practically (I use the word literally) imposible to have an election that period. There were two alternatives: 1) [illegible] the election in winter quarter, or, 2) set the election up one week and have it on the last Tuesday in November. We chose the latter. Jess publicized the plans, and the elections board prepared to execute them.

A whole month later, on election day, Lord Long decided without having previously dissented that this fracture of the constitution was not common sense, but a diabolical plan of the president to seize absolute control our student government. Being the Don Quixote in verbal armor that he is, he assumed it his sacred mandate to defend the endangered rights of the people. He took his case to the Student council, and they, fortunately, realized that the framers of the constitution could not possibly have forseen every eventuality and that, unlike the Federal constitution, some things are more important (namely: exams) than a strict interpretation of the written word. They correctly observed that the spirit of the constituion had been carried out, but warned that violations must not be allowed to recur. Honest good sense from people who have a high regard for our student government.

My initial opinion in the matter was that the Great God Long was truly concerned about the constitution, although slightly misguided. Now I'm beginning to wonder whether he's not having a sour grapes reaction from losing the presidential election last spring.

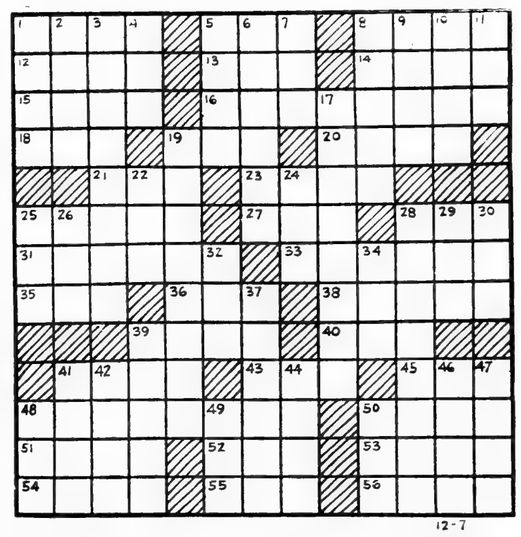
Sonnets To Stalin



Editor:

Before Mr. Brockman can set up friendliness to Russia as a "true test of liberalism," he'll have to explain away my case, as I may be an exception that proves the rule (to use that old saw in its true meaning).

Up until the end of the war, I was generally rather friendly toward Russia. In fact, I'd be willing to bet that I'm the only person for quite a few miles around who has written a sonnet to Stalin (1942) and mailed it to him. It was extravagantly complimentary, but I must confess it wasn't very good (maybe that's why Uncle Joe, that infallible pope of the Marxist revelation, didn't see fit to answer). During all this time, my ideas anent labor, racial discrimination, etc., have become, if anything, somewhat more liberal than they were back when I was showering Uncle Joe with poetic bouquets. If there is any significant number of people with similar experiences it would appear that some other test will have to be found.

When you get right down to it, though, getting Moscow's stamp of approval as a liberal is analogous to getting the kiss of death. The term "liberal" surely can't have much absolute semantic value when it is bestowed by those to whom slave labor, mock elections, and ideological purges are liberal when it is the Communists who resort to them. Looked at in the same light, other items in the little "Handbook of Red Herrings" might turn out to be just as meaningless.

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

Taken for Grantland

GRANTLAND RICE, the dean of American sports writers, stands to be unfrocked. Mr. Rice, it seems, doesn't think that Charlie Justice is an All-American halfback and goes as far as to say so in his annual mythical team which appears today in LOOK magazine. The dean done done it.

Rice, whose word is law except in the South where the only law is Justice, doesn't think that this Justice is the all-around football player that it takes to be an All-American. He made the statement in September that because the said Choo doesn't play on defense, he wouldn't make All-American. Now in December he is staging a one-man campaign to prove his own point.

Mr. Rice, from reports, doesn't cater to the Tar Heels as a whole. He gaily ventured the statement following the William and Mary bargain basement tie that Carolina would not receive a bid to the Sugar bowl. If Mr. Rice is correct then the Tar Heels are headed in the wrong direction. From the looks of things, Mr. R.'s Sugar bowl and All-American selections prove little more than the fact that two wrongs make a Rice.

Union Rules

MR. RICE WILL be happy to know that Justice also does not sell programs or write his own clippings which may be additional requirements to gain All-American honors in this day and time. Mr. R. would, too, be happy if he could see Justice play at least once, an honor which has not seemingly been afforded him. He might find the need of a bigger stable than now houses his immortal Four Horsemen, as the stall he is now using to keep the Choo off the first team isn't even big enough to hold water.

Had Mr. R. followed the Tar Heels for the past year or for the past few years, he would indeed be informed on what a fine defensive player Justice actually is. The 1947 Sugar bowl demonstrated to most people what a brilliant tackler Justice was, besides an excellent defender against the excellent passes by Charlie Trippi. Trippi is getting by a herd of All-Americans in the pro leagues today that Mr. R. picked in their college days. Yet, the Georgian never got passed the Asheville flyer, whom Rice now chooses to ignore. Mr. R. prefers to take his flyer elsewheres.

Even this season, when the two-team system reached its peak, Justice played on defense in every game where the chips went down at the wrong time on the wrong side of the table. When the Tar Heels were moving easily ahead there was little sense for Justice to lead a double role as they play football at Carolina primarily to win games, not to make All-American.

Stranger Than Fiction

MR. R. FURTHER adds fallacy to fantasy in some of the picks he replaced Justice with on the first team selection. Johnny Rauch of Georgia is a typical choice. Against Carolina, Rauch, a supposed All-American, did not do the Bulldog punting, did not field the punts, did very little running and didn't play the entire game defensively.

Justice, his mythical understudy, was meanwhile rather unimpressive except for the fact that he ran for two touchdowns from scrimmage, ran a punt back 80 yards—which proved good enough for COLLIERS, Rice's former picking grounds—did the brunt of the Tar Heel passing and kicked better throughout the afternoon than the majority of the Georgia fans did.

Since then, Justice has out-everythinged every back on Rice's first team. He has run and passed for a higher total of touchdowns than any of the favorite sons, and he is currently winning honors as the nation's leading punter. If Mr. R. likes more statistics, Justice has contributed more total yardage too. He also saw full service in all ten games which Massa Doak Walker didn't. Maybe Justice should switch from Wheaties to Rice Krispies.

The New Yorker Corker

THE NEW YORKER, on the other hand, the home of taste and distinction, picks its All-American in the current issue including the following backfield:

Quarterback—Harry S. Truman—the oak-hearted signal caller of the Electoral college. Against fantastic odds, he single-handedly scored a TD over T.D.

Fullback—Justice of North Carolina.

Tale of Two Pities

WITH A FEW SOUR grapes left to be harvested on the vines, it might be well to utter dismay over the recent trophy choices, notably the Maxwell and the Heisman. The Maxwell went to Chuck Bednarik of Penn, which is nothing more than a hometown boy making off with the hometown trophy in an attempt to prove that a Penn is mightier than a Tar Heel.

The Heisman went to Doak Walker, who supposedly does everything but keep Charlie Justice's picture off the cover of COLLIER'S. But here, most of the balloting was done before the Choo Choo's last two games of the season, which turned out to be probably his greatest performances for ye olde Blue and White. Fight, fight, fight.

It is all a question of the ability of today's great football players to rust on last year's laurels, which means that Justice may have something to look forward to next year besides ten tough ball games. The time has come, it seems, to pick the Waste Paper All-American, compiled from the best press releases and brochures. Then you'd pay the publicity man more money than the coach and the honest guys like Jake Wade would be out of a job.

All boils down to the fact that it is lucky they continue to play the real football on the turf and not in the press box. And leaves one to feel that if Grantland Rice is still the dean of American sports writers, then nominations might be in order for chancellor.

Cagers Hang Double Dip On Christians

Carson Leads Tar Heel Win Over Elon Five

By Frank Allston

Carolina's basketball team rang up its third straight win of the infant season last night by crushing a completely outclassed Elon college quint, 66-32 in Woollen gymnasium.

Coy Carson sharp shooting Asheville forward, again headed the Tar Heel scoring column by pushing up 15 points. Rookie forward Hugo Kappler was runner-up to Carson with 14 points.

The Carolina cagers scored their points in bursts last night and at times went as long as two minutes without scoring. Rip Ryah again sparked the Carolina floor game while big Nemo Nearman stopped Elon scoring threats by blocking shots before they were even in the air.

Carolina took an early lead on Kappler's layup ten seconds after the tip-off. Elon's Gaines dropped in a free throw shortly afterwards to make the score, 2-1. A pair of layups by Kappler, a free throw by Carson, two by Nearman and Carson's set shot increased the Tar Heel lead to 11-1.

After that Elon never came close. Kappler and Carson continued to set the pace and the Carolina five rang up 28 more points while holding the Christians to 15. During the latter part of the first half Coach Tom Scott emptied the bench and the scoring continued. When the halftime gun finally went off, the Tar Heels led, 39-16.

In the second half time the Tar Heels took up the pace again and webt on another of their scoring sprees. The Tar Heels, on the strength of shots by Nearman, Carson and Kappler, increased their total to 45 points

Lacrosse Set to Be Retnrned To Carolina Athletic Program

By Morton Glasser

The athletic council of the University has announced that lacroose will be reinstated this year as a part of the intercollegiate athletic program. Lacross was conducted for several years as a varsity sport at Carolina until the war when it was forced to be discontinued, but in recent years the increasing popularity of the game has induced the council to add the Indian pastime to the Carolina athletic card.

Carolina will schedule five or six games for the 1949 season, opening with its first contest in April. Among those teams which are being considered for games are Duke, Virginia, Washington and Lee, VPI, William and Mary, and possibly Western Maryland and Washington college.

The stickmen will be coached by a faculty adviser, William Darden, who was a former player and coach at St. Johns college of Annapolis, Maryland. Darden expects approximately 40 candidates to answer his first call for practice which is slated for March.

Although lacrosse will be a comparatively new sport to Carolina students, the squad will not be entirely green since many of the hopefuls have had considerable experience elsewhere and are adept in their stickwork. Among the more experienced performers are Bob Kavanaugh, George Levine, Doug Thompson, and Jesse Greenbaum, all products of high or prep school lacrosse squads. Kavanaugh was also a member of the Carolina Pre-flight team several years back. However, experience is not a requirement to make the squad, and all interested students are urged to develop their skill in the game. George Levine at 7031 can be contacted for further information.

Football Team Resumes Drills For Bowl Tilt With Oklahoma

Apparently considerably revigorated by their week-long layoff, Carolina's bowl-bound gridders were back at it again on Navy field yesterday afternoon and evening as they went through a spirited opening drill for their New Year's day New Orleans clash with Oklahoma's powerful Sooners.

A lengthy skull session, during which the Tar Heels heard a far from encouraging report on the strenth of their Sugar bowl foes, preceded the workout and caused Coach Carl Snavely to continue his drills on into the night under the eveready lights.

According to scouts Russ Murphy, Jim Gill, and George Radman, Oklahoma Coach Bud Wilkinson will field the hardest and fastest charging line that the three local coaches have seen all season. Headed by All-American guard Paul Burris, the Sooner forwards are three deep at every position.

The Tar Heels wasted no time getting down to business yesterday as the defensive and offensive units went to work perfecting their respective duties. The offensive eleven, headed by All-American Choo Choo Justice and hard driving Hosea Rodgers worked on routine running and passing plays. They also spent quite a bit of time perfecting their punt return plays which feature handoffs to each other by criss-crossing safety men Justice and wingback Bob Kennedy.

The defensive team, headed by

Holdash Honored

The Associated Press All-Southern soph squad released recently placed one Carolina player on the first-team eleven. Irvin Holdash, Tar Heel defensive center, was the lone Carolinian named on the team.

Freshman Quint Scores 47-36 For Third Win

By Lew Chapman

Largely through the 20 point effort of one Buddy Johnson, the Carolina freshman basketball team won its third game of the season last night at Woollen gym by the score of 47-36 over a spirited Elon JV cage crew.

Although the game was billed as a preliminary to the varsity tussle, the action satisfied the wants of many of the fans. It was by far the closest contest that the Tar Babies have had and the yearlings reacted to the pressure like seasoned veterans.

Per usual Coach Jim Hamilton's charges took the lead from the opening tipoff and paced by Johnson, who dipped in 14 points held a commanding 26-14 halftime edge. But the Elon five returned to the court strong and gave the Tar Babies a run for their money in the second half.

With but eight minutes left to play, the Elon quintet had whittled the Carolina lead down to an uneasy seven points and the Tar Babies seemed to be losing control of the game but a pair of buckets by Carolina forward Dick Harter from amidst furious action killed all Elon hopes of an upset and Carolina's undefeated record was saved.

Johnson, a six foot forward from Pikeville, Ky., who has tallied 57 points in 3 games, was again the leader of the yearling attack and his twisting layups and deft tap ins were the talk of the crowd.

The lineups:

Carolina	Pos.	Elon JV
Harter (6)	F	(6) Klutz
Johnson (20)	F	(2) Wall
Guyes (6)	C	(11) Chips
Crowder (5)	G	(4) Fesmire

Substitutions: Carolina — Eckert (2), Cheek, Redding (2), Reuning (2). Elon — Marshburn, Koontz, Haithcox (6), Crosby, Beard.

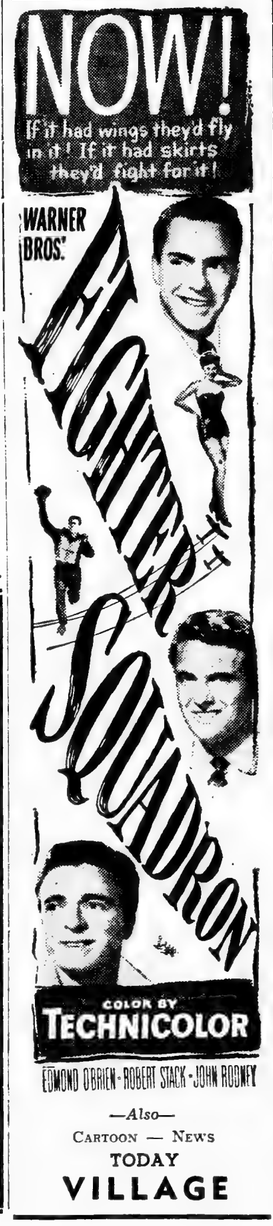
YOUR TELEPHONE must take hard knocks as they come—and go on working.



To make sure it can, we test samples of each day's production and put telephones through the equivalent of years of service in a few hours or days. For example: we drop handsets into their cradles 22,000 times—equal to 4 years' normal use. And not just once, but from 16 different positions, we drop sample telephones from desk-top height onto a hardwood surface. We even check their feet to be certain they won't scratch your table.

Here at Western Electric, we've been making Bell telephones since 1882. But telephones themselves are only about 6% of the equipment used in your service. The other 94% includes wire, cable, switchboards, trucks, poles, tools, office equipment. With the exception of buildings, we make or supply almost everything Bell telephone people use—and test it with utmost care.

Guarding the quality of things used in your Bell telephone service is one way that Western Electric helps to make it the world's best.

Phi Assembly Will Hold Elections At Meeting in Old East Tonight

The Phi assemby will hold its quarterly elections this evening at 7:30 o'clock in Phi hall, New East.

All committee reports for the fall quarter are scheduled for presentation during tonight's meeting. Speaker Pro-tem Winfred Ervin in responsible for the comulative report of the Ways and Means committee. Dave Sharpe, treasurer, will report the financial status of the Assemby. Peter Gerns will give a summary of the actions of the Carolina forum.

Outgoing officers include Speaker Bob Coulter, Speaker Pro-tem Ervin, Treasurer Sharpe, Critic Ernie House, Clerk Page Dees, Sergeant-At-Arms Fred Newton and Parliamentarian Gerns.

Plans were made last week's executive for new types of activity for the winter quarter. Under special consideration were means of improving debate in the Assembly and ways of increasing membership. A resolution to permit any students, including Communists, to join the Phi was tabled indefinitely, on a motion by Rep. John Giles.

University.

Present at the meeting were Controller W. D. Carmichael and Assistant Dean of Students Bill Friday. Carmichael spoke to the group on the feasibility of forming such a council. "You people have a chance to do something great for the institutions that you represent," Carmichael said. "And not only for them but for North Carolina in general in the present and in generations to come.

"Actually what we are in the middle of now will depend on what you go back to your school and do" he continued. "I think that this meeting is a wonderful step toward coordinating a better University."

At a general discussion Jess Dedmond president of the student body, spoke on the general objective and approach of the organization. "I had an original idea from which was born a second idea," he said. "And this second idea has taken root. In such a council as this we would work any way we might through the administration to better relations of the three schools, legislatively and socially, as well as others."

This meeting marked the first time that any form of rules has been brought to the attention of the council.

CPU Discusses Spanish Issues At Sunday Meet

"Franco-dominated Spain" was the topic for discussion at the meeting of the Carolina Political union Sunday evening in Graham Memorial.

A general report of the present situation in Spain was presented by Marvin Nathan at the beginning of the discussion. Nathan gave a brief history of modern Spanish government and the rise of the Franco regime, showing that a dictatorship exists under the government now. The Falange Espano is the only political party allowed by Franco, Nathan pointed out.

The CPU agreed that the United States refusal to include Spain in the Marshall plan was justified in the light of America's policy of aiding only countries which have democratic governments.

Rip Ryan drew wild applause and loud cheers from the crowd shortly before the end of the game when he drove through the middle, lost his balance and made an impossible-looking backward layup.

Again Scott emptied the bench and sixteen players, all that dressed for the game, saw action. The subs more than held their own and increased a 31 point lead to 34 points when the final gun went off.

The next home game for the Tar Heels will be with Catawba on Thursday night in the local gym. Game time is 8 o'clock with a freshman preliminary at 6.

Oskeroff Talks to IZFA Meeting; Tells of Plans for Summer Camp

Leo Oskeroff, vice-president of the Southern Region of the International Zionist Federation of America, from the University of Florida spoke to a joint meeting of the Duke, State college, and the University chapters of IZFA in the Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial Saturday at 2:30.

Oskeroff was introduced by Irvin Greenspon, president of the University chapter. Oskeroff gave a report on the Region Executive committee which met Nov. 15. He also told of plans for an IZFA summer camp for the southern region.

Francine Mellon gave a report of the University chapter's program for the year, which will include ten study groups, several folk art groups, and numerous guest speakers.

Bea Kaminetsky of Duke, gave a report on the formation of a chapter at the Durham School.

Mac Katzen reported on the organizating work and membership drive now being conducted at State college in Raleigh.

The big event of the year for the IZFA will be the Southern Regional convention slated to be held in Birmingham, Alabama next April.

Mitchell Is Chosen Forum Chairman

Herbert Mitchell, student legislature representative on the Carolina forum, took over the chairmanship of the group after a unanimous vote of the members following the resignation of Charles O. Long, yesterday afternoon.

Mitchell, a sophomore, has distinguished himself in debating and student government since he entered the University as a freshman following his graduation from Asheville high. He is at present chairman of the legislature Ways and Means committee and has served on the varsity debate squad for the past two years.

The election of Mitchell came after Long offered his resignation at a 4 o'clock meeting yesterday on the basis that he felt, "The chairman of the Forum should be in office from December to December, in that the planning for each year is based upon these dates."

He added, "I of course will continue to work closely with the Forum to help as much as possible in the future planning."

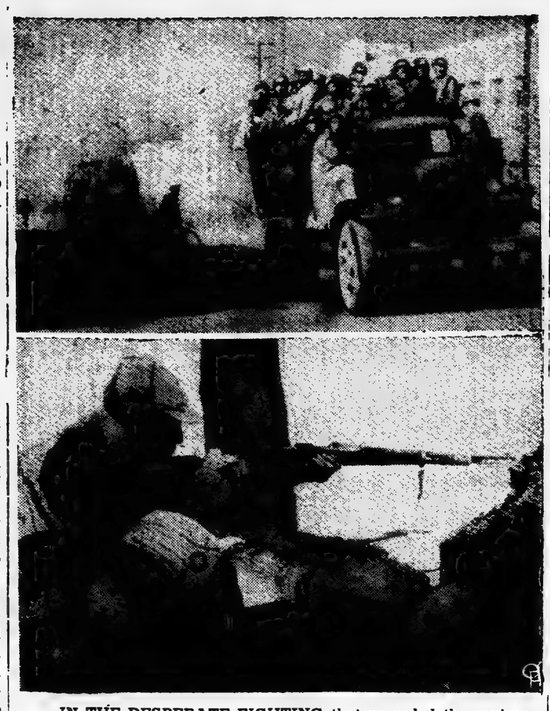
Mitchell said when he accepted the group's decision, "We shall continue the programs already initiated and we hope to expand during the winter and spring quarters in order to bring more top-flight speakers to the campus. In this way we shall have fulfilled our purpose."

AROTC Review Held as Climax To First Quarter

By Leonard Dudley

Led by the newly organized field music band, the Air ROTC staged a dress review yesterday afternoon on Fetzer field as a climax to the first quarter of training for this year.

The group was divided into two squadrons for the review, with squadron A being made up of juniors and seniors and squadron B of freshmen and sophomores. All cadet officers in command of the squadrons and flights were from the senior class.



The band has been organized only in the last week and is under the command of 1st Lt. Wade Surrett Jr. 2nd Lt. W. B. Thompson is band adjutant and Cpl. Bob House is drum major.

Prior to the staging of the review, the group went through a short drill in the manual of arms and received directions as to how the review was to be staged.

Squadron A was commanded by cadet officers Cort M. Nance Jr., Grady A. Hutchins, and Max Shaw with Bob Gray as adjutant. Squadron B was under the command of Cadet officers J. D. Brown, Albert F. Howell, and Clyde Smithson with John D. Greene as adjutant.

Other cadet officers who participated in the review were Col. Paul J. English, Robert M. McAllister, James W. Geiger, Grey Adams, and William J. Claybrook.

Col. Byron R. Switzer, commanding officer for the Air unit said that there would be another review in January and a general inspection in the spring. These reviews serve as final exams for students in the unit, Col. Switzer said.

Sense in Court Will Be Subject Of Law Talk

Dr. Ehringhaus To Talk Tonight

The Honorable J. C. B. Ehringhaus, former governor of North Carolina, will speak on "Common Sense in the Courtroom" tonight at 7:30 in Hill hall under the sponsorship of the Law School association.

Former-Governor Ehringhaus is a native North Carolinian and a graduate of the University, holding the degree of AB, LLB, and LLD. He has had a long record of public service in North Carolina, being a state representative from 1905-08, a district solicitor from 1910-22; and governor from 1933-37. In addition, he is also a trustee of the University and a member of the executive committee of the Board of Trustees.

Having practiced law in North Carolina since 1903 and having enjoyed a wide and varied practice, Governor Ehringhaus is well qualified to speak on the chosen subject.

The speech will be open to the public and anyone from the campus or town will be welcome.

SP Wins Seven Of Ten Seats In Legislature Runoff Vote; Only 700 Voters Go To Polls

Class Tickets Will Be Ready After Holidays

"After Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock, Jan. 4, students who fail to pick up their class tickets at Memorial hall will be charged $5 before they will be allowed to register for the winter quarter, and their class tickets will be returned to the class ticket boxes," Edwin Lanier, chairman of the registration committee said yesterday.

Class tickets for the winter quarter will be available in Memorial hall Monday, Jan. 3, from 9 o'clock in the morning to 10 o'clock that night, and Tuesday morning, Jan 4, from 6 to 8 o'clock.

After Jan. 4, at 8 o'clock in the morning, pre-registration will be cancelled, class tickets will be returned to the class ticket boxes, and a $5 charge will be made for registration for the winter quarter.

Dropping and adding courses will be limited to Jan. 4, 5, and 6. Fall quarter grades will be ready with the class tickets.

If sickness, which may be verified by a physician's written statement, makes it impossible for a student to call for his class tickets for the winter quarter by 8 o'clock Tuesday morning, a student should write, wire, or phone that fact to Mrs. George N. Vann, Registration hall, here at the University. Class tickets will be held for these students. Students are asked to notify Mrs. Vann promptly if they find that they cannot return at all for the winter quarter.

This is the first time this system of distributing class tickets has been used. Prior to this quarter class tickets have been issued before the holidays. This method proved unsatisfactory because some students would lose their tickets, or would drop out for the quarter and fail to notify the proper authorities, Lanier said.

DR. JOHN REDHEAD

Doctor Redhead Chosen to Lead Religious Week

Dr. John A. Redhead Jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Greensboro, will lead the Religious Emphasis Week to be held Jan. 23-27.

Dr. Redhead, who was the commencement speaker at the University several years ago will lead the religious week through a convocation address and four evening addresses.

This is the seventh campus on which Dr. Redhead, preacher of the Presbyterian Radio hour, has led a Religious Emphasis week.

He has led the religious programs at such places as West Point, Clemson and Davidson colleges, and also gave the opening address at the Presbyterian Youth Convention of World Missions.

Dr. Redhead, who has contributed articles to the American Pulpit Series, and Presbyterian Outlook, was graduated from Southwestern university and the Union Theological Union seminar in Virginia. He was awarded a doctor of divinity degree from Davidson college in 1937.

Dance Bids Ready To Go Out Today

Bids to the Charlotte-Carolina club Christmas dance will be available in the Y from 9 until 1 o'clock every day this week, beginning this morning.

The dance will be held at the Hotel Charlotte December 28 and will feature two dance bands and a two ballroom arrangement.

UP Gets 1 Seat In Runoff Race

By Herb Nachman

The Student party yesterday walked away with a total of seven seats in the Student legislature out of the 10 which were at stake in the runoff election.

Voting was extremely light. Only 723 ballots were cast in the legislature race. Seats were available in the five men's dormitory districts and one women's dorm district.

Late official returns from the Women's Honor council and the Coed senate ballot showed the following coeds elected:

Coed senate, four seats: Julie Competon (151 votes), Pat Denning (134), Charleen Greer (143) and Marie Nussbaum (137). Muriel Fisher was eliminated with 132 votes, only two less than her nearest opponent.

There were six 12-month and four six-month terms available. SP captured four of the 12-month terms and three in the six-month bracket.

The University party, which swept 10 seats in last Tuesday's general election, was limited to only one in the runoff. Bob Kirby won a 12-month term in district 2.

Running second in yesterday's race was the Campus party which took one 12-month and one six-month terms.

None of those elected went in with large margins except Walt Carnes (CP) who took 105 of the total 167 votes cast in district 1. His opponent Andy Bell (UP) received 62.

Two of the SP candidates went in six votes ahead of their opponents. Ed Best (SP) beat out Bob Smith (CP) by only one vote for six-month term in district 5.

Al Winn, chairman of the Elections board said last night that no official statement could be made until today as to which party, if any, will have a majority in the Student Legislature.

But the complete official results of the elections, both general and runoff, is as follows: Of the 27 seats available, UP took 11, SP took 10, CP took three, SP-CP two and SP-UP one.

A breakdown of six and 12-month terms is as follows: UP took 10 for 12-months and one for six-months. SP five for 12-months and five for six-months. CP garnered two for 12-months and one for six-months. SP-CP got one six and one 12-month terms. SP-UP took one for 12-months.

Phi Bete Takes 58 in Ceremony At Carolina Inn

Fifty-eight University students were initiated into Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic honor fraternity, at ceremonies at the Carolina Inn last night.

A 59th, Sidney Paul Brooks, a former School of Commerce student here from Warsaw, who was killed in an automobile accident in Raleigh last spring, was awarded the honor posthumously.

Following the initiation the new members were entertained at a banquet at which Chancellor Robert B. House was the principal speaker Dean Ernest L. Mackie, correspondent secretary-treasurer of the local chapter, presided.

This year's officers, in addition to Dean Mackie, are Louis H. Thacker, Greensboro, president; Joseph F. Jones, Winston-Salem, vice-president; Herman O. Coleman, Morganton, recording secretary. They are elected on a basis of the three top average grades maintained in the organization.

Listeners Can Hear 'Choo Choo' Tomorrow, DUK

Avid Carolina listeners will have an opportunity to hear Charlie "Choo Choo" Justice talk about the 1948 football year over the local American Broadcasting company outlet WDUK at 11:15 tomorrow night.

Norman Barnes, a student in the University Radio department recorded an interview he conducted with Charlie and sent it up to ABC network. The transcription was accepted and will be used Thursday night on the regular Joe Hasel show.

Huse to Deliver Humanities Talk In Gerrard Hall

First Humanities lecture for the school year will be delivered by Dr. Howard Huse of the Romance languages department plurality of 2,138,129 votes over tonight in Gerrard hall at 8:30.

Open to the entire University community, the lecture will be on "Dante's Divine Comedy," with explanation and discussion for a general audience.

A graduate of the University of Chicago with a Ph.D. from the same institution, Dr. Huse has been on the University faculty at Chapel Hill since 1920.

Washington Alumni Arrange For DC-4 Flights to N.O.

It will be possible for students to spend New Year's Eve at home, eat Sunday breakfast there, and still see the Tar Heels in action in New Orleans Jan. 1.

The Washington D. C. Alumni association has arranged with the World-Wide Travel Service corporation to charter several non-stop DC-4s to make the Sugar bowl trip. Planes will leave Washington at 7 o'clock in the morning, Jan. 1, and will arrive in Winston-Salem at 8:15 to pick up local fans. Three hours later, the football enthusiasts will be in New Orleans.

There will be ample time for sight-seeing, as well as taking in the gridiron classic, agency officials announced. The return trip will get underway at 1 o'clock in the morning, Jan. 2, getting into Winston at 5:45. Passengers to Washington will get there at 7 o'clock Sunday morning.

Tour prices include breakfast and lunch aflot on the southbound flight, and a midnight snack on the northbound flight. Bus transportation to and from the field is included, as well as all federal taxes.

Reservations should be made not later than Friday. Full payment will be required at the time space is reserved. No refunds will be made on tickets cancelled after Dec. 15 unless space so cancelled is resold. Applications shoud be made to Richard O. Covington, 2627 Connecticut avenue, N.W., Washington (8), D. C.

Courts Martial Revamp Approved

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7—(UP)—President Truman today approved sweeping changes in military justice regulations to permit enlisted men to sit as member of courts-martial.

By executive order, Mr. Truman prescribed a new manual for Army courts-martial to be put into effect Feb. 1.

Previously only officers have been members of courts-martial. The new manual makes enlisted men eligible when requested by the accused.

The new manual is based on recommendations of a special civilian committee on military justice, a House Military Affairs subcommittee and veterans' organizations. The changes were authorized by the peace-time law enacted last June 24.

Army Secretary Kenneth C. Royall said the new system provides "the means of a better and more suitable administration of military justice."

Student Recital Set for Today

The sixth in a series of student recitals will be presented this afternoon at 4 o'clock in Hill hall, and the public is cordially invited.

The program is as follows: "Dry Those Eyes (Pelissier), "I Have a Silent Sorrow" (Reinagle), Jack Clinard, tenor, Sam Andrew, piano; "Impromptu in E flat major" (Schubert), Wallace Zimmerman, piano; "Etude in C minor" (Chopin), William Hudgins, piano; "Poeme d'un Jour" (Faure), Richard Cox, baritone, Jeanne Fornoff, piano; and "Chorale Preludes" (Brahams). Richard Rancourt, organ.

PTA to Discuss State Situation

The much-discussed recommendations of the North Carolina Education commission will be reviewed tomorrow night when the Chapel Hill Parent-Teachers association meets in the Elementary school at 7:45 o'clock.

Teachers will be in their classrooms to meet the parents before the discussion and the meeting will be called to order at 8 o'clock.

The State Education commission will be reviewed by W. H. Plemmons, executive secretary of the commission, and recommendations for improving the state's schools will be summarized by Guy B. Phillips.

The educational finance program will be discussed by John W. Umstead, Jr. and Clarence Heer, both members of the State Education commission, and Gordon Blackwell will summarize the recommendations and legislative action needed to have them adopted.

President Truman Got No Majority, But He Made It

NEW YORK, Dec. 7—(UP)—President Truman was elected with less than a majority of the total popular vote cast in the Nov. 2 election United Press tabulations showed today.

The tabulation, with the official count from 42 states and unofficial from six, showed a total popular vote of 48,682,679.

Of these, Mr. Truman received 24,059,194 votes, or 282,145 fewer than half the vote already tabulated.

The president, however, had a pluraity of 2,138,129 votes over Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, whose popular vote was 21,921,065.

Other presidential candidates polled these votes:

Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, States' Rights Democrat, 1,169,240.

Henry A. Wallace, Progressive, 1,148,797.

Norman Thomas, Socialist, 139,109.

Minister Hits College Sports

A minister accused the University of Wisconsin today of "prostituting" its athletes.

The Rev. Kenneth L. Patton, who attracted attention when he declared himself a "colored man" in order to fight racial discrimination, charged that the school's athletic policy was a "Roman circus."

"The cheap sensationalism and profit taking, the exploitation of the athletes—that is those who are not being groomed with loads of free publicity for a fat killing in professional athletics after graduation—make the university resemble nothing more than a prostitute," Patton said.

Weather Toll

By United Press

The nation's death toll in accidents caused by bad weather since Saturday stood at 28 today, and rain-swollen rivers in the South threatened to boost the total even higher.

Although a near-blizzard in the Midwest was replaced by clear and cold weather after taking 18 lives, flood waters of the Flint river roared through downtown Newton, Ga.

VFW Will Seek UMT Passage First; Housing, Vet Benefits Also on List

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7—(UP)—Veterans of Foreign Wars leaders today agreed to fire their biggest guns in behalf of Universal Military Training during the next session of Congress.

Passage of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner long-range housing bill will be their second most important objective.

Direct veterans' benefits were shoved down the scale as the VFW National Legislative committive drew up its 1949 priority list.

Committee Chairman J. R. Klawans of San Francisco said national security will be VFW's first legislative objective, with UMT holding the top spot in the security category.

Other key points in the VFW security aims include stronger espionage laws and creation of a trained civilian defense organization for use in emergency.

The veterans' groups housing demands will include all major features of the controversial T-E-W bill, including provision for building 100,000 units of public, low-rent housing annually for five years.

Blood Donor List for Sick Student Mounts; Six Have Right Blood Type

Although over 75 students and townspeople responded to the blood donor call for 19-year-old freshman Marx Hugh Deal who is still in critical condition at Duke hospital. More donors are needed.

Miss Peggy Kinrey of the Infirmary yesterday, said, "I've been swamped by donors. It really is wonderful. I have also received requests from volunteers to be put on the permanent blood donor list. Everybody is more than cooperative."

Up to press time, there have been only six persons whose blood matches Deal's. It is blood type "O" with a negative RH factor. Dr. W. G. Morgan described Deal's condition from the latest information he had from Duke as, "Critical, still bleeding and much the same." Deal had an operation about three years ago in which his spleen was removed, thereby increasing the seriousness of his internal intestinal hemorrhage.

Move It Over

COLUMBIA, S. C., Dec. 7.—(UP) — A proposal that the University of South Carolina be moved to a new site got the full backing of the Gamecock student body today.

Students met yesterday to discuss the suggested transfer away from the present campus in downtown Columbia. The vote was more than 90 per cent in favor of shifting.

Baptist Pastor Backs Up Beer, Is Booted Out

FAYETTEVILLE, Dec. 7—(UP)—The Rev. Kenneth M. Linder, a slight, sandy-haired Baptist minister with only a faint Scottish burr in his speech, conferred with his pretty wife today and wondered what his next move would be.

Because he had come out openly in favor of legalized beer and wine sales in dry Cumberland county, he lost both the pastorship of the Immanuel Baptist church and his membership in the Baptist Ministers' Association.

Because he didn't have the endorsement of his church, he couldn't go back to being an Army chaplain—the life he left to become a civilian minister here.

The Rev. Linder's troubles started not long after he spoke at a round table discussion, sponsored by Fayetteville's Junior Chamber of Commerce. He said that he referred legal sale of beer and wine to prohibition.

It was then that the Ministers' Association voted to exclude him, the Rev. Lindler said. He went to his congregation and asked them if they wanted to exclude him, but his Board of Deacons asked him to stay, he added.

That was in September. Last week, the same deacons came reluctantly to his home and asked him for his resignation. They were forced into it, they told him.

The Rev. Lewis B. Gaines, an executive board member of the South River Baptist Association, had told them their church would be ousted from the association unless they "disciplined" pastor Linder, the little minister said.

The deacons also asked him not to attend services at his Immanuel Baptist church last Sunday, he said. He went to Fort Bragg to go to church. In his stead, a Fayetteville sporting goods store employe, J. B. Kinlaw, preached the Sunday sermon.

The Rev Lindler said he became a Baptist when he left his native Scotland to come to the United States. At home, he had been a member of the Congregational church.

Southern Industry Reported at Meet

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 7—(UP)—Delegates to the Southeast shippers advisory board heard a pre-convention statement today that the South "has developed faster than any other section in the past few years in industrial output."

C. L. Denk, Jr., general chairman of the Shippers board, noted industrial progress in the South. Denk is general traffic manager for Fulton Bag and Cotton mills, Atlanta, Ga.

Some 200 representatives of railroads, industry, commerce and marketing registered for the board's quarterly meeting tomorrow.

Blue-Eyed Blond Just Wants Santa To Put a Man Under Christmas Tree

DAYTON, O., Dec. 7.—UP)—Mrs. Beatrice Hodge Demolet, 35, would like to find a man-size gift under her Christmas tree this year. In fact, that is just what she wants—a man.

Mrs. Demolet, a blue-eyed blond with "a figure just as good as any of the models you see and read about," wants a nice man, about 35 years of age, to take care of her and her two sons.

"He must have at least $3,000 to $5,000 in the bank so we can buy a home and extra pieces of furniture and he must have a good, steady, dependable job," she said today as she talked with newsmen in her neat apartment here.

"I am pretty lonesome," she continued, "and want a man around here whom I could love and wait on, something that I always like to do.

"I want to find a husband with whom I can be happy and one who has a big heart and a good character."

The pretty divorcee has other qualifications besides her curves, blue eyes and long blond hair.

"I am a very good housekeeper and like to work," she said. "I am also an excellent cook, but I love to bake best of all."

Mrs. Demolet's two previous experiences with married life were not happy ones. She married when she was 19, she said, to a traveling salesman. That marriage ended in divorce. Her second marriage, to a Dayton man, also ended in divorce — the day before Christmas last year, she said.

James, 17, her son by her first husband, is now attending high school here. The second son, Dennis, is two.

'Prostitute' Is Banned From Chi

CHICAGO, Dec. 7—(UP)—The play, "The Respectful Prostitute," was banned today from Chicago theaters.

Police Commissioner John Prendergast said if the play opens as scheduled Dec. 27, police will close the Studebaker theater.

A spokesman for the theater said the play would be canceled unless the police ban is removed.

Police censor Capt. Harry Fulmer said the play, which ran 318 performances in New York, was "composed of the most base immorality throughout and also is a gross insult to the colored race."

The play's main character is a prostitute who is encouraged by a Southern senator to accuse a Negro of crimes committed by the senator's son.

The girl eventually realizes she has fallen into a trap, but she is

Murder Returns To Prominence Of Pre-war Days

AMES, Ia., Dec. 7—(UP)—One area of the American scene is rapidly betting back to pre-war normal status, a sociologist reported today.

That area is murder.

Professor Walter A. Lundeen and six graduate students at Iowa State college came up with the conclusion after a careful study of murders in this rich agricultural state from 1940 to 1941.

During the war, they found murders were unpopular. The rate dropped drastically. But by 1946, the crime began hitting its pre-war frequency again.

The reason lies in the way people think, Lundeen said.

"When people say or think, 'The world is my apple. I want to get all I can while the getting is good,' murder rates are high," he said.

That is the current attitude.

"But when people say or think, 'What can I contribute to make my home town better?' murder rates go down," he added.

That was the war-time attitude.

Lundeen said that Iowa's 50 slayings in 1946 are more than the total of any two World War II years. In the pre-war years of 1936-39, Iowa averaged 46 slayings a year, he said.

The veterans as a group, the study found, are among the most law-abiding when it comes to killing.

"Only a small fraction of the murders have been committed by veterans," Lundeen said. "Only five of the 1946 killings were by veterans."

The study of 149 slayings from 1940 to 1946 shows that 85 per cent of the killers and 61 per cent of the victims were men, Lundeen said.

But a woman is more likely to kill children than a man, Lundeen reported.

"Divorced and separated persons are killers and victims more often than married or single persons in proportion to their numbers," he said.

Jap Survivor Of Attack Says He's Had Enough

NAGOYA, Japan, Dec. 7—(UP)—Kazuo Sakamaki, only Japanese survivor of the midget submarine attack on Pearl Harbor seven years ago today, has had enough of war.

He says he is "not so happy" about the world situation, but adds:

"If another war comes along, I would want to stay out of it—remain strictly neutral."

Sakamaki, 30, works quietly as a clerk in the Toyoda truck company here. He is a moderately happy man, married to a bride of his own choice and the father of a round-cheeked, almond-eyed son.

He no longer believes that he disgraced himself, his family, his ancestors, his country, the imperial Japanese navy and his emperor by being captured after his submarine grounded off Pearl Harbor.

He is glad he became the first Japanese war prisoner of World War II.

But seven years ago, Sakamaki was one of five officers who set forth in five midget submarines ready, indeed eager, to die for the glory of his country in the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor.

Each submarine carried two persons and was 74 feet long, weighed 30 tons, had a maximum speed of 24 knots and a cruising range of about 400 miles, and was equipped with radio transmitters and two bow torpedoes.

"I said goodbye to the captain of the mother sub and 10 minutes later we surfaced so that we could enter our midget submarines," he said.

"It was then I got a nasty shock. My gyrocompass was out of commission. Why, I don't know. There was no time for repairs. After consulting the captain, I decided to attempt to make the journey anyway."

Without the gyrocompass, Sakamaki said he found his craft almost unnavigable and unmaneuverable.

"But I finally got to the entrance to Pearl Harbor just before 7 a. m.," he said. "We were to attack at 7:50."

For the next three hours, he said, he "hung around" Pearl Harbor trying to make repairs and trying to find a target.

Several times he surfaced and was depth-charged. He saw several small craft — minesweepers and destroyers—but he wanted to save his torpedoes for bigger game. Through his periscope he saw columns of smoke rising over the harbor.

The midget submarine grounded several times on reefs. Bilge water spread to the battery racks and deadly gases began to fill the submarine. Depth charges rocked it.

Sakamaki swam for the shore of what he thought was Lanai. His companion was drowned.

Collapsing on the shore, Sakamaki remembered nothing more until he was shaken by an American soldier pointing a pistol at him. He found he had been traveling in circles and was back on Oahu.

Ammo Carrier Remembers Day Of Jap Attack

HONOLULU, Dec. 7—(UP)—Harold R. Lindstrom, who helped carry ammunition in the battle of Pearl Harbor seven years ago today, would rather fight again than have his son go to war.

Lindstrom was a shore-based U.S. Navy storekeeper, just turned 21, when the Japanese attacked America's Pacific headquarters.

Today, he is back at Pearl Harbor as a chief storekeeper, 28 years old, with a wife and three children. Their son, Richard, is two years old. The two daughters Diana Lee, 7, and Sandra Patsy, 6, were by his wife's previous marriage, but he has adopted them.

"I think there is little chance of a Pearl Harbor attack now," Lindstrom said. "But another war looks likely. I never did trust the Russians. It might as well come quick. I'd sooner fight than have my son fight."

Lindstrom had been up until 3:30 on the morning of Dec. 7, 1941, celebrating the completion of two years service in the Navy. He was annoyed when a buddy woke him and told him the Japanese were attacking Pearl Harbor.

Hurriedly dressing, Lindstrom saw the battleship Oklahoma listing before she capsized. He saw Japanese planes making torpedo runs against other battleships.

One Japanese plane flew so low, he said, "I coulda hit it with a rock."

Spiker Resigns, Takes New Post

Miss Sina Spiker, who rejoined the staff of the University of North Carolina press in July of this year has resigned effective Dec. 15 to become editor of the University of Wisconsin press at Madison.

Miss Spiker has been responsible for the editorial handling of the University catalogues and bulletins since she returned to the press after doing special editing for the Historical Section of the Army.

Mrs. Rachel Johnson Batson will join the press staff replacing Miss Spiker. Mrs. Batson, sister of Dr. Cecil Johnson of the University faculty, has a master's degree in French from the University.

THE EXECUTION OF SEVEN JAPANESE war criminals has been delayed by the United States Supreme court pending review of their case. It was originally supposed the Japs would go to the gallows yesterday, just seven years after Pearl Harbor. The war criminals are, left to right: Lt. Gen. Akira Muto, 56; Gen. Seishiro Itagaki, 63; Gen. Heitaro Kimura, 69; Hideki Tojo, wartime Japanese premier; Gen. Iwone Matsui, 70; Gen. Kenji Doihara; Koki Hirota, 70. They "hang" over a picture of the U. S. destroyer Shaw, its magazine exploding from three direct bomb hits during the Jap carrier plane attack on Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941.

Impersonations Have to Share Time With Study

Impersonator Fred Fussell, a senior from Rose Hill, in some way manages to tend his studies and then find time to spend many of his nights putting on performances in various towns and cities throughout the state.

Fussell began impersonations in early grade school, and since entering the University has performed at the Vets club, Rendezvous room and at dances and parties on campus. His childhood epertoire consisted of only 10 mpersonations butn ow he has increased the number to about 50.

Cities in which Fussell has performed recently include Winston-Salem, Wilmington, and Durham. His bookings are secured by the North Carolina Entertainment bureau of Chapel Hill.

Fussell is majoring in physical education and says he hopes to go into a coaching career upon graduation. Of course, he intends to keep up impersonations as a sideline.

During the war Fussell was a member of a U. S. O. troupe which performed for the Navy. He was also a newscaster and disc jockey on a small ship which carried Fussell's own program.

Fussell's repertoire includes movie stars, commentators, radio personalities, singers, and also animals.

Student's Choice

HICKORY, Dec. 7.— (UP)— Lenoir Rhyne college students had their own candidate today for the next president of the college. He was Walter T. Nau, popular romance languages department faculty member.

Raymond Bost, president of the college's student body, said the students had approved a resolution recommending that the college's trustees consider Nau for the post. He would succeed Dr. P. E. Monroe, who resigned Sept. 24 but continued to serve until a successor could be named.

Raleigh Bids Sold to 13th

Laddie Terrell and Charles Bryan, who are in charge of the ticket sales for the Raleigh-Carolina club Christmas dance, announced yesterday that Dec. 13 absolutely would be the last day on which tickets for the dance will be available.

There are representatives of the club in each dormitory, fraternity, and sorority selling tickets. The dance will be held on Wednesday, Dec. 22, in the Virginia Dare ballroom of the

Walter Pritchard Eaton Does Article On Theater Enthusiasm in This State

Walter Prichard Eaton, widely known author and critic, former professor of playwriting at Yale university, who is now visiting lecturer in the University of North Carolina department of dramatic art, says in an article in the New York Times drama section that he thinks "the theatre enthusiasm which Frederick Koch aroused in North Carolina may very possibly emerge groups of young people equipped to play a part in the decentralizing of our theatre."

Tracing the history of the Carolina Playmakers, famed drama group that "Proff" Koch (who died in 1944) founded here almost 30 years ago. Eaton brings the work of the students here up-to-date by describing the new policy of encouraging the writing of full-length plays by graduate students in drama, and, in a sense, "de-emphasizing the one-act 'folk' play."

Graduate work was permitted in drama some few years ago, and now a playwright can secure his M.A. here with a satisfactory full-length play, he explained.

"But of even more significance is a new workshop course in which qualified graduates may enroll to work on some definite project not for academic credit but solely better to fit themselves for practical theatre employment," Eaton continued.

"Playwrights may work entirely on their plays, and if they have sufficient merit they will be produced. Three such plays will be shown this year. One-act plays are still written by undergraduates and others in the department, but only a limited number are produced . . .

"In short, the one-act 'folk' play has been de-emphasized at North Carolina; the long play, carefully worked over by more mature students, has been made more prominent, and standards of writing and production are kept fresh by the painstaking presentation of plays from the world's repertoire."

U.S. Joe College Would Drop Commas If He Were Moved to South America

By Doris Thomas

Joe College in the United States would probably drop commas and jumble his chemistry formulas if he were suddenly transferred to a South American university!

Dr. A. C. Howell, professor of English and secretary of the faculty, explains that the Latin American universities, as well as the students, are quite different from ours. He has recently returned from two years leave of absence during which he served as visiting professor of English in the faculty of humanities at the Universidad de San Carlos de Guatamala.

This Guatamalan university, established in the 16th century, is the third oldest in the western hemisphere. With Dr. Howell's arrival, it was the first time in its history that a regular English course had been offered as a part of the curriculum. Dr. Howell was instrumental in the establishment of an institute of English studies during his stay there.

Comparing the universities of Latin America with those in the United States, Dr. Howell said the Spanish ones are usually purely technical or professional. A liberal arts education as we know it taken for cultural edification is practically unknown and a bachelor's degree in South America is awarded for what we would class as high school or junior college work.

The university students are not much older in South America," Dr. Howell said, "but they are predominantly men and are definitely training for professions." The women students are usually planning a teaching career, he explained.

At the University of San Carlos, there are seven different faculties and each division of the university, such as the medical school, education school, or law, is located in a different part of the city, so there is no campus as such.

The members of the medical faculty teach only "med" students, the law faculty only law students and so on. It is quite different in our universities where a "med" student might take English courses in the English department, math in the Mathematics department and chemistry in that department.

In South America, Dr. Howell explained, the medical school would have its own teachers for these courses and so would the other schools. "In fact," Dr. Howell smiled, "I am the first professor at the University of San Carlos to teach students from all different faculties in one class."

Note of Explanation

Seldom does the Daily Tar Heel consider it necessary to explain the adding or dropping of columnists from its pages, but to avoid any misconception as to why Bill Robertson has been discontinued we feel an explanation is warranted.

Columnists are free to write as they please so long as their writings are not libelous and are not offensive to good taste. Robertson violated the journalistic precept of good taste by using his column not for honest surveys into the merits of Communism or "democratic socialism," as constrasted with the faults of a capitalistic democracy, but almost exclusively for the propounding of adjective-colored Communistic propaganda.

An example of his distortion of fact is the reason he gave for being dropped from the Daily Tar Heel. For two hours Saturday afternoon he discussed his dismissal with the editor and members of the staff. His column on the Confederate flag was not once mentioned, yet in his next column he asserted: "What hideous crime of mine caused the sudden reversal? On November 30 I attacked the custom of displaying the Stars and Bars; this apparently offended the sensibilities of certain persons."

It would have been more accurate had he blamed his dismissal upon the misspelling of Charlie Justice's name in the same column.

Robertson was not dropped because of his communistic views per se. As a newspaper, The Daily Tar Heel is in an almost unique position. It does not belong to its editor nor to the University. It is the property of its readers, the students of the University. Because of this, its editorial policy is to please as many of the students as much of the time as possible. Bill Robertson failed in this objective as was evidenced by the continuous barrage of letters to the editor and continuous verbal complaints to the staff. This is the sole reason that Robertson's column has been discontinued.

Robertson is not being "suppressed." Like any other student he is free to use the Write Away column whenever he wishes.

Few to the Thousand

Here at the end of the quarter while praise is being passed out to certain students who will not be back next quarter, one person who certainly deserves a share is a quiet unassuming guy named Monroe Landreth. It is almost axiomatic that if you want anything done you should look for the busiest man in town and he will be the one to take the job and do it well. Since 1946 when he returned to school, Landreth has been that busiest man in student activities.

Never one to push himself into the limelight for the sake of public acclaim, Landreth has been the type of person to whom responsibilities gravitate because he is capable of shouldering them. Whenever student government leaders or University administrators had a job which they wanted to be sure was done well, it was quite often Monroe Landreth who ended up doing it.

After Landreth's name in this year's Yack there will be quite an imposing array of extra curricula activities, but the list will not indicate the amount of effort he put into each and the success with which he accomplished his tasks. As the student adviser in Stacy dormitory he sparked the freshmen living there to a new high in class spirit. He served as pledgemaster of the commerce fraternity and was one of the better orientation counselors. As chairman of the Grail committee for the sale of senior rings, profits from which go into a scholarship fund, he sold more rings in three months than are usually sold in a year. A Charlottean, he reactivated the Charlotte-Carolina club following the war and made it the most active city club on campus. He was a leader in the formation of the Campus party, and under President Tom Eller served as chairman of the Student Audit board.

The Landreths of the human race come mighty few to the thousand, and it's a shame, because the Landreths are the one type of person of which the world can never have a surplus.

Bouquets And Cows

By Charlie Gibson

O. K., a Bouquet: Snapdragons to Bill Buchan and Lincoln Kan, two of the most diligent DTHenchmen. As Bill and Lincoln are leaving us these days, let this be their obitchuary. We are grateful as they go; they both put painstaking and sincere effort into this page. But merrily must we roll along. . .Take a lookey at Betty Lokey! . . . .Orkids to Dean Weaver, 32, and Jess Dedmond, 30. Our dean of students may be two whole years older than the student body president, but it is a draw as to who works harder to keep the wheels rolling for best student interests. . .A peony to the punster who started the latest coed slogan: "A thing of beauty has a boy forever."

This is the pre-EXdAMn period when the University laundry might send you a true billet doux. Ever received one of their brilliant one-cent post cards notifying you that your laundry is being held because your deposit ran out on the current bundle and you owe—let's see now—one cent? Praised be Allah that when the flood came Noah had paid his local hardware dealer for the last nail in the ark.

UNCharacters: When her advertising class toured the Durham Herald-Sun Weddy Thorpe witnessed all the processes of dummying, lineotyping, teletyping, engraving, cut etching, Duplex press printing, and city-wide distributing. Later someone asked what was the most interesting procedure that she had seen, and Weddy raved about the Sun receptionist's knitting argyle socks. Three-colored, too. . .Tight Saturday nighters have been known to throw away their bottles around St. Anthony Hall when they saw a blue dog. "Ruark" is a real-live hound—a rare Currie blue terrier, no less. Anybody found a purple cow yet?. . . When campus cohorts want to dress up bare dormitory walls, going to Esquire for decorations is nothing new. But leave it to roommates Charlie Britt, Dover Moore, George Grizzard, and Drennan Mann to be different. This foursome ignored the mountable pinups in the Pervert's Home Companion; they looked instead at a picture of a model college room and got an idea. What went up to fill the gaping space? Now specially ordered travel posters of France and Quebec give room 1 in Pettigrew the effect of a first-class traveling agency for hoboes.

The SPartisans already elected to the legislatuure should be as hard pushed to keep busy as Jack Benny's pennies. Their party vowed that while in office, they would do their utmost to advance: another Scuttlebutt; a better infirmary library; recreation centers in men's dorms; a campus-wide radio station; etc. What, no poolrooms or better airplane parking lots? Why, the one CP electee so far is lucky that his gang didn't promise constituents personal cuspidor polishers.

History Histerics: How much education can one get? A stoogent tells of a prof here at the University who (so help him, Ripley!) gave an entire lecture's-worth of statistics on how many cows were in Argentina in 1843. Gad but I would much rather learn how many twists and turns the asp took before it fanged Cleopatra. . . .Understand two fraternities are at verbal war over whose Lee has mere assets—the KA's Robert E. or the Kappa Sig's Claudia. Peace, lads, both may be known for well-figured manuevers; but who ever considered the General's pictures gorgeous?. . .Carolina Quarterly says of an author: "She has been interested in poetry ever since her anti-beer poem caused a sensation in the second grade." My, these child prodigies!. . .But seriously, those who lacked the interest to vote in the run-off yesterday are the same who will complain loudest if what is run off eventually is the whole idea of student government.

New Step In Cooperation

By Jess Dedmond

The Greater University of North Carolina Student Council, first announced to the campus on October 19, may now be considered a practical reality. Last Sunday Martha Fowler, student president at the Woman's college, and Fred Kendall, president at State, brought their respective delegations to meet with a delegation from Chapel Hill. At that meeting we all found happily that we could have a unity of thought in one specific project and a unity of purposes for the present council and for those to come.

While the idea had its origin in Chapel Hill it was gratifying that it had caught fire at both State and Woman's college. From State came a statement of principles. The Woman's college provided a photographer and newsman. Chapel Hill provided the meeting's preliminary work and, regretfully, the minority delegation. Everyone provided ideas.

Discussion of more than three hours made us of one mind in a mutual desire for cooperation and regard for each other. We were of one mind in our hope that our action would presage a new consciousness by students on our three campuses that we have one university; that this should be true in the minds of all students as well as in the minds of those who fathered the consolidation program originally and who are today lending their efforts toward making a greater university for North Carolina as a result of consolidation.

The statement of principles adopted is succinct and appropriate. We believe in the following:

1. That unity and cooperation, and the development of a friendlier spirit among the students of the three units of the Greater University is an idealistic objective worth striving for, and is one which might eventually be of great benefit to all concerned, including not only the students of our individual institutions, but also the people of North Carolina.

2. That this cooperation must be based upon mutual esteem, honesty of leadership, and the consideration of conflicting needs.

3. We will attempt to lead the student bodies to an understanding of the realities of the University Consolidation act, and the benefits to be received from implementing the Greater University idea at the student level as follows:

. A. Enjoying the advantages of each other's facilities as much as possible.

B. Taking pride in each other's accomplishments, both in education and athletics.

C. More frequent and more cordial social intercourse.

On these principles the stage has been set for friendship, cooperation, and joint efforts toward objectives common to all. On them there should begin a new era in Greater University student relations

Chit-Chat

'Diamond Lil' Comes Back

By Jack Gaver

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—(UP) — Mae West rolled back the calendar 20 years in Montclair, N. J., last week. Quite successfully, too.

The occasion was her reappearance in the title role of "Diamond Lil," that spoof of sex, crime and the Gay Nineties which she wrote and starred in at the Royale theater back in 1928; on April 9 of that year to be exact. The play ran 176 performances here at that time and was good for a couple of seasons on tour. It actually laid foundation for her subsequent great success in the movies.

A trip to nearby Montclair, where operator Al Rosen has the attraction in his theater for a couple of weeks, showed that the play and Miss West can still be great entertainment if accepted in the spirit with which they are presented. Just relax and enjoy the antics.

Miss West, who seems more blonde, more sinuous and more expert than ever, has her customary good time playing the role of the Bowery queen who takes romance where she finds it so long as it pays. Diamond Lil winds up with a police captain who has masqueraded as an incorruptible Salvation Army man in order to get the goods on her current boy friend, a saloon keeper-politician-white slaver.

This, of course, was the play that launched that famous invitation — "Come up and see me sometime." If memory serves me properly, the original closing line of the play, spoken by Lil to the police captain, was "I always knew you could be had." The final line now is "I knew you'd come up and see me sometime."

The present production, designed for a full season of touring, is more elaborate than the original. The records list only 20 persons in the 1923 cast. There are now 50 persons involved, most of them for atmospheric hits. Also a number of vaudeville turns have been injected at the beginning of the second scene of the last act. They bring the story line to a dead halt, but no one seems to mind.

An example of this expansion is the hiring of Ray Bourbon, well known cafe entertainer, who does female and male character bits in the first act and impersonates a slumming society dowager in the final one.

Besides Miss West two members of the original company are on hand — Louis Nussbaum as Jacobson, the real estate agent, and Jack Howard as Bill. They're playing their original roles.

If "Diamond Lil" comes your way, be sure to see it.

Radio-movie star Judy Canova is in town seeing the sights and listening to a proposal by producer Paul Feigay that she appear in a Broadway musical for him. Which wouldn't be a bad idea because Judy could be an outstanding comedienne on the stage if given the chance. And she and the public both would benefit greatly if she could be presented as some character other than the hill-billy type she has affected for years. Such a change of pace—and she could handle it easily — would give much more scope to her career.

Stan Kenton announced he is breaking up his band at the end of its engagement at the Paramount theater late this month. He finds that night clubs, theaters and concert appearances restrict his type of musical entertainment. He needs a few months to lay the groundwork for new plans.

Singer Vic Damone joined headliner Joe E. Lewis at the Copacabana this week and scored well with the customers. The 19-year-old crooner has come a long way in the past two years but he still goes home to the folks in Brooklyn. . . . Le Directoire closed its doors last week. This club, which opened with a big splash last spring, was never able to get started this fall . . . Gigi Durston became the featured singer at Le Coq Rouge . . . The Terrace room of the New Yorker hotel resumed its ice show policy after a brief hiatus. Gardner Benedict's orchestra is the new attraction along with the show. The band is well known in the middle west, but this is its first eastern appearance.

Producer John Golden has completed plans to present Paul Muni in a revival of the late Sidney Howard's "They Knew What They Wanted," which won the Pulitzer prize 24 years ago. The play will be in rehearsal shortly and open here early in the new year.

Write Away

Why Get Excited?

Editor:

Attention Charlie Long:

Really Mr. Long, I fail to see why you are so excited about our fine President's action with regard to changing the election date. Why shouldn't he violate the constitution if he feels that it is in the best interest of the student body (to violate it) ?

But if he is to assume this power, why not make it legal? Let's just throw away the present constitution and simply draw up a list of suggestions and hope that we (the students at UNC) continue to elect fine officers who have only the best interests of the complete students body.

UNC has long been known for its famous "student government." Maybe it should be "ONE student government."

Bob Padrick

P. S. Do I recall reading that Mr. Dedmond's objection to the TMA constitution amendment was "precedent"!!!!!

Get Rid of Hearst

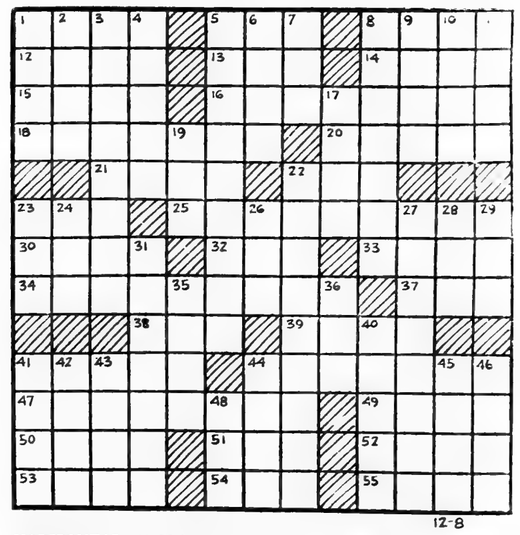
Editor:

I am writing to demand the immediate removal from your "liberal" newspaper of the daily King Features' "canned cartoon." King features is owned by Hearst. A long time ago Charles Beard said that no one with intellectual integrity would touch Hearst with a ten foot pole. In the DTH he is not only touched but embraced!

Today's (Dec.3) cartoon really did it for me. It's about the most vicious cartoon I have ever seen. With industry profits at an all time high of 20 billions, your paper has to do its bit to smack labor below the belt. In labor I include those of us struggling to make ends meet on the GI bill with fantastic prices. Thanks.

In line with the same vicious myth that wages cause high prices, I'd like to inform you that the average textile worker in the Carolinas makes $1,680 a year and produces about $50.00 in profits. Put that in a cartoon, my liberal friends!

Again I want to repeat emphatically—get Hearst out of the DTH. I can stand your ignorant, irresponsible editorials, such as the one on China: at least they are indigent. If we must have reaction, at least let it be your own product.



Sidney Shanker

Violation Blasted

Editor:

AIf my rights of freedom of speech here at the University allow me (and if not, God deliver me from the ever efficient (?) pains of the big Men's council) I would like to take this opportunity of upholding Mr. Long's condemnation of Mr. Jess Dedmond's intentional violation of our constitutional provisions. The outrageous upholdinng of such action by the Student council should also be awarded juicy onion blossoms to the man. Do I hear a note of admittance of their mistake in chaiman Bill Mackie's statement of supposed apology: "In the future this body will not uphold any similar violations." You're right Bill, come happy elections day clear thinking students will oust Mr. Dedmond, you and your cohorts out of those heretofore sacred (?) offices on your ear.—Nuts to all such politicoes!

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

What's He Holding

COACH TOM SCOTT let the bars down on his 1949 cagers last week in Woollen gym before some 3,000 slightly-puzzled fans who couldn't figure out exactly what to expect from the Tar Heels come the long, cold winter. It was like sitting across the poker table from a man drawing but one card and wondering whether he is trying to fill out a straight, flush or full house.

Since the opener the Tar Heels have tumbled back on the hardwoods on two occasions, but genial gentleman from Kansas has yet to show his hand. The competition hasn't forced him to do anything yet, but sit and wonder how his combination will hold up under calls when the big chips go down. Lenoir-Rhyne, Elon, and Guilford could do little more than ante.

Friday night the Tar Heels will do the calling themselves when they journey to Winston Salem to face powerful Hanes, the team that hosed stately State college in the season's opener. It will be the locals' first real test of the season against an echelon of ex-Tar Heels—Bob Paxton, John Dillon, and Don Anderson—who would love to prove they really earned their BS degrees of basketball science.

New Paces, New Faces

TO COMBAT the mill menace, Coach Scott has an assortment of performers that Whitman would love to package. Currently he deploys Coy (Hit) Carson and newcomer Hugo Kappler up front, with Nemo Nearman remaining the big center attraction while Rip Ryan and Dan Nyimicz bring up the rear. Together they play a slightly different type of offensive than Scott first brought to Carolina.

The old system of set plays has undergone a pace-lifting with the attack built around Nearman in the pivot and strictly ad lib from there. In the opening games there has been a smattering of good fast break and individual give-and-take plays that aren't too sensational but have an odd way of winning ball games. That is seemingly what Mr. Scott has in mind for the season.

Carson looks like the point getter at this point. He gets the most shots and uses this mathematical advantage to gain the most baskets. He bears watching by both fans and opponents. His gunning mate, Hugo Kappler, is a new face that will stand a load of spectating before the season is over. Kappler seems to be the brightest of the new twinkles in Tom Scott's eyes. He began feeling at home on the range of the Woollen baskets Monday night, hitting six times from the floor. The lad from New York shows more than promise of raising the Tar Heel cage stock a needed few points.

Baskets on Tap

NEMO NEARMAN is back in the pivot to the delight of the local high schoolers and those who like to see rebounds resound in Carolina hands. Nearman is not a million dollar middleman, but he can and will handle some big scoring deals for the Scottmen from the post position. If he can keep a few more baskets on tap for the Tar Heels during the season, the cause will greatly profit.

Ryan and Nyimicz, as unlike as any two pea-shooters that ever crawled in the same pod, balanced out the first five. Ryan is the playmaker of the outfit, displaying passes that have the dice players worried. He is an occasional driver and hitter from outside, but spends most of his time and talent assisting team mates in their scoring efforts. Nyimicz is a set artist whom it doesn't pay to ignore when he gets both hands on the ball. He plays the boards like he was born on them.

Behind the first line, come replacements Thorne, Tsantes, Deazy, Bennett, and Mitchell, of as yet undescribable quality. Charlie Thorne seems to have mastered the ropes the best thus far, with the others still getting a good grip on the proceedings.

Looking Ahead

THE OVERALL OUTLOOK has a definite maybe tendency. The possibility that Bill Miller may return to the active fold brightens the picture, while the schedule ahead throws the dimmers back on the scene.

State, headed by Dick Dickey, the indoor Charlie Justice, has a team several stone and free throws ahead of the Tar Heels at present, while the neighboring Blue Devils gave some kind of notice holding Hanes to a single point victory. Davidson, too, is rumbling something.

Which puts Tom Scott back on his favorite spot, with everything to win and nothing to lose but 23 ball games.

Tempo of Grid Drills Steps Up

With one eye turned toward the widely renown two-team system, West Carolina's Tar Heels went through their second day of newed practice yesterday afternoon on Navy field. Light drills were again the order of the day yesterday, but Coach Bill Snavely is expected to be cracking the whip with renewed vigor today as he drills his charges for their all-important New Year's day clash with the Oklahoma Sooners in the New Orleans' Sugar bowl.

The Tar Heels took a brief respite from their grid drills last week as they took a holiday off after ending their tedious ten-game regular season schedule.

Reports from Oklahoma indicate that Coach Bud Wilkinson's Sooners are pouring on the coal in preparation for the tussle in an attempt to add a final touch of polish to their already glowing record. The Sooners rely mainly on the offensive phase of the game, whereas Carolina, with the widely renown two-team system, equally accents both the offensive and defensive side of their grid battles. This balance of grid power may in the long run prove to be the deciding factor when the no. 2 and no. 3 teams of the nation go against each other in New Orleans.

Both teams will have two All-American representatives in the Sugar bowl battle. Carolina will lead with its one-two aerial punch, Charlie Justice and Art Weiner, while the Sooners will counter with defensive stalwart Paul "Buddy" Burris and quarterback Jack Mitchell, an offensive whiz.

Coach Snavely has warned the Tar Heels of the power laden Oklahoma attack and has been drilling his defensive combine with intensity all week. A great deal more work looms for the Carolina defenders, however, who ranked as one of the nation's best defensive units during the

Tar Heels Ranked Over Notre Dame; Wolverines First

Carolina's Tar Heels, benefiting from a 14-14 tie between Notre Dame and Southern California this past weekend, moved into second place in the final national football ratings by Paul Williamson. Michigan which held the top position for most of the season, was idle Saturday and held on to its first-place spot.

Notre Dame, which previously had been in second, dropped down to fourth in the final Williamson ratings. Oklahoma, which will oppose Carolina in the Sugar bowl, advanced to third, behind the Tar Heels and Michigan.

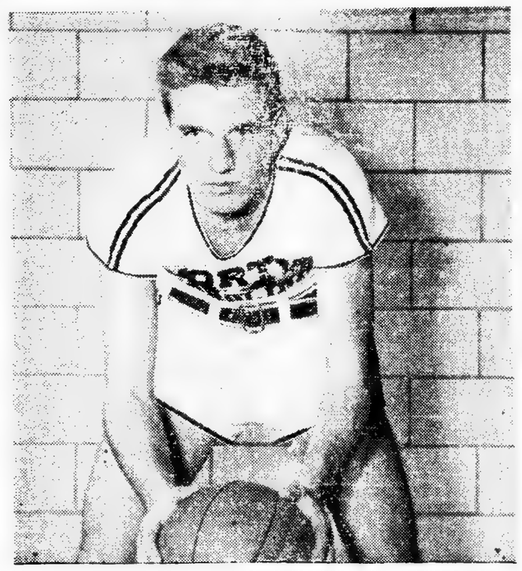
Rounding out the top ten in this order were Army, Georgia, Clemson, California, Northwestern, and Tulane. Army previously had been in third place for the majority of the ratings, but dropped in prestige when tied by Navy, a team which hadn't won a game all season.

Of the 20 teams which Williamson rated in the top 20, 14 were picked to finish in this select group in pre-season ratings. The Tar Heels were ranked ninth at the outset of the year. Oklahoma had a similar jump—from 14th prior to the season to third.

Williamson's ratings were particularly pleasing to officials of the Sugar bowl. North Carolina, second, and Oklahoma, third, will be participating teams. The Rose bowl, the "grandaddy of them all," can boast the eighth-place outfit California and ninth-place Northwestern.

Biggest drop in Williamson's pre-season ratings was that experienced by Texas. The Longhorns were ranked second by Williamson but finished 20th.

Bednarik Chosen Lineman of Year



NEW YORK, Dec. 7—(UP)—Charles Bednarik, the University of Pennsylvania's All-America center, today was named lineman of the year in a United Press nationwide poll of sports writers and broadcasters.

The son of a Bethlehem, Pa., steel worker, Bednarik ran away with the lineman of the year poll, receiving 115 of the 301 votes cast. His closest rival, guard Bill Fischer of Notre Dame, received 48 votes and guard Paul Burris of Oklahoma was third with 22. Both Fischer and Burris also were named on the United Press All-America.

Northwestern center Alex Sarkisian was next with 19 votes, followed by ends Richard Rifenburg of Michigan and Leon Hart of Notre Dame, each with 11.

Len Szafaryn, Carolina tackle, and All-American end Art Weiner were also among those receiving votes for the Lineman of the Year honor. Szafaryn received five votes, and Weiner was named on one ballot.

Newcomer at Forward

Hugo Kappler, sophomore transfer student from Georgia, has broken into the starting lineup for Coach Tom Scott's Tar Heel cagers. Kappler, after a slow start, regained his scoring punch against Elon this week, tallying 14 points.

Grantland Rice Names Weiner To 1948 All-American Eleven

By Zane Robbins

Art Weiner, rangy Carolina end from Newark, New Jersey, has been picked by Grantland Rice for a first-team end position on Look's 1948 All-America eleven. This is the second first-team All-America berth given Weiner this year. He was also named to the New York Sun's All-America which picked only eleven players.

Weiner, a 212-pound Junior, stands six feet three and one-half inches tall and is one of the most outstanding flankers to perform below the Mason-Dixon line in many years. He is one of the most dependable performers on theTar Heel squad and has added much to the Carolina aerial attack during the past three years. He teams with Charlie Justice another All-American, to give the Snavelymen one of the most feared passing attacks in the nation.

His adeptness at carrying the ball on the elusive end-around play makes the rangy Tar Heel end an even more valuable asset to the Carolina eleven. In referring to the ability of the great Tar Heel flanker, Rice stated that "he adds speed to the team."

Freshman Game

The Tar Baby cagers will be seeking their fourth victory in as many starts tomorrow night at 6 o'clock when they engage Catawba's jayvees in a preliminary to the varsity game.

Coach Jim Hamilton has expressed deep concern over this clash and anticipates a real scrap for his charges, but he feels his starting five of Buddy Johnson and Dick Harter at forwards, John Bowersox and Ham Crowder at guards, and Lenny Guyes at center can add another victim to their record.

Rifle Team Posts Three-Two Record In Five Matches

Leonard Dudley

The Naval ROTC rifle team has won three out of five matches fired so far this quarter, Maj. B. W. McLean, who is in charge of the team, reported yesterday.

The matches include victories over the University of Illinois, University of Wisconsin, and Illinois Tech. The locals were defeated by the University of Idaho and the University of Rochester.

Scores for the individual matches include a 1743 to 1687 win over the University of Illinois in a ten shot match; a 896 to 852 win over Wisconsin in a five shot match; and a 1759 to 1731 win over Illinois Tech.

The losses include a 906 to 870 score against the University of Idaho and a 910 to 913 score against Rochester, both of which were five shot matches.

Each team is composed of five men firing five or ten shots in four different positions, depending on the type of match. For a five-shot match each man fires a total of 20 shots with a possible score of 100 or 1000 for the entire team. In the ten shot match the number of shots per man is doubled as is the possible total score.

Members of the team are J. H. Smith, R. A. Harris, H. C. Fisher, H. Schoolfield, W. R. Bradshaw, W. W. Rhoades, H. L. Fremd and T. J. Peterson.

The team is scheduled to fire a shoulder-to-shoulder match with the Duke team after the Christmas holidays, Maj. McLean said. A total of 14 matches remain to be fired in the winter quarter with the team switching to pistol firing in the spring quarter.

COED TENNIS

In the final set of the coed tennis tournament Sunday, K. D. Durham defeated B. A. Pope for the championship. The scores were 6-3 and 6-2.

Writers Choose Oosterbaan As College Coach of Year

Bennie Oosterbaan
. . . coach of coaches

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—(UP)—Bennie Oosterbaan of Michigan, whose 1948 varsity football team, which was crowned by an undefeated season today was named Coach of the Year in the 14th annual poll of the New York World-Telegram and associated Scripps-Howard newspapers.

Oosterbaan received 61 first-place votes in a nationwide poll of 762 football coaches to become the second successive Michigan coach to win the award. His predecessor was Fritz Crisler, who turned over the Wolverine coaching reins to Oosterbaan this season to devote full time to his job as Athletic Director.

It marked the first time a college ever had furnished the Coach of the Year two seasons in a row.

Second to Oosterbaan in the balloting came Lynn (Pappy) Waldorf of California's unbeaten Golden Bears who will be the Pacific Coast representatives in the Rose bowl. Waldorf, who won the first Coach of the Year award as Northwestern mentor in 1935, received 33 first place votes.

The coaches cast votes for three colleagues on a 5-3-1 point basis but only the first place votes were counted in the ballot. Second and third choices are taken into account only in the case of a tie in first place ballots.

Third in the poll was Bob Voigts of Northwestern, whose Wildcats will meet California in the Rose bowl, New Year's day, with 22 first place votes. Coach Frank Howard of Clemson's undefeated Southern conference champions, was fourth with 15.

Matty Bell of Southern Methodist was fifth and Tuss McLaughrey of Dartmouth sixth. Each was the top choice of 13 balloters, but Bell attracted more second place votes. Rounding out the first 10 were Charles (Bud) Wilkinson of Oklahoma, Frank Leahy of Notre Dame and Bob Higgins of Penn State, each with 11 first-place votes, and Carl Snavely of North Carolina with eight.

Cagers Prepare For Indian Tilt

Carolina's basketball team is scheduled for another lengthy practice session today in preparation for their game with Catawba in Woollen gymnasium tomorrow night.

The Tar Heels spent yesterday afternoon in Woollen polishing up on their offensive and defensive game and reviewing their over-all play in the first three games. To date the Tar Heels have hung successive defeats on Lenoir Rhyne, Guilford and Elon by wide margins.

Forward Coy Carson, who tossed in 64 points in those first three games, has teamed up with rookie forward Hugo Kappler and center Sherman (Nemo) Nearman to provide most of the scoring. Guards Rip Ryan, Dan Nyimicz and Charlie Thorne have sparked the Tar Heel floor game.

Tomorrow night's game will be the last of a four-game series of warmup contests. Friday night the Tar Heels will journey to Winston-Salem where they will meet the Hanes Hosiery five, first of several very formidable foes

PROVE CAMEL MILDNESS FOR YOURSELF!

Prove for yourself what throat specialists reported when 30-day smoking test revealed

NO THROAT IRRITATION due to smoking CAMELS!

MAKE YOUR OWN 30-DAY CAMEL MILDNESS TEST. Smoke Camels, and only Camels, for 30 days. Prove for yourself just how mild Camels are!

Hundreds of men and women, from coast to coast, recently made a similar test. They smoked an average of one to two packs of Camels a day for 30 days. Their throats were examined by noted throat specialists. After a total of 2470 examinations—these throat specialists reported not one single case of throat irritation due to smoking Camels!

But prove it yourself . . . in your "T-Zone." Let YOUR OWN TASTE tell you about the rich, full flavor of Camel's choice tobaccos. Let YOUR OWN THROAT give the good news of Camel's cool, cool mildness.

Money-Back Guarantee!

Try Camels and test them as you smoke them. If, at any time, you are not convinced that Camels are the mildest cigarette you ever smoked, return the package with the unused Camels and we will refund its full purchase price, plus postage. (Signed) R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, North Carolina.

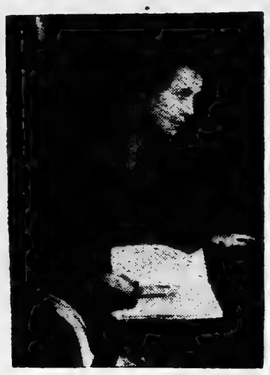
According to a Nationwide survey:

MORE DOCTORS SMOKE CAMELS THAN ANY OTHER CIGARETTE

Doctors smoke for pleasure, too! And when three leading independent research organizations asked 113,597 doctors what cigarette they smoked, the brand named most was Camel!

YWCA Will Give Christmas Party For Coeds Tonite

The YWCA will give its first campus-wide Christmas party for coeds tonight at 8:30 with the whole Y building as scene for the festivities.



Games will be underway in all five rooms of the building and coeds will progress from room number one to room number two and so on until they have visited each room and participated in all the games. Refreshments will be served during the evening and the party will end with a group Christmas sing led by Lanier Davis.

Emily Ogburn, chairman of the party, has asked that everyone bring an unwrapped present for a child from 6-13 years. Any one wishing to give a gift who is unable to attend the party may bring the present to the YWCA office before Friday.

All presents placed under the big Y Christmas tree are to go to the 150 students of the White Cross school some 10 miles outside of Chapel Hill. Pupils of the school are furnishing greenery for party decorations.

Touring 'Hamlet' Show To Be Here January 17

MARGARET WEBSTER

The Margaret Webster Shakespeare company will present "Hamlet" here in Memorial Hall on Jan. 17, under the sponsorship of the Carolina Playmakers. The company, whis is on a seven months' tour, opened in Buffalo, Sept. 26, where during a week's stay, it presented its premieres of "Hamlet" and "Macbeth."

Tickets for the production are priced at $3.30, $2.20, and $1.10, and are available at the Playmaker business office in Swain hall. All seats are to be reserved.

The appearance of the Margaret Webster Shakespeare company is a milestone in theatrical "road" history because it is the first Broadway-standard repertory to barnstorm the nation's colleges, universities and public auditoriums. Miss Webster's New York productions of the Bard have set a mark which, Drama Critic John Mason Brown declared, "not one has surpassed or in any way approached."

Abetting Miss Webster is a company of 22 young actors, veterans of her many presentations, headed by Carol Goodner, Joseph Holland and Alfred Ryder. Miss Goodner is well remembered for her more recent roles in "The Man Who Came To Dinner," "Blithe Spirit" and "Deep Are The Roots." Mr. Holland last appeared on Broadway with Katharine Cornell in "Antony and Cleopatra." Last season, Mr. Ryder sandwiched Ibsen's "Ghosts" with Eva LeGallienne between movies for Paramount.

The Webster productions of "Hamlet and "Macbeth" were designed by Wolfgang Roth, and the music arranged by Lehman Engel.

Redballing over the countryside in specially constructed bus and truck, complete with scenery, costumes, props and electrical equipment, "Shakespeare On Wheels" will cover over 40,000 miles by the end of its tour which was arranged by S. Hurok and the National Concert and Artists Corporation.

Stores to Close Both Holidays

Stores of Chapel Hill and Carrboro will be closed Christmas and New Years days, it was decided at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants Association Saturday morning.

According to Vic Huggins, president of the organization, some merchants have elected to remain closed December 27. This date, however, is optional.

Downright Cruel

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—(UP)—Emily Post, the first lady of etiquette, thinks it is questionable taste to ask a woman's age.

And when she's 75, it's downright "cruel."

A United Press correspondent assigned to write a biography of Mrs. Post called her today and asked the date of her birth, which is omitted even in "Who's Who."

"It's cruel to drag it in," Mrs. Post protested. "It's October 27, 1873. But I never mention it if I can help it. It seems to be an anchor around my neck that I can't get away from. Seems the older I get the more interested people get in my age. Now if I were approaching 100 . . . Where is this going to be printed?

"It's for our files," the correspondent answered.

"Oh, an obituary," Mrs. Post exclaimed. "Well, if they're not going to print it until I'm dead I don't care."

OFFICIALS WANTED

All students who are qualified and are interested in refereeing Intramural basketball games during the winter quarter are requested to come by the Intramural athletic office, room 311, Woollen Gym today or tomorrow. There will be a short meeting of all basketball officials Thursday night at 7:15 in room 311 between the freshman and varsity games.

The Carolina attack, meanwhile, has not been idle. All-America sparkplug Charlie Justice and All-Southern Hosea Rodgers have been working hard on the passing and running attack all week. Billy Hayes has also been working out with the passers, and Bob Kennedy has been working with Justice on the perfection of the double-safety crossover play that has caused Carolina opponents so much trouble all year. Art. Weiner, Max Cooke, and Kenny Powell have been on the receiving end of most of the Carolina passing in early drills.

Fraternity House Discussion Group To Hold Meeting Tomorrow at YMCA

Gene Turner, representative from Phi Delta Theta fraternity, announced yesterday that there will be an organizational meeting of all fraternity presidents and their representatives in the new House Discussion group tomorrow at 2 o'clock in the Y.

The House Discussion group started as an experiment on the part of four fraternities to encourage better relationship between themselves, between the faculty and the fraternities, and to promote better knowledge of the issues confronting the nation and the world today.

"So far the Delta Kappa Epsilon, Delta Psi, Sigma Chi and Phi Delta Theta fraternities have achieved excellent results in our experiment," said Turner.

The participating members of the House Discussion group select their own speakers and topic and with the cooperation of the Y planning board they initiate the programs. The future plan of this organization is to correlate the sororities and the dormitory groups into a unified discussion group. "We hope that we can contribute to the growing cohesiveness between dormitory men and fraternity men by such a plan," said Turner.

At present the group has invited members of sororities to their meetings, and has extended invitations to all interested members of the student body whenever the fraternities hold such a round-table meeting.

The new group has received "enthusiastic support" from the members of the faculty and administration. The mass meeting scheduled for Thursday at 2 o'clock is for the purpose of presenting the successful experiment to the other fraternity groups.

-All-American-

Weiner broke into college ball with a bang, scoring a touchdown against VPI on his first play in 1946. In 1947 Weiner caught 19 passes for 396 yards and ran ten end-arounds for 83 more yards. This year he scored six touchdowns, caught 31 passes for 468 yards, and carried the ball on end-around plays on seven occasions for a gain of 47 yards and an average of 6.6 yards per rush.

Weiner joins George Barclay, Andy Bershak, Paul Severin, and Charlie Justice as the only All-American gridders in the history of the University. He is the third Tar Heel end to gain the honor. Bershak and Severin were the other flankers given All-American laurels.

Outgoing Students Must Tell Laundry

Students leaving the University after this quarter are asked to leave home and home address at the University laundry office, 106 West Franklin street, so that laundry refunds may be mailed to them.

PKS Names Homan Pledge President

Vote Knocks Out Party Rule

HERE IS A GENERAL VIEW OF THE CROWD, estimated at between 200,000 and 300,000 persons that staged a giant rally in front of Berlin's university to "acclaim" Friedrich Ebert, Communist, "Mayor" of the new Eastern Government for Berlin. Ebert was "selected" as mayor by a rump assembly, set up in opposition to the duly-elected Assembly which was frowned upon by the Soviet authorities. The non-Communists parties of Western Berlin successfully resisted half a dozen attempts by strong-arm squads from Herr Ebert's Socialist Unity (Communist) party to break up their recent political meetings.

Landreth Tapped By Golden Fleece

MONROE LANDRETH

In an unprecedented peacetime ceremony held before dawn yesterday morning Monroe Landreth, special student from Charlotte, was tapped into the Order of the Golden Fleece, highest honorary organization for men at the University.

Black-robed figures with fleece across their shoulders entered Landreth's room in Stacy dormitory, sounding a gong, and tapped him on the basis of character and service to the University.

Annual Fleece tapping usually is held in the spring in conjunction with the Valkyrie sing. However, this precedent was broken during the war when students were tapped in special predawn ceremonies, because there was no time for the annual tapping ceremonies in the spring. Yesterday was the first time a student has been tapped in a special ceremony since the war. Landreth is leaving school at the end of this quarter.

Chosen for distinctive records in special activities and general all-around excellence of character and leadership, Landreth is the 451st member of the organization.

He is the assistant exchequer of the Grail and chairman of the Senior Ring committee, student adviser, pledgemaster of the commerce fraternity, member of the Dance committee, and orientation counselor.

Landreth reactivated the Charlotte-Carolina club and was president for two years. He was a leader in the foundation of the Campus party, and served as chairman of the Student Audit board under Tom Eller.

The 45-year-old organization was founded by Dr. Henry Horace Williams, famous philosopher-scholar, with the initiation of eight students, including Phillips Russell, now a member of the English department.

Four Officials Attend Rites For Dr. McCain

Rutledge Gives Talk in Memory

Dr. Frank Graham, Dr. W. R. Berryhill, Dr. E. G. McGavran and Dr. J. B. Bullitt attended a memorial ceremony in honor of Dr. Paul P. McCain, late superintendent of the North Carolina Tuberculosis sanatorium, Tuesday afternoon in Sanatorium.

U. S. Supreme Court Justice Wiley Rutledge, who had been a patient of Dr. McCain at the sanatorium, delivered the address of commemoration.

Dr. McCain was chairman of a committee of the North Carolina Medical Care commission for the expansion of the UNC medical school to a four-year school.

UP Solons Control 22; SP Second

Campus Party Has Six Seats

By Herb Nachman

It will be anybody's ball game in the Student legislature next quarter with no party having a maajority, according to figures released yesterday by Al Winn, chairman of the Elections board, and Jack Worsham, clerk of the legislature.

Worsham said that as far as he knows all 50 seats of the legislature are filled. Rumors yesterday indicated that there are still a number of vacancies due to resignations. However, Worsham reported he knew nothing of the reports.

"As far as I can judge, the Student legislature is filled," he said.

At present, the University party has a seven-seat margin on the Student party. UP has 22 seats in the assembly and SP has 15. The Campus party runs third with six seats.

But the double endorsements may make the difference in voting. SP-CP double endorsements control four votes. SP-UP have two legislators and CP-UP have one.

This gives the Student and Campus parties together a total of 50 per cent of the seats. Actually, UP may control only 22 since the other three seats are split CP-UP two seats and SP-UP.

Previous to the election, UP had a safe majority in the legislature. There were 27 openings to be filled. Of the 23 that remained, UP had 11 to itself, SP had five and CP had three. Double endorsements took care of the other four.

After yesterday's runoff, the 27 available seats were split with UP taking 11, SP 10, and CP three. SP-CP took two and the other went to SP-UP.

Thus, no party standing alone will have a majority since control of at least 26 seats is necessary.

Sharpe Elected Speaker of Phi By Acclamation

David Sharpe was elected speaker of the Phi assembly by acclamation in Tuesday night's executive session in Phi hall.

A hometown boy from Chapel Hill, Sharpe is a political science major who holds office on the executive board of Town Men's association, the Board of Directors of Graham Memorial, and Tarnation magazine. He has served as clerk and treasurer of the Phi.

Peter Gerns of Canton, Ohio, was elected to the office of speaker pro tempore. Gerns, senior majoring in political science, was recently elected president of the Inter dormitory council. He is secretary of the Publications board, treasurer of the Carolina Forum, vice-president of the Debate council, and a member of the Graham Memorial Board of Directors.

Other officers selected are treasurer, Bryan Griswold; critic, Charles Britt; clerk, Bernard Plemmons; sergeant-at-arms, Emily Baker; and parliamentarian George Rodman. Miss Baker is the second coed to hold the position of sergeant-at-arms in the 153-year history of the assembly.

During the meeting plans were announced for the first meeting following the holidays. Several members were chosen to deliver readings.

Commerce Group Initiates Seniors

Eleven senior commerce majors were initiated into the Beta Gamma Sigma honorary commerce fraternity yesterday in an impressive ceremony held in Graham Memorial. To qualify for membership a commerce student must have an overall average of 92.5, but no more than 10 per cent of the senior class may be initiated.

Only seniors are initiated at the fall ceremonies, while both juniors and seniors are included at the spring election.

Members initiated were Herman Coleman, Robert Dulin, Thomas Hanna, Hunter Heggie, Peter Lavin, Bruce Levin, Ira Lewis, Paul Mize, Clyde Moody, George Rabil, and Roy Stanley.

University Club Plans Info Booth In Roosevelt

A student booth handling rooming accommodations and other information in New Orleans will be set up in the Roosevelt hotel several days before the Sugar bowl game, the University club announced yesterday.

The booth will serve as a meeting place for students, and notes or messages may be left there for friends. Information concerning points of interest in and around New Orleans will also be available.

Cooperating with the University club in this service for students are Coach Bob Fetzer, athletic director, Dean of Students Fred Weaver, and University Alumni Secretary Maryon "Spike" Saunders.

Space Sold Out On Three Trains Homeward Bound

On the Seaboard railroad all reserved seats are sold out on the Silver Meteor, Silver Star, Silver Comet on December 16, 17, 18, and 19, going north and south. There is little or no pullman space available on these trains on the indicated days.

Only a few seats are left on the special train going to points south of Wildwood, Fla., leaving at 9:30 Saturday night, Dec. 18.

All seats are sold out on all reserved seat trains from points north from any point Jan. 1 and 2.

The service will conclude with each member of the congregation being given a lighted candle made of beeswax and trimmed with red paper as the traditional "Morning Star" is sung. Mrs. Kenneth Pfohl will be at the organ, and Rev. J. H. ray, Jr., assistant pastor of Calvary church in Winston-Salem, will be in charge of music. The band will be directed by Austin E. Burke, director of the United Bands of the Southern province.

Deal Now Has Enough Blood For Few Days

Dr. W. G. Morgan of the University infirmary said yesterday afternoon that donors had provided "enough blood for several days" for 19-year-old freshman Marx Hugh Deal, who was suffering from internal hemorrhage at Duke hospital.

"The supply is about six transfusions ahead," Dr. Morgan said. "The response of donors has been wonderful and we appreciate it."

The infirmary offical said, however, that all persons with type "O" blood are urged to leave their name, address and telephone number with the infirmary so they may be contacted and tested for Rh factor if more blood is needed.

More than 75 people have volunteered to give blood to help Deal in the last few days. Very few persons with "O" type blood have also had the necessary negative Rh factor, however.

German Reading Exam Is Slated

The German reading knowledge examination for commerce students will be held Saturday morning from 10 until 11:30 o'clock in Saunders 109, according to an announcement yesterday.

Bishop of Episcopal Diocese To Deliver Sermon on Sunday

The Rt. Rev. Matthew George Henry, D.D., bishop of the Diocese of Western North Carolina, will visit the Episcopal church in Chapel Hill Sunday.

Bishop Henry will preach the 11 o'clock sermon at the church Sunday morning and administer the apostolic rite of confirmation. At 8 o'clock Sunday morning, Bishop Henry will officiate at the service of Holy Communion at which time there will be a corporate communion of all students of the University from the Bishop's diocese.

Bishop Henry was born and reared in Chapel Hill which is still the home of his mother, Mrs. G. K. G. Henry and his two sisters, Miss Mary Henry and Mrs. Walter L. Moses.

He was graduated from the University in 1931 and from the Virginia Theological seminary in 1935. He served as Rector of Calvary Parish and Associated Missions in Tarboro for seven years and prior to his consecration as Bishop on Sept. 29 of this year was Rector of Christ church in Charlotte.

Before assuming his present duties, Bishop Henry held many offices in the church, serving on the executive council, the standing committee, and the board of examining chaplains of the Diocese, the board of trustees of the Thompson orphange, and as a representative of the Diocese of North Carolina at the provincial synod and the General convention.

Phi Gams to Hold Clothing Drive

A clothing drive to help the needy of Orange county will be held by the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity on Tuesday afternoon. Clothing donated by University students will be collected by members of the fraternity from dormitories and houses and turned over to the American Red Cross for distribution.

Additional information may be obtained from Dick Fleming at the Phi Gamma Delta house.

Greensboro Dance Bids Are Ready

Christmas dance bids for the Greensboro-Carolina club dance will be sold in the Y from 8 until 12 o'clock this morning and from 1 until 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The dance will be held at the Plantation supper club on Monday night, Dec. 20.

New Slate of Experimentals Scheduled for This Evening

The 127th bill of student-written experimental plays will be presented tonight and tomorrow night at 7:30 by the Carolina Playmakers. The three new one-act plays, which will be shown in the Playmaker theater, are admission free.

The first play will be "The Important Thing," by Edna Dooley, directed by graduate student Ruth Groce. The cast includes: Lou White, Colbert Leonard, Ellen Smith, and Nat White. Sidney Shertzer is stage manager, and Frank Echols is scene designer.

"The Winter's Harvest" by David Samples is the second play. It is directed by Mike Casey, and Iantha Smart is stage manager. Tommy Rezzutto designed the set. The cast includes Mildred Howard, George Upchurch, Irvine Smith, Edna Dooley and Charles Williamson.

The third play is Francis Michael Casey's "Dearie, Ye're a Dreamer." It is directed by David Samples, and Kim Kinney is stage manager. The author designed the settings. The cast includes Elizabeth Dawson, Estele Ritchie, and A. E. Westover, III.

Dan McIntyre is general stage manager. Costumes are by Sue Davis, and the lighting crew includes Murray McCain. Gwenn Finley, and Danny Hughes. Catherine McDonald and Louisa Lamont are handling properties, and Virginia Hamilton and Erle Hall are on the stage crew.

AVC Members Hear of Meeting

American Veterans committee members listened to an account of the recent national convention Tuesday night by local delegates Glenn Fisher and Henry Adams.

Adams reviewed the plenary sessions of the convention and gave a brief account of the problems the delegates worked on. He described the factional fight AVC engaged in to oust the Communists and commented on the amendments to the AVC constitution.

Fisher discussed the southeastern caucus of the AVC and other problems related to the convention. Fisher was elected representative at large in the steering committee while at the convention.

AVC members passed a motion last night to support the National Association for the advancement of Colored People in their fight against a Jim Crow case now pending in the state Supreme court. Members contributed approximately $20 to aid the cause.

Fidler Schedules Landscape Speech

A lecture on how to select a landscape for home display will be given by Joseph Fidler, art major, tonight at 7:30 in Person hall art gallery.

There will be a social hour following the talk. Students and the general public are invited to attend.

Late News Bulletins

Korean Regime

PARIS, Dec. 8.—(UP)—The United Nations political committee voted overwhelmingly tonight to recognize the American-backed South Korean regime as the only lawful government in Korea, and it set up a new Korean commission despite Soviet warnings that it would be boycotted by the Russian bloc.

Orders Peace

PARIS, Dec. 8.—(UP)—A special committee of the United Nations Security council tonight gave the Jews and Arabs of Palestine 48 hours to begin complying with council orders for withdrawals from the Negev desert and for full-fledged armistice negotiations.

Marshall Improves

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—(UP)—Prospects that Secretary of State George C. Marshall will be able to continue directing American foreign policy improved today as he made an "uneventful recovery" from his kidney operation.

Reinforcements

NANKING, China, Dec. 8.—(UP)—Chinese Nationalist reinforcements armed with new American supplies were rushed to the Suchow front today.

Pilch Hopeful

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—(UP)—John J. Pilch, president of the striking Chicago Printers' local, said today he is hopeful of a settlement "in the near future" of the prolonged walkout against five daily newspapers.

Sociology Talk Given by Odum

Dr. Howard Odum, head of the sociology department, spoke on the subject "What Is Sociology?" at a meeting of the Sociology club at Meredith college Tuesday night. The speaker was guest of the Meredith college sociology department at dinner at the Reinhardt house preceding the meeting.

Christmas Feast To Be Conducted By Bishop Pfohl

Bishop J. Kenneth Pfohl of the Southern province of the Moravian church will conduct the traditional Moravian Christmas lovefeast and candle service in the University Methodist church Sunday night at 7 o'clock.

This is the first time in many years that the service has been celebrated outside of Winston-Salem.

Guests of the Wesley foundation and the University Methodist church, Bishop Pfohl and members of the Moravian church choirs from Winston-Salem will join with the choir of the Methodist church in the celebration of the candlelight service.

Rev. I. Howard Chadwick, state director of Moravian student work and minister of the Fairview church in Winston-Salem, is in charge of the arrangements. Moravian students will serve specially prepared buns and coffee.

Rev. Brooks Patten, director of the Wesley foundation, says students and members of the University community are invited to participate in the service. "For the first time Chapel Hill will be able to share in this, one of the most beautiful Christmas festivals," he said. Owing to technical difficulties only those seated in pews will be able to be served. The church will accomodate about 500.

Election Was Year's Biggest News

Russians Played Up . . . . . . Cold War, Airlift

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—(UP)—President Truman's election was the biggest news story of 1948, in the opinion of editors around the world.

It appeared as one of the year's "ten biggest" on lists from every section of the world in the United Press' annual survey of newsworthy events. It led many foreign lists. The struggle at Berlin and other developments in the European cold war also rated high on all lists.

United Press news executives in New York chose the year's ten biggest stories from the standpoint of Americans. Their unanimous choice for first place was Mr. Truman's victory over Gov. Thomas E. Dewey. This list follows:

1. Election of President Truman.
2. The Berlin airlift and the Cold War in Europe.
3. The high cost of living.
4. Mrs. Kasenkina's escape from the Russian consulate.
5. Gandhi's assassination.
6. Death of Babe Ruth.
7. The Chinese civil war.
8. U. S. spy investigations.
9. The founding of Israel and Bernadotte's assassination.
10. Princess Elizabeth's baby.

The UP asked editors of Tass, the Russian news agency, and of the Moscow newspapers, Pravda and Izvestia, to choose the 10 biggest stories. They replied that they were too busy. However, judging from the display in the Soviet press, the Russians considered the following the 10 biggest stories:

1. The Berlin airlift and the Cold War in Europe.
2. Soviet-American relations in general.
3. Organization of the union of western powers.
4. The rift between Tito and the Cominform.
5. The new regime in Czechoslovakia.
6. Italian elections.
7. The series of treaties of friendship and commerce between the Soviet Union and eastern European nations.
8. The United Nations assembly at Paris.
9. Election of President Truman.
10. The Hinselmann case.

Wainwright Says Defenses of U. S. Are Down Again

NEW YORK, Dec. 8—(UP)—Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright said today that his country's defenses are down again.

Wainwright, commander of the ill-fated garrison at Corregidor and now national commander of the Disabled American Veterans, spoke on a broadcast marking the seventh anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor.

"Everybody in the world knew that the United States was not strong then," he said. "We have let our defense down and we should build them up and be so strong that no aggressor would ever dare again attack us. If this is done, I am confident that we will have no more world wars."

Children Are Hit By Gas; One Dead

ATLANTA, Dec. 8—(UP)—A 12-year-old boy was dead and his 9-year-old sister in "grave" condition here today, overcome by gas fumes while their parents were Christmas-shopping.

Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Ashley, mother and stepfather of the children, told police they found the boy and girl unconscious in a gas-filled room when they returned from a shopping tour late yesterday afternoon.

Firemen and physicians could not revive the boy, Marvin Morris, and he was pronounced dead on arrival at Grady Hospital here. His sister, Hazel Delores Morris, clung to life at the hospital, where attendants said she had a chance for recovery though her condition was "grave."

Ashley and his wife said they found the boy lying across a bed in his room, a detective Magazine lying near his outstretched arm. His sister was sprawled on the floor nearby.

Ashley, a taxi driver, said a gas heater was turned on in the low-ceilinged room. The flame might have been extinguished by the closing of a door, he believed.

Former Penal Colony Being Changed Into Industrial City by Immigrants

USHUAIA, Argentina, Dec. 8—(UP)—Six-hundred and 20 immigrants from northern Italy are transforming this former penal colony into the southernmost industrial city in the world.

The former residents of Italy's Bologna and Friuli provinces are bringing new life to this territorial capital, 115 miles west of the tip of Cape Horn, which had been virtually deserted since the closing early this year of the prison famed as "Argentian's Alcatraz."

During the month since the pioneers arrived aboard the chartered steamer Genoa from the Italian port of the same name, the new city has begun to take shape.

Seventy-two fully-modern, prefabricated houses are being built, and foundations have been laid for factories to produce the plywood, paper, cardboard and bricks which are to be new Ushuaia's main products.

Plans have been drawn for a church, a school, a playground, government buildings and a moving picture theater which will make Ushuaia a self-sufficient community.

Head of the pioneer party is a young engineer named Carlo Borsari, who has sunk all of his fairly sizeable fortune into the development.

Ambulances Are Never Idle at Night In Tenement-Lined Streets of Harlem

By Leo Turner

NEW YORK, Dec. 8—(UP)—Ambulances are never idle at night in Harlem. They speed through tenement-lined streets like ants racing through a pile of rotting debris.

It was 7:30 when the doctor said, "You'll go with Joe."

Joe was Joseph F. Berlinger, 38, a business man who serves one night a week as a volunteer driver or attendant on the ambulances plying the slums.

"Any experience?" asked Joe.

"No."

"You will have before the night is over."

It was 7:35. "Sick call," said the doctor.

The dingy buildings blurred as the ambulance sped into the Puerto Rican section. Up four flights of stars covered with filth an aged asthma sufferer was choking. He was sped to a hospital for an injection.

Anyone telephoning a police precinct in New York can obtain an ambulance. The calls are relayed to the nearest hospital, and if no ambulance is available the call goes to the next nearest.

A grey-haired man, his face flushed with wine, explained that he saw things coming out of the wall. A woman suffering from hemorrhage was carried down three flights of stairs on a stretcher.

Pumpkin Holds Brand New Life For Committee

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8—(UP)—Congressional investigators found something more than stolen documents when they knocked the top off Whittaker Chambers' famous pumpkin.

Inside also was new life for the House UnAmerican Actitivities committee and perhaps considerable embarrassment for President Truman and the men who were in high positions before he took over.

The late FDR bucked the House committee on all fronts. He forebade the FBI to cooperate with it. President Truman pretty closely followed Mr. Roosevelt's policies on that. And when House and Senate committees began hitting the headlines last summer with Communist espionage exposures, Mr. Truman called it a "red-herring" performance.

The committee fell upon hard times this fall. South Dakota voters promoted Rep. Karl E. Mundt, a Republican member, to the Senate. Reps. John McDowell, (R.-Pa.) and Richard B. Vail, (R.-Ill.) were defeated in the November election. Chairman J. Parnell Thomas, (R.-N. J.) was indicted on charges of requiring kickbacks from the salary of his congressional employes. The hardest blow was shift of House control to the Democratic party whose leaders are unfriendly.

Fried, That Is

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—(UP)—Richard Edde sat down at a cafe counter and ordered ham and two fried eggs.

Sorry, said the waitress. No ham. How about corned beef hash?

Fine, said Edde. With two fried eggs.

The waitress returned with hash and scrambled eggs.

No, explained Edde. Fried eggs.

The waitress disappeared. Some time later she returned with hash and an omelet.

Edde got up and started out.

That's when Nathan Feirtag, manager of the restaurant, stopped him and punched him in the nose. Edde told Magistrate Abner C. Surpless today.

"So what does he want?" Feirtag asked the court. "They're eggs."

Fried eggs, the magistrate replied, and ruled that Edde could file a complaint charging Feirtag with third degree assault. Feirtag will answer the charges on Tuesday.

Merry Christmas Is Not So Merry

COLUMBIA, S. C., Dec. 8—(UP)—Prospects for a merry Christmas for the Bert Flowers family didn't look so good today after 3-year-old Caroline Flowers celebrated early.

Caroline couldn't wait to light the sparklers her parents had bought for the holidays. The red-hot fireworks started a fire which severely damaged the Flowers home, burned up Christmas presents, ruined furniture and killed Caroline's pet dog.

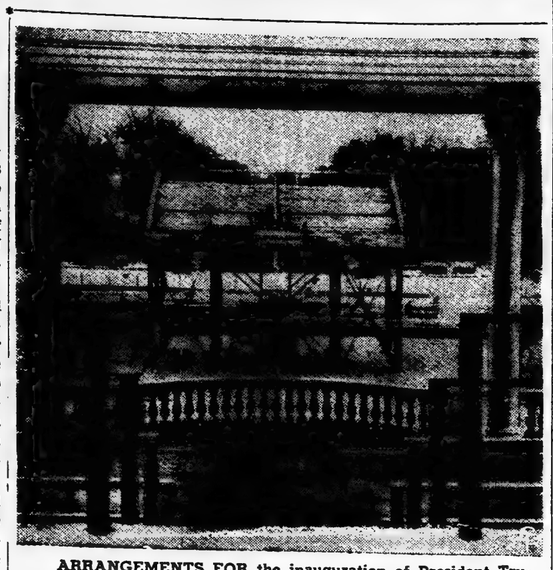
Permanent Directors' Board Is Planned For State CCUN

Plans of Group Given in Detail By Miss Stirling

By Lincoln Kan

"A permanent board of directors composed of the top citizens of this state will be invited to assist the work of the North Carolina Collegiate Council of the United Nations," said CCUN Director Roberta W. Stirling yesterday.



The purpose of the board will be to assist and advise the students within this state in their work for the United Nations, she said. They will be expected to help the collegians in the presentation of UN information through the press, radio and information centers, by their active participation and guidance.

At present plans are being laid for a state-wide conference to be held in the Durham-Raleigh-Chapel Hill triangle some time in January. Director Stirling will make a trip to New York and Washington to confirm the tentative acceptance of prominent UN and government officials with whom she has been in correspondence. Leading citizens of Durham are already beginning to lay out the details for the undertaking.

Some of the people already contacted by the CCUN headquarters are: British Ambassador Frank. Ben Cohen, assistant secretary-general in charge of public information and education of the UN, and Air Secretary Symington of the United States, as well as other speakers who have attended previous CCUN functions and meets.

Late in April, Miss Stirling, in compliance with the charter of the CCUN, will preside over a second and final all-state meet of the 30 odd chapters of the CCUN within North Carolina. Between the time set for the January meet and the April conference, there will be separate meetings in the five CCUN districts. The state headquarters will be assisting and helping in the planning for those meetings.

On campus, a series of get-togethers will be initiated of all people interested in international problems, sponsored by the state CCUN and the Graham Memorial, to increase the participation of more students in the work of the CCUN. One of the reasons for the need for personnel is that the University has been chosen as the official information center for the UN through the extension division of the University, after considerable correspondence and work by the state CCUN to lay the groundwork.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR the inauguration of President Truman in Washington Jan. 20 have been completed and workmen are putting the finishing touches on the stands erected for the ceremony. The chief executive will stand in the center of the curved section in the foreground as he takes the oath of office. The tall stand in the center background is for the use of news cameramen.

Watch That Stuff

BERLIN, Dec. 8. — (UP) — The Communist rump government in the Soviet sector of Berlin banned chewing gum in its first decree, German newspapers said today.

They said that a German reporter was stopped by police in the Soviet sector while he was munching his gum and told:

"Chewing gum is American. It is now against the law here."

What Do You Do About Weather? Just Make Money

BOSTON, Dec. 8—(UP)—The best thing you can do about the weather, two former soldiers agreed today, is to make money on it.

And that's just what they're doing, with the help of the Long Island railroad and several cities and towns who want more than they get in the forecasts of the government weather bureau.

John E. Wallace, a one-time major, and former sergeant James the Army—turning out forecasts Mazza learned weather lore in for such things as atom bomb tests, invasions and transatlantic flights.

Upon discharge they continued forecasting at a much more profitable rate.

Using the same teletyped information received by the U. S. Weather bureau, Wallace and Mazza, operating as the Northeast Weather service, sell specil information to individual clients.

The Long Island railroad, for instance, was caught flatfooted by a blizzard last year. It said it didn't have enough warning to prepare for the storm.

So, for an undisclosed sum, the Northeast service will give the railroad warnings of any threat of snow or ice 24 to 36 hours in advance. It does the same for highway department and public utilities in the northeast.

Local UWF Group Handles Programs On Durham Radio

A group of United World Federalists on campus has been busy with a 15-minute radio broadcast for more than a year. The program is presented over station WDNC every Thursday night at 9:30 and the time is given free of charge by station manager J. Frank Jarman.

The program is conducted in the form of a round table discussion with each participant having a chance to contribute his ideas on the problems facing the world and how they could be solved by UWF movement.

"Usually we try to outline the program before going on the air so that each person will have some definite points to make," Mrs. Marie P. Wicker said yesterday. "But we seldom bring out the points just as they are outlined," she added.

Members of the group include Mrs. Wicker, Jake Wicker, Dean Matthews, Johnny O'Neal and Jim Roberts of the political science department who acts as moderator. However, the program is not confined to members of the UWF, and any interested person may participate by contacting one of the members.

"The only requirement we make is that you come with an open mind and a willingness to debate the problem seriously," Mrs. Wicker said.

Professor Vollmer of the German department at Duke has recommended the program as a "must" on the listening list of his students. Vollmer said that it was extremely well done and the World Federalist message was "one of the great issues of our time."

Bus Line Faces Suit on Injury

KNOXVILLE, Tenn, Dec. 8—(UP)—The White Star bus lines today faced a $10,000 damage suit, filed by a Negro woman who charged that she was injured because she couldn't find a seat on one of the company's busses.

Geneva B. Henry of Alcoa, Tenn., said in her suit that she had to stand because teen-age white boys occupied seats normally assigned to Negroes. When the bus jolted, she charged she was injured.

The bus line operates between Knoxville and Maryville, Tenn.

DU PONT Digest
For Students of Science and Engineering

Mark P. Morse, B. S., Physics, Washington College '40, measures specular and diffused reflection of a sample paint surface with a goniophotometer - a Du Pont development for obtaining data on gloss and brightness.

Science paints the future

41 of every 1,000 U. S. chemists are engaged in production of paints, lacquers, varnishes and colors

Modern paint making is an outstanding example of chemistry at work—of the way the scientific approach has replaced rule-of-thumb methods.

Today, paints are formulated by chemists to meet specific needs. In their search for better finishes, these highly trained technical men are aided by the electron microscope and infrared spectroscope. A variety of goniophotometric and spectrophotometric devices are used by the physicist and physical chemist in the study of gloss and color.

Du Pont men have produced many superior finishes. One of them, "Dulux" nitrocellulose lacquer, made mass production of automobiles possible by shortening paint drying time from weeks to hours.

Finish failures—chipping and scratching—were costing manufacturers of home refrigerators a million dollars a year before Du Pont chemists developed "Dulux" synthetic resin enamels, based on alkyd resins. A "Dulux" coating on metal or wood dries into a film that even a hammer blow won't break. Tests with mechanical scrubbers prove it outwears old-style enamels by more than five times. "Dulux" enamels now guard boats, large and small, as well as petroleum tank farms, machinery and other industrial installations.

At Du Pont's paint laboratories, a wide range of materials is under study. Where the colloid chemist, the physical and organic chemist, the analyst, physicist and other technically trained men leave off, the chemical engineer, mechanical engineer and metallurgist stand ready to design equipment to make better commercial production possible.

Many of today's research tools are complex and expensive. The modern research worker may use a $30,000 mass spectrometer installation which can make an analysis in three hours that formerly took three months. High pressure equipment, ultra centrifuges, molecular stills, and complete reference libraries are other tools which speed research and enlarge its scope.

Young scientists joining the Du Pont organization have at their disposal the finest equipment available. Moreover they enjoy the stimulation of working with some of the most able scientists in their fields, in groups small enough to bring about quick recognition of individual talent and capabilities. They find here the opportunity, cooperation and friendly encouragement they need. Thus they can do their best work, both for the organization and themselves.

Rust would quickly weaken this structure. Because "Dulux" resists salt water and salt air, it has for years protected many famous bridges.

Satin-smooth beauty and outstanding durability are properties given by "Duco" or "Dulux" to furniture, trucks, buses and trains.

Paints are tested by exposure to weather at paint "farms." Research men interpret results as guide for development of improved paints.

Red Bogey at Chapel Hill

(Printed in the Cleveland Times, Shelby, N. C.)

"Education, intelligence, democratic morale, and spiritual insights were never more desperately needed than now. With a crisis in the schools and in the world, and with a tremendous national debt, we cannot pinch our way out. We must invest in intelligence and the human spirit, and create our way out."

This is a portion of what Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, had to say to the Texas Teachers association at a dinner session in Dallas Thursday night.

Many persons throughout the state who do not take pains to investigate, murmur that Frank Graham is a Red and Chapel Hill a hotbed of Communism. One Shelby student at the University of North Carolina told us this past summer that he had been engaged in conversation on the square by a Shelbian whom he had known since childhood and that his friend asked in all earnestness if he had become a Communist since he entered Carolina.

Contrary to unfortunately widespread gossip, Dr. Graham, in our opinion, is one of the most courageous, honest and democratic spokesmen which the South possesses. Rather than disclaim him and deny him we should be proud that he is one of us and able and willing to speak for us.

It is doubtless true that there are Communists in Chapel Hill. It is and has long been the custom at the University to allow any person to speak his piece, regardless of his belief. That, of course, is democracy and that right is stipulated in our constitution. And Carolina is noted as a school in democracy.

What those who become disturbed over the presence of adolescent Reds on the campus of the state university do not pause to appreciate is, that our fear of Russia has distorted our sense of proportion. Radicals have ever been numerous on the college campus, but they either mature and grow in their comprehension of reality, adjust to more rational dreams of improving the world—or, they become ineffectual outcasts, bitter but relatively harmless.

An undeniable example of "the sound and fury, signifying nothing" which these rabid small-time messiahs amount to, is the instance of Henry Wallace in the recent elections. Mr. Wallace talked loud and long and whooped it up for a whole-hog shake-up of the status quo. Some persons became so afraid of Henry Wallace that they threw eggs at him. The American people as a whole, however, went on about their work, their individual opinions, their firm democratic faith without bothering about trying to deprive Wallace of his say so. The end result is history: Henry Wallace failed to earn a single electoral vote.

The alternative to teaching our next generation of citizens that every American is entitled to freedom of speech is to teach them a fascist doctrine that prohibits freedom of speech to any citizen who says something—or wants to say something—which does not agree with the ideas of the majority. Democracy in essence is the golden mean between fascism and communism and we shall not preserve it by substituting either to defeat the other, just because we are afraid.

The citizens of our state should comprehend the truth about Frank Graham as the president of their University. He is brave enough to refuse to forfeit to fascism our youths studying in the university he directs. Several years ago we were allied with the Communists in a fight against fascism, because at that time we were more frightened by German and Italian nationalists. Now we are more frightened by the Communists. Throughout this shift from fear to fear, Dr. Graham has held fast to the doctrine of American democracy and democratic guarantees. Thanks to him, many young men will have acquired and will retain a better understanding of the innate strength and rightness of our political faith by seeing it operate on the campus at Chapel Hill, where, although they are permitted to assemble and speak, the Reds have through the years failed to enlist sufficient recruits to take control of the institution.

Now is the time to invest in intelligence and the human spirit, as Frank Graham has said. These will prevail through coming generations when our billion-dollar planes and bombs have fallen into rust and disuse.

Odds And Ends

By Don Maynard

CARELESS WORDS ARE CRUEL. We never imagined what repercussions would result from the "Scoop!" we ran last Sunday, naming Charlie Gibson as the thief who stole $70 from several KA brothers. Charlie didn't have a thing to do with the robbery. We intended it to be a gag, instead it boomeranged, and how!

As we noted further on in the column: "Word has just come in from Sptzzburg, a shmoo has confessed stealing the KA's seven eagles. . ." Sorry, Charlie, our crystal ball was cloudy that morning.

IS THAT ALL! In a recent poll of 2,000 women by Woman's Home Companion, it was discovered that females want practical gifts for Christmas. It doesn't matter what the gift may be, as long as it "looks, feels or smells like a million dollars." Over half of the femmes polled were emphatic in their declaration that they preferred lacy, silken undies!

CAROLINA'S SIGMA NU held its joint pledge dance as guests of the Duke Sigma Nu chapter last Saturday night in the Washington Duke hotel following a pledge party here Friday. Erroneously announced that the Betas were sponsoring the dance—our wires are uncrossed now—the Betas are holding their pledge party this week.

UNDESIRABLES. To quote Walter Winchell: "Some psychologists at Duke Univ. are wrestling with a gimmick that'll let you get rid of flies and muskeetas, etc., just by 'wishing' them away.

Mr. W., do you mean the Dukesters or the flies?

WITH THE THOUGHT that Christmas is fast approaching, the time when father owes best, when you can make a person forget the past with a present, we lolled in our armchair, smoked another coffin-nail and tried to forget the menace of only two more class days left before exams. Still have fourteen more money-spending sunrises before the 25th, though.

This year saw the election of a man thought by all but himself to be defeated. He is still President of the U.S. because he fought the battle before winning the victory and rose "like a kite, against the wind."

"You and I can both remember the gay twenties when a parade of college students to a football game meant a wild collection of swerving jallopies from which stuck arms, legs and gin bottles. I'd like to say that I observed hundreds of your students (both boys and girls) on their way to Athens and back last weekend.

"I saw them on the highways, in restaurants and hotels, and at the game. I'd like to say that they drove carefully, conducted themselves like ladies and gentlemen everywhere. I saw not one sign of drinking or misbehavior. Georgia patrolmen and Athens policemen told me they'd never seen a better-behaved bunch of visiting students. Your students went to root for their Tar Heels, not on a binge. They were a credit to their school and I thought you should know it."

When you shudder to think of expenses this Christmas, remember these lines from "The Reckoning" by Robert W. Service:

"Time has got a little bill, get wise yet while you may. . . For the debit side's increasing in a most alarming way. . . . The things you had no right to do, the things you should have done. . .They're all set down; it's up to you to pay for every one. . .So eat, drink and be merry, have a good time if you will. . .But God help you when the time comes and you Pay the bill."

Until we return in 1949, we wish a Merry Christmas to all, and to all—Happy New Year!

Quarterly Exceeds Hopes

By Sally Woodhull

"Nobody knows what the future will bring forth."

Dr. Hardin Craig says it in his article in the first issue of the Carolina Quarterly, now on the newsstands. Many others have said it. We who remember the beginnings of the Quarterly last spring say it now, with a note of pleasant surprise.

For the Quarterly has exceeded the hopes of almost everyone of campus, including, perhaps, its ever-hopeful staff. They deserve and will receive much credit for a job excellently done. But they are not the only one who will receive credit for the magazine. The University and the community have at last a representative in literary fields of which they can be proud. And, although "nobody knows what the future will bring forth," it seems safe to say that the University community can look forward to receiving credit from the state and from outside the state for a dream as competently executed as the Carolina Quarterly.

The magazine is in many ways an experiment. Financially, it is attempting to be self-supporting. Its appeal is one of regionalism rather than one of local character. Perhaps even more important to us as students is its attempt, in this issue a most succesful one, to combine the best of students writing with contributions from outstanding professional writers. Bound under one cover, and a distinctively beautiful cover at that, (artist, Bill Harrison), is found work by freshmen and graduate students, by Ph.D.'s and playwrights. And yet the selection is such that there is no ungainly breach in the quality in any part of the magazine. It thus provides an excellent and long needed outlet for writing from this community.

Articles by five outstanding professional men and women, stories by four students and poetry by seven combine to form a magazine which will not be quickly consigned to either trash can or scrapbook. For in addition to being a pleasingly successful experiment, whose beginnings one can be proud to have watched, the Quarterly has things to tell its readers.

In the standing feature, The Southern Writer, Agatha Boyd Adams discusses "Paul Green; Poet Playwright." Though Mrs. Adams perhaps spends too much time on Green's minor works, she has done a more than competent job. Dr. Hardin Craig's article on "A Literary Revival at the University of North Carolina" is one that no student or devotee of Chapel Hill should miss. "George Bernard Shaw and Communism," by Dr. Archibald Henderson, is timely and informative. Paul Green's notes on the movies provide an analysis that a cinema crazed society might well heed. The University itself, in a phase of its future development, is adequately though somewhat technically treated by Dr. William Coppridge in "The Medical School Development at the University."

Outstanding among the fiction offerings is Charles Brockman's "The Red Angel." Excellently done on the whole, it fails to score perfection in its ending, which is too subtle to be successful. But the story is a real contribution. Roy Moose, Louis Stevens and Joseph Terrell offer stories which serve to round out the fiction portion of the magazine to an entertaining and profitable level. The poetry, although there might have been more of it, is generally good. In fact the balance and variety of the magazine are excellent.

Much of the favorable impression the magazine is bound to receive will come from its excellent format. Though a few technical errors such as the placing of ads and sloppy proofreading mar the perfection, the total effect is one of a completely professional, high quality job. Type, make-up, illustrations combine to produce a book pleasant to look at as well as profitable to read.

If the Quarterly continues with each issue to improve as the first issue has improved over the expectations, its staff and the University can be well pleased with what the future brings forth.

Success Story

First Play Is Televised

By Leo Turner

NEW YORK, Dec. 8—(UP)—Catherine McDonald of Chattanooga, Tenn., who had never seen a television play, wrote one and sold it.

The play was about life in a trailer-home, although Miss McDonald had never been inside a trailer.

She flew back to the University of North Carolina campus early today, as worried as could be.

"I have an examination in early European drama at 9 o'clock," she said. "It's going to be a toughy."

It was the first play that Miss McDonald, who a few months ago was a cub reporter on the Chattanooga Free-Press, ever tried to write.

"I was walking past the trailer houses on the edge of the North Carolina campus one night and I decided to write a play about them," she said. "I had to cut two classes to come to New York to see it produced over a television network. The fartherest south it reached was Richmond, Va. They never changed a line in it."

The agency that bought Miss McDonald's play said they had to read 50 to 60 to find one worth producing.

"We're in need of good original plays designed for a television audience," the agency said.

Asked her secret for writing a successful play, Miss McDonald cleared her throat nervously.

"If you want to write a play, I think you should have some stage experience. I didn't mean professional experience. I got mine in amateur groups.

"Then you need to know about people. I think being a newspaper reporter helps you understand personalities. However, I never use any real people for characters. My characters are sheer, nebular clouds."

Then you get an idea for a plot, and write a play, she said.

She's now working on a three-act play around a "historical incident" of the Civil war.

"I haven't told anyone what it's going to be about," she said. "I'm busy in research."

She didn't bother looking up a New York producer. Asked if her success had gone to her head, she laughed.

"There's a lot that I don't know yet," she said.

Or Is It?

It's The Smokers' World

By Jim Dickinson

Mr. Non-smoker, your Simon-purity wears well, but all in all the existence you lead must be a dull, unsavory one-no cool, exhilarating inhalations, no leisurely puffs, no relief for those edgy nerves.

Chances are good that you've even been patting yourself on the back, and telling friends what a nicotine teetotaler you are. But, brother, you're way off the beam. What you need is a light.

Hasn't anyone ever told you this is a "smoking" society? You're just a castaway from a world of cigarette addicts who look upon you from a down-nose position as if to say, "How did this cull get in here?"

The puffers can prove to you in a minute that you're denying yourself one of the finer things in life, that you are isolating yourself from an institution which has firmly imbedded itself in the American way of life.

True, the smokers have among their group a few exceptions" here and there. There's the guy who smokes three packs a day, but those "ends" he throws away are long enough to cut his conumption down to two packs a day.

Then there's the "chain" smoker—he's quite a fascinating person. He's the fellow who lights one from the other all day long. But so what? Maybe he can't afford matches. Anyway, the doc has told him already that you can't kill yourself smoking cigarettes.

The bird who smokes two before he gets out of bed, two more while shaving, and an extra pair on his way to breakfast is not what you'd term an unusual smoker. There's about 40 million carbon copies of him across the United States to keep him company, and to shoot at his record.

Mr. Don't - touch -'em, how green are the pastures on your side of the fence? Noives in bad shape? Well, just reach for a "weed" and sit back and enjoy it. No use kidding yourself any longer, you're out of season.

Look at it this way. If you're one who has never acquired the habit, chances are you're busting with a curiosity to sample one of the sticks just to see what it's got in it that makes everybody goofy over it.

If you once smoked and gave it up, you're now going through that day-by-day agony that gnaws at you and haunts you and keeps you wondering when you'll give in and once more succumb to the tantalizing aroma and taste you once thought you couldn't get along without.

Well, it's the smokers' world, so either you've got to stay on the inside and enjoy every luscious puff, or else spend a miserable life on the outside looking in and wishing you were there.

The parade of the cigarette will go on as long as there's a tobacco leaf to burn and a human breath to breathe it in. The millions will continue to enjoy 'em, and what's more, those new faces who merely "try 'em out" for size will be engulfed by a habit that'll hold on longer than a turtle.

Write Away

Suggesfs Law Suit

Editor:

(1) I regret that Bill Robertson's column is being discontinued even a minority is entitled to representation in the columns of school paper which, of necessity, has a monopoly. Lacking Mr. Robertson, your editorial page will show the same monolithic appearance as the commercial press. Mr. Robertson alone has taken issue with you and other columnists on the most basic issues of the day, and has stimulated discussion. He has done this in a manner dignified and worthy of a columnist of the DTH much unlike some of his antagonists.

(2) I fully agree with Mr. Robertson that it is inappropriate to display the Stars and Bars. Does anyone deny the historic fact that this flag had its origin in a cause that defended slavery? The Civil war was not a football game, in which every Southerner must cheer his team; it was a war fought over the issue of slavery; in that war, there was a right side and a wrong side. What is the objection to displaying the flag of the United States, or perhaps of the United Nations; or, if local color is desired, the flag of the school or of the state of North Carolina?

(3) On December 4, J. R. Cherry Jr., in a letter to "Write Away," called Bill Robertson a "Kremlin stooge." This is a serious charge, as there are laws providing for the punishment of unregistered foreign agents. I suggest that Mr. Roberts institute libel proceedings against Mr. Cherry. This will compel the latter either to present legal proof that Mr. Robertson is in contact with the government of the U.S.S.R., or to retract his charge. I doubt that Mr. Cherry will be able to prove what the Attorney General of the U. S. has failed to prove. Even though a grand jury has sat for a year, the Communist party of the U. S. has not even been indicted, let alone convicted, of being the agent of a foreign power. It is high time that the foreign agent slander be proved in Court, or made dangerous to use.

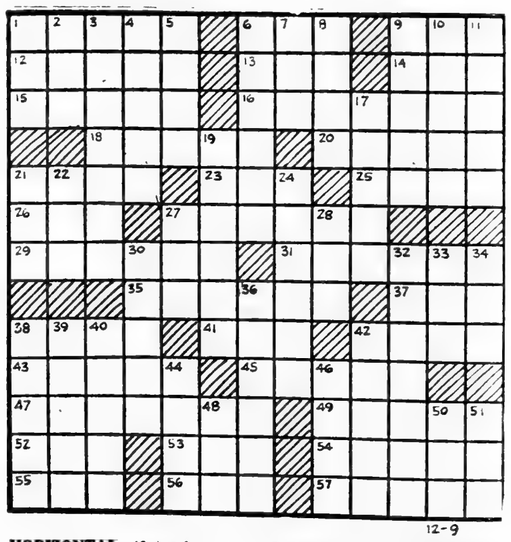
Hurt to the Quick

Editor:

This morning (Dec. 7) while sitting in my ten o'clock geology class a friend to my left, of all places, awoke me and called my attention to the fact that my name had appeared in Bill Robertson's widely red column. I was so delighted at the thought that Bill Robertson had seen fit to rank me along with Thomas Paine and Bob Smith, etc., that I widely read the whole column.



I was, however, in my eagerness, cut to the quick by the reference made to me and others whose names appeared with mine. Now, some hours later, I have at least partially recovered from the stunning blow dealt me by Bill Robertson, who said that I had attacked with a "vulgarity quite unworthy of UNC students." My quick still hurts, but I think that through tear dimmed eyes I can see the keys of the typewrite to reply.

The part of that statement that hurt me so much was that he belittled my vulgarity. If Bill Robertson has no objections to hearing my side of this controversy, he needs only to step down to the little office right around the corner from the men's room in the basement of Graham Memorial, and there I will prove to him that I can display a vulgarity that IS worthy of UNC students.

Messer Wharton

If you succeed in life, you must do it in spite of the efforts of others to pull you down. There is nothing in the idea that people are willing to help those who help themselves. People are willing to help a man who can't help himself, but as soon as a man is able to help himself, and does it they join in making his life as uncomfortable as possible.

Teams Are a Dime a Dozen

PICK UP A DAILY paper most any day when the end of the football season rolls around and you will be more than likely to find somebody's All-Something-or-Other team plastered across the sport page. It seems that a great fad has swept the country of late. From Maine to California enthusiastic sport writers come up with what they believe to be the cream of the nation's football crop. Several of the teams that we've looked over in the past few days seem to be nothing more than skimmed milk, howev r.

Small time sectionalism has tossed a monkey-wrench right into the heart of the idea and has messed up the whole shebang. Every writer has a favorite all his own and he's out to get his All-American boy on somebody's All-American team or burst a blood vessel trying.

Consequently every All-America team that is selected by the results of a mass vote of writers from all sections of the country carries a few good players on the first team, usually a few players of higher caliber land on the second or third team and a column follows that is filled with so-so players who gained honorable mention in the poll, thanks to their father-in-law or home-town friend who just happened to be a sports writer.

'Tis Sad But True

'TIS A SAD, SAD TALE, but nevertheless, true. And what would be the result should the sport writers leave their petty prejudices at home when the time to vote rolls around? The answer is obvious.

A much better and more accurate club could be selected, and no radical variations would occur in any of the AA teams. Take the Associated Press All-American for example. The AP came up with a very good front line and included Charlie Justice and Doak Walker, two boys who have been tops in their field on every team selected, in the backfield. But, the AP "Dream Team" then proved to be more or less a "Scream Team" when it listed Art Murakowski of Northwestern and Bobby Jack Stuart of Army in its first-team backfield.

Neither of these two had been mentioned on the first three strings of any other All-American team, and have not been listed among the nation's top twelve backs in a major selection since. It is a foregone conclusion that there is something fishy when such a situation crops up. The only answer is organized sectionalism.

Seems Like Old Times

THE DAYS OF GANG WARS are reputed to be long gone, but with such an organized battle as this occurring between the different sections of the country one never knows. Yes indeed, it seems like old times.

The "Holier than thou" Big Nine has been at it all season long in the weekly Associated Press football poll, and evidently found lack of capable talent no cause for let-up in the selection of an All-American team.

This column is too short to go into the details of the "Big Whine" activities, however, and a more pressing subject is at hand. That of selecting a concensus All-America. Not just one more team packed with eleven stars, but a team that is really representative of all the All-Americas. The following team was picked from ten AA teams. Ten points were awarded for first-team positions, five for second-string berths, and three for third-string slots. The teams used in the selecting of the consensus squad include United Press, Associated Press, Central Press Association, INS, NEA, New York Daily News, Chicago Tribune Player's Team, Quarterback, Collier's, and Look.

The Spice of Life

VARIETY IS THE SPICE of life, or so they say, If such is the case, the teams represented oughta be spicy enough to satisfy even the most rabid side-show enthusiast. None of the All-America pickers named a strip-artist or a bubble dancer to their "Dream Team," but several ridiculous selections were made. The most notable of which was the blaring error committed by Grantland Rice, of whom much has been written on this page already.

It seems that Mr. Rice hasn't been overly impressed with the great Charlie Justice. He picked Emil "Red" Sitko of Notre Dame at a backfield position on his Look All-American instead of the Choo Choo because "Sitko is faster." Rice was the only major AA picker who passed Justice up for a first-team berth. Granny's mistake seems even more ridiculous when the fact that he named the same Mr. Justice as his football Player of the Year in another magazine a few months earlier is taken into consideration.

Another of Rice's miscues put Notre Dame's Leon Hart at a first-string tackle berth. Hart has done a great deal of tackling this year, as any member of an opposing team will testify, but his accepted position is at end.

Fraternity Has Many Brothers

RICE IS NOT ALONE on his limb. The fraternity has many brothers. Jackie Jensen, a recognized All-America performer received much the same treatment as the Carolina Choo. The AP pickers were the sole dissenters to the Californian's first-team rating. He was named among the first four backs on all of the other nine major teams. The Associated Press disciples, however, rated him no better than a third-stringer.

Several linemen were juggled from one position to another by the enthusiastic pickers, as all the teams attempted to make the best possible selections. Notre Dame's stellar guard, Bill Fischer, was one of the most frequently juggled players. He received a total of 75 votes in the concensus poll, enough for a first-team guard position. The odd part of the story is, however, that he received enough votes as a tackle to make the second-team at that position.

All shapes, sizes, nationalities, and ages were included in the poll. Carolina's Justice was one of the smallest men picked. German, Italian, Irish, and Negro players were named to All-America berths. Leon Hart was the youngest player selected. He celebrated his nineteenth birthday less than twelve months ago and is a Senior at Notre Dame. Al Wistert, a Michigan Junior, was the oldest player to make the first team. At 32, he's still more than a match for the youngsters.

A Unique Idea

THE SELECTIONS POSTED by the International News Service were indeed unique. The INS was the only group to select a two-team All-America. Here there was no kick about being a specialist,

Tar Heel Quint Tackles Catawba Tonight

Freshman Game Set With Indians As Curtain-Raiser

By Bill Kellam

Carolina's Tar Heel cagers, who've looked rather luke in three warm up games thus far, will face their hottest foe of the season tonight when they attempt to turn the heat on the unbeaten Catawba Indians, a torrid pace setter in their previous tilts. Action starts at 8 o'clock in Woollen Gym.

For the high-scoring quintet from the North State conference, by far the most powerful foe yet to be met by Tom Scott's cagers, boasts victories over such semi-pro powers as the Chatham Blanketeers and the McCrary Eagles and is rated as a good bet to turn in an upset victory over the against Ezzard. An impressive victory, coupled with Lee Savold's floppola by fouling Bruce Woodcock at London Monday night, would make Charles the man of the hour among heavyweights.

"We got a runaround once and we aren't gonna' let it happen again," roared Ezzard's manager and spokesman, Jake Mintz.

Jake insists his man was frozen out of a light heavyweight local hardwood hustlers.

In the usual preliminary, Jim Hamilton's unbeaten freshmen will meet the Catawba jayvees at 6 o'clock.

Coach Scott will open with his usual line-up of Hugo Kappler and Coy Carson at forwards, Nemo Nearman at center, and Dan Nyimicz and Rip Ryan in the guard slots.

The Indians are headed by big pivotman Jim Wasler, who racked up 21 points in the 64-59 romp over Chatham, veteran guard

Tar Heel Cindermen Prep for Sugar Bowl

Coach Dale Ranson has narrowed his Sugar bowl mile-relay contenders, he announced yesterday, while two other Tar Heel cindermen, Julian MacKenzie and Dick Taylor, are rounding into top shape for the invitational meet which will take place in the Sugar bowl stadium December 30.

The six hopefuls remaining on Coach Ranson's list are: Laddie Terrell, a junior and probably the number one 440 man at the University, who is in his best form this fall, and five very promising sophomores, Bob Black, Clarence McLain, Percy Flowers, Stan White, and Bill Crimmins.

MacKenzie, who has been invited to enter the 880, is one of the brightest of Tar Heel track stars, having made a great comeback after returning from the service in 1946. Handicapped last season by an injury, he is expected to turn in a 1:55 half mile this year.

Taylor, who will represent Carolina in the 120-yard high hurdles, is one of the best hurdlers ever to don a pair of spikes at the Hill.

Finals Slated In Wrestling, Volleyball Loops

Coach Walter Rabb and his lieutenants in the Intramural department plan to conclude a highly successful quarter of Intramural activities this afternoon with the finals of the wrestling and volleyball tourneys being held in the gym.

The campus championship in the volleyball tournament will be held at 5:00 on court 1 in the gym between the fraternity winner, Phi Gam 1, and the dorm division victors, the Grads. Neither six has been defeated in the regular season or the round-robin playoffs, so it promises to be an exciting clash where one crew will have to give way.

The wrestling tournament will also be completed this afternoon when 12 slated matches, eight of which are frat finals, are held on the gym mats beginning at 4:00.

Three championships in the dorm division have already been determined with the remainder to be decided in today's scraps. The present dorm victors are all Town boys; C. Harless in the 128 lb. class, E. Turnley, 136 lb., and R. Richardson, 175 lb.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS

Late Practice Marks Drills For Bowl Tilt

The Tar Heel gridders put in a full afternoon's work on rain-soaked Navy field yesterday as they neared the finish of the preliminary Sugar bowl practices.

No less than nine coaches spent better than two hours brushing up on the fundamentals, revising the defensive setups, installing a couple of ne wplays and running through a line scrimmage. The team worked out until after six o'clock, again using the lights after sundown.

Kenny Powell worked out in light equipment for the third straight day. Powell was suffering from an ailing back, but will be ready for action at New Orleans. Several other gridders failed to make practice because of labs and late classes.

From a usually reliable source it was learned that Coach Carl Snavely is planning to use Charlie Justice a good deal of the time on defense on January 1. Justice was working out with defensive lineup yesterday.

While the linemen and ends were receiving specialized instruction yesterday, the reserves spent a lengthy period running Oklahoma's plays against the defensive group.

Speculation on the outcome of the battle with the Sooners ran high around campus. One of the

Choo Choo Again

"Charlie Justice had no peer as an offensive player, according to the men who played against him," says Norman L. Sper, widely known football analyst, who supervises the All Players All-America Football Selections sponsored by the Chicago Tribune.

Sper, now in Chapel Hill for a visit with his son, Norman L. Sper, Jr., the Carolina head cheerleader, says that of the 127 players who played against Justice and voted, the Choo Choo received 110 votes as the best backfield man they had played against all year."

Charles-Baksi Bout May Fail To Produce Worthy Challenger

By Steve Snider

NEW YORK, Dec. 8—(UP)—Business is bad along the boxing beat and there's only a 50-50 chance that either Ezzard Charles or Joe Baksi will give it a transfusion in their 15-rounder at Madison Square Garden Friday night.

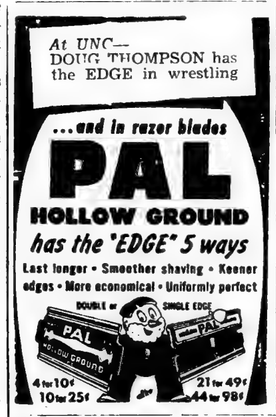
One of them will have to come up with a "worthy performance" to earn a title sock at Joe Louis in June and the heavyweight champion apparently is the sole judge of their worthiness.

If it's a bad fight, as it well could be, Louis may skip them both. And what is a June in the boxing trade without a heavyweight jamboree at a New York ball park?

Louis will have to make his decision strictly on hearsay evidence and what he reads in the papers. Instead of attending in person, he'll be busy out in Chicago that night flinging 14-ounce "pillows" at Billy Conn in an exhibition match.

Although Charles is the Friday favorite, bulky Baksi has a 30-pound weight bulge and perhaps enough savvy to make the sleek 27-year-old Negro out of Cincinnati look bad.

But Charles has the chance of a lifetime to make his charges stick that Louis would rather retire altogether than risk his title match with the then titleholder Gus Lesnevich, last winter. Mintz pleaded, cajoled, threatened and offered to fight for nothing if Gus would get into the ring with Charles.



Before his campaign could bear fruit, Lesnevich popped off to London for a bout with Freddy Mills and returned an ex-champion.

Boxing figures blame the box-office slump on several factors, including television, failure of the war to spawn any new blood, and the fact that too few good amateurs an make a decent living as pros during their formative years.

The real boom, if there's going to be one, will be the day Joe hangs up his gloves forever with no "maybes" attached to the proprosition.

Mermen to Launch Season Against Blue Devils Today

Tar Heel Tankman

DICK TWINING
. . . in the swim

Carolina's varsity swimming team will launch its dual-meet season this afternoon against the Blue Devils of Duke in the pool at Durham.

The Tar Heels were undefeated last year in dual met competition and are expected to continue their string of victories.

Coach Ralph Casey will unveil a combination of sixteen lettermen to be joined by newcomers Eddie Clement. The lettermen are the same performers who captured the Southern conference championship for the locals last year.

Leading the way for the Tar Heels will be Captain Dick Twining, who broke the pool record for the 100-freestyle in the recent invitational meet conducted here Thanksgiving.

Norm Sper, a near miss in the Summer Olympic tryouts, will be back to bolster the Carolina diving corps. He should receive some stiff competition from Duke's Johnny Connor.

The Carolina entries:

300 yd medley relay-Sper, Twining, and Greenbaum.

220 yd freestyle - McCauley and Hutton.

50 yd freestyle - Drew and Osborne.

Diving-Sper and Whitehead or Beam.

100 yd freestyle-Rescue and Menoka.

150 yd backstroke-Bippart and Clement.

200 yd breaststroke-Breedon and Cook.

440 yd freestyle-Thomas and Norwood.

400 yd freestyle relay-Greenbaum, Twining, Drew, and Osborne.

Freshman Swimmers To Meet State Today

Coach Bob Ousley's freshmen swimmers will travel to Raleigh this afternoon to meet the freshmen of N.C. State. The Tar Babies will be seeking to avenge the defeat handed them in a meet earlier in the season.

Kirby Ambler, who won both sprint events in the last meet, will again lead the locals. Other outstanding Carolina men are Cecil Milton, a distance man, and E. B. Smith, a breaststroker.

Coach Ousley has been drilling his boys hard this week in an effort to get them in the win column. He has been especially pleased with the work of Milton who has shown definite signs of becoming a future star.

Bill Speacht, and returning forward Bill Hunsucker who paced the scoring with 13 counters in the 67-65 decision over McCrary.

who held Wake Forest to a one point win, 58-57.

Coach Tom Scott was still confident yesterday afternoon as he sent the Tar Heels through a lengthy practice session devoted to tightening the at times porous defense of his charges.

Quite a bit of time was also spent on perfecting the double pivot offense which Scott plans to throw against later foes. This new attack saw the team's two roofscrapers, Nemo Nearman and Howard Deasy working in the pivot slots. Deasy, normally a center, had been shifted to guard in an attempt to take advantage of his height but the change did not pan out and he'll probably return to his former post.

Two new faces will probably appear on the scoring-punchless second team. A pair of hustling sophomores who have shown up well in practice and in their brief game appearances, guard Bill White and forward Darius "Red" Wells, will replace two as yet unnamed men as Scott continues to seek an offensively clicking reserve combo.

-STRICTLY AD LIB-

and 22 of the nation's top players were picked instead of the usual eleven.

The Chicago Tribune-sanctioned Player's All-America is one of the latest to hit the newsstands. The Chicago daily sent blanks to college players all over the nation and in return received what the players themselves considered as the country's best.

Hart and Barney Poole of Mississippi were picked at ends by the players. Wistert and Duke's Al DeRogatis were named to tackle positions; Buddy Burris of Oklahoma and Leo Nomellini, Minnesota, were chosen as the top guards in the country; and Chuck Bednarik of Penn was named to the pivot post. Charlie Justice, Doak Walker, Jackie Jensen and Clyde Scott were chosen in the backfield. Carolina's Art Weiner made the second-team, while Hosea Rodgers and Len Szafaryn were accorded honorable mention by the players.

No Panty Waists

IT'S A GOOD TEAM, and the players ought to be capable authorities for after all they are the one that take the beatings every Saturday. If a few of the country' sports writers, the one who thrive on sour grapes, were to don the pads some Sabbath evening and go out against a few of the boys they call panty-waists, they might alter their opinions somewhat—afterthey've recovered from blows administered by their little playmates, of course.

In closing we tack on the aforementioned concensus All-America, for which we take neither credit nor blame. Each player's votes are in parentheses beside his name. 100 votes makes the choice unanimous.

Ends—Rifenburg (85), Hart (78), Poole (50), Weiner (31), Tamburo (28), and Armstrong (23). Tackles—Nomellini (100), Wistert (70), DeRogatis (26), Lea (15), Niemi (15). Guards—Fischer (75), Burris (75), Healy (75), Franz (30), Henry (28), and Wendell (18). Centers—Bednarik (100), Sarkisian (35), Thompson (11).

Backs—Walker (100), Justice (95), Jensen (93), Sitko (65), Scott (46), Van Brocklin (36), Rauch (36), Heath (20), Murakowski (20), Stuart (18), Mitchell (18), and Cloud (18).

Faculty Notes Sent by Weaver On Exam Conduct

Outlining the faculty's responsibility with respect to the Honor system and Campus code, dean of students Fred Weaver sent letters to the faculty as is customary in the week preceding examinations.

"The responsibility of the teacher is interpreted to include clear exposition of the values and obligations of the Honor system; the maintenance of order; quiet demonstration of the importance of personal interest, fairness, and mutual consideration; and uniform procedure in handling of violations," the letter said.

Instructors were also asked to insist that students sign a written pledge in full as a requirement for grading papers.

Card Stunts May Be Taken To N.O.; 3,000 Plan Trip

By Chuck Hauser

Not only 3,000 North Carolina students, but a 100-piece marching band and maybe Head Cheerleader Norm Sper's celebrated card stunts will be going to the New Orleans Sugar bowl on Jan. 1, 1949.

Sper said last night that he would fly to New Orleans with Band Director Earl Slocum Monday afternoon to make plans for halftime entertainment. He said he would do his best to work out arrangements to take the card stunts to the bowl and, "Sugar bowl officials are definitely interested in having the stunts at halftime."

The head cheerleader also said plans were being made for a mass pep rally at the Roosevelt hotel Saturday morning at 11 o'clock. He said students should gather in the lobby of the hotel, where the University club will have an information booth set up and where exchanging of coupons for tickets will be going on.

Sper also said plans for a Carolina New Year's Eve party in New Orleans were being made. He said notice of the plans would be put on bulletin boards throughout the campus when decisions were reached on the matter.

The athletic office said yesterday that 1,500 student coupons have been sold. It was estimated, however, that at least 1,500 students had purchased regular tickets and planned to sit with family or friends outside the University at the game.

Approximately 10,500 alumni and relatives of alumni and students are expected to join the Crescent City caravan. The travelers will be going to New Orleans by every means from airplane flights and special buses to hitchhiking.

One party was definitely scheduled; athletic officials remarked yesterday. They said the team was invited to a Christmas party on Dec. 25, but they were scheduled to return to practice sessions at Hammond, La., the next day.

Jerry Pettigrew Is Di President

Jerry Pettigrew, pre-med senior, was selected president of the Di Senate for the Winter quarter by acclamation Wednesday night.

Other officers elected were: Banks Talley, president pro tempore; Dick Bowen, critic; Cam West, clerk; Sam Manning, treasurer; James McLean, sergeant at arms; and Don Shropshire, chaplain.

Harry Horton was elected Carolina forum representative and Don Shropshire will return to the Debate council.

The officers and representatives of the Di for the Fall quarter were: Jim Southerland, president; Gran Childress, president pro tempore; Jerry Pettigrew, critic; Cam West, clerk; Charles Long, treasurer and Carolina Forum representative; Bill Harding, sergeant at arms; and Don Shropshire, chaplain and Debate council representative.

Last Issue

This is the last issue of The Daily Tar Heel for the fall quarter. The DTH will resume publication on Tuesday, Jan. 4, or on the first day of classes.

University officials yesterday urged students to check dormitory, fraternity and sorority house bulletin boards carefully until the end of examination period, since that will be the only means of transmitting important information to the student body.

Head Cheerleader Norm Sper said further plans for pep rallies or parties in New Orleans would be posted on bulletin boards.

Holiday Displays Are Now Complete In Business Area

Christmas decorations, placed in business sections in Chapel Hill and Carrboro, are now complete, the Merchants association announced yesterday.

Prizes of $10 and $5 will be given to the first and second place winners of the outdoor decorations contest sponsored among association members in the two towns.

Mrs. Mildred Cartee, the new secretary-treasurer of the Merchants association, will begin her duties tomorrow according to Vic Huggins, association president. Her office will be in the Tankersley building, next to the post office. She is the first full-time secretary in the history of the association.

Local stores will be closed on Christmas day and New Year's day. Closing hour during evenings of Christmas week will be 9 o'clock, beginning Monday evening, December 20.

Huggins said yesterday that it will be optional for merchants to be open the Monday following Christmas as a further holiday.

Ehringhaus Pays Tribute to Hanft In Law Address

Former-governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus paid tribute to Dr. Frank Hanft of the University law school Wednesday night in an address at Hill hall sponsored by the Law School association. Ehringhaus described economic conditions in 1933 and declared he had turned to Dr. Hanft for advice during his term as governor. He said Dr. Hanft lent his expert services purely from a sense of civic duty and received inadequate compensation in return.

Speaking on "Common Sense in the Courtroom," Ehringhaus traced a law suit through the various legal steps. He advised audience of certain things in courtroom procedure that he had learned from experience as a trial lawyer.

The former governor defended trial by jury and expressed confidence in the ability of people who are regarded as uneducated to determine the true facts in situations. Some of the best jurors he had seen were relatively uneducated, Ehringhaus stated, whereas the two worst jurors he had ever seen were highly educated men.

Eager Sooners Give Tar Heels Slim Chance

4,500 Students Will Make Trip

By Jim Trinkle

Staff Writer, The Oklahoma Daily

NORMAN, Okla., Dec. 9— Approximately 4,500 eager Sooners are expected to storm New Orleans for the Oklahoma-Carolina Sugar bowl game, confident that the Charlie Justice-Jack Mitchell duet will make the trip worthwhile.

The Oklahoma head cheerleader and bandmaster will go to New Orleans this week to brew pep plans. The game itself is considered to be the biggest thing since Cherokee Run.

Most students are saving their money to buy spirits of alcohol in conjunction with football spirit. Oklahoma is very dry.

Students are wondering if Coach Wilkinson is showing the team new plays to cope with the Tar Heels. Some Sooners are angry over having to pick up their tickets in New Orleans while alumni are having theirs mailed to them. But cash is the main obstacle in the way of students who would like to attend the game.

The ticket situation is generally snafu. The first move was to give two tickets to each student, but it was soon cut to one because of the scalping scare. Faculty members were allowed four tickets to the accompaniment of gnashing student teeth.

On campus, the Tar Heels are conceded an outside chance to win the game, but everyone is sure North Carolina won't ever get a chance to put in their fifth team against the Sooners.

The belief is expressed at O. U. that the football polls are all wet. Revision is expected by Jan. 2. Oklahomans expect to send the Tar Heels back to Chapel Hill mumbling, "There ain't no justice. . ." And plans have already been made for a victory banquet.

Student Tickets Can Be Picked up

Students may arrange for someone else to get their class tickets if a blue card is filled out at the time the tickets are picked up. However, the registration office will not be responsible if the class tickets are lost.

Students failing to make arrangements to get the tickets by 8 o'clock Tuesday morning, Jan. 4, in Memorial hall will be fined $5 for registration, and their class tickets will be returned to the class ticket boxes.

Children's Choir Schedules Program

The children's choir of the Episcopal church will present a program of Christmas music and scripture readings Sunday afternoon in the church at 4 o'clock.

Tar Heels End First Practice Phase In Preparation For Sugar Bowl Test

GEORGE BREWER WILL TAKE THE RIGHT HALFBACK position for the Oklahoma Sooners when they meet Carolina's Tar Heels and tailback Charlie Justice (right) in the Sugar bowl on New Year's day. Squad Drills Will Continue In Louisiana

Travel Plans Not Decided

By Dick Jenrette

With less than two weeks remaining before their January 1 date with Oklahoma in the Sugar bowl, Carolina's Tar Heels will conclude their pre-game drills in Chapel Hill tomorrow prior to taking time out for examinations next week.

After Saturday's workout, Coach Carl Snavely's charges will not resume their practice until they arrive in Louisiana for the big game. At present, Carolina officials have not determined whether the team will fly or go by train to New Orleans. The decision probably will be made this weekend.

Most of the traveling plans, however, are complete. The squad will embark Dec. 19, heading for Hammond, La., where they will set up training quarters. The athletic facilities of Southeastern Louisiana college were offered to the visiting Tar Heels by college President G. J. Tinsley, and the invitation was accepted.

Hammond, the site of the Tar Heel training camp, is situated about 50 miles north of New Orleans. The team will remain in Hammond at least until Dec. 27 and possibly later before moving into New Orleans. But the switch will be made early enough to permit the Carolinians to take several workouts in the Sugar bowl. In New Orleans the team will be quartered at the Roosevelt hotel.

When Carolina made its first trip to the Sugar bowl, the team had its training quarters at the Edgewater Gulf, between Biloxi and Gulfport, Miss.

Local Glee Clubs Selected by NBC For Radio Show

The combined Men's and Women's Glee clubs of the University have been selected by the National Broadcasting company to present a 15-minute program of Christmas music next Tuesday evening at 11:30.

The Communication center will originate the radio program for NBC through station WPTF in Raleigh. Jane Grills will produce the program.

Broadcast coast to coast, the University program will be the second presentation in a two week NBC series featuring outstanding college and university glee clubs.

Paul Young, director of the glee clubs, began his musical activity as a choir director while still in an Ohio high school. Later he studied at the Cincinnati conservatory at Ohio university, and has done graduate work at Columbia and Harvard.

During its short period of growth, the Women's Glee club of the University has given concerts in many sections of the United States. The women's group at present is composed of over 100 girls, selected because of their special musical ability.

At present 150 men make up the Men's Glee club, chosen for their ability as singers and musicians.

Bids Over Funds For Library Work

By Lincoln Kan

University buildings officials, engineers and architects shuffled papers and talked in hushed tones in Gerrard hall yesterday as the bids for the proposed University library addition were opened and found to be far in excess of the appropriations for the project.

Figures in the thousands and over the million mark were read on bids for general construction, electrical installation, plumbing, heating and elevator installation, for the new addition. At the conclusion of the meeting it was ascertained that the final bids exceeded the appropriations granted for the project by about half a million dollars.

Officials said a request for more funds may have to be made. The figures were $1,315,000 appropriated and the lowest total bid $1,763,503.

The opened bids will next be considered by the Building committee, chaired by Collier Cobb, Chapel Hill. If any decision is made, the State Budget bureau must certify that there are sufficient funds. Then the state attorney-general will have to certify the legal aspects involved, before construction may be started.

As each bid was read, entry was made on the three percent posted bond. For general construction there were six bids with requests ranging from $1,265,825 to $1,570,000. There were six bids for electrical installation, three each for plumbing and heating and a lone bid from the Otis Elevator company for the elevator which is to go into the new addition. The above figures concerned the base bids only, as the alternate bids are ones which either include additional items or exclude items already in the original plans. The high costs were attributed to the increase in building costs and materials.

Raymond Weeks and Milton E. Harris, general architect from Durham were present. Others attending were E. B. Boynton and V. L. Wood of the Wiley and Wilson engineering firm with headquarters at Lynchburg and Richmond; Claude E. Teague, assistant controller; J. S. Bennett, director of operations; J. A. Branch, supervisor of purchasing department; Olan V. Cook and William P. Kellam, assistant librarians.

Phi Bete Initiates Hear Dr. Graham Give Dinner Talk

Speaking at the Phi Beta Kappa banquet, Dr. Frank Graham recommended that the organization start now to work on plans to bring a special speaker on campus to deliver the Phi Beta Kappa address at the convocation exercise in the spring.

The honorary scholastic fraternity has accepted Graham's suggestion, and plans to start work on the project soon. They will work with the lecture committee which is chairmanned by Dr. Gordon Blackwell.

Chancellor R. B. House, guest speaker for the occasion, discussed the general theme of recreation's being used as relaxation from scholarly achievements. Fifty-eight University students were initiated into Phi Beta Kappa, and Sidney Paul Brooks, former commerce student from Warsaw, who was killed in an automobile accident in Raleigh last spring, was awarded the honor posthumously.

Jordan Re-Elected President of ATO

Tom Jordan of Fayetteville was re-elected president of Alpha Tau Omega for the next two quarters at the last chapter meeting, ATO spokesmen announced yesterday.

Mac Loftis of Tampa, Fla., was chosen vice-president and Pete Cochran of Newton was elected treasurer. Wallace Ashley of Smithfield was re-elected to the position of scribe.

Filling the position of keeper of the annals is Charlie Tate, Morganton, while John Bippart, Orange, N. J., was elected sentinel. Curt Youngblood of Washington, D. C., was chosen usher. Reporter for The Palm, ATO national magazine, is Charlie Joyner.

Charlie Durham, Monroe, is the new house manager.

Representing the fraternity in the German club is James "Jukie" Holt of Raleigh, while Rufus Bynum will represent ATO in the Interfraternity council.

Reading of 'Christmas Carol' To Be in Playmaker Theater

An old tradition started 31 years ago will be repeated in the Playmaker theater Sunday night at 8:30.

It will be the reading of Charles Dickens' "Christmas Carol" by Sam Selden, director of the Playmakers. Selden is carrying on a time-honored tradition started by Frederick H. "Proff" Koch, founder of the Playmakers, who died in 1943.

As Selden reads the Carol from the stage, his manuscript illuminated by candles, sound effects will add to the color of the scene. Preceeding the reading, Christmas Carols will be heard over the public address system. The public is admitted free and a full audience is expected.

Up to the time of "Proff's" death he had given 278 readings of the immortal "Christmas Carol" from California to the coast of North Carolina. He had appeared four times in the New York City Town Hall and twice at Columbia university over a period of 38 years. In 1942 he gave the reading 19 times in 17 different North Carolina towns.

Selden, who is carrying on the tradition, has been here since 1927. Prior to his joining the University, he was a member of the Yale Playcraftsman. While at Yale his play, "While the Horses Were Saddled" won the Sloan prize. After he left Yale he joined the Province Town Playhouse in New York where he played "Swanson" in O'Neills sea play "Moon of the Caribbees."

New Personnel Adviser for Women To Be Mrs. Dorothy Dashiell Smith

Dean Katherine Carmichael announced yesterday that Mrs. Dorothy Dashiell Smith will assume the duties of assistant personnel adviser to women in the office of the dean of women on Jan. 1. She is replacing Mrs. Robert S. Swain, who will be leaving at the end of this quarter.

Mrs. Smith graduated from Stephens college in Columbia, Mo., in 1945 and the University in 1947 with an A. B. degree in journalism. While a student here, Mrs. Smith was a member of the legislature, the Pan-Hellenic council, the YWCA, and the Alpha Delta Pi sorority.

She was secretary of the Woman's council her senior year and was initiated into Phi Beta Kappa. Since her graduation, she has been associated with the University press and also the Orange County News. Mrs. Smith is the daughter of Dr. J. F. Dashiell, head of the psychology department, and is married to Adrian "Duke" Smith, who is working toward an A.B. degree in political science.

Group Plans Entertainment For Foreign Students Here

A special meeting of the College Activities committee, a new organization within the Chapel Hill chapter of the American Red Cross, was held in the Alumni building Wednesday to discuss and plan entertainment for foreign students and students who are planning to spend the Christmas holidays here.

The College Activities committee is a new program added to the chapter which grew out of the need as seen by the chapter to bring the campus into closer relationship with the community.

Working with the community and campus in this move is committee chairman Bill Friday, assistant dean of students of the University. Friday's office is the center of activities of the committee from which he will work to contact all students who are planning to remain here this Christmas season.

Present at the meeting, in addition to Friday were: Col. F. Carlyle Shephard, chapter chairman; John M. Foushee, vice-chairman; Mrs. R. M. Grumman, chairman of Volunteer Special service; Bill Brown, chairman of foreign students in the YMCA; representatives from the churches in Chapel Hill; Mrs. Mabel Brittain, Red Cross Home Service secretary and Gay Currie, YMCA Executive director.

Examples of concrete services the committee is performing may be shown by the entertainment rendered to the hospitalized Veterans Administration hospitals and the Fort Bragg Army hospital.

Coupon Refund

Students who have purchased coupons to be exchanged for Sugar bowl tickets in New Orleans yesterday were urged to turn them back to the athletic office if they find they cannot attend the game.

Athletic officials said full refunds would be made on all coupons turned in before noon tomorrow. They added that many applications were on file for tickets already, so the duplicates are badly needed.

Project for Christmas

Right now, after the undefeated football season just completed, the people of North Carolina would probably give the Tar Heel team just about anything it wanted, but the situation will be different when the University's budget comes up for consideration by the budget commission of the state legislature. The thought of how much money it takes to operate an educational institution is not as pleasant to taxpayers as the thought of a winning football team.

Athletic teams pay for themselves; students do not—that is not immediately. Twenty years from now the successful athletic teams of 1948 will not be paying off, but successful students of 1948 will have paid for their education many times over in value to the state and the nation.

When the state's legislators vote on the University's budget they sometimes forget this long range view. For this reason students here and at Woman's College and at State have started a project to remind their legislators during the Christmas holidays. All students are asked to see their representatives personally and to inform them of the needs of the University.

Each North Carolina student should do his share in this project. Unless a great deal of interest is shown in phases of the University other than athletics, the University, its students, and the state as a whole will suffer.

Sugar Bowl Bound?

One of the highspots of the football season this year has been the truly magnificent conduct of Carolina students in their display of sportsmanship.

At every out-of-town game, although not lacking in good spirits, and well-mannered horse-play, the students have roused comments from the citizenry that "Carolina certainly has a fine bunch of ladies and gentlemen."

In upholding mature and gentlemanly conduct, our student body has become one of the best emissaries of the University. Carolina has gained more than just national prominence by having a good football team, a fine faculty and high standards of study, but also by showing good manners and clean sportsmanship.

This year we are again Sugar Bowl bound. The last time we were there, the people in New Orleans had a fine impression of our gang. Let's show them again of what stuff we are made. —L.K.

With WW's clmn setting the precedent, the English language is becoming so abbreviated that in generations to come, students of history will undoubtedly have a difficult time deciphering the writings of our civilization. However, university students will continue to unsuspectingly sign up for these courses as they are sure to be listed in the cat. as cryp. (for crytography) courses. (Students today make take crypt courses at any morticians school. Any body interested see the ghostwriter responsible for this deadline.)

What with the YMCA, the UVA, the IFC, the VAC, the ICC's, CP, SP, and everything else from UP down, it looks like there's nothing left on campus that isn't abbreviated except coeds' skirts!

Any day now we may expect to see a copy of A.L.'sG.A. come out looking something like this: 4 score & 7 years. ago our 4 fats. brt. 4th on this cont. a new nat., conceived in Lib. and ded. to the prop. that all men r created equal.

Seriously, though, we can take all abbreviations except Xmas, but that is one word we would like to see x-terminated. Without Christ, Christmas has no meaning, and none of us should be in such a big hurry that he must abbreviate the birthday of our Lord. Those who stand up for the abbreviation argue that X is the proper symbol for Christ, but the majority of those who use it never heard or thought of that reason for writing it that way.

Dean Gives Test Views

Editor:

Attention: Rameses

Dr. W. D. Perry has kindly furnished me with a copy of his letter to you regarding your open letter of December 1 on compulsory sophomore tests.

I am in agreement with Dr. Perry and yourself on the importance of factual determination of interests and aptitudes of students. I agree further that the tests have been developed to the point of being extremely helpful when they are taken under favorable conditions and when they are skillfully interpreted.

It seems to me that we would be wise to limit any compulsory tests which we give to all students to a test of personal interests as suggested in Dr. Perry's letter. This might then be the basis of discussion which in turn would often lead to further tests and consideration of the results. To require an elaborate series of tests of all students would involve two difficulties which are very serious. First, there is the difficulty you mentioned, that it is very expensive and the University does not now have the money required. Second, even if we had the money I think the validity of elaborate compulsory tests would be seriously reduced in the case of those students who might not enter into the program willingly and therefore might not make the effort in the test which is necessary to useful results.

This is a very important question and I am glad to see that it is a source of concern to you. If you think that further discussion might be helpful at this stage I shall be glad to join in a conference with Dr. Perry, interested students and any others whom you may wish to call.

C. P. Spruill, Dean

Let Robertson Remain In DTH

Editor:

I'd like to make an inquiry about the requirements necessary for one to be a columnist on the Daily Tar Heel. Are there a long list of writers waiting to be on the staff?

My reasons for asking these questions are, if there are not a long line of people waiting to be columnists, or if there are no articles in the constitution of the DTH (if the DTH has a constitution) stating that Communists cannot be staff members, then I say, let Bill Robertson remain as a columnist.

Is our system of government so weak that it cannot stand up after an opposing point of view has been presented? If we are afraid to let the Communists have a voice in any of our newspapers because we are afraid more people will turn to Communism as the answer, our own democratic processes need looking into.

If, on the other hand, the writings of the Communists are just "a pack of lies" (and we can't bear to see them in print) isn't it better that these lies be allowed to be printed so we can refute them publicly. It is my opinion that, rather than to adopt Communist tactics of refusal of freedom of the press, we should let the Communists speak their lies or truths. If they are lies, 'the truth will out'; if they are truths, we ought to hear about them.

Too many editorial pages today print only one side of a question. I had admired the Daily Tar Heel up to this time for presenting all sides of any question.

Loyalty Board Is Unfair

Editor:

In a recent editorial, you expressed confidence in the President's Loyalty board. Under the rules of this board, the accused need not be told the exact nature of the charges against him; he need not be confronted with opposing witnesses; in fact, most constitutional guarantees are suspended; the matter rests in the discretion of the board, whose members have their own views as to what is legitimate. Employees have been discharged for union activity, favoring racial equality, discussing politics instead of going to a ball game, and seeing Russian movies.

Under the rule of the board, an atmosphere of fear has permeated government service. For their monthly check, civil servants are asked to surrender their right of speaking forthrightly lest their talk be deemed unorthodox; of engaging in political activity, lest the Censors disapprove; of associating with life long friends who may be on the black list. Loyalty is no longer a matter of well defined overt acts. Your means of lievlihood depend on what some (usually conservative) government officers think of your political and social views.

Even this is but half the story. Let us grant for a moment the fantastic hypothesis that a procedure could be set up under which only duespaying Communists would be discharged. To the best of my knowledge, the Supreme Court has never found the Communist party guilty of subversiveness or disloyalty; on the contrary, in the Schneidermann case, it found the opposite to be true. Furthermore, the constitution of the Communist party reads: "Any member shall be expelled from the Party who is found to be. . . engaged in espionage, or advocates force and violence or terrorism."

The Loyalty board serves the convenient purpose of taking the question of disloyalty out of the courts, where the government has to prove its case (which Attorney General Clark admitted it cannot do) into the secret proceedings of administrative tribunals.

If I Were The President

Editor

Now that the presidential campaign is over, many of us like to lean back and say "My job is over until 1952." But our task is not over!

If our citizenship is going to mean anything to us or to the nation we must strive to keep abreast of world happenings. No doubt you have heard the proverbial expression of the Army "A good soldier is a well-informed soldier." This applies no less to us, that a good citizen is a well-informed citizen. To help us face the issues more squarely and more inquiringly, I think it would be well if we were to ask ourselves the question, "What would I do if I were President?"

If I were President, I would ask myself what is the major issue facing my country and the world today. After I had made my decision, I would make the solution of this issue the goal of my administration. What is this most important issue? Is it housing? Is it federal aid to education? Is it labor or management problems? Is it civil rights? Is it inflation? No!!! It is the issue of peace or war. Without peace, no other issue can be solved.

The way to guarantee peace is through federal government, on such a basis as that which Dr. Frank Graham suggested in his speech in Texas. We must strengthen the United Nations assembly to the point where it can make laws. The Security council must be altered to act as an executive and enforce the laws. The World court must be changed from an advisory body to a real court that can try individuals or groups that perpetrate crimes against the peace of the world, and punish them. If I were President, I would strive for peace through a world federal government.

Textile Data Challenged

Editor:

In demanding the removal of the King Features' cartoons in the interest of Labor, Mr. Shanker implies a pure innocence of this group and a lack of responsibility for any part of today's high prices. To state that any criticism of the antics of Labor is a "smack below the belt" is a direct admission of guilt. As management is guilty, so is Labor; and as controls have been imposed upon Management, so should they be imposed upon Labor.

I challenge the accuracy of Mr. Shanker's figure in reporting the average yearly wage of the textile workers of the Carolinas as $1680.00. While working with the Veterans Employment Service, I had the opportunity to assist in the compilation of several wage schedules in the cotton textile industry. In a sample North Carolina plant, the beginning wage for a trainee as of December, 1947 was 87½c per hour, the average wage was $1.09 per hour, and many of the higher skilled workers earned from $75.00 to $125.00 per week. The trainee rarely remains in such status more than three months, either making the grade or being discharged by that time, and even during this training period he receives periodic wage increase and receives, in addition, shift differentials for night work. Assuming that all workers in this particular plant were trainees, and that no overtime or extra shifts were needed, the average yearly wage would have been $1820.00.

This example is not too far above the average of all plants in North and South Carolina to be quoted. If Mr. Shanker obtained his figure from a reliable source, it obviously includes all short-time, temporary, and maintenance workers, and was taken from a not too recent base period. I suggest that he check the recent files of the North Carolina Employment Security commission for more accurace data.

Just in the matter of relaying to Mr. Shanker a little information on another subject, the veteran's subsistence allowance is not designed to "make ends meet." It is only designed to assist the veteran. I think that we could be more appreciative of something that few —indeed, if any—of us actually earned. After all, Mr. Shanker, you'll be repaying it when you begin to work for a living.

AVC Clarifies Red Stand

Editor:

The belated discovery in certain quarters of AVC's consistent anti-Communist stand makes some clarification necessary. That stand is not the result of a "recent victory" (DTH, Dec. 5), for it is neither recent, nor is it in a sense a victory, but merely a reaffirmation of the consistent policy followed by AVC since its inception. A few brief quotations from AVC policy statements will make this clear.

1. Statement of AVC National Planning Committee, Nov., 1946, supported by a majority of chapters in an opinion poll: "Those whom we ask to join AVC have a right to know the principles underlying this organization and its leadership. We oppose the entrance into our organization of members of the Communist party. . . ."

2. Paragraph 153 of the Domestic Affairs Platform adopted at the 1947 National Convention: While opposing action to outlaw the Communist Party, the platform stated, ". . . we unequivocally reject the torturous dogmas of the Communist Party as being incompatible with democratic processes and completely repugnant to the spirit and letter of the AVC constitution and objectives. . . ."

3. Resolution passed by the 1948 National Convention: "We, the elected delegates assembled at the Third Annual National Convention of the American Veterans Committee reaffirm our conviction that the totalitarian principles and destructive practices of the American Communist Party are inconsistent with the democratic principles and constructive program of AVC, inimical to its welfare, and that Communist Party members are ineligible for membership in AVC.

"We instruct our incoming national leadership to continue using all means appropriate under our constitution to clean out and keep out members of the Communist Party from our ranks."

Letters Not Significant

Editor:

I was sorry to read that the Daily Tar Heel plans to drop Bill Robertson's column.

His point of view is one that is shared by hundreds of millions of people. About 12 columns appear in the Daily Tar Heel each week. If one student out of every 12 cares to read both sides in the world ideological struggle, then by democratic processes Bill Robertson's weekly column—or one like it—is justified. If the Daily Tar Heel can print Hearst-owned King Syndicate material 6 times a week, why can it not print the opposite extreme once a week?

It seems to me that, in their recent explanation, the editors ducked the whole question in talking about style of writing and spelling. The question, as I see it, is—Is the Daily Tar Heel willing to run a radical column or not? Letters to the editor are no significant indication of democracy in the press. Big commercial papers all over the country have sections like "Write Away." I doubt that there is a single country where freedom of the press is so abridged that there are no letters to the editor printed.

I hope the Daily Tar Heel will retain the one distinct advantage it has over the papers we buy in Lenoir. Its columns have not toed a monotonous editorial line, but rather have been a stimulating forum of student opinion.

Decision Is Wrong

Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to express my disapproval of your policy in regards to one Bill Robertson, the writer of "This Changing World," a column which, unfortunately, you have threatened to abolish with the ending of this quarter.

It seems to me that you are altogether wrong in this decision. Don't misunderstand me! I am not an ardent follower of the "Robertson School" now or have I ever been. In fact, he has never convinced me of anything except as to the possible correctness of his name. Nevertheless, I feel that this seemingly frustrated individual should be allowed the privilege of airing his opinions no matter how divergent these opinions may be, through the common medium of expression, "The Daily Tar Heel." This is the true spirit of our democracy and our liberal university.

As expressive of democracy and liberal thinking, Mr. John Dewey, professor of philosophy, Columbia university (1905-1930), has the following to say: "While what we call intelligence may be distributed in unequal amounts (no pun intended, Bill), it is the democratic faith that it is sufficiently general so that each individual has something to contribute, and the value of each contribution can be assessed only is it enters into the final pooled intelligence constituted by the contributions of all."

Thusly, the logical decision would be to allow Mr. Robertson to continue with his writings (ravings would be a better word) so that the student body may have a wider source of opinion from which to base its final conclusions. After all, you can purchase Mr. Robertson underground, from which point he can advocate "A Bundles for Stalin" 'er something like "that the-

Hard to Speak Out

Editor:

It is with regret that I see you have decided to drop Mr. Robertson's column. Reading his always provocative column has been something to look forward to in every Tuesday's Tar Heel. You yourself complimented Mr. Robertson for his cooperation in getting in his column regularly, even on big football week-ends, though you saw fit to insult him at the same time by calling such regularity "dirty work."

His column speaks for a philosophy which, no matter how one may disagree with it, is furnishing the inspiration for tremendous mass movements in many oppressed areas which are changing the very nature of modern society. Americans should certainly feel some curiosity about the system of thought which is given as the reason for our peace-time draft, war economy, expenditure of billions in support of dictators, and for the outlawing of a political party.

The editor has explained that many students have spoken out against the column. It is true that little or no support for the column has appeared. I suspect that more people would like to see this viewpoint expressed than this would indicate, for it is rather hard in this period of anti-Communist hysteria to speak out in favor of the presentation of the Marxist viewpoint.

John V. Myers

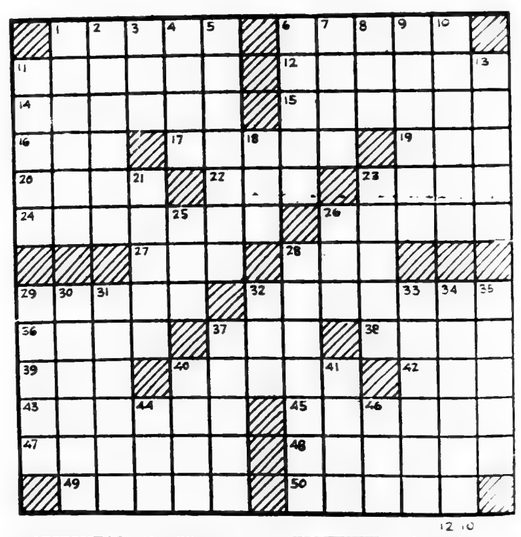
Editor Is Chicken

Editor:

I am greatly relieved that Robertson's column will no longer appear.

Firstly, its appearance in the DTH created the impression that the University was more liberal than it is:

Secondly, it was widely read, (evidence the numerous replies in "Write-away"), in derogation of the sports page and the crossword puzzle:



Thirdly, publication of Robertson and Hearst in such close proximity is confusing to the reader:

Fourthly, it annoyed the powers that be and created unrest among those of the propertyless that read it; and.

Finally, vigorous support of Communism is propaganda, and as you pointed out, not in good taste.

Graham Memorial's Activities To Continue Through Holidays

Carrying out a theme of Christmas decorations, as far as the climbing cedar would climb, the staff members of Graham Memorial announced their schedule of holiday activities. The building will be open to the public during the entire vacation period.

Tonight's Rendevous radio program will begin the festivities with a semi-Christmas theme. The first half of the program will feature two popular songs, one an original composition by Raymond Weams, "The Future is Ours." Barbara Edwards will sing Begin the Beguine."

After a King Cole Christmas number by Bill Bell, Frank Mathews will conclude the program with one of his original compositions. Arnold Wilson, Rendezvous room manager, plans to offer patrons something special for the weekend in the form of gay decorations and an open fire. Tomorrow night, which will be the last time the place will be open this quarter, there will be special favors offered to people popping the lucky balloons.

After the majority of the student body leaves town for vacations, special services will be offered to those who remain in Chapel Hill. Saturday, Dec. 19, the main lounge will be open for bridge players, and ping pong tables will be set up downstairs.

The following Sunday night the complete record album of Handel's "Messiah" will be played in the main lounge. The music will begin at 8 o'clock.

Monday, Dec. 21, a special bridge tournament will be held at 8 o'clock, and refreshments will be served later in the evening.

The holiday festivities will be climaxed Dec. 22 with a Christmas dance in the main lounge from 8 until 1 o'clock.

Two Local Fraternities Entertain Tiny Children From Orphanages

Bright colored lights, the smell of evergreen, gaily wrapped packages and soft strains of well-known carols make Chapel Hill like thousands of other little communities in the United States in December ... an exemplification of the American Christmas spirit.

It's traditional, like many other things at Carolina, that organizations gather to celebrate the approaching holidays and exchange gifts and good times. Two of the fraternities are sharing their fun and fortune with less privileged people, and in this case the people are little, and most of them believe in Santa Claus.

Chi Phi fraternity is giving its annual Christmas party for the children of Elon College orphanage Sunday afternoon. Santa will be at the chapter house to see that all the guests are well entertained and be Christmased. Charlie Justice will present to the children a football signed by the 48 team. Each child will receive a gift and refreshments are to be served. Faculty and town notables have been invited to the affair.

It will be all fun and frolic at the Lambda Chi Alpha house tomorrow when fifty boys and girls from the Methodist orphanage in Raleigh arrive for a Christmas party in their honor. The children will attend a special showing of a Randolph Scott western at the Village theater tomorrow morning. After a Yuletide dinner at the chapter house the youngsters will meet Santa Claus at the Chapel Hill airport after his long trip in a special plane from the North Pole.

Other groups are holding intrafraternity get-togethers this week. Bob Perry was in charge of a Christmas party for the Sigma Nus, and members of the Chi Psi fraternity and their pledges exchanged presents at their respective gatherings last night. The Betas and Phi Gams had similar parties on Wednesday.

Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity entertained at a house party last night for its pledges. The pledges in return entertained the chapter members with their double quartet singing, group singing, and party games.

Zeta Beta Tau Men Attend Convention

Members of the Alpha Pi chapter of Zeta Beta Tau are planning to attend the national fraternity's 50th anniversary celebration, which will be held New Year's eve in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, New York City.

Bill Benjamin from Salisbury, Md., official chapter delegate, will be one of the representatives from 44 chapters. Others planning to attend are Bob Feldman, president, Arnold Marks, former president and alumnus; and several of the trustees.

The program of the golden anniversary celebration will include talks by Dwight Eisenhower and Bernard Baruch.

Deadline Is Today For Charlotte Bids

Today is the last time that members of the Charlotte Carolina club can pick up bids to the Christmas dance to be held at the Hotel Charlotte December 28. The bids will be available in the Y from 9 until 1 o'clock.

Town Churches Complete Plans For Full Week

EPISCOPAL: Sunday morning at 8 o'clock the Rt. Rev. Matthew George Henry, bishop of the Diocese of North Carolina, will officiate at Holy Communion at which time there will be a corporate communion of all University students from the Bishop's flocese. At the 11 o'clock service Bishop Henry will preach and administer the apostalic rite of Confirmation. The Episcopal Junior Choir, directed by Kathryn Royall, will present a program of Christmas music at 4 o'clock Sunday. At 5 o'clock students are invited to the annual Episcopal Christmas caroling with supper afterwards for all Episcopal students. The Rev. Mr. Yates will speak at evening worship at 8 o'clock.

Bishop Henry will be in the parish house Saturday night from 8 o'clock on to meet students from his Diocese.

CONGREGATIONAL: "Good Tidings to all People?" will be the topic of the Rev. Mr. Munger's sermon at 11 o'clock Sunday morning. Members of the congregation will enjoy for the first Sunday heat from the new furnace that was installed last week. At the evening service at 8 o'clock Mr. Munger will speak on "Spokesman for the Purpose of God," and special music by Mrs. J. M. Williams and Miss Mae Williams of the Baptist Church choir will be heard. On Tuesday, Dec. 22 there will be a church school party for families and friends at the church at 7 o'clock.

METHODIST: At the 11 o'clock service the Rev. Mr. Ruark will preach on "The Fellowship of the Church." Big plans have been made for the Moravian Love Feast and candlelight service at the church Sunday night. At 6 o'clock the Westminister Fellowship group from the Presbyterian Church will join the Wesley Foundation for supper and the Moravian Love Feast will begin at 7 o'clock. All students and townspeople are invited to the service at which coffee and especially prepared buns will be served. Under the direction of Bishop Kenneth Pfohl of the Southern province of the Moravian Church, the Love Feast is a traditional Moravian service. With the accompaniment of a brass band, Christmas caroling will also be enjoyed.

PRESBYTERIAN: Directed by Paul Young, University Glee Club director, the Presbyterian Church choir will sing Bach's "Magnificat" at both the 9:45 and the 11 o'clock services.

Five Local Sororities Celebrate With Gala Entertainment Parties

The ADPi's couldn't wait for Christmas to begin their celebration. Wednesday night the pledges, actives, and alumnae were treated to a Christmas party and gifts containing ditties. Mrs. Maude Lee and her mother, Mrs. Lee, were the guests of the evening. During the evening Christmas songs were sung by the light of the Christmas tree. The house was decorated with Christmas candles and greenery. The girls contributed their toy gifts to the YWCA's collection for needy children.

The Tri Delt's were entertained at a Christmas party on Wednesday night. The actives, pledges, and alumnae advisors were the guests. The party was the annual Pine Party. A buffet dinner was served. There was a Christmas tree with presents for all those present. The gifts were presented with appropriate greetings by Santa Claus.

The Pi Phi's had a Christmas party last night. The big sisters exchanged gifts with their little sisters. The house was decorated with a Christmas tree and candles. About 10:30 the party moved out to the campus in order to present the Pi Phi annual caroling to the dorms and campus. Refreshments were served at the end of the party.

Besides their own party fun, the Pi Phi's kept up their tradition of giving a happy Christmas to two underprivileged Orange county children. During their party the girls took up a collection for clothes and toys for the children.

Monday afternoon is party time at the Chi O house. From five until six o'clock refreshments will be served. Santa Claus will be there and the big sisters will exchange presents with their li'l sisters.

Kappa Sigmas Honor Lovely Claudia Lee

The members of Kappa Sigma have made such a discovery in Claudia Lee that they have set up a new precedent of having a sweetheart of their chapter. Claudia was pinned this week with a pearl studded pin in tribute of the honor.

She was chosen chapter sweetheart because of the unselfish help she has rendered the chapter in its activities. During her two years here she has been their candidate in the Miss Payoff contest, in the Yack beauty court, of which she was made queen, and added the finishing touch to their Duke float.

Colonel Switzer Makes Promotions

Col. Byron R. Switzer announced the promotion of four men in the Air ROTC program yesterday. They are Floyd P. Ellington, William T. Luke, Wade L. Surratt, and James H. Waynick. The men were promoted from second to first lieutenants with the presentation of warrants being made at the review staged by the unit on Tuesday afternoon.

The promotions were made on the basis of their outstanding work in the unit during the past year, Col. Switzer said.

Pi Phi Pledges To Have Dance Next Quarter

Opening the social season for winter quarter will be the Pi Beta Phi pledge dance, at which the sorority's pledges will be formally presented to campus society.

To be held in the Carolina Inn ballroom Friday night, Jan. 7, the dance will be semi-formal, with music by Chic Burroughs and his Carolinians. Pledge officers and their dates will lead the figure. They are Ann Chandler, president; Pat Sullivan, vice president; Lucille Conly, secretary, and Judy Nunnally, treasurer.

Other pledges are Julie Compton, Gene Denbow, Norma Jean Dew, Ann Marshall Emmert, Jane Gower, Betsy Hommel, Jacqueline Lewis, Betty Lokey, Barbara Lowe, Millicent Merker, Judy Nunnally, Marie Nusbaum, Jean Sloan, Ruth Whalen, Lenoir Williams, and Harriet Williamson.

Liddy Bet Myatt, pledge supervisor, and Jane Pointer, social chairman, are in charge of arrangements for the dance.

Hometown Parties Of Students Will Add to Christmas Spirit

The Charlotte Carolina club is having its annual Christmas dance at the Hotel Charlotte Dec. 28, with the bands of Billy Kanoff and Bob Davis furnishing music for the occasion. This will be the first year that the club will have two ballrooms for their dance, said Lem Whitsett, president. A Sugar Bowl theme will be featured as decorations.

Students from Raleigh will hold their dance Dec. 22 in the Virginia Dare ballroom of the Sir Walter hotel. Johnny Satterfield and his band will play. There are representatives of the club in each sorority and fraternity house and in every dormitory to distribute the bids.

Tidewater Virginia Carolinians will hold their dance Dec. 22 at the Sand Bar club, Chesapeake Beach, Va. The decorations will combine a Sugar Bowl and Christmas theme.

The Atlanta-Carolina Alumni club is giving a Christmas party Dec. 21 at Joe Veal's restaurant in Atlanta. All undergraduates and guests are invited to attend. Reservations may be made now through Charlie Loudermilk, Chi Phi house.

The Western North Carolina dance will be held Dec. 26 at the Manor hotel in Asheville, said Walt Allen, president. Carol Henry and his Buccaneers will furnish the music. Tickets are now being distributed by members of the club.

NAAC Will Hold Meeting on Sunday

The Chapel Hill branch of the National Association for the advancement of Colored People will have its regular monthly meeting Sunday, Dec. 12, at 3:30 at the Rock Hill Baptist church.

Attendance Boom Marks 1948 Year For Grid Elevens

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—(UP)—College football attendance increased nearly six per cent this season over 1947, a United Press survey of the major colleges showed today.

Every section of the country recorded an increase with the Southwest leading the way with a percentage gain of 20.67. The South was next in line with an increase of 9.35 per cent followed by the Rocky mountains with 6.30. The Midwest with 3.78 and the East with 1.74. The Far West just managed to better last year's figures, showing a net increase of less than one third of one per cent.

Oklahoma Writer Describes Life In Sooner State

By Roy Angel
Sports Editor, Oklahoma Daily

NORMAN, Okla., Dec. 9—Oklahoma university students and football players are confident that the powerful Sooners will master Charlie "Choo-Choo" Justice and assistants come New Orleans, New Year's day and the Sugar bowl game.

The Sooners have heard a lot about the spectacular running and passing of "Choo-Choo"; they've seen him in the newsreels and they know that he's made practically every All-American selection.

They also know about the power generated off the Carl Snavely single-wing formation and they remember that the Tar Heels made mincemeat of a Texas Steer eleven that battled the Big Red right down to the final minute before losing 20-14, with a cold, calculating eye toward their pocketbooks, give the Sooners a slender one-point edge in the early December line.

That's the way it is in Soonerland. Oklahomans don't envision a landslide win but they can't see anything but a convincing Oklahoma victory.

Eleven Men?

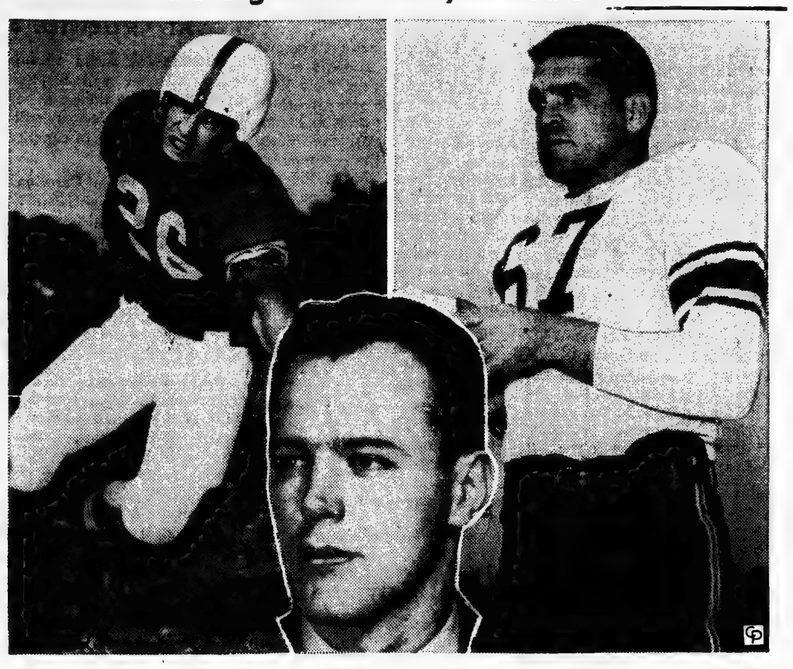
Sooners also presume that the Tar Heels will start eleven men against them, although newspaper reports seem to indicate that "Choo-Choo" has been something of a one-man team. Such reports have been generally discredited and the Red Skirts expect to meet a rough and tough forward wall.

Most of the Sooner players are anxious to compete against a single wing attack in spite of the fact that they have faced a T-formation team practically every time out this season.

It's a little too early to really draw a comparison between the two teams. The Sooners took a rest the week following their final game and haven't had a look at the Tar Heels offense or defense. They'll know a lot more about it by the end of the week.

Two Tough Lines

There's one thing for sure, the Tar Heels are going to tangle with two of the most savage front lines in collegiate football and they'll have a look at one of the nation's most devastating rushing attacks.



The Sooner forwards are big and fast and operate smoothly in front of a versatile set of backs paced by the ball handling magic of All-American quarterback Jack Mitchell Up front it's All-American guard Buddy Burris, who spends a large portion of Saturday afternoons in opposing backfields.

With Mitchell running Coach Bud Wilkinson's Oklahoma split-T at the quarterback slot it is fairly safe to predict that the Sooners will score at least three times and maybe more.

Tackle Wade Walker, a native North Carolinian who hails from Gastonia, summed it up pretty well when he said, "I don't believe they'll be able to stop us and I don't know if we'll be able to stop them."

That's the kind of respect the Sooners have for the Tar Heels. So everything points to a great ball game between two great football teams.

Oklahoma's Big Three – They're Louisiana Bound

THE BIG THREE of Oklahoma, Jack Mitchell, Bud Wilkinson, and Buddy Burris, left to right, are expected to give Carolina plenty of trouble in the New Orleans' Sugar bowl on New Year's day. Mitchell, called the smartest college quarterback in the business, is also a talented passer and a dangerous runner. Wilkinson has turned in one of the top coaching jobs in the country at the Oklahoma institution, and Burris has been picked on virtually every major All-American that has been selected.

Tar Heels First In Seven Events At Durham Meet

By Billy Burgess

DURHAM, Dec. 9.—Carolina's varsity swimming team, in its first meet of the season, turned in a convincing 58-17 victory over the Duke university swimmers here this afternoon

First place finishers for Carolina were Jim Thomas, in the 220-yd freestyle; Floyd Drew, in the 50-yd freestyle; John Bippart, 150-yd backstroke; Dan Breedon, 22-yd breaststroke; and Bob Hutton, who captured the 440-yd freestyle.

Carolina's other two firsts came in the 300-yd medley, when the Blue and White team of Sper, Twining, and Jess Greenbaum came in first, and in the 400-yd freestyle, in which Greenbaum, Dick Twining, Drew, and Steve Osborne teamed up.

For the Devilfish, Johnny Connor, a very promising diver, edged Buddy Crone for top honors. Bill Brackney gained Duke's other first, that coming in the 100-yd freestyle

300-yd. medley relay — Carolina, (Sper, Twining, and Greenbaum); Duke, 3:05.2

220-yd. freestyle—Thomas, (C); McCauley, (C); Clauson, (D). 2:21.6

50-yd. freestyle—Drew, (C); Osborne, (C); Overdorff, (D). 0:24.4

FROSH SWIMMERS

Carolina's freshman swimmers yesterday lost to the North Carolina State college frosh swimmers, 43-32 in a meet at Raleigh.

State took five first places while Carolina captured the remaining four. The Tar Heel victories came in the 50, 100 and 220 events and in the freestyle relay.

Kirby Ambler placed first in the 50 with a 25.5 showing and took the 100 in 57.6. Cecil Milton was first in the 220 in 2:30.5. The freestyle relay team was composed of Ambler, Milton, Williamson and Marcus. Their time was 1:44.4.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 9.—(UP)—Georgia Tech's Bobby Dodd has withdrawn as one of the Southern coaches for this year's Blue-Gray football game and has been replaced by Alabama's Harold (Red) Drew, Blue-Gray headquarters announced today.

UP Writer Gives Slight Edge To Tar Heels in Sugar Bowl

By Oscar Fraley

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—The oddsmakers reframed sporting poetry today to make it read: it's not how many you won or lost but whom you played.

For California's Golden Bears and Clemson's tearing Tigers, both of whom finished among the nation's undefeated and untied titans, were underdogs as they headed toward New Year's Day bowl battles.

And the men who post the prices figured that the North Carolina-Oklahoma tilt—without a perfect record in the house—would be the game of the day come Jan. 1.

Rose Bowl

Northwestern 6½ over California—That's even smaller odds than expected, however, for the Pasadena clambake. USC brought 'em skidding by fighting Notre Dame to a draw. It sounds even when you consider that California beat USC, which tied Notre Dame, which beat Northwestern. But that problem of schedule severity raises its head again, and Northwestern certainly had a tougher row to hoe than the Golden Bears.

Sugar Bowl

North Carolina 1½ over Oklahoma—The Sooners lost their opener and then came like whirlaway in the stretch. The Tar Heels were tied once. Both beat Texas, the only common opponent. But again it's a shade for a team with a tougher schedule when they hook up at New Orleans.

Cotton Bowl

Southern Methodist 6½ over Oregon—Oregon's record seems the most impressive, with only one loss against, SMU's loss and tie. Then, too, SMU barely skinned through three games. But again it's that tougher schedule which apparently makes the Mustangs the choice at Dallas.

Orange Bowl

Georgia 7 over Texas—On first glance this appears to be an underlay. Georgia dropped only one game, a close 21-14 decision to North Carolina, which whipped Texas rather handily, 34-7. The Longhorns also were bounced by Oklahoma and SMU which makes them appear like a fine steak dinner for the Bulldogs in the Miami muscle dance.

'Gator Bowl

Missouri 7 over Clemson—See how much respect that undefeated and untied business means? The men of Missouri were bounced twice this season but also clawed such as SMU and Navy. Clemson apparently lost much prestige for this Jan 1 tussle at Jacksonville, Fla., when it barely squeezed past much-battered Auburn, 7 to 6, in its season finale.

Delta Bowl

William and Mary 6 over Oklahoma A. & M.—It's at Memphis and there's little to choose. W. & M. dropped two and tied two. The Aggies lost three. Again the stronger schedule gets the nod.

Carolina Prepared For Sugar Bowl, Sooners, Revenge

By Bill Kellam

Carolina's gridders, boasting 16 veterans of the 1947 Louisiana victimization, will return to the scene of that infamous gridiron crime of two years ago when they meet Oklahoma's powerful Sooners in New Orleans' Sugar bowl on New Year's day. Gabe Hill, the villain of that pigskin drama and Georgia's twelfth man on that sad day, won't be returning, however, much to the delight of Carolina rooters and supportrs.

Needless to say, the local stalwarts dropped that hotly contested clash, 20-10, although outplayed the Trippi-led Bulldogs for most of the game and out total-offensed them, 265 yards to 256.

That battle of Dixie grid powers of two years ago was billed as a duel between Georgia's sensational All-American Charlie Trippi and Charlie Justice, Carolina's footballerina of his opponents' secondaries who, with the aid of some expert downfield blocking, made a practice that season of dancing in and out of the arms of would-be tacklers to go all the way about once a game. However, both of these highly touted operatives spent most of that afternoon getting up off the turf from whence they'd been borne by unsympathetic linemen.

Carolina Hangs 57-47 Defeat On Indians

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

A Little More Than

WITH ONLY 11 more practice days until New Year's, Carolina's Tar Heel football team is all rested up with no place to go but the Sugar Bowl and with nothing to do once they get there but engage in a friendly football tussle with a herd of Oklahomans who fear nothing but the Deity Himself. From the Tar Heel point of view, whoever said New Year's is a holiday, just didn't have a date with the Sooners in mind.

The bookies, bless their little parleys, spoke out yesterday that the Tar Heels should trample all over the poor Okkies to the tune of some one and one-half points, a melody so soft you can hardly hear it playing past row D in the grandstand. The point the betting boys are trying to put across is that the contest will be as tight as a bridge game in the phone booth and may the best man win. Ink to oil wells, it's Carolina.

From both sides of the field come the usual small talk, but none of the confident chatter of players and coaches whose only worry is the exact nature of the score. You can read uncertainty between the lines in the foreheads of both the mentors—the gentlemen who each would like to believe they have the winner they think they have.

The Driver's Seat

THE ONLY FELLOWS who don't look worried are the Sugar Bowlers themselves. After a hectic November of watching most of the nation's best beating paths of glory to their very door, the Sugar Bowlys of New Orleans have emerged with the newest thing in a safety match which can't miss striking the fancy of the country's footballing public.

The Sugar bowl got its break two years ago when the Rose bowl became a personal dog fight between the Pacific coast conference and the haughty Big Nine. It turned out to be a case of biting off their nose to spite their face. That year the New Orleans gentlemen tossed the Charlies—Trippi and Justice—into the same arena along with their following which developed into a contest the boys are still Gabe-ing about.

And this year, according to the Associated Press and Mr. Williamson, the Sugar crowd will be raising cane again with the Sooners and the Tar Heels who rank polls apart from any other bowl pairing. The Rose looks a little faded with runner-up Northwestern and California, while the Orange is a little canned in matching Georgia and thrice-topped Texas, both of which fell before the Tar Heels.

Billing and Cooing

WITH THIS TOP billing and the national sports writers cooing to beat the bowl, both teams will require top performances to be recognizable in comparison with their clippings. Out at Norman, Coach Bud Wilkerson has a team that some say can play better than some scribes can write about them. He modestly professes possibly possession of the two top lines in America, built in part by ex-Tar Heel Jim Tatum with war surplus material he brought out of the Navy with him.

Behind these lines are backs who would much rather run than pass, according to ye olde statistics, but which have done some of both in dropping the ceiling noisely in on their last nine opponents. The Sooners lost their opener to more than infamous Santa Clara, which might be classified as the poor man's William and Mary. Oklahomans hope that Santa will be a little more generous to them the second time around.

The Tar Heel team that will go some 1,000 miles to cope with this menace to the peace and quiet of unbeaten teams, is probably the greatest in the history of the University. They will play their last game together as a powerful fighting unit before many move on to make room for new faces and future All-Americans. They will be out to hang up the school's first bowl victory along with those two dozen uniforms going up on the hook for the last time. Cheers would be more appropriate and appreciated than tears.

The Rice Tag

CHARLIE JUSTICE, the All-American without the usual Rice tag, will lead the invasion of some 14,000 Tar Heels who will bathe in joys and thrills of the Basin street city. The Choo will be making his 32nd run for the Blue and White, a career that has found him leaving tacklers and honors strewn all along the way. He will play to the largest audience of his Tar Heel tour of duty—80,000 fortunate fans, that will see the lithe-legged lad from the Land of the Sky who has won the hearts instead of the Heismans.

The Tar Heels are thoroughly capable of cleaving the Sooners' split-T slight past its usual dimensions. The locals, who haven't played to full possibilities since the Texas game, may be preparing to close up shop with a clearance sale that will sell the Sooners right on down the Mississippi.

All of which proves it will take the Tar Heels' best effort of the season to take the OK out of Oklahoma.

Footballers Prove Family Men

When the Tar Heels face the Sooners come New Year's day, there will be 12 fans in the stands who have a personal interest in the proceedings on the gridiron. These 12 persons will be guests of the University, for they are the wives of players on the varsity squad.

Not only will the trip mean another game for All-American Art Weiner, but it will be something special. Weiner will be married December 16 to a Chapel Hill girl. Boots McGirt and will make the trip to New Orleans as a honeymoon. Boots will also be a guest of the University.

Seven of the top offensive stars on the Carolina squad are married and three of them are papas. Art Mitten leads the list with two children, a boy and a girl. Charlie and Mrs. Justice have a four month-old son, whose name incidentally, isn't Choo Choo, but Ronald.

The other offensive ace who is a proud papa is fullback Hosea Rodgers. Unlike the Justice family, he can't hope for future gridiron greatness for his child for the Rodgers family consists of Mr. and Mrs. Rodgers and their young daughter.

Fred Bauer, reserve left end has the distinction of being the father of twin boys.

Other players who are married include Right End Bob Cox, Center Dan Stiegman, tackle Ted Hazelwood, Guard Larry Klosterman, ends Mike Rubish and Max Cooke, and Guard Fletcher McLane

Christmas will have a double meaning for Rodgers and family. Hosea will be celebrating his 27th birthday on Christmas day.

Tar Heels Annex Fourth Victory; Nearman Gets 18

By Zane Robbins

The University of North Carolina Tar Heels made it four in a row over North State competition last night in Woollen gym when they hung a 57-47 defeat on a highly-touted Catawba cage crew.

After 35 seconds of playing time had elapsed, Nemo Nearman made good on a charity toss. Coy Carson followed with a two-pointer, Hugo Kappler added a free shot, and Carolina led, 5-0, after two minutes and fourty-five seconds.

Breaks the Ice

Graham broke the scoring ice for the Indians with a one-handed push after three minutes were gone. The visitors then proceeded to stage a rally that put them into an 8-8 deadlock with the Tar Heels at the six-minute mark.

Billy Ray Hunsucker then sank a free shot after Carson had fouled him, and the Catawabans led 9-8 for the only time in the game.

Carolina quickly retaliated as Kappler made good on a free throw and Nearman scored on a push. The Tar Heels went on from this point to stretch their lead to 32-25 at intermission.

Even-Steven

The two teams played on even terms during the early stages of the second stanza, but after six minutes and thirty seconds had elapsed the Tar Heels burst into another scoring spree that stretched their lead to 53-36 at one point.

After piling up a substantial lead, the Carolinians coasted to the victory, but Coach Tom Scott never substituted freely until the final seconds of the game.

The usual half-time lull was brightened last night by an excellent gymnastic performance.

Crowder Leads Carolina Frosh To Win Over Catawba, 65-51

By Lew Chapman

A scrappy Catawba Jayvee quintet extended the Carolina freshmen into playing their best game of this still budding season as the Tar Babies managed to win their fourth game last night at Woollen Gym, 65-51, in a well-played contest.

Although the Tar Babies had won their three previous contests, that opposition was considered mediocre and last night was to be their hardest clash so far. And the yearlings proved their mettle by coming back in a strong second half and completely outplayed the Indians to register the final decisive verdict.

A pair of sharp-eyed guards paced the yearling attack with Ham Crowder connecting for 19 points and closely followed by John Bowersox who threw 15 counters. A good example of the well balanced Tar Baby offense can be demonstrated in that four of the starting five broke into double figures in the scoring column. Behind Crowder and Bowersox, the usual high scorer, Buddy Johnson, was watched closely by the Indians but managed to notch 12 points while forward Dick Harter tallied 11.

This preliminary to the varsity game started off in the usual fashion with Carolina assuming the lead from the outset of Crowder's first deuce. The four other yearlings then also joined in the attack after 10 minutes had elapsed, the frosh had taken a substantial 20-6 lead.

Not to be outdone, the Indians of Catawba gained the initiative and despite two-pointers by Bowersox, Harter and center Lenny Guyes, slowly creeped up until two points separated the teams at 28-26 with two minutes left in the half. But a short set by Cheek and a lay up by Johnson insured a 32-28 lead for the yearlings at the intermission.

Carolina retook the court 15 minutes later and immediately set the contest's pace. Crowder, a scrappy miniature guard from Wilson, dumped in 4 markers after the tip-off on a one-hander and a set and Carolina was off to the races.

Bowersox and Crowder then treated the crowd to a display of pleasing basketball. Interchangably the two frontment scored Catawba to a frenzy. In the point-getting spurt Bowersox hit on four long sets while Crowder utilized the fast break and a mixture of jump shots and layups to record a total of 13 points in the second half.

Mural Wrestling, Volleyball Titles Presented at Gym

Carolina's Intramural wrestling and volleyball competition came to a successful conclusion yesterday afternoon in Woollen gym, with the wrestlers, both fraternity and dormitory divisions, receiving medals, and Phi Gamma Delta fraternity taking the campus volleyball crown.

The championship wrestling matches took place before a large, loudly applauding crowd of spectators, and there was plenty of action to keep them around for an hour and a half, with the hotly contested heavyweight bout between Joe Augustine and John Stoioff, which Stoioff finally won by decision, climaxing the competition.

After the presentation of gold medals to the winning matmen by officials of the Intramural department, members of the wrestling team put on two exhibition matches for the crowd.

The Phi Gam volleyball team fought from behind to win the first game and went on to romp in the second for a 2 to 0 victory over the Grads, winners of the dorm division title.

Seal Drive Is Launched Here In TB Program

". . . And stamp it with a Christmas seal!" With that motto and a picture of a little boy sitting safely by his fireside the 1948 drive to combat tuberculosis has been launched. Christmas seals purchased at Christmas time help provide protection throughout the year.

Mrs. Edith P. Brooker, supervisor of public health nurses, announced that in Chapel Hill, chest B-rays and tuberculin tests can be had on two days of each week at the Health department. Every new student each year at the University has an X-ray as a part of his physical examination.

Humanities Talk On Divine Comedy Is Given by Huse

"Dante's Divine Comedy is a vast structure like a modern skyscraper," Dr. Howard Huse told an audience of students, faculty, and townspeople Wednesday night in Gerrard hall. Dr. Huse had chosen the Divine Comedy as his topic for the first of the series of Humanities lectures to be given this year.

"The popular conception of Dante is almost wholly wrong," Dr. Huse said. "Most people think he was a 'scare' man who put everyone whom he didn't like into hell in order to punish them. Nothing could be further from the truth," he said.

Dr. Huse explained that this idea of Dante stems from a misconception of the theology that he followed. "His religion did not exhort the weak and the mediocre. They were worse off than the damned. They were placed in a vestibule between heaven and hell and not allowed to enter either place," Huse said.

Dr. Huse explained that the Divine Comedy was written in 100 parts with the first canto serving as an introduction and purgatory, paradise, and the Garden of Eden being divided into 33 parts each.

The story of the Comedy is a journey to the future world, Dr. Huse said. On the journey Dante is to lose his innate vices as he emerges into the Garden of Eden. On the journey Dante is attacked by a tiger, representing luxury, a lion, representing pride, and a she-wolf representing avarice. "Being human, he can get by the first two. But at the third he falls back," Dr. Huse said.

BOWL PICKING CONTEST

Chesterfield cigarettes yesterday announced a contest for all Chapel Hill football predictors.

The contest will consist of eight bowl games, for which the predictors are to pick winners and scores. To predict a tie, the contestant should write in the same score by each team.

Prizes to be awarded by Chesterfield representatives Alice Denham and Tom Kerr will be:

1st Prize—Two months supply (8 cartons) of Chesterfields
2nd Prize—One months supply (4 cartons) of Chesterfields
3rd Prize—Two week's supply (2 cartons) of Chesterfields

Complete blanks must be turned in to the Graham Memorial information booth by 6 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, December 14.

(Fill in scores of all seven games.)

Gay New Orleans Invaded By Fans On Weekend Party

By Frank Allston

Usually gay New Orleans had almost more than it could take over the weekend as 30,000 Carolina and Oklahoma Sugar bowl visitors arrived just in time for the New Year's celebration.

The "bowlers" began to arrive the Crescent City as early as Monday and the excitement worked up to a climax at midnight Friday with the coming of the New Year.

Thousands of Carolina students were on the sidewalks of Canal street and the French Quarter and small-scale pep rallies were in evidence on almost every street corner. Horns and other noise-making contraptions, sold for the New Year's eve festivities, added to the general confusion.

One of the big events for the Carolinians Friday night was a parade which started in the French Quarter. An estimated 500 people took part. The parade route was up Bourbon street to Canal and along that famous thoroughfare to the corner of Baronne, a block from the Roosevelt hotel, headquarters of the Tar Heel expedition.

At the corner of Canal and Baronne a streetcar-stopping pep rally was held, ending up with the singing of "Hark the Sound." Afterwards a portion of the group formed a conga line and went through the block-long lobby of the Roosevelt chanting "All The Way, Choo Choo."

There was a slight decrease in the excitement Saturday morning as most of the Tar Heel fans found it extremely difficult to leave their beds until just before game time.

But several hundred Carolinians managed to get to the lobby of the Roosevelt around the middle of the morning for an hour-long pep rally. Cheerleaders Wray and Sarah Jane Farlow led the demonstration. Afterwards, amidst much yelling, singing and horn-blowing, the Carolina partisans made their way toward Tulane university and the stadium for the big game.

First Aid Course Begins Tonight In Howell Hall

A combined course in first aid for beginners and instructors will start this evening at 7 o'clock in room 309 Howell hall, sponsored by the Chapel Hill chapter of the American Red Cross.

The sessions will be under the supervision of Ellis Fysal, former University football player. He is now field representative for the safety services of the Southeastern headquarters in Atlanta.

The beginners course will last two weeks and will consist of four sessions, three hours each. On completion those passing the advanced course within the last three years or those instructors whose ratings have lapsed, may take the course for the last five years.

No previous training is required and fees amount to less than $1. All students and townspeople who wish to enroll should call 3773 at once, notifying Prof. A. Brecht of the Pharmacy school, chairman of first aid and accident prevention for the Chapel Hill chapter of the Red Cross.

Schedule Changes May Be Made Today

Any changes in schedule can be made starting today and continuing through Thursday, C. P. Spaugh announced yesterday. Students must present a change slip to their advisor or dean to be signed X. Venable X will be in from 8:30 to 4:30.

Frank Graham Is Suggested To Take Post

Patton Requests Forrestal Oust

Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the Greater University, is one of two men suggested to succeed James V. Forrestal as secretary of defense in President Truman's new cabinet. Dr. Graham's name was suggested by James G. Patton and Ellis Arnall, former governor of Georgia.

Patton, president of the National Farmers union, demanded that Forrestal be ousted because "he has asked for war-making powers."

Patton said that the job should be given "to a civilian with a civilian heart and mind."

The attack was prompted by Forrestal's first annual report in which, Patton said, the secretary placed at the top of his legislative program for Congress proposals "which would deliver into the hands of the military, for the first time in this country's history, the power to make war."

Patton cited paragraphs asking legislation by which the United States could provide military assistance to other countries as well as advisory military missions.

The report discloses, Patton said, that Forrestal "regards the United States as practically already at war and that he wants to be able to strike wherever and whenever he desires to use the military power."

He added that Forrestal "takes it for granted" that the United States already is in a military alliance with western Europe—a proposal that is under study at this time.

Patton said that such an alliance could only be made by congress and "would fly in the face of historic American traditions."

The Forrestal report was described by Patton as "paving the way for the military to break through President Truman's ceiling on budgets."

Patton suggested that military spending be limited to what is being spent under the Marshall plan for reconstruction, diverting the rest of the military budget to serving the needs of the people.

Dr. Graham was in Washington yesterday on business and could not be reached for comment.

Sugar Bowl Sees Bands, Card Stunts

Halftime Features Coordinated Cards

The 85,000 fans at the 15th annual Sugal bowl classic in New Orleans were treated to a colorful halftime entertainment program featuring card stunts by both the Tar Heel and Sooner cheering sections and formations by the Carolina and Oklahoma marching bands.

The card stunts were coordinated at each end of the field. Spectators saw the Carolina section spell "Sugar" in the north end zone followed by the Oklahomans with "Bowl" in the south end.

New Carolina card stunts included a Santa Claus face and card illustrations to the varsity band's well-known "seasons" formation program.

The 115-piece "Pride of Oklahoma" band played music from the Broadway musical production "Oklahoma" and presented appropriate formations with each number. One of the best received was "The Surry with the Fringe on Top" with a realistic surry with turning wheels formed by members of the band.

Churches Article In Alumni Review

The current issue of the Alumni Review, University alumni magazine, carries an article on Chapel Hill churches, citing years of their organization.

The Chapel of the Cross, which is the Episcopal church completed in 1848, is the oldest church in Chapel Hill. Presbyterians were the second denomination to build, the first church being erected in 1849.

Other churches built in Chapel Hill include the Methodists in 1853, Baptists in 1855, and the Congregational-Christian church about 25 years ago.

Dr. MacNider Is Given Scroll Signed by Med School Seniors

Dr. W. deB. MacNider, Kenan research professor of pharmacology and former dean of the Medical school, was honored last week with the presentation of a parchment scroll, signed by 32 members of the senior class of the University Medical school.

"Throughout the lifetime of a student of medicine," the scroll says, "he attends many classes, listens to innumerable lectures, is instructed by countless individuals. Occasionally it falls his privilege to be associated with some truly outstanding personality, a person whose influence is woven into the pattern of the student's life.

"We, the class of 1949, desirous of recognizing such a man as this, do hereby present this certificate of appreciation to William deBerniere MacNider.

"Though our association has been brief, he has given to us a glimpse of the knoweldge which is never found on the printed page of a textbook or medical journal. He has taught us pride without snobbishness, and devotion to a concept without bigotry. With his own life, he has presented us with an ideal of Christian counselor, loyal friend and truly good physician."

Dr. MacNider was guest speaker at the Kiwanis club's dinner meeting held last week. Speaking on old Chapel Hill, he related humerous events of the old days in the village.

Under-Par Tar Heel Eleven Downed, 14-6, By Powerful Oklahoma In 15th Sugar Bowl

No Barrier

Four Carolina students and three French sailors had a fine time touring the New Orleans French Quarter together on New Year's Eve. The sailors were from the training ship Jeanne d'Arc, docked in New Orleans harbor.

The only disturbing thing about the group was that none of the sailors could speak a word of English and none of the students understood French.

But the language barrier didn't prevent the Frechmen from learning to chant "All the way, Choo Choo" all the way through the French Quarter.

RATED TO CARRY A TWENTY-TON LOAD, a C-97 cargo plane, latest U. S. Air Force air freighter is shown in flight. It has been announced from Washington that the double-deck planes will replace the C-54 as the big workhorse of the Berlin air lift. The C-54 can carry a 10-ton load. It will be some time before the large C-97's will take their place in the air lift. The Air Force at present has only three.

Three Key Plays Were Responsible For Oklahoma Win Over Tar Heels

By Larry Fox

To paraphrase a popular song from not too long ago, it was "Three Not-So-Little Plays" that wrecked Carolina's hopes for a victory over Oklahoma in the Sugar Bowl grid contest played in New Orleans on New Year's day which saw the Sooners gain a 14-6 triumph over the Tar Heels.

Over 100 plays were run from scrimmage during the course of the encounter yet the fatal three, at least from the Carolina standpoint, were outstanding enough and decisive enough to be ranked as truly crucial.

Oklahoma set up its brace of touchdowns on two of the big three while a Carolina six-pointer, which would have put the Tar Heels in the lead, became merely an unfulfilled desire for the screaming Carolina fans, who helped to pack the huge Tulane stadium.

Bright at First

Things looked bright for the Blue and White cause when Charlie Justice took the opening kickoff and Carolina proceeded to drive down to the Oklahoma 10.

At this point, fate and Myrle Greathouse entered the picture. On an attempted pass into the right flat from Justice to blockingback Eddie Knox, the big Oklahoma fullback charged into the Carolina backfield and picked off the errant pass.

When the play came to its conclusion, the action had switched to the Carolina 13 and Jack Mitchell took the ball over on a quarterback sneak several plays later.

Tar Heels Rally

Hosea Rodgers put Carolina back in the game in the closing seconds of the opening stanza and the score stood at 7-6. Oklahoma, when the second act of the three-part tragedy was staged.

With the clock running out in the first half and the Tar Heels camped on the Sooner eight, Justice fired a pass to Art Weiner in the end zone. Stretching as far as possible and leaving his feet, the All-American end had the ball in his hands, only to have the big six points that meant the lead dribble out of his hands.

Few Students Show Up In UNC Rooting Seats

Less than 25 per cent of the persons sitting in the Carolina student cheering section at the New Orleans Sugar bowl game were University students, according to estimates based on observations at the game.

The athletic department announced just before examination week last quarter that approximately 1,500 student cupons had been purchased. These cupons were to be used solely by students, and only by the students who purchased them.

The Carolina card section of 1,302 students was in the center of the 1,500-seat block of student cupon seats. The official student rooting section was also composed of this group. Observers said both the cheering and the card stunts suffered because of the small number of students in the section. Some estimates figured the number of students in the section to be as low as 10 to 15 per cent.

A number of Oklahoma rooters, including some Oklahoma students, were among the "strangers" in the Carolina student section. Many older people and some children were mixed in with the few Chapel Hill students who were seated in their own student section.

Students were allowed to trade their cupons in for game tickets on Friday afternoon and Saturday morning at the Roosevelt hotel. Some checking of identification cards was going on but much laxness was observed in the ticket-handling procedure.

Tuesday Classes Scheduled Today

Regular Tuesday classes will meet today and on Saturday students will attend Monday classes, William Wells, dean of arts and sciences, said yesterday. This is done in order to fulfill the 50 class-days required by the Association of American Colleges, he said.

The change in schedule was approved by the schedule committee Dec. 1. One student, four deans, and Edwin Lanier make up the committee, of which Wells is chairman. It was approved by Chancellor House.

Macbeth, Hamlet Productions Slated For Webster Company Presentation

Macbeth in the afternoon, and Hamlet in the evening is the bill-of-fare to be dished up by the Margaret Webster Shakespeare company in Memorial hall, Monday, Jan. 17, as part of a series of outstanding professional theater productions being sponsored by the Carolina Playmakers this season.

Miss Webster has a world-wide reputation for her exciting productions of Shakespeare's most popular plays on Broadway. She has directed Macbeth and Hamlet for an extensive tour of universities and high schools all over the country as part of her plan to rescue Shakespeare from the dust of the classical limbo he has been consigned to by many literature teachers and scholars.

Hamlet was booked originally as the main evening attraction, but response to the opening ticket sale announcement was so heavy that John Parker, business manager of the Playmakers, decided to add an afternoon performance of "Macbeth" to take care of the large blocks of tickets requested by high schools over the state.

85,000 Witness Colorful Contest

By Chuck Hauser

The powerful Sooners from the University of Oklahoma proved too much for Carolina's Tar Heels Saturday as they won the 15th annual Sugar bowl classic in New Orleans by a score of 14 to 6.

Some 85,000 persons saw the Oklahomans down an underpar Chapel Hill eleven in perfect football weather. The Tar Heels began the game with a familiar flash, but bogged down after an intercepted pass broke up an early scoring threat.

Ken Tipps of the Sooners kicked off from the south end of the field after the Big Red won the toss. Charlie Justice scooped up the ball on the third bounce and twisted from the 17-yard line through a half dozen Oklahomans before he was hauled down on the 37. Sugar bowl spectators were on their feet as he began his run, some hoping and some fearing that he would elude his last few opponents and score on the first play.

Hosea Rodgers lost five yards on the next play when he failed to spot a pass receiver, and the Asheville Ambler took over again. On second down Justice faked a pass, edged past two Sooner linemen and darted off the right side for nine yards. He next tossed a real one to Bob Kennedy who was dropped on the 47 for a first down.

Rodgers faked a reverse and cracked the middle of the line for 11 yards and another first down. Kennedy lost five yards which Rodgers made up on second down. Justice ran parallel to the line, wheeled and pitched a beautiful toss to Art Weiner who jumped high in the air and neatly took in the ball on the ten.

As Tar Heels in the stands got to their feet to watch what appeared to be an inevitable touchdown drive in the first few minutes of the game, the Oklahomans seized their chance and intercepted a Justice pass which barely trickled off his fingers as he was hit by two Sooner forwards. Myrle Greathouse charged in to grab the ball out of the air and race to the Carolina 14 where Eddie Knox nailed him.

It only took the Okies a few plays to crash across for the first score of the ball game. Jack Mitchell faked a handoff on last down, cut to his right and slipped through a hole in the line for the touchdown. Les Ming made the score Oklahoma 7, Carolina 0.

A few minutes later, still in the first period, Joe Romano fell on a Sooner fumble on the Oklahoma 30. Rodgers fired a pass at Bob Kennedy who was dropped on the 15. Rogers picked up three yards and Charlie Justice slid through to the four and then the two on a double reverse. Hosea plunged through a mass of Oklahomans to strike pay dirt. Bob Cox, who was splitting the goal posts with ease in the pre-game warmup, went far wide and the Tar Heels trailed, 7-6.

During the second half, the ball changed hands five times before the Oklahomans took a Justice punt on their own 46 and began their second touchdown march of the day. The Sooners went 54 yards and Pearson bulled through the line for the final two yards and the TD. Ming again converted, with his boot gliding directly over the right goal post as did his first conversion. Both kicks were dis-

Celebration Of New Year Jams Traffic

Fans Take Over Sugar Bowl City

New Year's Eve in New Orleans was a spectacle that few Carolinians will ever forget.

The Crescent City's famous French Quarter was a howling mob of people which jammed every bar and nightclub to overflowing and blocked traffic so completely that police soon stopped traffic altogether on Bourbon street, the center of the quarter's night life.

The celebrating started early Friday evening and continued until after dawn on Saturday. The many thousands of visitors in the Sugar bowl city just did not seem to want to go home and sleep before the day of the big game.

Impromptu pep rallies and school songs were the order of the night for both Tar Heels and Sooners, who wore out their voices long before game time the next day trying to outdo each other. Few people were seen without blue and white or red and white buttons on their lapels.

The visitors will long be talking about the shows in the French Quarter night clubs. The Cat Girl at the 500 club, the Oyster Girl at the Casino Royale and Sally Rand left lasting impressions on collegiate minds.

Money Alloted for New Road Between Chapel Hill, Durham

The long-proposed new highway from Chapel Hill to Durham took its first step towards reality with the allocation of $500,000 made by the North Carolina State Highway commission at its final meeting of 1948.

Although the appropriation will not cover the entire cost of the project, which citizens of the two communities have been seeking for more than 15 years, officials estimated that the sum will be sufficient to purchase the right-of-way and build the structures and possibly a portion of the road bed.

The new route will shorten the distance between Durham and Chapel Hill and will provide means of one-way traffic, eliminating many dangerous spots on the road, long regarded as a menace to drivers. The strip will be 22 feet wide and will have very few curves. The right-of-way is to be of sufficient width to allow widening in future years.

According to Collier Cobb, Jr., member of the Chapel Hill planning board and of the committee from here working with the Durham committee on the project, the eventual aim of the planning board in working for this and other roads is to allow through traffic north-south and east-west to by-pass the village to prevent increased congestion as the University grows.

Judge J. L. Phipps headed a committee from Chapel Hill, composed of representatives from the village, from Carrboro and from the University, which worked with a special Chamber of Commerce committee from Durham headed by Marshall T. Spears.

Welcome Back

Once again the University begins to wake up after a restful vacation period. Once again students curse the alarm clock and rush off to eight o'clock classes. Again they queue up to change class schedules and gather in the Y to exchange greetings and gossip.

"Have a good Christmas?"

"Nothing but the best."

"Go to New Orleans?"

Man, what a party!"

Through the years old South Building has seen many such returnings, and now as its windows watch student life pulsing again along the campus paths, its bells ring out "welcome back" as they signal the change of classes at the beginning of a new year.

Gripe About Seating

OPEN LETTER TO THE ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

Gentlemen:

I've been to New Orleans. I've been there with some 3,000 Carolina students and we've got a gripe.

We didn't mind it too much when you put us in the end zone and gave the good seats to the alumni and other people. We figured that at least we would have a good rooting section, would put on some fine card stunts and would make a lot of noise.

There were supposed to be 1,500 students in that end zone card section. Ha! If more than 25 per cent of the people sitting in the student section were Carolina students I'll stand on my head in the middle of Y court tomorrow morning. Some pretty good sources estimated that only 10 or 15 per cent of the people there were students.

In the first place, our cheering wasn't as good as it could have been if we had had 1,500 Tar Heel voices all together. Secondly, the card stunts, good as they were, could have been much better if all students, instead of a bunch of strangers, were working them. Why, there was even an Oklahoma student and his date two rows behind me and many other Oklahoma rooters scattered through the section.

What happened to this fine method of ticket distribution we heard about before we went to the game? How did all those strangers and Oklahoma people get Tar Heel ticket coupons? Obviously that great a number of tickets couldn't have been scalped between the time the coupons were traded in Friday afternoon or Saturday morning and kickoff time.

Let's find out, boys, because we're not too happy over the situation

Yours in despair,

RAMESES

Good Word From N.O.

We understand New Orleans was a pretty wild place over the weekend. We heard there was a lot of partying and a lot of hell-raising. But the most important thing we heard was that Carolina gentlemen conducted themselves like Carolina gentlemen.

The New Orleans chief of police, in a statement made to a Crescent City newspaper Sunday morning, commented that the weekend had been very orderly as far as actual destruction of property and malicious vandalism was concerned. In fact, no vandalism of any serious nature was reported at all.

We're sorry we lost the game, but we're glad to see that our good sportsmanship and clean fun left a favorable impression on the New Orleanians. —C. H.

The ideal life is in our blood and never will be still. Sad will be the day for any man when he becomes contented with the thoughts he is thinking and the deeds he is doing, —where there is not forever beating at the doors of his soul some great desire to do something larger, which he knows that he was meant and made to do.

—Phillips Brooks.

These Days:

Major Test For Truman

By George E. Sokolsky

For the first time since Harry Truman has been president, he has a congress of his own. He stepped into the presidency out of a Congress that had been dominated by the personality and organization of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Among the Democrats, he had not been an outstanding political leader. He was made vice-president at Mr. Roosevelt's behest to avert the renomination of Henry Wallace and the nomination of James Byrnes, whom Mr. Roosevelt regarded as a political liability on religious and sectional grounds. His presidency of the Senate was, as usual, dull and unimportant. He had no preparation for the presidency of the United States and was immediately challenged in the 79th Congress and eventually by the country, which elected the 80th Congress with a Republican majority.

Now his party is in power and the responsibility for what Congress does is politically, even though not constitutionally, his. Actually, he will only have a majority in the Senate as long as the Republicans and Dixiecrats fail to merge on particular bills. Obviously, he won the election in November and that has gone a long way in raising his political prestige. No man in the Democratic party is stronger than Harry Truman. No man in the Republican party in either house, is particularly strong at the moment.

It is possible for Harry Truman, therefore, to provide a great leadership or to grow increasingly weaker; he cannot become stronger in time than he is today, for he stands at the apex.

The President has proved himself to be a man of very complex character. He is at once a simple, kindly, horse-sensy, average man; yet an astute, fighting politician, expert in the arts of rough-house vote-catching, but altogether inexpert in the arts of government; capable of the widest breadth of view on some issues but wildly insecure in his approach to many crucial problems. It is, therefore, never possible to forcast his conduct.

Congress, after his speech on the state of the nation, will engage in a battle over the Taft-Hartley amendments, the budget, the Hoover reorganization bills and so on. My guess is—and it is only a wild guess, no better or no worse than you could make— that the course of the first session of the 81st Congress will show Mr. Truman to be very much in a central position, to the right of the left wingers of both the Democratic and Republican parties.

The major test will not be the Taft-Hartley amendments, but the continuance of the House committee on un-American activities. When President Truman said that this was a dead committee, I did not interpret his comment to mean that the committee would go out of existence, but rather that its personnel during the 81st Congress would naturally be different from that appointed by the 80th Congress. For instance, J. Parnell Thomas will not be its chairman; Mundt, its most active member, becomes a senator; Representative Nixon, who has done so able a job in the Chambers-Hiss case, recedes to the minority. Robert Stripling, the chief hired man of the committee, who has been with it, on and off, during the whole of its existence, and who is responsible for its magnificent results, will retire.

I interpreted the President's remarks to mean that the old set-up is dead and a new one will be created by the new Congress. Indications are that the committee will be continued. No Congress can ignore the fact that it was the House committee on un-American activities, and not the department of justice, that uncovered espionage in the state department.

More On Robertson:

Last Words of Protest

Editor:

At the December 7th membership meeting, the members of the Chapel Hill Chapter of the American Veterans' Committee expressed their concern over the discontinuance of Bill Robertson's column and voted unanimously that the following points concerning this matter be forwarded to you.

First of all, it was felt that your action in suspending Bill Robertson as a regular contributor to the Tar Heel is a violation of the principle of free speech.

The membership in discussing the past function of the Tar Heel as a campus function, concluded that, since it is a student forum supported by a large variety of student ideas and beliefs, it must not be censored for the sake of "good taste" or "to please as many students as possible."

It is even more serious, in our opinion, if Bill Robertson was suspended on idealogical grounds. This does not mean that AVC endorses the points of view or beliefs expressed in Robertson's column, but we hope that you will reconsider your actions in this matter and continue your previous policy of impartial presentation of all points of view by reinstating Robertson.

Sincerely yours,
John Webb
American Veterans' Committee
Chapel Hill Chapter

Editor:

. . . I am not a believer of Robertson's policies. He does go to extremes, I'll admit, but for goodness sake, do you not want to refresh your mind with some new ideas now and then? Even though they may not be authentic, they do give you something to hash over. Besides, they're right humorous at times.

"Continuous barrage of letters to the editor and continuous verbal complaints to the staff." Oh, how you must have suffered! Dare to be different; people cannot learn from those who are always in perfect agreement with them.

So you have received numerous complaints; at least that shows his column was being read! Can you fairly say that Robertson's column is unpopular to the DTH readers by the number of complaints that you have received. If the complaints you have received represent a poll remember the polls prior to Nov[illegible] last.

John Cazin, Jr.

Editor:

. . . I would like to see Bill Robertson's column remain in the DTH, BUT for only one reason. His frustrated suggestions (which, by the way, could only be upheld and carried out in a totalitarian state) touch off the spark which eventually explodes my fury and thus brings out that inborn feeling of loyalty and patriotism that I have for our way of life; for our democracy. With this feeling near the surface my appreciation of America (as it is now) is at its highest.

Also without his column, I would not have my pet gripe. (Would Mr. Freistadt's ears burn if I said what I really thought of Robertson and others of his ilk!) It's a good thing that you can't be sued for libel for what you think.

Isaac N. Reynolds

Editor:

. . . Your action is totally indefensible. The questions Robertson raises are relevant to contemporary problems, the quality of his column is as high as the remainder of your editorial page, and your generous use of "canned" material proves that you have plenty of space. Whatever one may think of Robertson's opinions, they certainly are important; and I for one should like more information on the subject of Marxism, not less. Certainly ideas which are moving scores of millions of people ought to be the object of judicious study at this university, rather than of negative carping and obscurantist suppression.

If you discontinue Robertson's column, say no more about your devotion to freedom of information. . . .

Your policy during the election campaign was creditable, and your recent editorial on how fine a thing is freedom of information was excellent. Why should you arbitrarily change course now and destroy the very freedom about which you have so recently, so lyrically, and so editorially sung?

New Angle on Dispute:

Confederate Flag Sacred

The Cavalier Daily heartily endorses the views of Hon. D. Lawrence Groner with regard to use of the Confederate flag at football games and similar events. Mr. Groner, retired chief justice of the United States Court of Appeals, has set forth his opinion in a letter to President Colgate W. Darden, Jr.

Dear Mr. Darden:

A year ago when Virginia defeated Harvard in Charlottesville I was shocked to read in the newspapers that the whole student section of the stadium was alive with Confederate flags.

I thought this was in extremely bad taste and so did a number of my friends, former Harvard men, who now live in Washington, and had gone to the game. I said nothing at the time because I supposed it was an isolated incident, which, perhaps, might have grown out of conditions peculiar to that game.

A few days ago North Carolina played Maryland here in Washington and the North Carolina-supporting contingent, some three of four thousand strong, came loaded down with Confederate flags, and I was told that the custom is more or less common at all Virginia and North Carolina games.

Certainly the University of Virginia is no longer a provincial school and I would think it no compliment to the thousands of students from the North and West who have chosen it largely because of its greater bredth of view, to be greeted from time to time by an exhibition of Confedeate flags at every interstate athletic contest. But that, after all, is of minor consequence. What is important is that to the South and to the Southern people the Confederate flag has ever been the symbol of a lost cause which they hold sacred. To use it whether as a boast or taunt in an interstate football game is, in my opinion, a desecration. Until this recent custom, I had supposed that there was in all the South a general acceptance of the conclusion that the flag should remain furled except, perhaps on General Lee's Birthday, on Memorial Day, or when hung on the walls of our museums or battle abbeys. I cannot believe that its use for those purposes which I criticize can accomplish any good to anybody and I am equally convinced that to right-thinking Southern people it is a profanation.

I understand that in these matters the authorities of the University have no jurisdiction, but it would seem to me that a timely word spoken before the habit becomes too fixed is a very desirable thing and I wish you would give it some consideration.

Sincerely,
(Signed) D. Lawrence Groner

Write Away

'A Loyal American'

Editor:

. . . I am in direct opposition to the governmental and economic views of my son, William J. Robertson, Jr., and I wish to make that perfectly clear. However, it is my feeling that in a democracy citizens of all viewpoints should be allowed to have their say . . .

I do not write this as a plea in my son's behalf insofar as his column is concerned because that is not a matter which concerns me as an off-campus citizen, but I think inasmuch as your paper has seen fit to discontinue his column—the very one in which admittedly I have found contrary to my own—that it might not be without interest to tell you something about his background.

First of all, my son is a lineal descendant of Carter Braxton of Virginia, Signer of the Declaration (a revolutionist, it will be recalled). Secondly, his great-grandfather, Major Gilmer Breckenridge, of Virginia, was an anti-secessionist who held out the last against secession, but who when the Civil War became inevitable and Virginia was invaded, served under the Stars and Bars and died in battle under Jeb. Stuart in Virginia. Thirdly, my son himself served the colors of the United States in the Second World War—as a volunteer—and was a casualty following the invasion of Leyte in the Philippines, which made necessary for him to be hospitalized for many months.

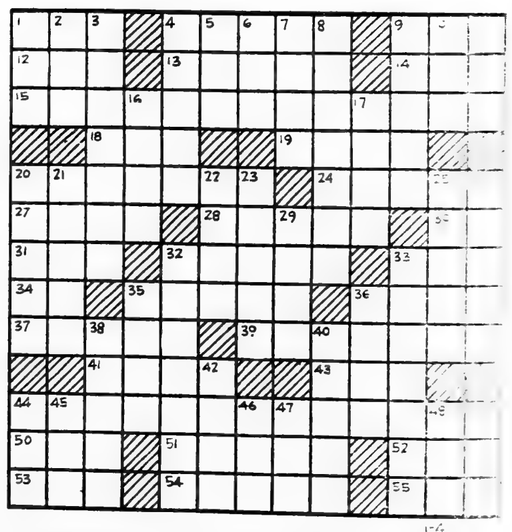
Forgive me for making one personal observation, and this that I am as certain as a Mother can be that my son is a man of the highest ideals, that he is possessed of a fine sense of honor, that he always has fought his battles and expressed his views in the open, that one of his traits is that of unselfishness and that if he may be accused of an outstanding fault it is that of being too ready to defend the underdog.

It has been my firm impression that my son, while he has expressed admirer of the Russian form of government is in no the less a loyal American.

Susan Preston Robertson (Mrs. W. J. Robertson, Sr.)

Think, Then Prosecute

Editor:



"The man who loves other countries as much as he loves his own stands on a level with the man who loves other women as much as he loves his wife!"—T. Roosevelt.

In an article just prior to the end of last quarter, Herr Freistadt seemed pleased to announce that " the Communist Party of the U.S. has neither been indicted nor convicted of being the agent of a foreign power." No one laments that fact more than I—in view of the preponderant evidence that the party is sponsored and engineered by the pseudo-proletariat-masters hoodlums at Moscow.

Let us look at the record, Mr. Editor, and THINK: In his acceptance speech for president, in 1928, William Z. Foster, puppet headpuppet of Communism in America, said: "When a Communist heads a government in the U.S.—and that day will surely come—that government will not be a capitalistic government but a SOVIET GOVERNMENT, and behind it will stand the RED ARMY to enforce the dictatorship of the proletariat." In 1935 Foster writes that the Communist International and the Red International of Labor Unions will "one day put forth to bankrupt American capitalism and establish a SOVIET AMERICA."

What this country needs today, Mr. Editor, is an iber Teddy Roosevelt to direct an alert and energetic Justice Department in PROSECUTING those who would give us to the Bolsheviks. Then, militant Communism's chances of survival in America would be comparable to those of a snowball in the proverbial "hell"!

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

Couldn't be Stomached

THE SOONERS OF OKLAHOMA turned out to be a little more than Carolina and tummy-troubled Charlie Justice could stomach last Saturday afternoon. It was just one of those days when the Tar Heels got up on the wrong side of the scoreboard and mathematically couldn't stretch a single touchdown out to win a 14-point ball game. Consequently, they were forced to take a 1949 Sugar bowl beat and lump it.

The Tar Heels weren't as bad as some of the writers and withers have made them out to be. They committed several unfortunate errors in the course of a very abbreviated afternoon and eventually forfeited their sins converted with pink ribbon into wins for the Sooners. But they weren't outclassed as class goes.

The fact of the matter is that though the Tar Heels did lack the offense to win the ball game, they did supply the impetus for all the cheers that rang out through the voices of some 83,000 assembled fans and fanatics. Had it not been for the Tar Heels, one could doubt the Oklahoma entry would have ever tallied. There was certainly no aid and comfort given to the enemy last Saturday.

Four Play Flops

ALL OF WHICH boils down to the fact that four plays were the entire ball game from a deciding point of view and all four of these went the way of the Sooners, who were greedy enough to take the game along also. The plays were:

1) A running pass thrown by Charlie Justice on the Oklahoma 10-yard line which was intercepted by one Myrle Greathouse and run down the Tar Heel throats to the extent of the Carolina 13-yard line. The interception came at a time when Carolina was on the march with the opening kickoff and the Sooners were digging the earth for a last stand at the goal line. Justice, by admission, says he threw the ball before he saw Greathouse and couldn't retract his statement. A touchdown for the Tar Heels might have broken hearts and bankbooks of the Westerners at this point instead of dealing Carolina a blow for which it never quite swapped a punch.

2) Bob Cox's failure to convert after the Tar Heel touchdown. This item looked rather small at the time, but when the Sooners were gifted their second touchdown, it placed the Tar Heels relatively two scores in arears. It finally beat them at the finish.

3) Art Weiner's drop of a touchdown pass at the end of the first half. This play would have put the Tar Heels out in front like Evelyn West and placed the pressure away from the Tar Heels and on the Oklahomans.

4) A completed pass by the Sooners to the Carolina 10 in the third period which was tipped into foreign hands by a Tar Heel defender attempting to intercept the lethal message. It was what they call the coup de grace in the French quarter and the old ball game in any language.

There's Still Justice

CHARLIE JUSTICE, though guilty of an early error, played a game worthy of the $5.12 admission price. He did the work of three Oklahomans in handling the top running, passing and kicking assignments for the Tar Heels. He performed admirably for one a fellow who had to play from the heart because of an empty stomach. If he wasn't the best man on the field, then the drinks weren't as watered as some of the fans might have thought.

The rest of the Tar Heels were equally on hand. Hosea Rodgers ran well when called and both he and Justice failed in their passing attempts not so much because of personal error, but seemingly because of the lack of protection—pass or police. It takes time to do anything well.

Which rates a word for the Oklahomans. Though they receive one dissenting vote in their quest of the best-team-Carolina-played-all-season title, they possess a great line both on the offense and the defense. They also have a great performer in Jack Mitchell the offense spark plug and Mr. Greathouse who plugs all kinds of gaps on defense. And they have the ability to cash in on the enemy's mistakes, a talent which means the difference between a long ride home and a short one.

The Other Things

SEVERAL OTHER FACTORS contributing largely to the Tar Heel defeat. One was the choice of Carolina plays. A greater part of time the Tar Heels just didn't run what their fans wanted them to, which sometimes is understandable. But the Carolina inability to run more spread plays—passes to botton-hooking ends up the unprotected Oklahoma middle and the like—is not too explainable. The majority of the times spreads were called against the seven-man packed Sooner defense, yardage was made.

It wouldn't be a Sugar bowl without a word about the officiating. It didn't please anyone, Sooner or Tar Heel. A roughing-the-kicker penalty against the Tar Heels after a swoon by Oklahoma's Darrell Royal of which Sarah Bernhardt would have been proud, put and kept the Tar Heels in a lot of trouble. And the speed with which the time of the game was run off made people wonder if the officials were not in a hurry to get downtown and first in line to see the Cat Girl. They even let the clock run through the Tar Heel point after touchdown attempt when all good refs and clocks should play dead.

The Tar Heels then, it would seem, lost a ball game primarily because of physical errors you don't commit and cash your tickets at the window marked "win". And secondarily, they were beaten possibly for the lack of some of the mental attitude that spurred the Sooners on to greater heights.

There is still no football team in America who can beat the Tar Heels. They must beat themselves as they did last Saturday.

Undefeated Cagers Whip Terps, 55-47

Tar Heels Capture Seventh Victory Of Infant Season

By Frank Allston

Carolina's undefeated cagers racked up their seventh straight win of the season last night in Woollen gymnasium when they whipped the University of Maryland five, 55-47, before 4,000 spectators.

In their first home appearance in over three weeks, the Tar Heels managed to stay ahead of the Terps during most of the game by a slender margin that never exceed nine points.

Last night's contest also marked Carolina's first Southern conference game and the win elevated them to the number two position in the circuit. As a result of the win last night, the Tar Heels managed to remain one of the nation's few undefeated quints.

Kappler Is High Man

Hugo Kappler was the Tar Heel sparkplug, pouring in 15 points for high scoring honors in addition to playing a great floor game. Coy Carson, the conference's high scorer was runner-up in the scoring column with 14 points.

High men for the Terps were Spence Wright and Bob Murray who each hit for nine points to pace the losing cause.

The Carolina starting five of Carson, Kappler, Nearman, Nyimicz and Ryan played most of the game. Ryan, Nyimicz and Kappler played the entire 40 minutes while Nearman was out only briefly during the game. Carson was forced to leave the game for about ten minutes in the middle of the final period when he fell into the stands.

Terps Take Lead

Maryland jumped into an early lead and held it until four and a half minutes of the game had passed. Forward Bernard Smith sank a set shot after 55 seconds to give the visitors a 2-0 lead. Tar Heel center Nemo Nearman came back at 1:58 with a layup to knot the score at 2-all.

A layup and a free shot by forward Johnny Edwards sent the Terps back into a lead, but Coy Carson sank a set shot to slice that lead to one point. Then Kappler dunked the first of seven field goals to put the Tar Heels into the lead for the first time, 6-5. at 4:24, and he went down

Here Is The Complete Play-By-Play Of The 1949 Sugar Bowl Spectacle

Here is the official Sugar Bowl play-by-play running account of the New Year's day game in New Orleans.

FIRST QUARTER

Justice returned the kickoff 20 yards to Carolina's 37. Rodgers back to pass was rushed and lost nine yards. Justice passed to Kennedy for eight yards.

On a reverse from Rodgers to Kennedy, Kennedy fumbled and lost five yards. Justice faded back and passed to Weiner for 23 yards and first down on the 15.

Greathouse intercepted Justice's flat pass on the 18 and raced to the Carolina 13 before Knox brought him down from behind.

Mitchell got two on a sneak. On another sneak he picked up four more. Jack gained four at right tackle. He then made it first down with a sneak to the three.

Mitchell carried a fifth time for a yard gain at the middle. Oklahoma was off-side on the second down and penalized five yards. Thomas hit the middle for four. Thomas bucked the middle for two. Mitchell went over for the first touchdown. Ming came in to convert. Score Oklahoma 7, North Carolina 0.

Rodgers returned the kickoff to Carolina's 39. Rodgers picked up two at right tackle. Weiner made a leaping catch of Justice's pass for a gain of six. Rodgers picked up one. Justice kicked out on Oklahoma's 27.

Carolina substituted its defensive unit. Thobas bucked for two. Pearson fumbled on a buck, and Romano recovered for Carolina on the 30.

Justice led the Tar Heel offensive unit into battle. Rodgers passed to Kennedy who evaded two tacklers and moved the ball to the 15. Rodgers hit center for three. A double reverse from Justice to Rodgers to Kennedy gained eight and a first down on the four.

Justice skirted right end for two. Rodgers smashed over for a touchdown. Cox's attempted conversion was wide.

Heath took the kick-off back to the Oklahoma 22.

SECOND QUARTER

Mitchell spun into the middle for two. Mitchell sneaked through the middle for four and first down on Oklahoma's 45. Anderson couldn't hang onto Pearson's pass. Mitchell sneaked for four. Thomas picked up four more on a smash. Royal kicked out on North Carolina's four but the Tar Heels were penalized 15 yards for roughing the kicker. The ball was put in play on the 32 where it was first down for Oklahoma.

Mitchell gained four on a sneak. Then one. Heath added two. Mitchell got one at the middle and the ball went over to Carolina on the 24.

Justice tried to sweep right end but was thrown for a nine-yard loss by Paine. Justice quick-kicked 55 yards. Jones returned to the 34 where he fell.

Jones swept right end for six yards. Royall hit left guard for four and a first down.

Thomas failed to gain. Royall punted out on Carolina's 29. Justice's pass fell incomplete. On a reverse from Rodgers, Kennedy lost two. Justice punted out on Oklahoma's 40.

Pearson faded to pass, was rushed and thrown for a 16-yard loss by Fowle. Mitchell picked up three at the middle. On a Statue of Liberty, Thomas lost one yard. Royall punted out on Carolina's 38 but the Tar Heels were penalized 15 yards for roughing the kicker. It gave the Sooners a first down on their own 41.

Royall took a backward pass from Mitchell and lost on an attempt to skirt right end. Heath smashed through center for seven. Heath gained 12 yards as the Oklahoma line outcharged the Carolina forwards. It was a first down on the Tar Heel 44.

Royall picked up three. Pearson was held to one. Mitchell's pass to Heath was out of reach. Royall punted out on Carolina's 15.

Justice smashed the middle for ten. Choo Choo then went around left end for 13 and another first down. Rodgers' pass to Weiner was short. Kennedy lost three on an attempted sweep. Justice punted over the goal line, but Oklahoma was penalized for roughing the kicker. It gave Carolina a first down at midfield.

Justice raced through the Sooners for 22 yards and lateralled to Highsmith who raced to the 16 where it was first down for the Tar Heels.

Justice's pass intended for Weiner was out of his reach. Choo Choo threw to Cox for eight yards. Weiner leaped for Justice's pass in the end zone but dropped it. Justice missed a first down by inches and the ball went over to Oklahoma on her seven.

Mitchell failed to gain on a sneak as the half ended.

Score Oklahoma 7, North Carolina 6.

THIRD QUARTER

Weiner returned the kick-off to the Carolina 38. Rodgers hit left guard for three. Justice to Kennedy for a gain of one as Lisak tackled viciously. On a reverse from Rodgers, Justice got two yards. Justice's low punt was returned by Royall to Oklahoma's 23.

Pearson swept right end for seven. Thomas made it first down on the 34 with a crack at left tackle.

Pearson failed to gain on a right sweep. Heath blew through a hole at the middle for seven. Heath bucked center, fumbled and recovered for a first down on the 44.

Thomas bucked for one. Mitchell was thrown for a five-yard loss on an attempted sweep. Royall punted into the end zone.

Justice raced through right tackle for 10. Choo Choo gained six on a left end sweep. Rodgers smashed the middle for two. Rodgers gained two on another crack at the middle but Carolina was penalized five yards for illegal procedure.

Justice attempted to pass from his 34 but was thrown by Anderson for a loss of eight yards. Justice punted out on Oklahoma's 47. Royall faked a hand-off, faded and passed 43 yards to Anderson who made a great catch for a first down on Carolina's 10.

Thomas bucked for two. Pearson smashed over his own left tackle for eight yards and Oklahoma's second score. Ming again converted.

Score Oklahoma 14, North Carolina 6.

Kennedy returned the kick-off to Carolina's 40. Rodgers gained three yards at the middle. Rodgers failed on a buck. Justice quick-kicked to Oklahoma's eight and Royall returned to the 20.

Royall and Thomas combined for a first down. Heath hit right guard for four. Pearson picked up four more. On third down, Oklahoma was penalized 15 yards for illegal use of the hands.

Royall punted from his 25, the ball bouncing down the sideline and finally coming to rest in the end zone.

Rodgers passed to Weiner for seven, Art fumbled but Justice recovered. Justice raced 13 for a first down on the 40 as the third quarter ended.

Score Oklahoma 14, North Carolina 6.

FOURTH QUARTER

Rodgers gained two. Rodgers' pass to Weiner was incomplete. Rodgers' pass to Kennedy also missed fire. Justice punted into the end zone.

Heath smashed the middle for nine. Heath ran up the middle for three and first down. Thomas bucked for two. Royall took a backward pass from Mitchell and raced right end for nine and a first down on Oklahoma's 42.

Mitchell gained three at left guard. Heath rammed the middle for five. Pearson went over left tackle for four and first down on Carolina's 46.

Thomas took a hand-off through the middle for three. Heath picked up four at left tackle. Royall's pass to Mitchell was out of reach. Oklahoma was off-side but Carolina refused. Royall punted into the end zone.

Kennedy took a Justice hand-off around left end for three. Justice faked a pass and raced through a gap for five before he lost his footing. Justice passed to Kennedy for six and a first down on the 34.

Justice's pass to Powell was incomplete. Justice faked a pass, started to run but was held to a one yard gain. Rodgers' pass to Cox was incomplete Justice punted into the end zone.

Thomas took a hand-off through the middle for four. Pearson cracked the middle for three. Heath just missed a first down. Royall punted out on Carolina's 49.

Justice went off right tackle and cut back for seven. Powell was hurt and Carolina took time. Cooke replaced Powell. Justice's pass intended for Cooke was wide of the target. Justice bucked center for first down on the Oklahoma 40.

Tipps broke up Justice's pass to Weiner. Rodgers' pass to Kennedy was complete but the play was nullified by a double penalty. Justice's pass was wild.

Justice's pass was intercepted by Goad who returned to Oklahoma's 40.

Thomas bucked for four yards. Pearson took a hand-off through the middle for five. Heath made a first down on the Carolina 44.

Pearson picked up six yards in two smashes at the Tar Heel line. Mitchell got four and a first down on a sneak.

Pearson went into the line for two. Thomas tried a sweep and lost two yards. Thomas took Mitchell's hand-off through the middle for four yards. Oklahoma was penalized five yards for delaying the game.

The game ended before the teams could line up again.

Final score Oklahoma 14, North Carolina 6.

Tar Heels Third In Relay Race In New Orleans

By Joe Cherry

Carolina's relay team was the only one of three Tar Heel entries to finish among the top three in the annual Sugar bowl track meet held in City Park stadium, New Orleans, last Thursday afternoon.

Competing with some of the nation's best cindermen, Dick Taylor, in the 120-yard high hurdles, and Julian McKenzie, in the half mile run, failed to place in their respective events. Jim Gehrides of Penn State won the highs in 14.9, while Tom Dickey of LSU was first in the half mile, in 1 minute and 55 seconds. Stan White of Carolina turned in a 55 second quarter in the half-mile event to lead the field, but he dropped out soon after he passed the 440 mark.

Probably the two outstanding performances of the meet were turned in by Paul Bienz, Tulane university sprinter, who tied the Sugar bowl 100-yard dash record by breaking the tape in 9.9 seconds.

The Tar Heel relay team was second to Texas A & M after the first lap of the mile relay, but the Oklahoma Aggies took over the runner-up position at the halfway mark and held on for the remainder of the race.

Entries Now Open In Pair of Sports In Winter Murals

Plans for the intramural sports program at Carolina over the winter quarter are nearly complete, and entries are now being taken for participation in the basketball and handball leagues.

Fraternities, dormitories, and other organizations planning to enter teams should contact the mural department. The entry deadline is January 6.

Also prospective basketball officials will have a meeting in room 302 Woollen gymnasium on Tuesday, January 4. The meeting will begin at 4 o'clock.

Other sports besides basketball and handball which will be on the winter mural program are boxing, swimming, and soccer. Boxing entries will be taken from January 24 to January 27. The soccer entry period is from Feb. 21 to February 24. No date has been set for swimming entries.

Basketball play begins on January 10, with handball starting on January 12.

Also plans are being made for a big basketball carnival which will be staged on Friday and Saturday, January 14th and 15th. There will be no limit on the number of entries from each

In Camellia Bowl

Carolina's basketball team marked its sixth straight win of the season when they topped Arizona university, 60-49 in the Camellia bowl last Tuesday night at Lafayette, La.

Coy Carson threw in 16 points and Dan Nyimicz added 11 more to pace the Tar Heel scoring. Freshman center Howard Deasy scored nine. The Arizona squad managed to chalk up a 33-32 halftime lead, but Deasy and Nemo Nearman kept the backboards under control in the second half and the Tar Heels forged into a lead that they never relinquished.

World Student Service Fund Drive Will Begin On Campus Next Week

Next week the campus at large will contribute to the World Student Fund in an extensive drive intended to make University students conscious of "an unusual opportunity and responsibility for world peace insurance."

The fund-raising campaign here will be part of the 12th annual nationwide WSSF drive to supply food, books, study grants, medical care, and housing for students in war-devastated countries. This year WSSF is to be sponsored by such famous ambassadors of international good-will as the University's own Dr. Frank P. Graham.

Organized in 1937 when the needs of students in China's war-evacuated colleges first became critical, WSSF extended its activities to Europe when war broke out there in 1939. As the United States division of the international World Student Relief, WSSF vastly expanded its program to furnish relief, rehabilitation, and reconstruction as "the three R's of peace."

Group Conducting 12th Annual Plea

Last year the University raised almost $5,000 as its donation to the global charity. In all WSSF distributed approximately $2,000,000 from American students to suffering contemporary students abroad. This money bought 400,000 pounds of food, 1200 study-grants, $198,860 worth of books and other necessities for displaced students all over Europe and Asia.

This year the Council for Religion in Life will sponsor the University WSSF drive which has heretofore been a joint project of the YMCA and YWCA.

CRIL has named Dortch Warriner as chairman for the campaign. Warriner has appointed as subchairman Dick Gordon, Finance committee head; Joe Leary, supervisor of door-to-door solicitations; and Charlie Gibson, publicity director.

Others to assist in WSSF plans here will be announced this week. Also forthcoming are detailed plans for such fund-raising novelties as (1) a beauty contest to choose a coed as "Miss Pay-Off," (2) A meal during which everyone eating in University dining halls will be asked figuratively to "take a foreign student to dinner" with a cash contribution matching the cost of his own meal, and (3) A daffy auction in which faculty members and well-known townspeople will be sold to the higest bidders as baby sitters, shoe shiners, pie targets, and what have you.

The drive has formerly been conducted in the fall quarter. However, this year, it was postponed from Nov. 29-Dec. 4 because of conflictions with Thanksgiving holidays and fall campus elections.

organization, and play will be in form of a round robin tournament.

Rules of Game

Official basketball rules will govern play, with exceptions of the 10 second and 3 second rules, the last 3 minutes dead ball rule, length of game, and timeouts.

All men are eligible who have not lettered in college ball or who were not on a freshman, junior varsity, or varsity squad after the first game of the season. Fraternity players must be pledges or members of the fraternity. Dormitories may use one outside man. Independent teams may use any man not playing with another team.

for a layup to increase the lead to 8-5 at 4:45.

Smith scored a layup for the Terps at 4:52 to shoe the lead and Bob Murray sank a charity toss at 5:19 to tie up the game. Frank Armsworthy and Tar Heel Dan Nyimicz traded baskets and then Nimicz added another to put Carolina in the lead, 12-10. Coach Tom Scott's charges held that lead throughout the half and lead, 26-24 at the intermission.

Contest Tied Again

At the start of the second half, Carson and Kappler dunked free throws and the Tar Heels lead, 28-24 after 49 seconds. However Wright and Murray added field goals for Maryland and the score was tied at 28-28 with a minute and 58 seconds elapsed in the second half.

After Nearman and Murray had swapped free throws, Nemo came back with two more and Carolina had the lead for the remainder of the game. Kappler added a set shot at 3:10 to make the count 33-29, but Mack's layup cut the lead. Again Kappler netted a set shot and the Tar Heels again had a four-point lead.

At 7:52 of the second half the Terps had come within one point of Carolina with the score at 39-38. Two set shots and a free throw by Rip Ryan and a set shot by Nyimicz increased the Carolina lead to 46-38 at 10:34. At 13:31 Kappler's jump shot gave Carolina the biggest margin of the night, nine points with a 50-41 score.

Action Slows Down

In the final six minutes the action slowed down somewhat. The Terps got the next three field goals and had cut the Tar Heel lead to 50-46 at 15:20. Howard Deazy broke the Carolina scoring lapse at 16:27 with a jump shot from the free throw line.

In the last minute and a half, the Tar Heels held onto the ball and they picked up three points on free throws, two by Carson and one by Nyimicz, as the Terps fouled trying to gain possession of the ball. Nyimicz's free throw at 19:31 was the last basket of the game and the final thirty seconds found both teams passing the length of the court trying to add a final score.

The Tar Heels will play New York university in the second game of a Madison Square garden doubleheader Thursday night in New York city. Saturday night Carolina will play Virginia Tech at Blacksburg, Va., and will return home for a Monday game with George Washington in Woollen gym.

-Key Plays-

And thus things stood until midway in the third period when the Sooners were on their own 45 and Mitchell attempted his third pass of the ballgame. Unlike the other two, however, this one was complete.

Both Frank Anderson, Sooner right end, and Tar Heel defensive halfback Bill Flamisch went up into the air after the pigskin. At first it looked as if Flamisch had the ball firmly in his grasp, but it bounded out into the hands of Anderson. Johnny Clements made the tackle on the Carolina 10 and two plays later Oklahoma had another touchdown.

Looking at the game in retrospect, these were the "big" plays of the afternoon. These were the plays that could have made the difference, but once again as is the case with all post mortems of athletic events, the big two-letter word if steals the show.

New Section Open

An extra section of zoology 103 (comparative anatomy) will be opened for the winter quarter, it was announced yesterday.

AS A NETHERLANDS STATEMENT to the U.N. Security council in Paris pledged an end of hostilities in Indonesia early in January, wire reports indicated that Dutch forces were pressing last minute land and air campaigns. Here Dutch infantrymen take their positions in the streets of Djogjakarta, capital of the Indonesian republic.

Graham Expects Firm U.S. Stand

Dr. Frank Graham, advisor to the secretary of state on Indonesian affairs, said last week he expects the United States will stand firm and follow through in the Dutch-Indonesian crisis.

In a quote to a Fort Lauderdale Daily News reporter Dr. Graham said, "As advisor to the secretary of state, I am continuing to make statements only to the State department."

puted but the referees held firm.

Even the Oklahomans, however, admitted at the end of the day that Charlie Justice was the most spectacular ball player they had seen. One Sooner remarked that every time Justice got his hands on the ball the Okie stands feared he would go "all the way, Choo Choo."

After the second Oklahoma score the Tar Heels failed to get past the Sooner 40-yard line. They completely lost the flash with which they began the game, and played a brand of ball that did not touch their regular season exploits.

Miss Cowles Is Given Vote of Thanks For Services With University Press

Miss Porter Cowles has been given a vote of thanks for her services as acting director of the University Press from July 1, 1947, through Oct. 1, 1948, by the board of governors.

Miss Cowles, who in private life is Mrs. C. N. Picknell, has been associated with the Press in various capacities since her graduation from the University in 1933.

The resolution of thanks said that members of the board of governors of the press "wish individually and collectively to express our very great appreciation of your work as acting director of the press from July 1, 1947, to October 1, 1948. In the interval between the directorships of T. J. Wilson, III, and Lambert Davis, you carried on the work of the organization with fine spirit and effectiveness. We want you to know that we are deeply grateful."

Tornado Toll Is Set at 53 In Arkansas

100-Mile Storm Strikes Warren

WARREN, Ark., Jan. 4.—(UP) The count of the dead climbed to 53 today in the wreckage-choked wake of a 100-mile tornado which spun from northwest Louisiana into this lumber town at the supper hour last night.

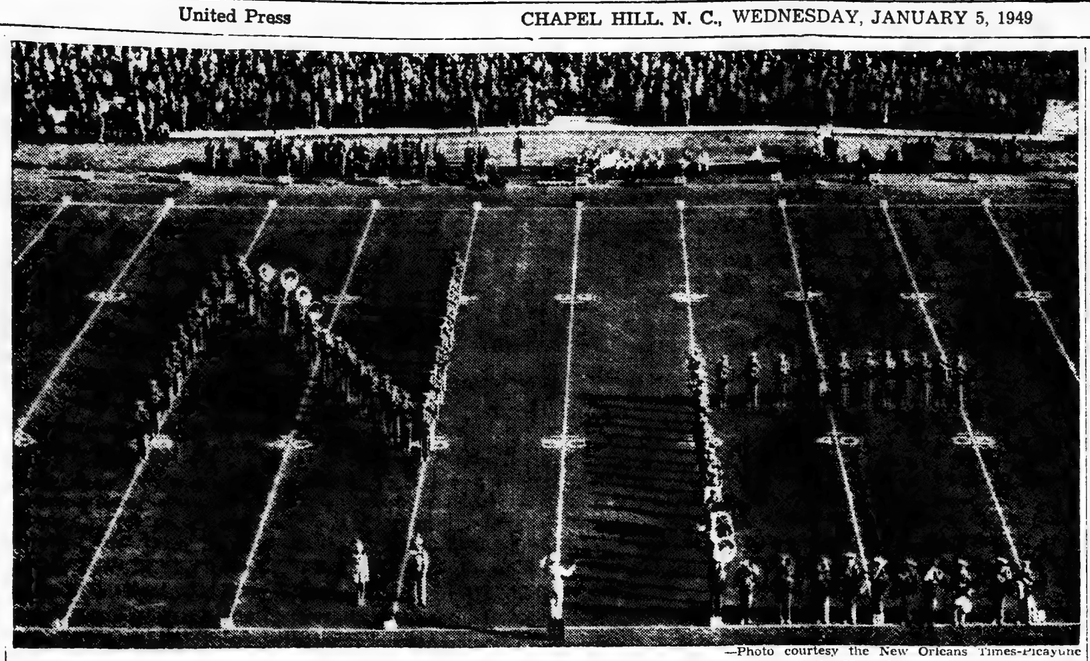
State police reported another person was killed at Banks, eight miles south of here, but the report was not verified.

Rescue workers counted 47 victims in Warren, but had been able to identify only 26 bodies. Three persons were killed in Louisiana and two others died near El Dorado, Ark.

Undertakers from nearby towns worked through the night embalming bodies in a garage behind the Frazer funeral home. They were placed in long rows of pine caskets. Relatives could not bear to look.

Bleary-eyed disaster workers picked through the rubble in quest of more bodies during the rainy darkness of the early morning but found only one new casualty, the body of an unidentified infant.

United Press Staff Correspondent James M. Flinchum accompanied Lt. Col. John C. Meador of Fordyce, Ark., commanding officer of the 206th tank battalion of the Arkansas National guard and a picked force of 100 men early today through the storm's path on the south edge of Warren.



The party searched for an hour and a half. Flinchum said his feet never touched the ground as he wandered over debris.

Only haphazard estimates of the injured could be made. Reports ranged from 270 to 400.

A water chlorinator and quantities of tetanus vaccine were sent by the Arkansas board of health.

The Red Cross said it had allocated $50.000 in emergency funds for Warrenn and vicinity and would ask an additional $100,000.

'Miss Payoff' Contest Is Planned By WSSF

World Student Service fund drive officials announced yesterday that nominations for "Miss Payoff" this year must be submitted by Friday to Edie Knight, WSSF beauty contest chairman.

For the second year a beautiful coed will be named "Miss Payoff" as a climax to a week-long campus-wide drive to raise funds to assist foreign students in war devastated countries. The charity queen will again be picked by dime ballots cast in the Y lobby.

Any coed is eligible for nomination by sororities, fraternities, dormitories, or other campus organizations. However, there are balloting accommodations for only 20 nominations; and the first 20 submitted to Miss Knight in Alderman dormitory will constitute the court for the future "Miss Payoff".

All nominations must be accompanied by $5 entrance fees which will be tallied as the first 50 votes in the race for queen. All entrants will then be asked to supply pictures of themselves to be posted at the WSSF poll to be opened in the Y lobby next week.

Lillian DeArmon, "Miss Payoff" last year, was sponsored by the Monogram club while Claudia Lee, runner-up, was nominated by Kappa Sigma fraternity.

Choral Clubbers To Give Elijah

The Chapel Hill choral club and the University symphony orchestra will present Mendelssohn's oratorio "Elijah" Sunday evening, at 8:30 in Hill hall. The performance, sponsored by the University music department, will be directed by Paul Young.

Soloists will be Edgar vom Lehn, baritone, who will sing the role of Elijah; John Brinegar, tenor; Harriet Keen, soprano; and Mary Helen zum Brunnen, contralto.

There will be no admission charge for Sunday's performance of the "Elijah."

Automobile Owners Must Register Cars

Students owning automobiles that have not been registered must register at the office of the dean of students in 206 South building. They will be issued either a red or a blue sticker, depending on the location of their residence.

Death Plane for Yale Students Had Ice on Wings, Says Pilot

SEATTLE, Jan. 4.—(UP)—A licensed transport pilot said today that he refused to fly the chartered DC-3 transport that crashed at Boeing field Sunday night and killed 11 Yale students and three crewmen.

Emmett G. Flood, Jr., Seattle, pilot for Trans-Alaskan airlines, said he "felt ice had formed on the wings" of the plane so he refused to fly the ship.

The plane had been chartered by the Seattle Air Charter company, a non-scheduled airline, to fly 27 Yale students returning to school after the Christmas holidays.

The ship crashed into an earth embankment on the take-off. It [illegible] on to the 14 killed, 13 students were hospitalized with injuries. Three students escaped uninjured.

Flood made his statements last night before a Civil Aeronautics Board investigation.

At the time of the crash, the plane was flown by Pilot William Chavers of Seattle.

Testimony given Civil Aeronautics Administration Regional Director R. D. Bedinger indicated that Chavers attempted the take-off on the icy runway "despite warnings from the Boeing field tower of below minimum weather requirements."

Bedinger said the tower had warned Chavers twice that there was not sufficient visibility or ceiling for takeoff.

"And that advice is tantamount to telling Chavers the field is closed," Bedinger added.

Apology

LONDON, Jan. 4.—(UP)—A Plumber apologized today for breaking Cupid's bow string.

William Painter, 38, pleaded guilty to charges of being drunk and disorderly when he scrambled atop the statue of Eros in Piccadilly circus yesterday.

A police court deferred judgment fo a week pending investigation of damages to the statue.

Dull Thud

CHICAGO, Jan. 4. —(UP)—Northwestern's Rose bowl champion football team returned home today to a dull thud welcome from a meager crowd of students.

Only about 100 fans were in the station when the team left its special train. Players streamed through the station en route to their campus quarters and the demonstration broke up speedily.

Boyle to Speak At Press Meet In Chapel Hill

Hal Boyle, Associated Press columnist, will be guest speaker at the annual convention of the North Carolina Associated Press club at the Carolina Inn on January 27.

Boyle, who served as an AP war correspondent during the African and European campaigns, is well known for humanized stories of everyday people. He received a Pulitzer prize for his stories on GI Joe during the war.

He believed that the plain GI had a great deal of influence on the army as a whole. This common philosophy of army life is now being applied to the post-war civilian world in his daily columns.

More than 600 afternoon papers throughout the country carry Boyle's column. He has been called the "Poor Man's Philosopher."

Recently he was honored by the University of Indiana, which invited him to deliver the first of a series of lectures on Ernie Pyle to students in the journalism department.

Sugar Bowl Greets Band With Police

Members Get Free Passes

Greeted by a milling group of siren-sounding, roaring police motorcycles provided by Sugar bowl officials, the University band arrived in New Orleans Friday morning prepared and tuned to join the University of Oklahoma band in a joint program before the 85,000-odd spectators at the Sugar bowl classic.

In return for their services at the game, the band members were provided with passes to several entertainment features: courtesy cards to the New Orleans Athletic club, free steamer rides up the Mississippi and passes to the New Orleans movie houses, in addition to the police escort.

After dinner with the Oklahoma band in the Municipal auditorium, the band adjourned to the City park, where a rehearsal was held. Following the rehearsal, the band members were given liberty for the rest of the day to tour the Delta city as they saw fit.

At the Sugar bowl game, the band provided a pre-game performance featuring "Carolina in the Morning," and a formation of the outline of the state of North Carolina. During the half-time, in coordination with the card stunts, the band performed a variation of the four seasons which was well received by the 85,000 fans.

Having returned to Chapel Hill during the holidays, the band rehearsed the evening of Dec. 28 and in rainy weather the morning and afternoon of Dec. 29, in preparation for the game performance.

U.S. Protests Soviet Failure To Return PW's

'Breach of Faith' Charged in Note

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—(UP)—The United States has bluntly accused Russia of a "breach of faith" for failing to send home all of her German war prisoners, the State department disclosed today.

The statement was included in a formal note of protest delivered to the Kremlin yesterday by the embassy in Moscow. The text of the protest was made public today for the first time. The fact that a protest had been sent was revealed yesterday.

The note accused the Soviet government of violating a 1947 agreement between the Big Four powers calling for repatriation of all German war prisoners by the end of 1948 "at the latest."

The new note was the latest of a series of actions accusing Soviet leaders of bad faith in carrying out international agreements.

President Truman himself recently said in an off-the-cuff speech at Kansas City that the Russian government had violated just about every international agreement to whom it was a party.

Meantime, Michael J. McDermott, State department press officer, denied a Soviet claim that there never was an iron-clad repatriation agreement.

He said the Russian government promised in August, 1947, that all war prisoners would be returned to Germany by Dec. 31, 1948, and has given "assurances" on numerous occasions since that "the deadline would be met."

Rosen Is Winner In Seal Contest Of Town Group

Joey Rosen, 11-year-old student of the Chapel Hill elementary school, won first place in a contest conducted by the town Tuberculosis committee, and Delores Hargroves of Orange County training school won top honors among the Negro elementary school students.

Other first class prize winners in their schools were: Muriel Atwater, Orange County Training School High; Anna Tilson, Carrboro; Peggy Ann Bowden, White Gross; Lexton Jackson, Merritt; Jonnie Mae Atwater, Damascus; Janet Alston, Hickory Grove, and Elizabeth Jones, Morris Grove.

Joey's prize-winning sentence said: "We should all buy Christmas seals because the money we pay for them goes into keeping people from getting tuberculosis and trying to cure the people who have it."

Mullis Statement Blames Students For Bowl Mixup

Ducat Confusion Not Fault of CAA Spokesman Says

By Gordon Huffines

CLYDE "PETE" MULLIS, who was in charge of Sugar bowl [illegible] in New Orleans [illegible] day that any confusion over bowl seating [illegible] was the fault of the athletic association, and not the athletic department.

"If there was any confusion over the seating arrangement in the Sugar bowl stadium it was due to the students, and not the athletic department," Clyde E. "Pete" Mullis of the University physical education department said yesterday.

Explaining that the athletic association was only able to control scalping up to the point where students received game tickets in exchange for their coupons, Mullis said, "We had no control over whether the students sold their tickets or not after they exchanged their coupons with us."

In reply to articles appearing in yesterday's Daily Tar Heel, said that he thought the distribution of tickets in New Orleans was handled very well. "We knew of no confusion until we returned to Chapel Hill and saw the DTH," he said.

As head of the group in charge of exchanging Sugar bowl tickets for student coupons in the Roosevelt hotel the morning of the game, Mullis stated that if any outsiders were sitting in the Carolina student section they must have gotten their tickets from Carolina students. "No one could get a ticket without a coupon, and the coupons were sold only to students," he said.

Mullis explained that the University had no control over the location of the student section in the Sugar bowl stadium. The bloc of 1,500 student seats was assigned by the Sugar bowl committee, he asserted.

The assistant basketball coach denied that the Athletic department was lax in checking on persons presenting coupons for exchange in New Orleans. "Each coupon and the identification card of the student was checked carefully when it was presented for exchange," he said.

Frank Graham and Chapel Hill

In Chapel Hill we have become accustomed to men of vision, in Raleigh and Washington and at Lake Success, asking Frank Graham to fill positions of great significance and authority in the Nation and on the world scene.

We know, because we've watched him close up, how admirable a Secretary of Defense, or of Labor, or of State, he would make; and, further, we know how magnificently he would serve his country and humanity everywhere were the President of the United States.

It's not that we don't hear the other side too; indeed there are few mortals who could list as their detractors such an egregious collection of noisy and powerful men. But it is, if anything, reassuring, from time to time, to note the sort of enemies Frank Graham has attracted by his courage and effectiveness in fighting for a better life for all men.

Lately, it seems, some of these detractors have felt need to be especially active: Radio Moscow erupted into denunciations of the wicked "imperialist" of East Franklin Street who had "coerced the Indonesian Republic" with the atom bombs he has long been known to keep in his oversized pockets. Then, just last week, some of our homegrown radio noises, with political beliefs scarcely less repressive than Radio Moscow's, began telling the American Public that the security of the United States itself has been jeopardized because this same man (now a "Communist" or "fellow-traveler") had been made eligible to gaze at secret information—about these same Atom Bombs, as it happens, that he has been carrying around in his pockets for all these many months!

Against such rantings Frank Graham needs no defense for those who know him or know of him, and who believe in the intrinsic worth of human beings and in their right to live as respected, happy parts of the comunity. It is fitting that the "wisdom and energies" of this man should have been cited and utilized by Presidents of the United States five times picked by the American people to lead the Nation; and that his "integrity and independence" should be noted and praised by a foremost non-political Board dealing with problems of American security.

Of course in Chapel Hill we have what amounts to a vested interest in Frank Graham. The "Carolina Spirit" we speak of so much is not an isolated and unique proposition; we neither have nor want a monopoly of belief in the Christian ethic and the democratic ideal for which men so long have struggled so hard. All we can mean by the "Carolina Spirit" is that here, in our University community, we hope we can so live as to more nearly approach these universal goals than is now possible for most human beings. And in our moments of reflection, we know how very much of this "Carolina Spirit" is today dependent on Frank Graham—how beholden is the glorious Heritage of Freedom and Individual Responsibility, which is ours in Chapel Hill, to this great champion of good causes.

We are prone to take this Heritage too much for granted; we find it easy to forget how very quickly the progress of a century can be lost, if the principles underlying the progress are not felt deeply and lived with faithfully, by the entire community. That increasing numbers of us have come to comprehend this must be encouraging to Frank Graham as he stands his ground for us and for this Heritage—in so many places and, at times, against such great odds. It is, of course, natural that we in Chapel Hill have grown to depend on him to be right here, now and always; and to feel our pride and pleasure in his world stature mingled at times with a jealous anxiety lest he ever accept a position in the Cabinet or in some faroff place.

But even as he has served Chapel Hill selflessly and irreplaceably for so long, so should our attitude toward him be grounded in feelings other than local selfishness; if the call should again come to Frank Graham to serve the cause of humanity in bigger fields, and if he should again answer it, we must not begrudge other men the benefits of his wisdom, his energies, his integrity, his independence, and his goodwill.

Meantime, as the new year opens, we can resolve to fight ceaselessly to make Chapel Hill, and the whole world we live in, the sort of place where Frank Graham would have an easier task. We can impart strength to the men on the faculty and in the student body who have understood, and sought to expand for everyone, the blessings of Freedom and of rich and good living.

* * * *

A personal word to Dr. Graham is in order too. With his life he has so served as to make living more worthwhile and happiness more easily attainable for millions of his fellow-beings; in his living he has personified the timeless worth of human decency; his example has been an inspiration to decent men all over who would cherish and forward the simple goodness of democratic living. And to this man his neighbors and colleagues and students extend their gratitude and proclaim their dovotion.

Wherever he may be, Frank Graham must know that he lives in the hearts of men of Good Will everywhere—even as he is living his life so Good Will itself can live everywhere.

These Days:

Footnotes On Berlin

By George E. Sokolsky

Miss Kay Summersby, in her book, "Eisenhower Was My Boss," blithely adds footnotes to history of the greatest value in appraising what happened during the war. Her account of the German surrender will be used by historians for many years as basic material. And it is to be remembered that the OWI and other propaganda agencies gave an obviously untrue account.

Well, Kay Summersby was around when the Germans surrendered to Eisenhower. We should have marched into Berlin and Vienna and the history of the world would have been different. At that moment the Russians demanded that the whole thing must start over again; that the Germans must again surrender in Berlin. Here's how Kay Summersby describes the scene:

"General Eisenhower messaged Moscow he would be delighted to go to Berlin for a formal surrender ceremony. Then, the Prime Minister began calling; Beetle (Smith) was in and out a dozen times; other staff members added to the pressure—General Eisenhower shouldn't participate in the Berlin surrender. His advisers' principal objection was one of military protocol: Marshal Zhukov was only an army group commander, far below the rank of a general of the army. Western pride and 'face' were at stake. This and other reasons brought the Supreme Commander to agreement; he sent another message to Moscow, noting that his deputy, Air Chief Marshal Tedder, would represent Britain and America at the Berlin sessions."

Ed Kennedy of the Associated Press scooped the world by telling the truth. Miss Summersby puts it this way:

". . .Aside from his understandable anger, General Eisenhower was hurt. He had taken the press into his confidence throughout the campaigns from Africa to Germany, often against conscientious military advice and he was proud his confidence always had been justified. Now, at the one time when it mattered most, the AP man had shown a complete disregard for that confidence."

It never occurred to her or her boss that Kennedy's obligation was to his readers and that neither Eisenhower nor anyone else had a legal or moral right to fake the surrender. The Germans had surrendered. That closed the War.

The lady's description of the Berlin surrender should have been set to Victor Herbert's music. It was comic opera from beginning to end. Then apparently they all settled down to a big drunk. Listen to her:

"Taking my seat, I blanched at the liquid artillery before each place: bottles of champagne, red wine, white wine, and—the Soviet secret weapon—vodka.

"The first of the coming barrage of toasts was proposed, naturally, by Zhukov, to, naturally, Premier Stalin. We waited awkwardly for the English interpretation by a Russian officer, then the Soviets all performed a bottoms-up, followed by their Western allies. I used champagne. Later, I degenerated to water; even champagne, at that pace, could be disastrous.

"For almost four hours, the entire assemblage spent its time hearing toasts proposed and interpreted, then bottoms-upped. The head table seemed to be in a perpetual uproar, as Zhukov, Tedder, Spaatz, and de Tassigny each jumped up to outdo the others in flowery toasts from their respective four nations.

At 5 a.m. the party went ga-ga. ". . .The majority of the banquet guests were drunk, good-old fashioned drunk. Among the few survivors still afloat were Zhukov, who didn't drink. . ."

FDR and 'Time' On Graham

TEXT OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S LETTER

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

June 16, 1944

Mr. W. Horace Carter, Editor
The Tar Heel
University of North Carolina
Chapel Hill, North Carolina

Dear Mr. Carter:

It was good of you and Miss Yokley to write me about the feeling expressed by some North Carolinians that Dr. Frank Graham should devote his full time to the presidency of the University of North Carolina. Knowing Frank Graham as I do, I am not surprised that they want his full energies and full time. But knowing North Carolinians, I am sure they rejoice in the knowledge that the University's sacrifice in sharing Dr. Graham's services with their country is an important part of the University's contribution to the successful conduct of the war. Other colleges, corporations and instutions are lending the nation their best officials and officers. The nation is grateful for their services, but I believe that in serving America, they also best serve the companies and colleges whose free future depends upon our full victory.

I have known the University of North Carolina as one of our great institutions which recognizes its responsibility for service not merely to its campus but to the commonweal. I know I can count on the University of North Carolina and the Old North State to continue to let the nation share Frank Graham's wisdom and energies in the cause to which the State and the University have sent so many of their daughters and sons.

Very sincerely yours,
Franklin D. Roosevelt

Recent discussion in the press and over the radio about Dr. Frank P. Graham has made particularly pertinent a letter President Franklin D. Roosevelt addressed to The Tar Heel in 1944, right after the President of the University had accepted appointment to the Federal War Labor Board. Also of interest to Carolinians is an article appearing in this week's "Time" Magazine, summarizing the connection of Dr. Graham with the Oak Ridge Institute and the Atomic projects underway there. The text of Roosevelt's letter appears in columns 4-5, and the text of the "Time" article appears below:

To the University of North Carolina's scrappy little President Frank Porter Graham, discretion has rarely been the better part of valor. As far back as North Carolina's bloody Gastonia textile strike in 1929, History Professor Graham stuck his academic neck out to fight for a better deal for labor. Over the years, he fought against racial discrimination and restriction of academic freedom. He joined numberless "liberal" committees. Franklin Roosevelt often used him on commissions on social and economic problems. . .

In 1946, Graham became president of the Oak Ridge (Tenn.) Institute of Nuclear Studies, a position in which he was to be given access to confidential U.S. military information. The Security Office of the Atomic Energy Commission took one look at Frank Graham's FBI file, thicker than a metropolitan telephone book, and refused to clear him for access to atomic information. Then the AEC made its own investigation. Last week, it cleared Graham. It was true, the Commission conceded, that Graham, in espousing liberal causes, had at times been associated with persons and organizations "influenced by motives or views of Communist derivation." But the commission concluded:

"It must be recognized that it is the man himself the commission is actually concerned with, that the associations are only evidentiary, and that common sense must be exercised in judging their significance. . .The specific purposes for which he (Graham) had these associations were in keeping with American traditions and principles. Moreover, from the entire record it is clear in Dr. Graham's case that such associations have neither impaired his integrity and independence, nor aroused in him the slightest sympathy for Communism or other anti-democratic or subversive doctrines."

New Year Convolutions

By Charlie Gibson

In case more throbbing craniums than resolutions came off on New Year's Day down New Orleans way, here is a likely list of ideas that at least one of us among the approximate 7500 might use to win friends and influence readers as a '49er. So help me Ripley, I vow as follows:

(1) To study diligently, whenever Y-courting with Ferne Hughes, snacking with Emily Ogburn, sleeping, movies, dates, bridge, meetings, bull sessions, weekend trips, dances, and my roommate, permit it.

(2) To honor and respect professors, laugh at all their generation's jokes, overlook their favoritism towards intellectuals, and take note during their lectures—yeah, note of how well Art Talley works crossword puzzles.

(3) To hear no Charlie Long, speak no Miles Smith, and see no Saturday classes that I fail to cut.

(4) Not to indulge in imports as long as coeds have either cars, money, or beauty; or as long as Sarah Jane Farlow is dateless, movies are silent, and the Rathskeller sells milk.

(5) To miss all the cinema sins that E. Carrington Smith sneaks through town for one day stands but to catch such sure hits as the one today entitled something like "Every Mother Should Be Married".

(6) To keep informed on Carolinantics; know at which friends to throw backpats, knives, and rice, respectively; and to remember at least one somethingerother that is going on daily—whether, say, there is a play being made in Graham Memorial by the Laboratory theater group or in the Playmaker theater by the local dramagicians or in the arboretum by—well, Tinsley Campbell and Barbara Dalton.

(7) To be kind to dumb animals and my fellow columnists now that Editor Ed has written curtains to the weakly Commie comics trumped up by "Red" (His mother loves him anyway!) Robinson, a guy who evidently favored iron curtain tactics anyway.

(By the way, watch now for a new-style column critique to be begun soon by Don Shropshire, a lad whom none of the people agree with all of the time but whose sincerity few of the people ever question. Yours unruly long ago tried to talk Don into joining him with a companion piece to be called "Shrop's Slop".)

(8) Not to spread unchecked rumors even if Winchell would winch if scooped over the current hush-hush that a certain local novelist who knows far more about Brooklyn trees than CH dogs do is now studying divorce, too.

(10) To declare all the above resolutions and any other wild notions that were beer-born on January 1 to be null and void the first day this quarter that it rains in Chapel Hill.

HAPPY NEW YEAR, all you survivors.

Mud and Slime

Editor:

Yeah, where the heck do you guys come off, cutting out a feller's column just because he's a direct descendant of Carter Braxton, of Virginia, signer of the Declaration of Independence, to say nothing of Major Gilmer Breckenridge, of Virginia?

Could it be that you are so decadent and reactionary that you are afraid to see a real political philosophy in print?

Or is it that, with true Fascist guile, you are using a few protest letters as a blind behind which you grind freedom of speech (or is it press?) into the mud and slime of feelthy capitalism?

Give us more Robertson—it's half as much fun as the cross-word puzzle, and twice as easy to see through. Whut kine critter are you, anyways, to suspend a man on, as the AVC put it, "idealogical" grounds?

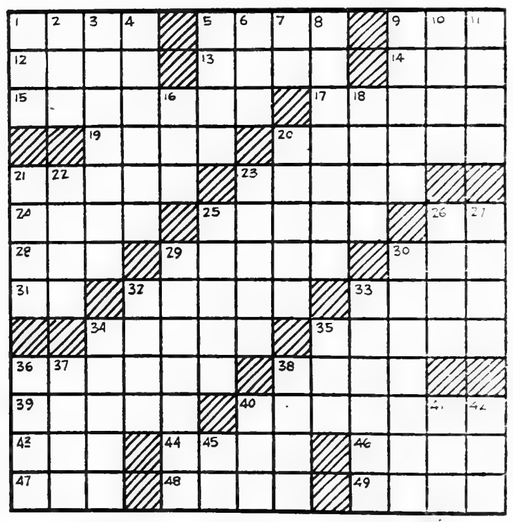
Corley's Comments

Panty-Waist Army?

By Bill Corley

The War Department's announcement that the new Army will differ greatly from the armies of the past comes as a shock to many veterans. Tailor-made uniforms and kind sergeants may be all right in times when there is no threat of war and the army is only a hollow symbol of unneeded power, but in these days of international tension we don't need a group of petted and pampered Mama's boys.

We have done too much of that sort of thing in the American Army as it is; and as a result we are destroying the greatest weapon that the American military forces have employed throughout their history. This powerful factor in the winning of the Victory in the last war is known by many names and titles but most commonly as American ingenuity and self-reliance.

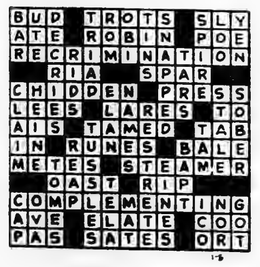


It was this trait that gave the G.I. his greatest advantage over the regimented German and Japanese soldiers. Yet we are systematically eliminating this important factor from our fighting forces while our potential enemies are building it up in their fighting units.

In World War II the military supply forces sent everything from roast turkey to Marlene Dietrich overseas to help keep United States soldiers happy and contended. This policy has tended to make the average man too dependent on other people and has limited his ability to function properly as an efficient combat soldier.

On the other hand the Russian soldier was given a rifle and his pack filled with ammunition; he was instructed to live off the land and to rely on himself for his individual comforts and necessities. Thus he began to develop the hardiness and inventiveness which characterized the American soldier of a few years ago.

One has only to look at the list of new weapons and simple but effective war methods that came about as a result of this policy to see that it works. It works too well to be ignored if we ever have to fight Russia. Two of the most outstanding and most widely publicized developments made by Russian improvization were the Molotov Cocktail and the use of rockets on aircraft.



When a nation's future existence is at stake in a world in which peace or war is at the mercy of an incident, then it is no time to cater to public fancy or Mothers' damned foolishness in worrying about junior's feet getting cold or someone hurting his feelings. If we are going to have an army, make it an army of men and not an army of helpless individuals waiting for someone to hold a handkerchief so they can blow their noses.

Have You Heard This One?

WITH THE ADVENT of an All-American many stories about such star circulate through the sports world and make their rounds to all or most of the nation's dailies which thrive on just such material. Choo Choo Charlie Justice has been no exception to the rule. Rather he has been somewhat of a concrete example of the old axiom.

One of the latest stories about Charlie originated in New Orleans during the recent Yuletide season. It seems that a local policeman came across a youth sitting on a Canal street curb, bawling for all he was worth. The man in blue strode up to the lad and inquired, "What's the matter, son?"

The little fellow looked up with misty eyes and sobbed, "Somebody told me that there ain't no—" And he began crying all the more.

Did they say that there isn't a Santa Claus?" asked the helpful cop.

"No," sobbed the youngster, "he said that there ain't no Charlie Justice."

Well, true or not, it makes a darn good story and the Choo Choo is just about that famous.

Charlie as a Youth

As a youth, Justice was the "weakling" of the family. His big brothers chided him about his lack of ability when the neighborhood gang gathered on the corner lot for a game of football or baseball. The half-pint Asheville youth took the stinging remarks from his playmates to heart and resolved to better himself as an athlete.

It would not be easy, however. Not even for such a determined young man as Charlie. Young Justice had trouble breathing and was even cautioned by doctors against strenuous or excessive exercise. It was hard to discourage the Asheville youth, however, and he fought a long, hard battle against overwhelming odds before he began holding his own in the sandlot games.

Charlie would have his brothers chase him through the downtown section of Asheville on busy afternoons in an attempt to improve himself. It was then the Land of the Sky had its first glimpse of the Choo Choo's now-famous fadeaway style of running. Slowly Justice gained weight, became faster on his feet, and developed an uncanny ability to fake opponents out of position in the Saturday afternoon grid games.

Choo Choo Picks Up Steam

THE ASHEVILLE CHOO CHOO picked up steam as he hit his teens and entered Lee Edwards high school. At Edwards he set all kinds of schoolboy records and had ivory hunters from nearly every college in the South after his very-valuable hide. Charlie ducked them all, however, and traded in his football moleskins for a pair of Uncle Sam's bell-bottoms.

The story is a familiar one from here on out. Every football fan in the Old North State can stand up and recite the football deeds of the Asheville Ambler along with the twenty-third psalm. And every one of the Justice followers will be able to add a tale all his own to the three-story stack of fables that has already accumulated about the modest All-American.

Justice's rise to football fame was meteoric once he was given a chance to play with the big boys. However it wasn't easy for tiny Charlie to earn his chance with the beefy gridmen that crowded the nation's football fields when he was only a teen-ager. First of all he had to convince his coach that he was big enough to play without getting hurt. Then he had to prove his ability. He did both—and mighty well, too.

Almost a Boner

CHARLIE REPORTED FOR PRACTICE one August afternoon soon after he had arrived at the Bainbridge Naval Station in Maryland. The Navy coach, Joe Mannacci, formerly of Fordham, chuckled when he saw little Charlie, and even thought twice before he issued him a pair of practice pants.

After seeing Justice in the equipment line, the victory-minded coach thought no more about the "little fellow." Justice wasn't an onlooker, however, and wouldn't allow Mannacci to forget him for long. Every afternoon at practice he tugged at the Bainbridge mentor's sleeve and begged to get into a scrimmage session with the toughies. It was hard for Mannacci to believe that Charlie was serious about playing with fellows almost twice his size, but after watching Justice the go-by for several days the head-man finally broke down and sent him into a rock 'em and sock 'em battle with the World Champion Washington Redskins.

Once in the thick of battle, Charlie showed his true colors and raced 55 yards against the pros before he was stopped on the 5-yard line. The Redskins spent a major part of the remainder of that afternoon chasing the Choo Choo all over Griffith stadium before winning, 13-7.

George Marshall, Redskin owner, approached Justice immediately after the game and tried every way he knew to get the Asheville star's signature on a Washington contract but failed.

The Choo Choo finished that year at Bainbridge and put in another, garnering Service All-America honors both years. And that was in the days when the service teams were loaded with more stars than the milky way.

After his honorable discharge from the Navy, Justice decided to go to college, and a country-full of top-notch coaches decided that they wanted Justice. Coach Carl Snavely and the climate of the North State finally lured Charlie back to his home state and Tar Heels however.

The rest we can take it from there.

Cagers Leave Tonight For NYU Battle

Tar Heels Engage Violets Thursday; State Plays LIU

By Dick Jenrette

Coach Tom Scott, whose Carolina basketball squad hasn't been beaten in seven starts, sent his charges through one final check-up practice session in Woollen gymnasium yesterday preparatory to the team's departure tonight for New York City and a game with the always-strong NYU Violets in Madison Square Garden.

The Tar Heels and Violets will perform in the first game of an attractive doubleheader Thursday night, with N. C. State's Wolfpack tackling Long Island university in the second contest.

A limited number of tickets for the two games are available at Woollen gym today. They are priced at $2.50, $4.50, and $5.00, with most of the tickets being of the $4.50 variety.

Garden Practice

Coach Scott and his squad will embark at 7:15 from Durham by train tonight for New York. Travelling plans call for arrival in New York at 9:15 Thursday morning. Scott has a brief practice workout scheduled in Madison Square Garden at 11:00.

The ten players who will make the trip are Coy Carson, Hugo Kappler, Nemo Nearman, Rip Ryan, Dan Nyimicz, John Tsantes, Red Bennett, Howard Deasy, Charlie Thorne, and Bill White.

The New Yorkers are reported to have another strong quint this season, but Coach Scott has had one opportunity to scout the Violets. The Tar Heel cage mentor was on hand to witness Texas hand NYU a two-point setback in the Garden earlier this season.

One Tall Man

The 1948 Violets have general all-around height, although Center Joe Kaufman, at 6-4, is the only really tall boy on the team. Forwards John Derderian and Dan Quilty stand 6-2. The guards are Richard Kor, also 6-2, and Joe Dolhon, 6-0. The Violets will hold a height advantage over the Tar Heels.

Coach Scott, remembering the overwhelming defeat NYU administered the Tar Heels last year, is expecting another rough battle this year, but this time the Tar Heels will have a strong revenge motive.

Work on Defense

Defense received the most emphasis in the Carolina workout here yesterday. Coach Scott, commenting on the team's play in the 55-47 win over Maryland, said the boys "looked good in spots, but defensively we need more work." He thought the team was a bit slow in getting back down court on the fast break, however he attributed this to the fact that many of the boys were tired of playing after the trip to Louisiana to participate in the Camellia Bowl.

The team is in fairly good physical condition for the New York trip. Carson's ankle injury, which was first sustained in the Camellia bowl and then re-injured against Maryland, is improving rapidly. Coy reported yesterday t wasn't giving him much trouble.

Carolina Swimmers See Action Against VMI Outfit Saturday

Carolina's varsity swimmers return to action this week when they travel to Lexington, Va. to meet the VMI Keydets on Saturday afternoon.

Coach Ralph Casey's tankmen walked off with most of the trophies in the local Thanksgiving invitational meet and scuttled Duke in their only dual meet.

The Tar Heels, however, have a great deal of work ahead of them as they attempt to get back in shape. Most of them have worked out very little since the Duke meet on December 9.

Layoff May Hurt

All workouts were halted during exams and weren't resumed until after the Christmas holidays. This layoff might affect the locals in all January meets.

Early workouts, however, were started on the morning of December 28 for nine of the Tar Heels. Two workouts were held each day.

Those swimmers reporting for the early drills were Jim Thomas, Sam McCauley, Ike Norwood, Steve Osborne, Bob Hutton, Dan Breedon, Gil Beam, Dave Whitchard, and Captain Dick Twining.

Swimming Forum

Two of the varsity swimmers, Ronnie Basescue and Buddy Crone, accompanied by freshman coach, Bob Ousley, participated in the Swimming forum in Florida. The forum is an annual meeting of the leading swimmers and coaches from all parts of the country.

Accompanying the varsity swimmers to Lexington will be Coach Bob Ousley's freshman swimmers. The Tar Babies, who were defeated by State in their only two previous meets, will be seeking their initial win of the year from the Keydet frosh.

Matmen Open Season At State on Jan. 19

The Carolina wrestling squad open the 1949 season on January 19 against the State grapplers at Raleigh according to the schedule which was released yesterday.

Coach Chuck Quinlan's charges will compete in seven matches this season, all of them with conference foes. In addition four freshman matches have been arranged and several more will probably be added.

Irv Zirpel, '48 co-captain, will coach the freshman squad this year.

Wolfpack Wins One

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 4—N.C. State broke a three game losing streak by handing Canisius college, previously unbeaten in eight starts, a 76-60 setback last night in Cleveland arena.

Dick Dickey, All-American Wolfpack forward, paced the Southern Conference defending champions by racking up a neat 24 points. The State hardwooders entered the game as slight underdogs because of three heartbreaking defeats suffered on their recent trip to the west coast.

Mural Deadline

Coach Walter Rabb's Intramural department has announced that entries will be open for mural basketball and handball teams until Thursday, January 6.

There will be a meeting of mural managers Thursday night to discuss plans for a cage carnival to be held Friday and Saturday, January 14 and 15.

NCAA May Limit Number of Bowls New Year's Day

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 4—(UP)—The National Collegiate Athletic Association plans to do something soon about reducing the number of post-season football bowl games, a prominent member of the NCAA indicated today.

The informant, who insisted that he not be identified because of his key position in college athletics, said that the NCAA may fire its first volley at this year's convention.

"There were more than 50 bowl games played this season," the member said. "One school, Hardin-Simmons, played in three such games. We know that has to stop."

Two Steps

The NCAA is expected to take one of two steps—either ban the bowl completely or limit the post-season games to bowls established before 1936. Under the latter set-up, the association would sanction only the Rose bowl, the Sugar bowl, and the Orange bowl.

It was also learned that the NCAA is sponsoring a three-man committee that has already compiled information on every bowl game, including the amount of money earned or lost by the bowls, and the methods employed by bowl selection committees.

Investigation Committee

The Investigation Committee members are Commissioner Victor Schmidt of the Pacific Coast conference, Commissioner Bernie Moore of the Southeastern conference, and Tulane Athletic Director Horace Renegar.

The committee was pleased to note that the Southeastern conference already has taken steps to discourage its member teams from participating too frequently in bowl games.

DEVILS DEFEAT HANES

Led by Ben Collins and Bob Duff, who collected nine points apiece, Duke University's Blue Devils turned back Hanes Hosiery of Winston Salem, 54-42, last night in Duke's indoor stadium.

UP Scribe Tells Of Cage Wonders Achieved by Rupp

By Edwin Pope

ATLANTA, Jan. 4—(UP)—The scribbler who hung the sobriquet of "Baron" on Kentucky basketball coach Adolph Rupp may have mixed up his definitions.

"Baron" is a term of respect applied to any man, but a "Baron of Beef" lends itself more to Rupp, the ready.

A "Baron of Beef" is a "double sirloin, not cut asunder." And if ever a coach ever held a chunk of prime basketball meat on his plate, hizzoner of the Bluegrass does.

In the past five years, his Wildcats have merely won five consecutive Southeastern conference championships, posted a .908 winning average with 139 victories against 14 setbacks, won 40 and lost four for a .909 tournament record, won the National Invitational, NCAA, and college bracket of the Olympic trials, and. . . it goes on and on.

How Accomplished

How has Rupp kept his stranglehold on SEC hardwood this year with increased emphasis being placed on basketball at every Dixie school?

He has a rather simple formula, which goes back further than the beginning of the season.

When a player makes himself a candidate at Kentucky, Rupp invites him to his office.

Rupp's office door is six feet, two inches high.

"If they don't bump their heads when they come in, I don't even bother to shake hands," he says.

It's not really that simple, for Ralph Beard stands only 5-10 and ½ and has gathered more honors than any player in modern collegiate history.

Biggest Reason

The gum-chewing little Louisville boy is probably the biggest of many reasons the 'Cats have won seven consecutive games this fall, plus another in the Sugar bowl tournament, and lost only a 42 to 40 game to St. Louis' mighty Billikens in the Sugar bowl tournament finals.

The Baron does not, of course, pick up his players from the immediate vicinity of the campus. To get Alex Groza, the sensational six-foot-seven-inch center, he went to Martins Ferry, Ohio.

Wallace (Wah-Wah) Jones was snatched from Harlan, Ky., after establishing a new national high school scoring record of 2,398 points in four years.

Dale (Barney) Barnstable, the 'Cats set-shot specialist, came down from Antioch, Ill. Jim Line, the smooth left-handed southpaw pushshotter, is out of Akron, Ohio.

They come from all over.

During a game in the east several years ago, he became excited and began coaching his boys from the sidelines. The referee finally laid a technical foul on Kentucky for bench-coaching.

A spectator asked him after the game what he thought about the foul being called.

'Heck," said Rupp, "My coaching is worth a technical foul any time!"

Romano to Lions

Joe Romano, first string defensive end on the Tar Heel football team, has signed a contract with the Detroit Lions, of the National Football league.

Romano, 23-year-old senior from Mansfield, Ohio, was one of Carolina's best defensive players this season. He recovered a number of fumbles, including the one that set up Carolina's only touchdown against Oklahoma in the Sugar Bowl. He was also on the Carolina team that lost to Georgia in the 1947 Sugar bowl contest.

Duke and Carolina To Meet Saturday On Tin Can Track

An informal indoor track meet has been arranged between the Carolina track squad and Duke in the Tin Can on Saturday afternoon.

Tar Heel coach Dale Ranson said yesterday that the meet would be informal in all respects. The two coaches will agree on the distances and events as the meet is run off. The officials will be selected from those attending.

Indoor practice was slated to get underway officially this afternoon.

The first indoor meet of the regular schedule will be the Evening Star Invitational Games at Washington on January 15. Some of the nation's best collegiate and amateur track men will compete in this meet.

Luke Sewell Is Signed As Cincinnati Coach

NEW YORK, Jan. 4—(UP)—Luke Sewell, the only man ever to lead the St. Louis Browns to an American league pennant, was signed today to coach the Cincinnati Reds, thereby swelling the ranks of former big league managers who now are turning to coaching jobs.

The 48-year-old Sewell, who won the pennant with the Browns in 1944, returns to baseball after a two-year absence. According to Cincinnati officials, he will be one of the highest paid coaches in the majors.

Get Hitched, Jack . . .

All In A Day's Work, A Judge Can Tell You

By Sam Whitehall

Going about the business of administering the law can have its satisfactions.

In the case of Henry Whitfield, judge of local Recorder's court, it can sometimes be a little fun. Especially when the business ends up in bringing a family together.

That's what happened yesterday during Whitfield's weekly court session.

It all started out with a simple case of assault. Jack Cotton, a Negro from Chapel Hill, brought a 20-year-old youth by the name of Walter O'Neal to trial for striking him.

But the case proved more than that. Judge Whitfield, after lengthy questioning, had a warrant sworn for Cotton himself and Annie O'Neal for co-habitation.

Cotton had been having trouble with Annie, it seems, and wanted to force him to leave his home. He admitted he wasn't married to Annie. But Judge Whitfield saw an easier way out and he said he didn't like the "rock-and-bull story that boy told."

He told Jack and Annie, "You two are old enough to know better. You can't get away with violating the obligation of marriage. You can't raise children without a name, they can't inherit property, they have no status."

Cotton said, "But she only keeps house for me."

Whitfield snapped, "Oh, pshaw, try to mitigate and I'll send you straight to the road. Now I want you two to come back here next Tuesday and show me a marriage certificate, then we'll get along all right."

To Walter O'Neal, Whitfield said, "Which way do you want to go, right or wrong? You've got to respect the old folks. I'm trying to help this family out. What do you gain by causing trouble? Life's too short. Beg Jack's pardon and you'll get along fine, this rough stuff doesn't get you anywhere.

"Now you two go on and get married like you're supposed to."

There were 15 other cases disposed of on yesterday's docket:

Eugene J. Niemierzo, white, running a red light, costs; Archie L. Powers, white, disorderly conduct, $10 and costs; Johnny Beasley, Negro, assault with a deadly weapon, pistol, costs; Joseph V. Baldwin, Negro, damage to property, $25 and costs; John W. Harris, white, passing in an intersection, costs, Charlie Alston, Negro, drunk, costs; S. H. Chandler, white, drunk, costs.

L. W. Eten, white, illegal possession and transportation of whiskey, costs; Alexander Noell, Negro, illegal possession of no tax-paid whiskey, costs; Lewis Rogers, Negro, drunk, $5 and costs; Edgar A. Pickett, white, reckless driving, costs; R. M. Edwards, Negro, improper brakes and steering, costs; James Bradshaw, Negro, damage to property, costs; Johnny Beasley, Negro, discharging firearms in the town limits, no further prosecution.

Theodore Winston was sent to the road for six months on violation of parole.

PRINCESS ELIZABETH of England leaves a London theatre where she attended a radio show with her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, Queen Elizabeth, and Princess Margaret Rose. This was the first time that Princess Elizabeth had "stepped out" since the birth of her son, Prince Charles Philip Arthur George, about six weeks ago.

New Students Must Tell DTH

All newly registered students who live in private homes should notify the Daily Tar Heel Circulation Department, 210 Graham Memorial, of their addresses in order that they may receive copies of the paper.

Those living within the corporate limits of Chapel Hill or in Victory Village should list their residence address, while all others should list their mailing address. A phone call to F-3371 is sufficient.

This procedure is not necessary for residents of dormitories, fraternity and sorority houses, University-owned or Pines trailer courts, quonset huts, Justice street, Rogerson drive, Oakwood drive, or Country Club road.

There is no charge for the Daily Tar Heel aside from the publication fee that is paid at the time of registration. Faculty members and townspeople may obtain subscriptions at special reduced rates.

Game Warden Cracks Down

Orange County game warden James S. Logan announced this week that hunting laws on the Mason farm soil conservation bureau nursery will be stringently enforced from now on.

The 1700-acre experimental farm is listed with the N. C. Wildlife resources commission as a game refuge, and hunting and fishing is prohibited at all times in the area.

Mullis also said that adjoining seats were assigned to students coming to the dances together and that students had to wait only a short time in line to get their tickets.

The volunteers helping with the ticket distribution were nightly committee chairmen, Mary Mullis.

Langdon Warner To Give Lecture On Jap Folk Art

Under the sponsorship of the North Carolina chapter of the Archaeological Institute of America, Dr. Langdon Warner, noted Harvard archaeologist and writer, will deliver a public lecture on Japanese folk art in Person hall art gallery at 8 o'clock Monday evening.

Dr. Warner has lived in both China and Japan and has written extensively on the arts of these countries, on subjects such as the craft of the Japanese sculptor, history of Japanese Buddhist art in the Suiko period, and Chinese Buddhist wall paintings of the ninth century.

He has taught and has served in a curatorial capacity at the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston: American School of Archaeology, Peking; Smithsonian institution and the Archaeological Institute of America; the Cleveland Museum of Art; the Pennsylvania Museum of Art and the Fogg Art Museum at Harvard. He was director of art at the Pacific Basin Exhibition for the Golden Gate Exposition of 1938-1939.

The present lecture is one of a series of free lectures to be presented here and at Duke under the sponsorship of the Archaeological Institute of America this year.

'Fair Deal' Is Launched By Truman

President Talks To New Congress

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(UP)—President Truman launched a "fair deal" administration today with a request that Congress raise taxes $4,000,000,000, repeal the Taft-Hartley act and help launch an economic system that will create wealth for the benefit of all.

He laid out his far-reaching program in a State of the Union message delivered personally to a cheering joint session of the new 81st Congress.

"Every segment of our population and every individual has a right to expect from his government a fair deal," the president asserted.

He added that his goal is an economic system under which wealth is created for the benefit of all and that the November election, which he won, "shows that the people favor this kind of a society . . ."

To achieve such a goal the president advocated:

1. The $4,000,000,000 tax hike, levied mostly on corporations and high and middle income brackets.

2. An eight-point anti-inflation program which included standby power to impose wage and price ceilings.

3. A wide range of social legislation including health insurance, low-cost housing and federal aid to education.

The long-awaited speech was broadcast nationally and was beamed short-wave to Europe in Russian, German and English. Tomorrow it will be rebroadcast in 18 languages.

It was Mr. Truman's first appearance before Congress since his surprise election victory and Democrats and Republicans alike gave him a tremendous hand. Only a year ago, in the same chamber, when his political star appeared to be fading, the 80th Congress sat on its hands.

Still for UMT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5—(UP)—President Truman today renewed his demand for universal military training for the nation's youth, but the man who must steer such legislation through the House said he opposed any such action this year.

Brushing aside Mr. Truman's argument that UMT was 'essential' to the nation's security, Rep. Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) said the program should not be considered while the new draft law is on the books.

Teacher Salary, State Aid Begin Hot Fight In House

RALEIGH, Jan. 5.—(UP)—The North Carolina General assembly held its first brief session today, and the hot question of teacher pay and state aid to school building immediately exploded in the House.

The House sidestepped a finish fight on the so-called "gag" rule, which is opposed by dry forces. It temporarily adopted the 1947 rules of the House without the two gag-rule clauses, and turned them over to the Rules committee.

Rep. John W. Umstead of Orange county tossed in two bills in line with the majority report of the State Education commission.

One measure, following the commission report and the recommendation of the state Board of Education would boost the pay of school teachers to a minimum of $2,400 a year for teachers holding "A" certificates. The salary scale would range upward to $3,600 for teachers, and higher for some other school officials.

Umstead also introduced one of two bills calling for appropriations for state aid to school construction.

The Orange county representative's measure called for an appropriation of $50,000,000 from the general fund surplus to meet emergency needs. The funds would be available over a four-year period starting next July 1. Thirty-five per cent would be allocated to counties on a per capita basis. The other 65 per cent would go on the basis of minimum building needs and the tax-paying ability of each county.

A school construction measure introduced by Rep. R. L. Harris of Person county called for appropriation of $40,000,000 from the general fund for an equalizing fund for grant-in-aid to school improvement and construction. It provided that the money would be allocated by the state Board of Education to counties on a basis to be determined later by the General assembly.

A roads bill introduced by Umstead charged the state Highway and Public Works commission with spending appropriations of the 1945 and 1947 General assemblies for other than the intended purpose of improving secondary roads by adding crushed stone.

The 1945 session appropriated $5,000,000 for the purpose and the 1947 session appropriated $11,000,000.

The bill directed the commission to cease spending the funds for any other purpose. It asked that the unspent parts of those appropriations be used to improve the thousands of miles of secondary roads now in bad condition—and it said this was a result of the expenditure for other purposes.

The bill added that "use at this time will tend to make the roads passable both for individuals and for school buses."

Rep. Burl G. Hardison of Craven county introduced a bill which he said was for repeal of the mechanical inspection section of the highway safety law.

Rep. Kerr Craige Ramsay of Rowan county was unanimously elected speaker of the House.

Ramsay, nominated without opposition last night by a Democratic caucus, got 118 votes and the support of even House Republicans. In one of the four second speeches after Ramsay was nominated by Rep. Arch T. Allen of Wake county, Republican Rep. S. C. Eggers of Watauga county said:

"We like him, too, and we want to endorse his nomination."

Ramsay was sworn in by Chief Justice W. P. Stacy of the North Carolina Supreme court, and took the gavel from Secretary of State Thad Eure, who had opened the session at noon.

WSSF Plans Door-to-Door Solicitations

Joe Leary Heads Drive

Plans for an ardent door-to-door campaign to raise at least dollar donations from every University student for the World Student Service fund next week were announced yesterday by Joe Leary, WSSF solicitations committee chairman.

"More than ever this year," Leary stated, "the WSSF drive is concentrating on personal contact to inform University students of exactly how badly their financial aid is needed in war-devastated countries of Europe and Asia. We have been fortunate in finding enthusiastic door-to-door solicitors. Next week we hope to influence every University student to contribute at least one dollar towards surpassing the $5,000 that the University donated to WSSF last year."

Sub-chairman for solicitations appointed by Leary were Jack Worsham, men's dormitories; Page Dees, women's dormitories; Faith Adams, sororities; and Jack McGinn, fraternities. A chief solicitor will also be named for the Victory Village area.

In addition to these, 115 door-to-door canvassers have been appointed for each dormitory floor, sorority, and fraternity. All solicitors will attend two orientation meetings to become thoroughly indoctrinated about WSSF.

At the first meeting Friday night at 7 o'clock in Gerrard hall, the group will hear a discussion of the overall WSSF program and see a movie of the conditions abroad in which the international charity works. Sunday night at 7:30 again in Gerrard hall, there will be a demonstration of an actual door-to-door solicitation.

Graduating Students Are Asked To Register

Students graduating in March or June should complete their registration with the Placement service immediately, Joe Galloway, director of Placement service, advised yesterday. Companies will begin sending representatives to the campus for interviews early in January.

Students should not rely solely on the Placement service for jobs, he continued. They are encouraged to make their own contacts and to use the placement office as their main reference. Folders compiled from personal records on file in that office will be mailed to prospective employers.

The placement office does not limit its service to arranging interviews, Galloway said. One of its most important functions is the maintenance of a reference file on individuals. This file consists of personal data supplied by the applicant, a photograph, confidential ratings by instructors and acquaintances, and a transcript of courses and grades at the University.

Galloway pointed out the importance of registering with Placement service before leaving school. Since the enrollment at the University is large, instructors have a difficult time remembering former students about whom they are asked to give references.

Colonel Shepard Will Take Over Reserve Outfit

Col. Carlyle Shepard, University Veterans adviser, has been named commanding officer of a new reserve research and development training group in Chapel Hill.

Announcement of the activation of the unit was made yesterday by Col. Norman McNeill of Raleigh, senior Army instructor of the organized reserve corps in North Carolina.

The unit will consist of a number of prominent men from Durham, Chapel Hill, Raleigh and other surrounding towns. Composed of specialists in one of the physical, engineering, medical or biological sciences or in psychology, the 3083rd Research and Development Training group includes in its personnel several professors from nearby colleges, state businessmen and research specialists.

Officers from Chapel Hill assigned to the new group include: Col. Kenneth M. Brinkhous, Lt. Col. Corydon P. Spruill, Jr., Lt. Col. Henry Roland Totten, Maj. James Walter Layman and Capt. Fred L. Rights, all of the University. First Lt. Ross Lambard Parks of Carrboro is also assigned to the group.

The organization is one of the growing number of military units which the services are organizing for the purpose of further training highly specialized technicians that they may be prepared to enter service immediately in the event of a national emergency.

Each of the officers assigned to the new unit is highly specialized in his work or is working on research projects of a specialized nature.

Marital Bliss

COLUMBIA, S. C., Jan. 5.—(UP)—A course designed to prepare students for happy marriage will be offered again in the spring at the University of South Carolina.

Mrs. Louise P. Cole, head of the department of homemaking, will conduct the course called "Education for Home and Family Life."

University officials said it is given once each year, for men and women.

The informal classes, with students asking most of the questions, touch on legal questions including rights of parents; pyschological and sociological aspects of matrimony; art, music, religion, sex hygiene and care of children.

Sharpe Is Named New Phi Speaker For This Quarter

Dave Sharpe took over as speaker of the Philanthropic assembly Tuesday night as the Phi elected officers and made plans for winter quarter activities.

In his inaugural address Sharpe proposed tentative projects to establish a library on the fifth floor of New East, the proper care of the Phi portrait collection, the compiling of a roll of past members, and an alumni banquet.

Noting the problems facing his organization, Speaker Sharpe called on members for confidence, willingness to work, and a brotherhood of mutual respect and friendship.

Other officers installed were Speaker Pro-Tempore Peter Gerns, Treasurer Bryan Griswold, Clerk Bernard Plemmons, Parliamentarian Hugh Griffin, Critic Charles Britt, and Sergeant-at-Arms Emily Baker. Peter Burkes was appointed chaplain of the assembly.

A new order of business was approved to provide for all business matters to be taken up in executive session only and for the continued practice of open debate on discussion topics.

Revenue Act Provisions Outlined In Current N. C. Law Review Issue

The provisions of the new Revenue act, which have made it necessary to replan and rewrite many wills and trusts and made the planning of estate distribution an increasingly complicated process are outlined and analyzed in the current issue of the North Carolina Law Review which publishes papers presented by leading North Carolina law professors and attorneys at the recent institute on "Tax Planning for Estates" under North Carolina and federal laws.

According to Dean R. H. Wettach, the papers "are particularly appropriate at this time in view of the 1948 Revenue act, which made significant changes in the tax structure by extending 'community property' advantages, formerly available to taxpayers in the middle western states, to all other states in the union."

The papers discuss a variety of estate planning problems, such as taxation of life insurance and powers of appointment, income tax precautions, charitable gifts as a means of saving taxes, and general surveys of the provisions of the current North Carolina and federal inheritance and estate tax laws.

Snowbound Travelers Freed By Snowplows, Rescue Units

CHICAGO, Jan. 5. — (UP) — Snowplows and rescue teams dug through the mountainous snows of the Western Plains today and freed thousands of travelers stranded by the great blizzard.

Blinding snow and powerful winds began to abate after raging for three days in what Westerners said was the worst blizzard in their memory.

Most airline schedules were restored, but dozens of trains still were stalled at way stations and cities across the plains. Stranded passengers continued to choke hotels, rooming houses, private homes and public buildings.

Known casualtes were few in comparison with the ferocity of the storm and most of the marooned and stranded were in good spirits.

In some places, however, food stocks were running low.

Rescue operations stepped up as the blizzard abated. Snowplows opened highways and rail lines and rescue workers took supplies and other aid to isolated communities.

In Nebraska, private planes criss-crossed the western area in a search for snowbound farmhouses and marooned motorists.

The great snow, totaling 40 inches in some places, was piled into mountainous drifts by the blizzard's force. Below zero temperatures prevailed from the northern reaches of the storm in the Dakotas to New Mexico and freezing weather extended to the West Coast.

Weather forecasters said the blizzard was diminishing as it hovered over South Dakota in a slow surge northeastward to the Canadian border.

Bad weather plagued the rest of the nation. Floods were reported in Indiana, Mississippi $3,000,0000 blow to the citrus in Southern California dealt a and Tennessee and the big freeze fruit crop. Rains hit the East and South.

Tornado-stricken towns of Louisiana and Arkansas counted a total of 56 dead in Monday's disaster, which stemmed from the western blizzard.

War-time C-47 cargo planes from Lowry field in Denver launched an impromptu airlift to feed and clothe the stranded.

Definite Plans Set Up For Y Winter Retreat

By Virginia Forward

Definite plans for the Y-sponsored winter retreat to be held Feb. 18-20 at Assembly inn, Montreat, were made yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the program committee in the Y cabinet room.

Drawing up a list of speakers for the annual conference was a job for a committee consisting of Anne Carlton, Pat McNutt, Peggy Neal, Iris Bost, Gussie Young, and Bill Brown. Other committees meeting this week to plan their portions of the retreat are publicity and promotion, finance and registration, recreation, worship and arrangements.

The overall program at the retreat, sponsored jointly by the YWCA and YMCA, will consist of eight discussion groups and a main speaker.

Montreat, near Asheville, is the Southern Presbyterian conference grounds and summer resort as well as a high school and college during the winter months.

Club in Berlin Bars Enlistees After Argument

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—(UP)—Harnack House, a fashionable American officers and civilians club in Berlin, today barred enlisted men as guests.

German girls are still accepted.

The decision came after a heated meeting last night in which an officer-led faction outvoted the civilian group, 135 to 106.

Civilian speakers argued that GI's should be admitted as guests because German nationals, including fraulein, were permitted in the club. The opposition, mainly officers, objected.

One licutenant colonel said he was perfectly willing to accept 90 per cent of the enlisted men—it was just that other 10 per cent.

"There are 10 per cent of the enlisted men," he said, "who do not know how to behave . . . we don't want these enlisted barbarians with officers and ladies."

He said he would resign if enlisted guests were admitted.

Civilian spokesmen urged that enlisted men be admitted because it would be difficult to teach Germans democracy if social prejudices were prominently displayed at the club. They pointed out that the Army-Navy Officers club in Washington permits enlisted guests.

Dr. D. P. Costello Is Elected Fellow Of New York Scientific Organization

Dr. D. P. Costello, chairman of the department of zoology, has just been elected fellow of the New York Academy of Sciences.

Dr. Costello, a native of Detroit, Mich., first came to the University as assistant professor of zoology in 1935 and in 1940 was promoted to associate professor.

In 1941 and 1943 he held the Rockefeller fellowship at Stanford university, working with Dr. G. W. Beadle and Dr. V. C. Twitty, noted zoologist, and he has taught during summer sessions at the Marine Biological laboratory, Woods Hole, Mass.

Dr. Costello became chairman of the zoology department here upon the retirement of Dr. Robert E. Coker in July, 1947.

His fields or research include general physiology of marine eggs, experimental embryology of invertebrates, heteroploidy in salamanders, embryological genetics, and cytology of marine invertebrate forms.

State of the Union

A great many people will be displeased with President Truman's State of the Union message to Congress yesterday; yet if the November election is any indication, even more people will be pleased with the President's aims for the coming year. For, with the exception of his proposal for an additional $4,000,000,000 in taxes, most of Mr. Truman's proposals were repetitions of previous requests to the 80th Congress and of the points upon which he campaigned for reelection.

The President's demands proved that he intends to continue in the liberal democratic tradition established by Franklin Roosevelt. His message was entirely for the little people of the nation. He asked that $4,000,000,000 in taxes be levied chiefly against corporations in order to balance the budget and to reduce the national debt. He also told Congress to consider raising tax rates upon incomes in the upper and middle class brackets. He asked for legislative measures to control inflation and for legislation more favorable to labor. He asked for an expanded social security program, an increase in lower priced housing, farm support measures, protection of small business, and extension of conservation projects.

Of greatest interest to the South was the President's refusal to compromise on his Civil Rights program, aimed to reduce discrimination against racial minorities. His demand that the full Civil Rights program be adopted is sure to stir up a new storm of protest in the South and in Congress. On this issue Mr. Truman's wisdom may be doubted, but his courage can not be disputed.

The President's message may bring forth cries of "Socialism" from the Republicans and the Conservative section of the Democratic party but from the majority of Americans it will draw hearty respect for a man who is striving to make the United States a true democracy in practice as well as in name.

Thanks for Consideration

A little consideration goes a long way, and Tuesday it went clear to the end of a line 350-students-long which was standing outside Venable X waiting to drop and add courses.

As the lunch hour approached, the officials in charge of this apparently-complicated procedure decided to forego their dinners, to let the students standing in the cold complete the process without forfeiting their turns or waiting an additional hour, as the lunchtime recess would have necessitated. Even when closing time approached, later in the afternoon, passes were issued to save those still in line from having to start all over again Wednesday morning.

Now that the problem of the Registration lines appears to have been fairly well eliminated, it seems a pity to discover that the aggravations of interminable waiting, waiting, and waiting have for some 1000 students—only been delayed to the first or second day of classes, when the time might more profitably be consumed getting oriented to the new quarter. Particularly is this so when so often the line-standing is out in the rain or in the cold, and when so often some technical deficiency, discovered at the end of a long wait, renders the whole process futile.

The Venable X officials certainly deserve a word of thanks for making the best of a situation which itself ought soon to be bettered.—A.L.

Judiciary Examined

By Don Shropshire

With so many students vowing that they are "new" individuals at this, another new year and a new term, it might be well for the various branches of student government to take stock of themselves and pledge anew to work as never before to achieve success in so neglected a field.

Although some divisions have accomplished more than ever before, we find ourselves again faced with the worst "troubleshooter" of all — the court situation. Even now, for the "umteenth" time, there are those who seek to change this system. Some have even been so busy at this disturbing enterprise that they have ceased entirely to use even the usual half-hearted effort to give this campus the benefit of a working and effective operation.

The worst result of all this is that many people who have appeared before the councils in recent months have been unintentionally denied certain fundamental rights which worked to harm them mentally and socially. One person, for example, was tried by one court without the presence of a quorum, without direct testimony of the professor who accused him, without the presence of the paper in question, and without bothering to seek out any witnesses who might know of something pertaining to the case before them.

The council in question was very definitely working under a handicap at the time, but no similar group of people can go too far in uncovering evidence which may affect the reputation of even one individual.

To help to correct this and similar situations, this column calls on the President of the Student Body to appoint a committee of responsible and mature students to serve under the Attorney - General, which will be available to any student who is summoned by any judicial branch of our government. It will be the duty of this committee to see that the rights of each such person will be protected within the council chamber, whether the accused is evidently guilty or not.

This column further calls on the Student Legislature to appropriate the necessary funds to have reviews of council cases printed in at least a quarterly publication for distribution to the campus at large. It is imperative that we keep others from taking objectionable action by adequately publicizing the unfortunate mistakes of fellow students.

Although, it may be argued that such proposed help is now within the hands of our present councils, it is also true that, whether intentional or not, some individuals have not been given all the assistance they have needed. It is imperative that an outside, unbiased person give this service, as long hours of hard work by the council members and the very nervous condition of the accused may lead to a mistake which may never be corrected. Surely the councils, with a sense of responsibility and justice, will welcome this.

Lines on Literature

Faulkner Tops the List

By Roy C. Moose

Along with wild holiday parties, sports banquets, and alarming accidents, this is the season for the appearance of that disease called the "Ten Best" lists perpetrated by everyone who has read a book, seen a movie or attended a play.

After watching the quality of fiction steadily improve this past year after a long period of relatively insignificant books, Lines on Literature, knowing full well that objections will arise from those whose favorites have been omitted, herewith succumbs to the fatal fever and submits its "Ten Best" in fiction for 1948.

The standards for judging literature are varied and before we can justify any criticism it is necessary first to clarify the yardstick by which the works were judged. For instance we could have gauged every novel on the purely sensual basis and come up with that lusty, busty book about the two husbands who traded wives because they were snowbound and thought that since they were going to die the world would never learn of their idiosyncracies.

Or we could have taken the viewpoint that everything must be amusing and thereby included "Westward, Ha!" and the farce by Robert Ruark.

But we have taken as our guide the lasting contribution to literature, the validity of the subject matter, the ability of the author to weave a cogent story, style, creativity, and the entertainment value. Here then are the books weighed and selected:

1. Intruder in the Dust by William Faulkner.

2. The Naked and the Dead by Norman Mailer.

3. The Young Lions by Irwin Shaw.

4. The Loved One by Evelyn Waugh.

5. The Plague by Albert Camus.

6. The Time is Noon by Hiram Haydn.

7. Other Voices, Other Rooms by Truman Capote.

8. The Heart of the Matter by Graham Greene.

9. Raintree County by Ross Lockridge.

10. Roanoke Hundred by Inglis Fletcher.

Of the ten, "Intruder in the Dust" was far and away the best of '48. It was timely, could be read on several levels, was entertaining, and it's theme of tolerance and justice is universal. Moreover, it was Faulkner at his best.

Especially significant the past year was the appearance of many good war novels by young new authors, two of which made our list. In fact most of the good writing was done on the war theme, perhaps because the writers for the most part stuck to what they knew best and poured their own experiences into their books.

The past year was also notable for its huge crop of first novelists, the most promising being Truman Capote who could have written the finest novel of the year if he had put more thought and meaning into his book. As it is, though, his "Other Voices, Other Rooms" is still good enough to rate the first ten, it being almost stylistically perfect.

Probably the most controversial selection will be that of Inglis Fletcher's "Roanoke Hundred." However, in this era in which the historical novel has become a farce Miss Fletcher has presented an admirable and authentic book clarifying that important but little known period of history concerning the struggle to found a colony on Roanoke Island. It is a fine representation of her Carolina series which have become so important to North Carolina, the South, and the Nation. "Roanoke Hundred" will probably be read and referred to long after many of the sensational popular novels have been forgotten.

If your favorite book is not on this list, then perhaps it is included on one of the many other lists, one which is more authoritative. However, we sort of like our ten and will stick by them.

Speakers Differ

Four Raps or Two?

By Harmon W. Nichols

Washington—(UP)—The Speaker of the House of Representatives in the 81st Congress is a four-gavel man

And in applying mallet to block to bring the House to order, he uses the staccato, or somewhat gentle approach.

Sam Rayburn, the bald, good-natured, astute politician from Bonham, Tex., came back into his own as the new Congress convened yesterday. He had rested on his cushion in the back of the hall for two years while the GOP held sway.

In a lot of ways he differs from his predecessor, Republican Joseph William Martin, Jr., of North Attleboro, Mass. For one thing, Joe has hair. For another he was only a two-gavel man—and a violent one at that.

At the Republican convention in Philadelphia, Martin used a club big enough to kill a jungle beast and when he rapped for order he acted as if he were about to do same. During one noisy demonstration he came down with such force that he split a two-inch-thick block into kindling. He was giving a newer and tougher one the very old mischief—using both hands at times—when the convention ended.

There wasn't any difference as things went yesterday. When the Democratic Congress named Sam as the new Speaker by a count of 255 to 160 for the retiring Martin everybody in the place stood up-and cheered.

Martin then stepped before the marble rostrum. fiddled with a couple of the five microphones thereon and gave the block three good ones with the biggest gavel on the desk. Martin style.

Rayburn rocked on his heels inn his navy-blue double-breasted suit and sort of grinned. He whispered a "Thank you, Joe," to his old friend and picked up one of his four gavels. He gave the block a tender one and the big room fell silent.

Presidential Comments

Student Aid Can Help University

By Jess Dedmond,
President of the Student Body

As we return to classes after a Sugar Bowl disappointment and the numerous Christmas festivities, it is not easy to get down to the practical business which faces us. There is, however, one bit of practical business, in addition to classes, which students should be alert to. That is the business of what our state Legislature will do about the University's expansion program and the essential raises in professors' salaries.

Unknown to most students is the fact that for the first time in history, students of the three units of the University worked in full cooperation with each other in an effort to impress our state legislators with our needs. Student Governments of Woman's College, State College and here at Chapel Hill all set as a major objective the reaching of each state senator and each legislator during the Christmas holidays. On our campus about eighty students, representing some sixty counties, were contacted personally and asked to cooperate in this endeavor. To reach the other forty counties fifteen hundred letters were sent to selected students throughout the state requesting their support of our program. The results cannot yet be seen. We hope they will be, when the legislature gets around to the next biennium's $40,000,000 budget requested for the Greater University and the $18,000,000 plus requested for the Chapel Hill unit.

The Legislature convened on the fourth. In a few weeks it will be debating University appropriations. In the meantime students should be alert. We should, whenever opportunity presents itself, impress on our home county representatives anew the needs of the University. We must impress them with the idea that now is the time to build for progress. There can be no progress with a student body of 7,500 in a plant designed for half that number. There is no progress when our University cannot financially compete for professors' services. Carolina deserves the best. We can have the best only if the money is made available.

Mr. Mark Ethridge, a noted Louisville publisher, has described our University as the capital of the Southern mind. It can remain so only if we have the wherewithal to do with. Now is the time for students, faculty, and our state Legislature to demonstrate that we are worthy of this great compliment by pulling together in the interests of our state by building a greater University.

These Days

Respect for Chambers

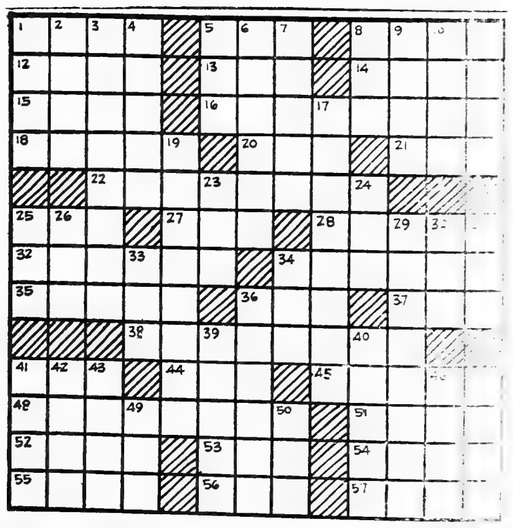
By George E. Sokolsky

An essential characteristic of the Christian doctrine is God is divine, but man is capable of error. The tendency past century has been to humanize God until He is ized into something familiar and to deify man.

Therefore, when we look at Whittaker Chambers, we liar, a cheat, a thief, a spy, a traitor who has repented who has devoted himself not only to a full and public fession of his iniquity but to the protection of the Nation such as he had been and his accomplices. There is no hero in this, for Chambers is sacrificing himself, his wife children. He asks no protection. He in no manner shi self. At no time has he been out of danger of punishm if the statute of limitations should safeguard him to in some matters, it does not in all. He might be in perjury or some other felony.

Those who say that Chambers kept his story secret years and only came forward when he had to, either misunderstand. When he decided that he lived in error went to Isaac Don Levine, and requested him to find a to get the data in proper hands. This was in 1939. Levine him to see Adolf A. Berle, Jr., then assistant Secretary of St Berle had the whole story and presumably gave it to hi periors. Also Levine, early in 1940, gave the story to Winchell, whom he regarded as a fit channel for its pu tion. Levine did not give the data to Winchell in confide as Chambers sought to make it public. Winchell says gave the story to President Roosevelt, however, clai Levine spoke to him not about Chambers but about K

It is possible to wonder whether Winchell's respon was to his employer, the New York Mirror, or to the of which he was a reserve Intelligence officer.



But Winchell, it seems to me, ought not to criticize Ch —which he is doing in his current quarrel with Hen of Time Magazine—for 10 year's silence. If Chambers, the Levine gave Winchell the story in 1940, Chambers w silent. By sending the tale to Winchell, he yelled it from housetops.

Winchell's great service in this matter is that he fixes responsibility upon Roosevelt. Berle and Winchell w in positions to communicate the data to Roosevelt. Here we come to a most curious phase of the Chamber pr Berle should have had Chambers arrested immediately. W as a Naval Intelligence officer, might have achieved result except that he now contends that it was the K not the Chambers, story that Levine gave him. Chamb admitted spy in 1939, a thief of public documents, an ed agent of a foreign nation, was permitted to spend nin without even being questioned. He lands a job with a zine with a large nationwide circulation and his name conspicuously on the masthead. But nothing is done a confession until he voluntarily pushes his way int the H Committee on Un-American Activities. Even then, he is Whittaker Chambers has risked his freedom b pro fession of error. That does not minimize the error, but it place him in the position of the penitent who is entitled respect for his courage and purpose.

No one has success until he has the abounding life. This is made up of the many-fold activity of energy, enthusiasm and gladness. It is to spring to meet the day with a thrill of being alive. It is to go forth to meet the morning in an ecstasy of joy. It is to realize the oneness of humanity in true spiritual sympathy.—Lillian Whiting.

Who shall put his finger on the work of justice and say "It is there"? Justice is like the kingdom of God: it is not without us as a fact; it is within us as a great yearning.

Cagers Meet NYU In Madison Square Garden Tonight

Carolina Seeking To Gain Revenge For Loss in 1948

By Zane Robbins

Carolina's Tar Heels will team with N. C. State's rejuvenated Wolfpack tonight when the two invade Madison Square Garden for a twin bill with a pair of perennial "Yankee" powers. The Tar Heels will meet the Violets of New York university at 9 p. m. in the curtain-raiser, while the Wolfpack will tackle a powerful Long Island university in the finale.

Both Carolina and NYU have good records, and the situation this year is almost a carbon copy of the setting that surrounded the Tar Heel-Violet clash of last season. The Scottmen invaded the Big Town last January with one of the few perfect records in the nation, and the New Yorkers, who were also unbeaten, tied the Carolinians over the coals and dumped them very unceremoniously out of the elite ranks.

The Tar Heels will be out to protect their unblemished record and to avenge the stinging defeat adminstered by the Violets in last year's skirmish. The New Yorkers, however, will rule as favorites in tonight's contest.

The ten-man Carolina squad left by train from the Durham station at 7:15 last night and was slated to arrive in New York around 9:15 this morning. Coy Carson, Hugo Kappler, John Tsantes, Red Bennett, Nemo Nearman, Howard Deasy, Rip Ryan, Dan Nyimicz, Charlie Thorne, and Bill White will make up the Carolina traveling squad. The Tar Heels will detour through Blacksburg, Va. on their return trip for a Saturday night battle with Virginia Tech.

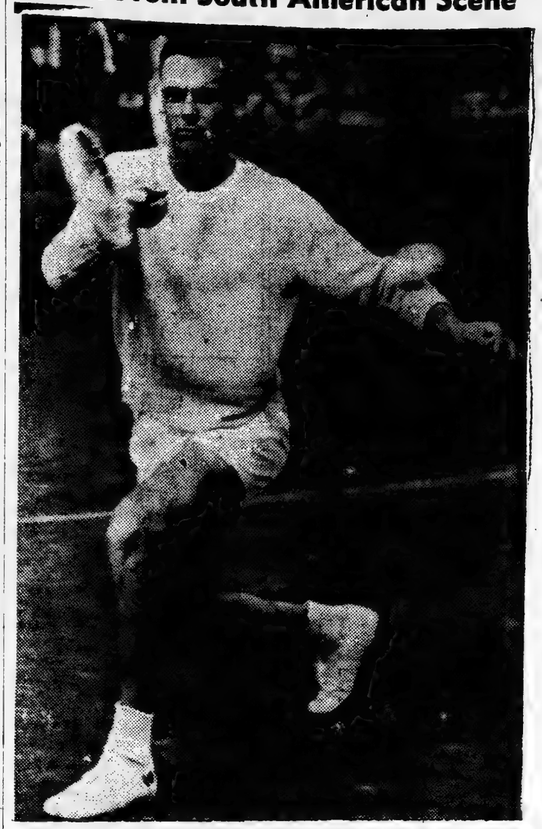
In order to acquaint his players with the unfamiliar surroundings of the famous sports arena, Coach Tom Scott has slated a practice for 11 o'clock this morning on the Garden court.

Carson Ready

Coy Carson, who re-injured a weak ankle in the Maryland game earlier this week, is reportedly in top condition and ready to go against the Violets. He will be counted on heavily by the Tar Heels to provide the scoring spark. Carson has racked up a total of 119 points in seven games this year for a 17-point average. He ranks 20th among the nation's collegiate scorers.

New York reportedly will send another power-laden quint against Carolina tonight. Center Joe Kaufman is expected to shoulder the brunt of the Violet scoring attack, but Richard Kor, John Derderin, Dan Quilty, and Joe Dolhon will be around to supply a few points in case the 6-4 pivot man is held in check.

Carolina has been working on its defensive game all week, and the Tar Heels should be able to throw a well-rounded defense against the New Yorkers in tonight's game. Should the Scott-styled iron-curtain succeed in holding the Violet scoring to a minimum, Carolina will have an excellent chance for a revenge victory tonight. But in Madison Square Garden anything can happen, and usually does.



Hank Morgan of radio station WNAO, Raleigh, will broadcast the bargain-bill direct from Madison Square Garden in New York beginning at 7:30. Both WNAO and WNAO-FM will carry the games.

Hazelwood to Browns

Ted Hazelwood, Tar Heel tackle during the past season, will play with the Cleveland Browns of the All-American Professional football league next season according to reports.

It is not known whether or not Hazelwood has signed a contract as yet.

Back From South American Scene

VIC SEIXAS, captain of the Tar Heel tennis team, has returned to school this quarter after an extended South American tour in which he played against the best net performers of that continent. See story below.

Carolina's Vic Seixas Returns From South American Net Tour

By Wuff Newell

Vic Seixas, one of Carolina's most heralded athletes, bounced into town earlier this week with a three-foot string of medals dangling from his key chain. The elite racqueteer, UNC's contribution to the tennis world, had just returned from a three-month tour of South and Central America and the Sugar Bowl, in which he teamed with Ted Shroeder to capture the tourney doubles crown.

Seixas, captain and number one man of the Tar Heel tennis squad, is the seventh ranking amateur player in the nation and the Southern conference singles champion.

Although he doesn't remember exactly how he happened to take up the game of tennis, he thinks the reason that he began playing at the ripe old age of six years is attributed to the fact that his father played and that he lived in a community where there were good courts for all to use.

First Tournament

By the time he was ten, the young net aspirant was playing in local tournaments in his native Philadelphia, and since that time he has participated in nearly every national and state tournament of importance.

Last year he was runner-up in the national Intercollegiate tournament and winner of the Southern conference tourney. In 1941 Seixas began playing for Carolina, but his stay here was interrupted by the war. Since his discharge from the Navy he has played on the Tar Heel team for two years.

During his tennis career he has played against such tennis greats as Ted Shroeder, Frank Talbert, Eric Sturgess, Frankie Parker and Jaroslav Drobny.

Although he has played most of the nation's top-ranking racquet wielders, he considers his eight U. S. Championship appearances as his toughest battles.

In September Seixas went to South America where he played in Rio de Janeiro, Sao Paulo, and Buenos Aires. His partners on this tour were Eric Sturgess, runner-up in the US National Championship last year, and Jaroslav Drobny, European champion.

According to Seixas South America has very few really good tennis players. Their best compare only with the United States' mediocre netmen. The people there, however, were friendly to the Tar Heel, and he enjoyed the trip immensely.

The awards and trophies he has won would reach from here to Durham if laid end to end. His biggest thrill came in September when he won the William Johnston sportsmanship award, which is presented annually to one male tennis player.

Although the handsome Carolina star is so good he is being considered as an excellent prospect for the Davis cup team he remains modest and unassuming.

During the last year he travelled some 30,000 miles, and although he enjoyed his tours, he is glad to be back at Carolina.

"I think it's real nice to travel," he sad, "but it's also nice to be back.

Investigation Set After Attempted Basketball Bribe

NEW YORK, Jan. 5—(UP)—A new grand jury investigation of big-time gambling on college basketball will be started immediately as the result of the alleged attempt by four men to fix a game in Madison Square Garden last night, District Attorney Frank Hogan said today.

The grand jury, which will take over the investigation this afternoon, will question the four men arraigned on conspiracy and bribery charges and held in $50,000 bail for a hearing on Jan. 11. The men were arraigned this morning before magistrate Ambrose J. Haddock.

The men who were arrested last night, Joseph Aronowitz, 35, Phillip Klein, 34, Jack Levy, 40, and William Rivlin, 43, denied they had tried to "fix" the game between George Washington university and Manhattan college.

Co-captain Dave Shapiro of the George Washington team implicated the men. He said he had been offered $1,000 to throw the game.

Questioned by acting Police Captain Edward Fagan, each of the men admitted they knew Shapiro—but only as a slight acquaintance.

Klein, the first to be questioned, was picked up by a detective posing as Shapiro's uncle, shortly before the game last night. At that time he and Aronowitz, who also was arrested in a rendezvous at a bar across the street from the Garden, were supposed to have paid off the $1,000.

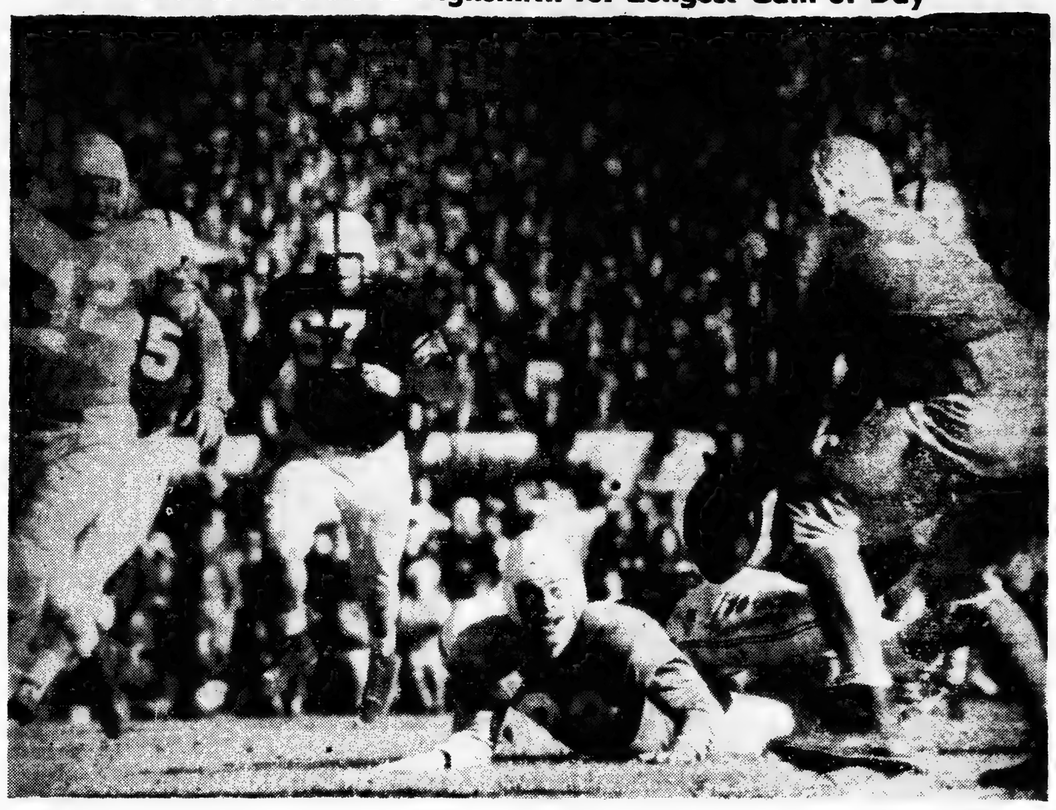
"Did you offer him $1,000?" Fagan asked Klein.

"Oh, no, I'm strictly a $10. and $20. bettor," he replied. "I work every day as a linotype operator and I can't afford any more."

Aronowitz admitted he met Shapiro in front of the Hotel Astor yesterday.

"I had asked him to get me some tickets for the game," he said. "And he couldn't even get me one."

He said that was all they had talked about and the subject of betting had never come up.



Manager's Meeting

The success of the Winter Intramural program will probably depend on the turnout of the Intramural managers at the scheduled meeting to be held tonight at 7:30 in room 304 in Woollen gym.

The Intramural department has urged that all managers of the respective Frat and Dorm squads attend this important gathering as every activity for this quarter will be discussed and decided on.

This evening also marks the last time any entries for the basketball and handball tournaments will be accepted.

Justice Laterals to Highsmith for Longest Gain of Day

Kappler, Deasy to Play Before Home Folks

By Bill Kellam

Two newcomers to Tom Scott's unbeaten Tar Heels, hustling Hugo Kappler and smooth working Howard Deasy, will have all sorts of inspiration and incentive to spur them on to victory tonight in Madison Square Garden, the site of last year's 63-34 disaster at the hands of the same far-from-shrinking Violets, when they meet NYU's erratic but powerful cagers amid the whitened bones and carnage of that sad massacre.

For these two aforementioned hardwood experts, Kappler, blonde, 6'-5" starting forward, and 6'-5" Deasy, the roof-scraping pivot man who came into his own during the holidays with a brilliant all-round performance in the Camellia bowl victory over Arizona, both hail from the Big City and will be making their collegiate debut before the home folks in the Garden.

Both of these Gothamites are quite familiar with the Garden, though, for they've been watching basketball games in that famed arena since they were big enough to walk. Also, both transplanted Tar Heels are familiar with the 1949 Violets for they saw them in action against an intersectional foe during the short Christmas vacation given the bowl-bound locals.

Deasy has also performed in Ned Irish's coliseum. Back in 1944, while he was running as first string center for Mount Saint Michael high school, of his native Bronx, his team played in a Saturday afternoon scholastic quadruple-header.

Kappler, the 19-year old Brooklynite and the Tar Heels second high scorer in 7 games with 57 points, is somewhat of a neophyte on a basketball court for he has stepped right into a first string position on the Carolina quintet without ever having played high school ball. During his last two years in high school, the handsome set shot ace was sidelined throughout each basketball season by football injuries.

However, Kappler did manage to get a little experience while running off with his team's high scoring honors in the fast Flatbush Church League, where he made the all-star quintet and had the high scoring average on his team.

Deasy was a first string center for his high school for three years, gaining honorable mention on the all-Metropolitan scholastic team his last two years. The beanpole, who now weighs 205 pounds, tipped the scales at a bruising 147 pounds his sophomore year. However, Deasy's early lack of the avoirdupois didn't prevent him from playing three years of varsity football and also making honorable mention on the all-star eleven for two seasons.

Architects Will Open Exhibition In Person Hall

Members of the North Carolina chapter of the American Institute of Architects will open their annual exhibition of contemporary works in Person hall art gallery Sunday.

At 3 o'clock on Sunday Henry Kamphoefner, dean of the new School of Design at State college, Raleigh, will open the exhibit with a public lecture on modern architecture.

The architectural exhibition will include plans and elevations with some models of existing and projected structures. Types of buildings range from private homes to commercial and public buildings, such as schools of contemporary design.

Closed meetings of the North Carolina chapter of the A.I.A. are on Jan. 23, 24, and 25. The present exhibition will remain through Jan. 25.

Watson Continues As Union Director

Bob Watson will continue as director of Graham Memorial this term, it was announced today.

THE FIRST star to rise in the film firmament of 1949 is curvaceous Dorothy Malone who has been elevated from starlet to stellar status. From the looks of her outfit, Dorothy seems unable to decide whether she's to star in westerns or bathing scenes.

UVA Memberships May Be Purchased

Winter quarter membership cards for the University Veterans' association are now available in the book exchange, and the UVA clubhouse is open to all members, Gene Newton, president, announced yesterday.

No Exaggeration:

Boy Squanders 50 G's On Wild Florida Spree

NEWTON, Jan. 5.—(UP)—Carroll G. Temple sued for $50,000 today to recover a fortune of that amount which, he said, was squandered by his 14-year-old son on one grand excursion to Florida.

Temple filed suit against the First National Bank of Catawba county. He charged that the bank was to blame when his son, Carroll, Jr., "surreptitiously obtained" a key to Temple Sr.'s safety box and lifted the $50,000 in cash and bonds.

Young Carroll then "absconded to Florida and dissipated and squandered all the monies except the sum of $6 and a war savings bond," the father's suit charged.

Carroll went on his magnificent jaunt two years ago, the suit charged, and got rid of his father's fortune in a month. Now 15 and a high school student at nearby Hickory, Carroll admitted today that he took the money and spent it.

He said his father had told him not to talk about the incident or the resulting litigation. A reporter told that unless he disclosed how he spent so much money people might exaggerate his experiences.

"I don't think you could," was Carroll's reply.

The boy's mother declined to discuss the matter and said that Temple, Senior, was out on business today.

Voluntary Leases Under Rent Law

All landlords and tenants who have been renting and living in housing units coming under voluntary rent leases, will revert to rent control laws during 1949, it was announced this week by area rent control officer F. A. Pollard. The 1947 act covering voluntary rent leases expired Dec. 31.

Pollard explained that all units coming under the act will automatically go back under rent control, with the tenant and landlord having the same rights and protections as apply to controlled units that were not under leases."

"The maximum rent will be the same as that provided in the expiring leases," he said.

The voluntary rent leases were those not under rent control laws and were executed by landlords and tenants by mutual agreement.

Testing Service Will Hold Exams

The University testing service will conduct the graduate record examination and the Medical college admission test Feb. 7 and 8. Candidates for these examinations must register with Dr. W. D. Perry, director of the testing service, in room 102, Peabody.

All candidates for the graduate record examination must register before Jan. 19. The deadline for registration for the Medical college admission test, which will be given on Feb. 7, is Jan. 24. The application form for this examination is sent to the Educational testing service in Princeton, N. J., and candidates must pick up forms from Dr. Perry's office in advance of the Jan. 24 deadline.

There will be no other Medical college admission tests given before October 1949.

Quarterly Staff To Meet Today

The staff of the Carolina Quarterly will meet this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Quarterly office at Graham Memorial. Anyone interested in working on the Quarterly this term may attend the meeting. Many vacancies on the staff have occurred due to graduation, and transfers and assignments to fill these vacancies will be made at the meeting.

Fiction and poetry manuscripts must be turned in to the Quarterly by Jan. 20 to be considered for the forthcoming issue. Manuscripts may be brought to the Quarterly office or mailed to Box 1117, Chapel Hill.

All manuscripts that are to be returned must be accompanied by the necessary postage.

GI Enrollment Shows Slump In North State

Attendance Drops 14 Per Cent in '48

WINSTON-SALEM, Jan. 6—A 14 per cent drop in the enrollment of veterans under the GI Bill in North Carolina schools and colleges in the past year was reported yesterday by J. D. Deramus, manager of the Veterans administration regional office.

The enrollment figures were taken on Nov. 30, and show the drop from the fall term of 1947.

This is the first time that enrollment figures have dropped since the GI bill and Public Law 16 were put into effect early in 1945.

Veterans in colleges and universities in North Carolina as of the end of November, said Deramus, totaled 18,211, compared with 21,257 a year ago.

The number of veterans in schools below the college level under the two laws also showed a decrease in North Carolina this fall, Deramus said. At the end of November, there were 36,315 veterans in these schools, a drop of 16 per cent from the 43,338 reported a year ago.

These figures include institutional on - the - farm training, Deramus said.

Drops in Nation

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6 — (UP) — The Veterans administration said today the downward trend in the enrollment of GI students at colleges and universities is continuing.

The total of veterans enrolled under federal programs on Nov. 30 was 1,050,668, compared with 1,235,761 a year ago. This is a 15 per cent drop. Enrollments on Oct. 30 were down 17 per cent from a year ago.

Repertory Group Plans Comic Operas Tuesday

By Charlie Gibson

North Carolina's first touring opera company will present two comic one-act plays next Tuesday evening in Memorial hall under the auspices of the Student Entertainment committee.

Admission will be free to all students. However, Scotty Venable, entertainment committee chairman, has announced a procedure for selling tickets at 75 cents to faculty members, student and faculty wives, and townspeople. Faculty members and student and faculty wives may purchase tickets when the doors are first opened at 7 o'clock. At 7:30 ducats will be sold to townspeople at large.

This will be the first University appearance of the new Music Theater Repertory group which is now in its second year of tours throughout the State. The company is composed of six Tar Heels and has a selection of seven original one-act operas, the most popular pair of which will be staged Tuesday.

Among the company are Ted Bodenheimer, baritone; Amelia Cardwell, soprano; Josephine Fisher, contralto; Dorothea Allcorn, soprano; and Margaret Leinbach Kolb and Sarah Ingram, piano accompanists.

Clifford E. Bair, nationally recognized opera impresario of Winston-Salem and founder and first president of the National Association for Opera, is engaged as stage director for all productions by the Music Theater Repertory group.

The two one-act operas Tuesday night will be the second Student Entertainment committee presentation this year, the first having been a concert last quarter by Hazel Scott, noted Negro pianist.

Improved Menu Planned by UVA

Hot coffee and chocolate will be on the menu at the University Veterans association clubhouse soon, President Gene Newton announced today.

Newton said the UVA was on the market for a suitable urn and as soon as one is located it will be installed.

The UVA is also planning a social program for the winter. An inaugural party is tentatively planned for the date of President Truman's inauguration.

Cosmopolitans To Meet in GM

At the Cosmopolitan Club's first meeting of the quarter, Sunday at 4 o'clock in Graham Memorial, officers will be elected to fill vacancies on the executive committee.

Retiring executive members whose offices will be filled are Glen Fisher and Shantilal Vora, of India.

Members will discuss plans for showing four films about Indian life Jan. 14. These films, free to the public, will concern the country's history, philosophy, music, and dances.

Plans will alsq be made for the exhibition of pictures from India at the second meeting of the club Jan. 16.

Comedy of Errors . . .

Truman Pays Surprise Visit As Congress Counts Ballots

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6—(UP)—President Truman dropped in on Congress unexpectedly today as it counted the electoral votes that officially made him President for the next four years.

His visit, chiefly to honor the 67th birthday anniversary of House Speaker Sam Rayburn, was attended by a comedy of errors that included:

A sudden alarm because a seven-foot, six-inch giant wearing a lumber jack costume and brandishing a double - bladed "axe" turned up in the house corridors shortly before Mr. Truman was due to arrive. The gargantuan personage was Len Costley, a guest of Minnesota lawmakers, and his "axe" a wooden dummy.

Rayburn missed most of the birthday luncheon in his honor because the President was late, and the Speaker had to rush to the House floor to be present when the counting of the electoral votes began.

Rep. Mary T. Norton, D., N.J., one of the vote-tellers, accidentally gave President Truman the 47 electoral votes of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's own state of New York and Connecticut's eight votes. Both belonged in the GOP column, and the errors were quickly righted amid much giggling by the lady from New Jersey.

And when Wyoming, the last state in the alphabet, was reached there was a dispute whether its certificate was in order. But the tally was finally completed and Senate President Pro Tem Kenneth McKellar, D., Tenn., announced the already-known results:

President Truman, 303 electoral votes, Dewey 189 and Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, the States Rights' candidate, 39. Their vice-president running mates had the same totals.

Dupont Gives Universities Financial Aid

UNC Not Given Grants-in-Aid

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 6.—(UP)—The Dupont company announced today it will award grants-in-aid of $10,000 each to 10 universities for chemical research during the 1949-50 academic year.

The grants are being offered to Cornell, Harvard, Princeton, Yale and Ohio State universities, the California Institute of Technology, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and the Universities of Illinois, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Crawford H. Greenewalt, president of Dupont, said the grants are being made to enable universities to "make further progress in the stock-piling of basic knowledge, which has been recognized as one of the paramount needs of the country for future industrial development and for national health and defense."

The company said the awards were being made on a one-year trial basis but that it hoped to continue each of them for five years. The universities can use the money in any way they choose except for construction or endowment, and provided that their research projects are free from any commercial implications when the work is initiated.

Regional Group Meets Saturday

The Executive committee of the Virginia-Carolina regional organization of the National Students association will meet here Saturday night at 8 o'clock, Jess Dedmond, president of the student body, announced yesterday.

The meeting of the executive committee of the regional organization, composed of colleges in West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina, is being held to draw up final plans for a regional assembly to be held in February.

Members of the executive committee are Jess Dedmond, regional chairman; Jim Godwin, secretary - treasurer; Jo Anne Strauff, Randolph - Macon, regional vice-chairman; Wendell English, president of the student body of Lynchburg college and regional vice-chairman for international affairs; and Richard Gilmore, Virginia State college, publicity director.

WSSF Drive Taking Shape; Deadline Set

Meeting Slated For Solicitors

Among the final plans for an active campus-wide drive to be conducted next week to raise a University contribution to the World Student Service fund are a meeting tonight of 115 door-to-door solicitors and a deadline today for submitting candidates for the "Miss Payoff" beauty contest.

Edie Knight, supervisor of the charity beauty balloting, stated yesterday that many nominees for the "Miss Pay-Off" crown have already been entered by sororities, dormitories, fraternities, and other campus organizations. However, as there are still a few vacancies to accommodate more beauty contest contestants, the first interested organizations to contact Edie by telephoning the first floor of Alderman dormitory will be allowed to enter the coeds of their choice.

Each beauty must be accompanied by a $5 entrance fee. This fee will be tabulated as the initial 50 dime votes towards Y lobby balloting for the WSSF queen this year.

Tonight at 7 o'clock in Gerrard hall, 115 canvassers who are to contact University students personally for donations will meet to be indoctrinated on the work of the international charity in aiding students throughout the war-devastated countries of Europe and Asia. At this meeting a twenty-minute movie vividly depicting the need for financial aid in the midst of chaos abroad this year will be shown.

The same group will assemble again Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall to see a demonstration of an actual door-to-door solicitation.

Poetry Anthology Will Include Yow

Archibald Yow, senior from Henderson, will be among college poets in the United States who have poetry published in the 1949 Annual Anthology of College Poetry.

Yow's poem, entitled Destiny, was submitted to the National Association of Poetry this fall during the annual poetry contest.

North Carolina Swamp Man, 70 Years Old, Seeking Wife

RALEIGH, Jan. 6—(UP)—J. W. Williams, the 72-year-old North Carolina "wild man" who for 20 years lived as a hermit along the isolated banks of the Cape Fear river, was in a marrying mood today.

"They call me the wild man," he said. "I mean the newspapers. But the women don't. One of them called me Nature Boy. I been looking them over."

Williams spent his first Christmas in "civilization" in 20 years last month. Police investigating the "wild man" reports from anxious residents along the river near Fayetteville found him living alone in a shabby, primitive hut.

He told them he left his Alamance county farm and went to the woods about 20 years ago after his wife died. Sympathetic Fayetteville residents bought him new clothes, set him up in a rent-free bungalow and arranged for him to receive an old-age pension.

"I'm still in the woods, though," he said proudly. His new home is not far from the old hut. "Towns ain't for me. I need room. I just happened to be in Raleigh because I was passing through."

The wrinkled ex-hermit chirped he was sure he could find a wife.

"I tell you, I been around. But you don't have to be a city boy to get the girls."

Feast of Lights Service Is Scheduled For Sunday Night at Episcopal Church

The oldest known Christian play, the Feast of the Lights service, will be presented at the Episcopal church Sunday night at 7:30. Symbolically depicting the coming of Christ as the Light of the world, the play features the Twelve Apostles and the Three Wise Men in a solemn candle-light ceremony.

In the opening moments of the ceremony the beginning verses of St. John are read, prophesying the coming of Christ, as a single candle is lighted, representing the Light shining in the darkness of the world. As the words of St. John are read, the Three Wise Men present themselves before the Light bearing gifts, followed by the Twelve Apostles who light individual candles from the Christ-candle as their names are called, with which they go among the worshippers to distribute the light.

Acting as the Wise Men will be Dr. U. T. Holmes, Jr., William A. Hover and Edward G. Ledter. All denominations are welcome at the service.

Party Chairmanship Posts Given To Childress, Leary

UP Picks Morris As Vice-Chairman To Replace Butt

Joe Leary, senior from Edenton, will take over the reins of the University party at the next meeting of the group. He will succeed Thurman Williams of Fayetteville whose one-year term as UP chairman ran out this week.

Leary, a Sigma Nu, was elected to the chairmanship at a meeting of the UP steering committee Wednesday.

Newly elected vice-chairman of the party is Carlyle Morris of Raleigh who succeeds Len Butt. Morris is a member of PiKA fraternity.

Faith Adams, Tri-Delt from Coral Gables, Fla., was elected to the post of secretary to fill the post formerly held by Marietta Duke.

The post of treasurer was filled by Jay Mills, Phi Kappa Sig from Wadesboro. Mills succeeds Bob Preece.

Other officers elected by the party are Dick Jenrette, Raleigh, Publicity director and Jim Gwynn, Qualifications committee. Jenrette is a member of Chi Psi fraternity and Gwynn is a Sigma Nu.

Scott Inaugural Creates History As Biggest Ever

RALEIGH, Jan. 6—(UP)—Kerr Scott, a blunt and husky dairyman wearing a tailcoat and smoking a cigar, paraded through downtown Raleigh and took the oath as governor today in the biggest inaugural in North Carolina's history.

Tipping his top hat, Scott rode in a cream-colored convertible packard sedan with his predecessor, Gov. Gregg Cherry, through streets lined with an estimated 30,000 citizens. The day was warm for January, and a sheet of high clouds hardly dimmed the bright sunlight.

Scott spent last night in Raleigh, and his family drove here today from their home in Haw River.

Scott and his wife arrived at the governor's mansion 15 minutes before parade time to find Gov. Gregg Cherry awaiting them on the steps.

"Glad to see you," said Scott, shaking hands with Cherry.

"I'm certainly glad to see you," Cherry replied. "Come in and bring your merchandise with you. You'll find some mighty nice folks waiting for you in here."

They went indoors.

Vinson Says UMT Plans Good as Dead

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6. — (UP)—Universal military Training, despite President Truman's endorsement, is a dead duck.

Chairman Carl Vinson said today his House Armed Services committee won't even take up the question of UMT, at least not before 1950.

Other members of the committee apparently agreed with Vinson that UMT is not practical as long as the draft is in effect. The Selective Service law doesn't run out until June 24. 1950.

President Truman, in his State of the Union message yesterday, restated his belief that UMT is an essential part of the national security program.

That was almost his only specific proposal about national defense. He said that we must keep strong armed forces, and that "further improvements" are needed in our security laws.

Mr. Truman did not mention veterans. For this he was criticized by Rep. James T. Patterson, R., Conn. who said ex-servicemen "should be the first beneficiaries" of social legislation proposed by the president.

A UMT bill backed by the American legion was introduced in the Senate yesterday by Chairman Millard D. Tydings (D-Md.) of the Senate Armed Services committee. Tydings said it would be given early consideration but a spot check of senators indicated the measure faced an uphill fight.

Vinson said he agrees that UMT is a good thing. But he added that the time to take it up is when the draft can be allowed to die. He said he sees no prospect that this will be before the expiration of the draft law.

In a reference to recent Army orders cutting back draft calls originally planned for early this year Vinson added:

"It appears that we can't even get enough money to take care of the draft. In view of this fact, I don't think we should go into consideration of universal training."

UMT, strongly backed by veterans' organizations, contemplates training of all fit young men. It does not call for actual military duty. Under the draft selected young men are called into regular military service.

Complete Slate Of New Officers Elected by SP

For the second time in his campus political career, Gran Childress, senior from Oxford, is chairman of the Student party, SP officials announced yesterday. He succeeds Ed Tenney.

Childress served as chairman of the party during spring quarter of 1948.

SP elections took place in a meeting held the last week of fall quarter. A spokesman for the party said the elections were originally scheduled for the first week in January but were precipitated by a proposed split in the party which failed to materialize.

In addition to Childress, the party re-elected Walter McCraw, sophomore from Burlington, as vice-chairman. McCraw had been filling the unexpired term of Lindsay Tate.

Larry Botto, freshman from Bradenton, Fla., was re-elected to the post of treasurer and Daisy Belle Anderson of Greensboro was chosen secretary of the group.

Rounding out SP's slate of new officers are Bill Prince of Rochester, N. Y., who succeeds Chuck Lineberry as campaign manager, and Dick Murphy of Baltimore, Md., publicity director.

The five seats open on the SP steering committee were filled by Gray Sanders of Lumberton, Emily Baker and Harry Horton of Asheville, Ben Jones of Elgin, Ill., and John Harris of New York City.

A proposal to increase the size of the steering committee from five to eight members is now under consideration by the party.

Next meeting of the Student party is scheduled for Monday night at 9 o'clock in Graham Memorial.

Late Temple Evidence Shows Youth Made Two Florida Trips

NEWTON, Jan. 6—(UP)—Further investigation of Carroll Temple, Jr.,'s alleged spree with his father's fortune showed today that the youth, then 14, probably made two trips to Florida in 1947.

Temple, senior, has sued the First National Bank of Catawba county for $50,000, charging that the bank permitted his boy to take that much cash from his safety deposit box, plus a quantity of bonds.

The father charged that young Carroll blew the entire stake, except $6 cash and a $50 bond, on one super junket to Florida sometime after May, 1947. It was in that month, Temple's suit charged, that Carroll made the last of five or six trips to the bank to milk his father's lockbox.

Jacksonville, Fla., police records showed, however, that if the dates in the suit were correct, young Carroll laid the groundwork for his grandscale trip with a visit to the Sunshine State earlier in the year.

A Carroll Temple, Jr., of Catawba county was found wandering about the Jacksonville bus station on April 7, 1946, the docket showed. He was placed under arrest and his father notified. The elder Temple went to Jacksonville to take him home, the police said.

When picked up, Carroll, Jr., had in his possession only 70 cents and a package of cigarets and matches. Jacksonville Detective E. J. Langdale, who was a juvenile officer at the time, said the boy did not mention having had a large sum of money on that particular trip.

Temple's suit charged that the boy was absent from home three months later in the year. And,

Did the Governor Forget?

While Governor Kerr Scott devoted a good five minutes of his inaugural address to improvements in North Carolina schools, his message was not encouraging as far as the University is concerned. His concrete suggestions were confined to the field of primary and secondary schools, with only one suggestion touching upon higher education and that not an immediate recommendation.

In the public school system he recommended salary increases for teachers and consideration of state aid to counties for construction of school buildings. Referring to higher education, he asserted that there is a great waste in North Carolina's colleges as evidenced by the high number of students eliminated by failure in their first two years. This, he said, shows that many students who enter college are not qualified to do so. He asked that a survey be made to examine the feasibility of establishing a system of junior colleges for vocational education.

Undoubtedly improvement of its primary and secondary schools is one of the prime problems facing the state. However, we hope Scott's failure to mention the Greater University in his inaugural speech does not mean that he intends to concentrate on the lower school system to the detriment of the state's colleges. Improvement of preparatory schools and of higher education facilities should go hand in hand. The University has worked long and hard to reach its present position of prominence in the educational ranks of the nation; it would be unfortunate if neglect were allowed to lower its standing. The University at Chapel Hill and State College in Raleigh are now struggling under a tremendous overload of students with funds decreasing because of the departure of veterans. Financial neglect by the legislature at the present time would be disastrous.

Slipshod Administration

The Veterans administration will pay for the delivery of a daily paper in some classes and for a weekly newsmagazine in others. The instructors of these courses have faithfully taken the veterans' names and handed them in, yet many students never saw their first copy last quarter. Something went wrong, and nobody seems to know just where.

Either the departments, the Veterans association, or the other agencies involved should see that the papers and magazines are delivered to all of the proper veterans or the program should be dropped. Someone is guilty of slipshod administration and no one but the veterans who are not getting adequate service seem interested.—B.L.

Conviction brings a silent, indefinable beauty into faces of the commonest human clay; the devout worshipper at any shrine reflects something of its golden glow, even as the glory of a noble love shines like a sort of light from a woman's face.—Balzac.

Took a Crack at Jazz

Baritone Tried Saxaphone

By "Wink" Locklair

(One of a series of articles on distinguished graduates of the University).

The career of Norman Cordon, from choir boy at Charlotte's St. Peter's Episcopal Church, to stardom at New York's Metropolitan Opera, is familiar to most music lovers. But the story of Norman Cordon, saxophonist is not too well-known, which is all right with him.

Back in 1922, the University had enrolled such eminent musicians as Kay Kyser, John Scott Trotter, Skinney Ennis and the late, great Hal Kemp. It was with Kemp's crew that Norman attempted to grasp the new idiom, jazz. Kemp politely discouraged his classmate and suggested that he take up something else, debating, maybe. Later Kay Kyser formed a band which found itself equipped with never-say-die Cordon. He just couldn't get the sax to do right, so, taking the advice of Glee Club Director, Paul Weaver, Norman decided to study voice. How well he succeeded has been reported many times during the past ten years by the nation's leading music and drama critics.

NORMAN CORDON

The big break came in Chicago in 1933, when his debut in Verdi's "Aida" with the San Carlo Opera company scored a success. His first appearance with the Metropolitan came in the spring season of 1936, when he sang the role of Count Monterone in another Verdi favorite, "Rigoletto." The New York critics were very impressed with his rich baritone and since his New York debut he has appeared there, as well as engagements with the San Francisco, Chicago, Cincinnati and St. Louis Opera companies. He has given solo recitals across the country, also.

Mr. Cordon withdrew from opera two seasons ago to appear on Broadway in the Kurt Weill version of Elmer Rice's "Street Scene," a production which caused considerable comment. Last spring he was in Charlotte to narrate the two-week, first season presentation of Legette Blythe's historical drama, "Shout Freedom."

The tall, powerfully-built singer has the distinction of being the first North Carolinian to become a member of the Metropolitan, and he is the only person ever to receive an honorary Doctor of Music degree from the University. At present he is working with the University Extension Service in a program to spread the enjoyment and understanding of music throughout the South. His solo appearance with the University symphony before Thanksgiving was his debut since returning to Chapel Hill.

Buchan's Travels

The Wayward Busrider

By W. Steinbeck Buchan

Burlington, Dec. 4—All's swell. The sendoff was wonderful. Thanx.

Greensboro, 1:50 a.m., Dec. 4—This ain't for publication. I'm sobering up. . .still happy over the farewell. . .all the way, Cal-i-forn-i-a. . .Luck to you!

Asheville, Dec. 4—After some of these curves we've come around, I don't blame the N.C. Westerners for leaving these parts. I appreciated the Chapel Hill police force turning out to say goodbye—the height of something or other. 'Twould be nice if all of you had landed in jail. What a headline that could be.

Asheville, Dec. 4—Tom Wolfe should have been here this morning. It's cold and some woman tells everybody how her obviously stupid son reacted to his first snow in Yankeeland this week. All he does is gurgle and say "Dahhhhhh!" Still on schedule. Next stops Chattanooga and Memphis.

Florence, Ala., Dec. 5—We've formed a California club—two sailors headed for San Diego, one guy headed home from Army, and a woman going to L.A. We were so packed for a while that the driver couldn't get to his seat. Most of the time, we've had a whole seat each. Right now we've got 30 minutes to make up before midnight in order to catch the "West Coast Limited" out of Memphis. Ole Man River, hyar we come.

Scottsboro, Ala., Dec. 5—Too many Christmas shoppers. Woman is still talking about her kid's first snow and the kid still says "Dahhhh". . . Was surprised to see Murphy, N.C. Never believed it existed. Real people there too. . .and those doggone mountain roads.

Corinth, Miss., Dec. 5—Modern travel: To get from Chattanooga, Tenn., to Memphis, Tenn., you have to go in Alabama and Mississippi. I'm writing a book: 49 Ways to Sleep on a Bus, by W. Steinbeck Buchan.

Memphis, Dec. 5—Finally left the Asheville bus here and got right on this one. May make first bad connection in Little Rock. The best story of the day goes to the guy who said he was coming here to testify. Seems some girl "in trouble" stole two of his GI checks. She said to pay the expenses. But now the father married her and he expects the case to be settled out of court. That's just one of the stories we've heard. The feminine member of our party decided to stay here tonight.

Little Rock, Ark., Dec. 5—Life on a Greyhound becomes very informal. From Memphis to here, they were passing bottles up and down the aisle. Wilbur is having a fine old time. California club has two new members.

Fort Smith, Ark., Dec. 5—Arkansas is desolate, rotten and falling apart, except the cities. All the farms look worn out. I met a girl from Winston-Salem who left on a train Friday morning and gave it up for the bus. The bus is still fun, but lawdy what a way to entertain yourself.

Oklahoma City, Dec. 6—Now we're getting somewhere. Oklahoma university students sitting beside me say they are going to win the game. A note in the local paper: "In North Carolina Justice prevails but we feel the Sooners are going to put their Heels on that." Ain't seen no cowboys or cactus yet, but spied several oil wells. Oklahoma looks like a really fine state. Two women talking on my left: "It's so easy to do the little things to make women happy."

Oklahoma City, Dec. 6—"Yes," the other replied, "they just have to do a little bluffing to keep us going." Am halfway there now. Worst of trip is over. Arrive L.A. 11 o'clock Tuesday morning. Our California club keeps dwindling—only three members left. One soldier is going back to Fort Bragg the same way (by bus). Muhgawd, just how crazy can one soldier get? Let's have a pah-ty.

Amarillo, Tex., Dec. 6—I still think Texas is at the bottom of the world. Only one thing wrong. . .it's cold instead of hot. Dopes are talking about a snow storm. You figure this one out: We're due in Tucuman, N. Mex., at 9:15 and we leave at 8:30. . .45 minutes before we arrive. For anyone but me, the solution would have been simple. Gung have party.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Dec. 7—I keep looking for John Wayne and Montgomery Clift to come charging over the plains but they haven't ap-

An Open Letter

To the Chief of Police of New Orleans

By Bev Lawler

Dear Chief:

We certainly enjoyed ourselves down there in your charming city and appreciated the help the police tried to give. However, there were a few incidents when the public servants didn't seem quite up to par.

Two students of this institution pulled a reluctant patrolman into one of the more respectable bars to report a mousenapping. It seems that they had a dead mouse, resplendent with Oklahoma colors, that they had been transporting about the French Quarter in a paper bag. After exhibiting the defunct Okie to some interested patrons, the students turned their attention to a young lady who was removing her clothes gracefully. Enthralled by the cultural aspects of the dance, they failed to notice the abduction of their little friend. Despite a search by the bartenders, the students, the stripteaser and the police, no trace was found. Obviously, New Orleans is no place to be kidnapped — especially if you are a rat.

Another example of lack of insight by public servants was shown when three students, after a half-hour of effort, managed to turn in a fire alarm. When the engines, the police and Stormy (with her clothes on) had arrived at the scene the trio lit sparklers and no longer needed assistance. Ignoring them, the firemen milled around and fouled up traffic terribly. Not even seeing the fires, right under their noses, doesn't speak so well for the fire-fighters.

While the traffic was in such a mess, our students stepped in to help the police who were in utter confusion. Seizing strategic corners, the volunteers soon had things in unbelievable shape and were leering at the young ladies stranded in cars by the jam. Before friendships could flourish, the police had cleared the whole magnificent muddle and violated Constitutional rights. Haven't your police heard of the right of Assembly?

One more point — it was rather chicken of the officers to refuse the loan of their motorcycles to the scholars who wanted to lead the parade. They promised not to ride down anyone but Oklahomans. Anyway, it was a swell parade down Bourbon Street even if it did disintegrate where Sally Rand was waving her blue and white fans.

Really, it was fun and we hope to see you again. Next time, however, we'll bring our own motorcycles.

Puzzle Party

What Misery And Pleasure

By Harman W. Nichols

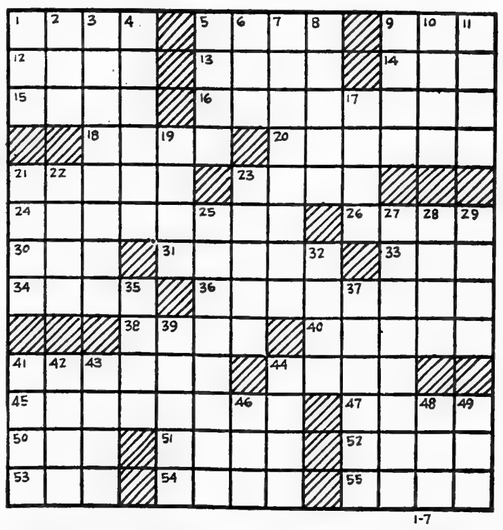
WASHINGTON, Jan. 6. —(UP)—Consider these: a six-letter word for "a plant of the pea family." A three-letter one for "any split pulse (India.)"

Add 'em up and you have a cross-section of the crossword puzzle. The reason for bringing all this up is a reminder from radio announcer Eddie Gallaher of Station WTOP, who let it out that yesterday was the 24th anniversary of the first crossword puzzle book.

And what a misery and pleasure that puzzle business has been!

A woman in the Midlde West got a divorce claiming she had become a crossword puzzle widow. A guy in New England was sent to the pokey for standing in a "no standing" zone while scratching his noggin trying to think of a four-letter word for "body of Kaffir warriors."

A parson in Pittsburgh shocked his congregation by asking the folks to answer three, four and five letter questions he had taken from the Holy Bible.



The puzzle craze got so bad that the B & O railroad had to put dictionaries in its lounge cars to keep the passengers contented. The mania spread, and Europe began to view with alarm. One publication described the puzzle as "dangerous as the Spanish flu." It said the public ought to keep away from it.

The first crossword puzzle book was an accident. A man named Richard Leo Simon went to visit a sick aunt, so the story goes. She had been working a daily puzzle printed in the old New York World.

"Get me one of those books," she demanded of her nephew.

Simon looked all around town and couldn't find one. So he wrote one. Shortly thereafter he went into the publishing business with a man named Max Lincoln Schuster and formed Simon and Schuster. Inside of a month crossword puzzle books were best sellers. They still are.

So far as the Library of Congress knows the first crossword puzzle was printed in "Fun," which was a supplement of the New York World. That was in 1913.

A Dissent On Graham

Editor:

With all due respect and admiration for Dr. Frank and his splendid service on behalf of the University and the Nation, I nevertheless feel that the DTH's elaborate eulogies concerning him are more characteristic of an Omniscent Being, rather than a man—who, like all of us, is apt to err occasionally.

Dr. Graham is listed by the House Un-American Activities Committee TWENTY-FOUR times as one who has lent his name or services to Communist-front organizations. Is it prudent to take that fact with a "grain of salt" when considering him for a position which requires an unblemished and undoubted record? Although Dr. Frank isn't a Communist, he is one of a rather large group of "liberals" (made up of prominent educators and clergymen) who have apparently aided and abetted Communism in America. To use the words of G. W. Robnett, eminent opponent of Communism: "Unable to make any headway in building an outright Communist Party to any size in this country, Communist strategists have adopted the Trojan horse 'front organization' movement to give them the power they could not otherwise get to push disruptive 'causes' and to develop organized criticism of our American System."

There are many who regret that Dr. Frank has not publicly renounced his affiliations with said "front organizations"—or at least made SOME defensive comment. His silence is neither constructive nor encouraging to anxious Americans who want to erect an impenetrable bulwark against belligerent Communism. It seems to me that the AEC could have pursued a more intelligent policy by demanding that he "renounce" before giving him a post. WE MUST PLAY SAFE! Is there any good reason why Dr. Graham wouldn't do so if he has no fault to find with the Attorney General's investigation?

Let us hear from you, Dr. Frank! I doubt that I'm the only one who'd like to escape from this dilemma! We have a right to know precisely where you stand!

J. R. Cherry, Jr.

Down With Sokolsky!

Editor:

If memory serves correctly, you said in an editorial last term that three national columnists would be tried by the DTH. Each was to be printed for a month, and the most popular one would be continued for the remainder of the academic year.

This editorial was written in response to complaints by the student body against the use of George Sokolsky's column. Many of us still object to having Sokolsky printed in our paper. He represents the extreme right wing of American thought, and seldom contributes anything positive to the paper.

Several other columns were suggested to you last fall; among these were: Drew Pearson, Walter Lipman, Marquis Childs, and the Alsops. Do you intend to give us a cross-section of American thought, or are you going to continue to print one not-too-popular writer?

Why hasn't the change been made?

These Days

Down With Socialization!

By George E. Sokolsky

The figures on persons in hospitals for 1948 not yet being available, I shall in this article use 1947 figures. The following is pertinent data:

"A. Governmental
1. Federal hospitals	1,285,126
2. City, county, city-county, and state hospitals	2,919,218
Total governmental		4,204,344
B. Non-governmental
1. Non-profit	10,177,508
2. Proprietary hospitals	1,447,662
Total non-governmental		11,625,170
National total		15,829,514"

Obviously, the bulk of hospitalization is being carried by non-governmental institutions and in that category, the voluntary, non-profit institutions, dependent upon private charity, perform the greatest service. The Hoover commission report on federal hospitalization indicates extravagance and waste by federal hospitals, particularly those controlled by the armed forces. In a word, the best job is still being done by voluntary institutions.

The principal complaint against the voluntary hospital, as against the entire medical profession, is that while the poor get excellent free service and the rich can afford excellent private service, the middle group, particularly the white-collar, middle-class fixed-earners, have a hard time meeting doctor and hospital bills. This problem is being met by the various blue cross plans, to which about 32,000,000 Americans now belong and which can be increased tremendously without government intervention. A practical matter of providing in advance for inevitable expenditures, the time is bound to come when every provident American will carry this kind of insurance as he does fire insurance. And it is a self-respecting method for neither private nor governmental charity.

In the present mood for socialization, various arguments are offered for enormous governmental expenditures which ultimately must mean government control of the $6,000,000 hospital plant of the United States. The dead hand of bureaucracy can destroy the wholesome flexibility of the voluntary hospital which usually are controlled by a lay board familiar with local conditions and directed by a medical board of competent physicians and surgeons. The proof of the adequacy of our hospitals is that we have the largest plant in relationship to population and the best hospitals in all the world.

The criticism that areas in the United States lack hospital facilities is correct, but that can better be mended by private giving than by huge government outlays. And it needs to be done lest the bureaucrat's case be justified. No private charity can be more justified or bring better results. The figures show that a hospital bed has a cost of $4,199 and that general hospitals alone require 195,000 more beds than the 1,425,222 that were in use in 1947. In a word, if private giving is to provide adequate hospitalization for the civilian population of the United States plenty of money has to be contributed not only for plant but for upkeep as well.

In discussions on this and related subjects, the attitude of many, particularly younger, persons is that as we pay such high taxes and can save so little on our earnings, why not let the government do the entire job? Of course, the answer is that socialization, while often starting in areas in which private effort is inadequate, expands to total socialization and the ultimate destruction of private life. The point at which socialization is the most dangerous is the very beginning.

Violets Trounce Tar Heels In Garden

FRANKLY SPEAKING

By Frank Allston, Jr.

Repeat of Last Season?

AFTER LAST NIGHT'S DEBACLE in Madison Square Garden, many people are going to think that the Carolina cagers are in for a repeat of last year. The '48 Tar Heels started off with a great winning streak and were undefeated when they hit NYU.

But the 1949 Tar Heels shouldn't run into the bad luck that their predecessors did. After pushing their way through the first nine games, the Tar Heels have recorded eight wins against last year's lone defeat. That in itself is significant. With plenty of student support, a little luck and plenty of heads-up play, the Tar Heel cagers should go far.

Coach Tom Scott's charges still have the longest and toughest part of their schedule ahead of them. There is still the Southern Conference competition which, this year, will be some of the toughest in recent years. It's a long way until the conference tournament, but the Tar Heels have their eyes set on a berth—and a win.

Tar Heels Off With a Rush

THE TAR HEEL CAGERS STARTED OFF with a rush, winning their five of their pre-holiday contests. Of course, their first four came against very questionable opposition. Lenoir Rhyne bowed in the opener, 68-51. Nobody thought much of it. Guilford, Elon and Catawba went down in succession, all of them by margins of ten points or better. Still no interest was aroused.

Then the Tar Heels journeyed over to Winston-Salem, where they played the semi-pro Hanes Hosiery five, conquerors of State's mighty powerhouse only a week previously. Led by eagle-eyed Dan Nyimicz and flashly Rip Ryan, the Carolina quint came from in the latter part of the game to edge the Hanes squad, 64-60.

After that contest, Coach Tom Scott's boys laid off for two weeks before moving down to Lafayette, La., where they whipped the University of Arizona, 60-49 in the feature game of the Camellia Bowl tourney.

Since then the Tar Heels have played Maryland and NYU. The Maryland game was their first Southern conference test and the boys came through with flying colors, sinking the Terps, 55-47.

Carson Is Scoring Spark

TO DATE COY CARSON HAS BEEN the scoring spark of the local team. Coy, a rather short fellow who plays a good bit of forward, was the conference's leading scorer before last night's game. The Asheville hot shot is fast on his feet and has an amazing ability to get free and shoot. He gets down the court fast and usually has many chances at the basket unguarded.

Guards Dan Nyimicz and Fred (Rip) Ryan have been the stabilizing forces on the team. Both are good set shots, Nyimicz more so than Ryan. Rip, however, plays a flashier type of game, utilizing extensive footwork, behind-the-back passing and other difficult manuevers. Sometimes Rip's flashiness backfires, but on the whole it is an asset to the team. After the Tar Heels get a few more games under their respective belts, you can expect to see more of this type of play.

Forward Hugo Kappler and center Nemo Nearman, the only returning regular from last season's team, round out the starting five. Kappler, a sophomore transfer student from Pfieffer Junior college, has shown a great deal of promise. Hugo stands around 6' feet and is a real scrapper. He has a good push shot and is slowly but surely developing as a set shot. Nearman is outstanding off the boards, usually gaining a large percentage of the rebounds. Nemo also is good on tip ins, but he doesn't have a very good set shot.

Hustle and Fight Are Necessary

ONE THING THAT IS APPARENT about the 1949 edition of the Tar Heel cagers is that they are really going to have to hustle and fight an up hill battle all the way. They lack height. They lack experience. But they don't lack the will to win.

From the very start of the current campaign, the Tar Heels were picked to finish in the lower bracket of the conference. How could a team that finished third last season and lost almost the entire squad even expect to improve on their performance? What the experts failed to take into consideration is that Carolina spirit which the Tar Heels are going to ride into a great many more victories than quite a few people are expecting.

Yes, the Tar Heels will lose ball games. With teams like NYU, State, Duke, William and Mary and George Washington on the schedule, there are bound to be some bad cards in the deal. It's possible that Carolina will lose as many as they lost last season, but this reporter doesn't believe that these Carolina cagers will lose seven games.

Joe Dolhon Leads New York Attack In 72-48 Victory

By Bob Goldwater

NEW YORK, Jan. 6—A powerful NYU quint pounded out a merciless 72-48 victory over previously-unbeaten North Carolina in the first game of a double header in Madison Square garden last night before some 16,500 spectators.

The game started slowly and there was little offensive action until Richard Kor fouled Coy Carson under the basket after two minutes of play. Carson stepped to the foul line with a golden opportunity to give Carolina the jump on its New York rival, but he promptly missed two charity tosses, and the honor of breaking the scoring ice went to NYU's Abe Becker. Becker sank a free throw 35 seconds later after he was fouled by Rip Ryan.

The action picked up after this and Carolina pushed into a momentary lead on the power of two free throws by Nemo Nearman and a lay-up by Ryan. After four minutes of play the Tar Heels held a 4-1 lead, but the Violets went to work on the Carolinians and evened things up at 7-all at the 8:30 mark.

Dolhon Leads Way

Captain Joe Dolhon, Violet forward caught fire at this point after being held scoreless for four minutes in the first half and went on to pour 14 points through the hoop in the remainder of the first half.

It was Dolhon's accurate set shots from way out that inspired the New Yorkers in the early minutes as they came from behind to outscore their Southern opponents. Bill Jensen also counted heavily in the "Yankees" first-half play.

After regaining the lead from the Tar Heels, the classy New York quint moved steadily ahead until the end of the first half. When the gun sounded ending the first stanza, the Violets led by a lop-sided 38-24 margin.

The Carolina first-team played almost the entire first half without relief and was forced to call

Sullivan Memorial Trophy Presented to Bob Mathias

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—(UP)—Bob Mathias, of Tulare, Calif., the 17-year-old decathlon star who scored a smashing Olympic triumph against the world's leading competitors, yesterday was named winner of the 1948 Sullivan Memorial trophy as the nation's outstanding amateur athlete.

He is the youngest athlete ever to receive the award in the 19 years that it has been presented.

The Sullivan award, which honors the memory of James E. Sullivan, one of the original leaders of the Amateur Athletic union, is made each year, after a National AAU poll of sports leaders and writers, to the "amateur athlete, who by performance, example and good influence, did the most to advance the cause of good sportsmanship during the year."

Handsome, muscular Mathias, a star in track, football and basketball competed in the decathlon against the wishes of his mother who felt that the gruelling 10-event grind was too much for a teen-aged youth. He was the first-place choice of 201 of the 525 balloters. With each voter selecting three athletes on a 5-3-1 point basis, Mathias received a total of 1,491 points to win the trophy by a sizeable margin.

Runner-up in the balloting was Harrison Dillard, world record-breaking hurdler and Olympic 100-meter dash champion from Baldwin-Wallace college of Berea, O. Dillard, who also finished second last year to sculler Jack Kelly of Philadelphia, received 119 first place votes and 1,087 points.

Joe Verdeur of Philadelphia, Olympic breast stroke swimming champion, was third with 77 first place ballots and a total of 749 points, while Henry Wittenberg, the New York City policeman who won the Olympic light-heavyweight wrestling title, was fourth with 64 first place votes and 629 points.

Mississippi State Gets Arthur Lewis

STARKVILLE, Miss., Jan. 6—(UP)— Arthur Lewis head football coach at Washington and Lee University, has been signed as Mississippi State college line coach, it was announced yesterday.

Athletic director C. R. (Dudy) Noble said that Arthur (Slick) Morton, new Maroon head coach, was "delighted" to have Lewis as his chief assistant.

Lewis has been head coach at Washington and Lee for the past three years.

Zetas Pace Frats; Town Boys on Top In Dorm Division

Zeta Psi and Town lead the fraternity and dormitory intramural leagues respectively each with a total of 449 points scored during the fall quarter intramurals. This total includes all points earned in tag football, wrestling, volleyball, and table tennis competition, the four sports offered on the fall program.

Trailing the Zetes in the fraternity division are Phi Gam with 391.4 markers; Sigma Chi, 374; Phi Delt, 324.9; and Kappa Sig rounding out the first five with 317.5. Emerson follows the Town boys in the dormitory division with 349.2; Grads, 290; Oakwood Dr., 284.5; and the Med school, 275.2.

Fall intramurals attracted 2853 individuals of which a large majority were new participants in the program. The frat division claimed 1143 new individuals while the dorm teams added 965.

The winter mural schedule will open on Monday with basketball play, and handball starts on Wednesday. Boxing and swimming competition will get underway in February.

Frosh Cagers Meet Blue Devils Here

Carolina's unbeaten freshman cage squad will provide the entertainment for the local basketball fans today when Jim Hamilton's charges meet the Duke frosh at 8 tonight in Woollen Gym.

The Tar Babies will be resuming their schedule after a three-week layoff and Hamilton hopes the inactivity won't prevent the yearlings from copping their fifth consecutive tussle at the expense of the also undefeated Blue Imp quintet.

The Duke freshmen, reported to average well over six feet in height, have won three games by wide margins. Both fives trounced their only common foe, Louisburg Junior college.

Carolina's starting quint will be Lenny Guyes at center; Dick Harter and either Frank Eckert or Larry Cheek at forwards; and John Bowersox and either John Slemp or Jim Reuning at the guard slots.

Want a Winner?

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 6—(UP)—The Philadelphia Eagles, who won their first National Football league title just 19 days ago, were up for sale today for "somewhere between $250,000 and $300,000."

The club, owned by millionaire Alexis Thompson, strong proponent of peace with the rival All-America conference, reportedly lost $32,000 this season despite its championship performance.

District Attorney Questions Decoy In Attempted 'Fix'

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—(UP)—A plump brunette identified as the feminine decoy in an alleged attempt by gamblers to fix a college basketball game was called today for further questioning by District Attorney Frank Hogan.

Hogan said he hoped to learn if a national gambling syndicate masterminded the $1,000 bribe offered Dave Shapiro, 25, co-captain of the George Washington university basketball squad, to throw a Madison Square garden game Tuesday night.

The brunette, Sylvia Brill, 24, is a sister-in-law of Joseph Aronowitz, one of four men held in $50,000 bail each for grand jury action on attempted bribery charges. Hogan said a date between the girl and Shapiro had been arranged for a New Year's eve party. She was questioned extensively yesterday.

Hogan asked the grand jury to find out if the alleged "fix" was the work of "tin horn sports" or whether a huge national ring was behind the scheme. The jury listened to testimony from Shapiro for two hours yesterday, and Hogan said he hoped to obtain an indictment some time next week. The suspects are liable to a five-year prison term if convicted.

Free Substitution Rule Set For Modification by NCAA

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 6.—(UP)—A new brand of football is on tap for grid customers in 1949 if the National Collegiate Athletic association executive committee accepts proposals from the rules committee.

First, the unpopular "free substitution" rule, which drew boos and catcalls from the fans last season, will be modified; and second, the "reverse center" may be legalized.

These were the highlights of the annual rules committee report to the NCAA, as announced by Chairman Lou Little of Columbia university.

The committee recommended that the free substitution rule be changed to allow "platoon replacements" only during a time-out or when the ball changes hands; and abolished the single substitutions that have been allowed when the clock still is going. That latter item was instituted to stop the lagging of the 12th man on the field; and possibly was aimed at curbing quarterbacking from the bench.

The "reverse center" proposal was made to the rules committee and still must win approval. Little, along with Ossie Solem, of Springfield and Red Blaik of Army are strong proponents of the formation, which was eliminated at the end of the 1941 season.

If adopted, it would free a T-formation quarterback from standing right up against the line and he could be available for passing, pass-reception or blocking or running.

The NCAA convention moved sluggishly through yesterday's workings, with the executive committee still unable to raise a quorum. Only two members were present—the rest being either snowbound in the Rocky Mountains and Mid-West, or attending other meetings.

Small Colleges Ready to Revolt Against NCAA

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 6.—(UP)—A revolt was reported brewing in the ranks of the smaller "outside" colleges of the NCAA today over asserted discrimination.

University of Utah, which claims it was snubbed in the NCAA basketball playoffs last spring, was reported ready to skip the playoffs this year (if the Utes win regional honors) and go to the Madison Square garden national championship invitational instead—if invited.

The California independent colleges, such as Santa Clara, St. Mary's, Loyola and University of San Francisco, also were reported to have the same plan under consideration.

"We pay our dues to the NCAA," said one independent spokesman, "but actually it is taxation without representation. The NCAA picks only the winner of the Pacific Coast conference championship to play in its sectional championships."

What Does A Person Do When Weather Is -30?

Editor's Note: Editor Chris H. Sheerin of the Elko, Nev., Daily Free Press tells in the following story how a small western town lives with the mercury standing at 30 below zero.

By Chris H. Sheerin
Written for United Press

ELKO, Nev., Jan. 6—(UP)—There aren't many people on the streets here today.

With the mercury standing at minus 30 degrees outside, the town's 6,000 residents are staying close to their stoves or furnace vents. Those who must go out wear thick wool stockings, scarves, overcoats and extra pairs of gloves.

You tend to forget about the cold until you step outside. Then it hits you and you get back inside as fast as you can.

Women forget about being the fair sex. They bundle up as much as their menfolks and forget about their trim figures for the time being.

Folks stop going to movies or to parties at night. All they want to do is stay home and keep warm.

This isn't the coldest we've seen here. On Jan. 21, 1937, it got down to minus 43. Everybody hopes it won't get that cold this time.

But they're not worried too much. After the temperature gets below zero, it doesn't make much difference whether the thermometer reads 20, 30 or 40 degrees below.

People aren't suffering very badly because each winter we prepare for the worst. Most homes are well insulated and have good furnaces which roar around the clock.

I feel the most sorry for the railroad crews who must be out in the cold continuously. They pile on so much clothing that they look like eskimos. But it's still rugged.

Most automobile owners put enough anti-freeze in their cars to protect them against 40 or 45 below zero cold. But even so, a great many people couldn't start their cars.

The cold temperatures haven't interrupted schools because the buildings were constructed for the cold. Only two classes were dismissed yesterday. The rooms were in the basement and weren't heated properly.

When you step outside today, your nostrils freeze on the inside and you feel like you're inhaling tiny slivers of ice if you breathe deeply. The snow underfoot makes a crunching sound.

But mostly you just don't step outside.

time-out on several occasions. The lack of reserves handicapped the Tar Heels to an even greater degree in the closing minutes of the game. The superior New York reserve strength carried much weight in swinging the tide in the Violets' favor.

At the opening of the second half the action lagged again and Nearman dropped the first points of the half in after a scramble under the Carolina basket at the 2:18 mark. The Violets were quick to get back into the game, however, and after nine minutes the New Yorkers had widened their lead to 53-37 over the outclassed "Rebels."

Dolhon, the classiest performer on the court left the game five minutes before the final gun after sinking seven field goals and five free tosses for a total of 19 points. Dan Quilty and Joel Kauffman took up the slack, however, and the Violets were scoring almost at will in the closing minutes of the game when Carolina Coach Tom Scott began sending in his second-string to "spell" his overworked regulars.

For the Tar Heels it was history repeating itself. The very same thing happened here last year under almost identical circumstances. The lone difference was that the Carolina victory skein was longer at that time.

The Carolinians blew into the Big Town on the crest of a 12-game streak last January and fell before the powerful Violets in a one-sided game that saw the Tar Heels go down to one of their most humiliating defeats of the season.

This time the Carolina streak had been extended to only eight games before the New Yorkers lowered the axe for the second consecutive year.

Although the Violets had the high-scoring honors all to themselves with Dolhon racking up 19 points and Kauffman bagging 18 markers, they did not pick up all the marbles in the Garden battle. Tar Heel Dan Nyimicz, who left the game on fouls in the closing minutes, was tabbed as the top defensive man on the court.

Carson, who entered the game with a 17-point average was erratic with his shooting all night and the Asheville star had tough luck on top of it all. A number of his shots rimmed the basket and came out. The same trouble hounded every member of the visiting team, and unfamiliar surroundings and "Garden fever" can be accredited with a degree of the Tar Heel inefficiency.

The Tar Heels will detour via Blacksburg, Va. on their return from Yankeeland for a Saturday-night tussle with the Keydets of VMI.

ONE OF ELEVEN Yale students killed in the crash of the chartered DC-3 airliner at Seattle, Wash., was David Haerle, Portland, Ore. A phone call from a fellow student, who had been aboard the ill-fated plane, informed them of their son's death.

Bill Duncan, editor of the Yack, announced yesterday that all informal pictures for the snapshot section of the yearbook should be turned in at the Yack office by next Wednesday.

Duncan explained that the only way of getting informal snaps was to have them turned in by the students. The Yack editor requested students to turn in photographs taken at Hogan's lake, dances, parties, beach parties, and other campus affairs.

"We would like to have complete coverage of campus events by snapshots," Duncan said. He added that any size snapshot would be acceptable and all photographs would be returned.

Print Process Being Shown In Library

An exhibit arranged to give the layman information on the process of printing is now on display in the reserve room of the library.

This exhibit, prepared by F. E. Compton and company, publishers of Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia, was planned and arranged to give the layman as much information as he could receive through days of directed study in a printing plant.

First are shown all the complicated processes required to convert a single page of text and picture copy into a printed page, then the steps required to incorporate this and other pages into the finished book.

Spring Weather In New England

BOSTON, Jan. 6.—(UP)—It came pretty close to being spring in New England today.

With blizzards in the West and California having sub freezing temperatures, pansies, hyacinths and narcissus bulbs burst into bloom here.

Skiers and winter sports operators bemoaned the lack of snow and took little consolation in budding rose bushes.

With the temperature at a high of 59 in Boston, one group in the winter sports business became tired of "taking it on the chin" and decided to grow beards in protest against the weather.

Even barber Armand Doucette agreed with other businessmen at Warner, N. H., to let his whiskers grow until there is enough snow to lure skiers to the town. The only holdout among the beard-growing business populace was Mrs. Frank Tillghast, a ski lodge owner, who moaned she couldn't do anything about that either.

parade started, Gov. and Mrs. Cherry stepped out onto the front porch. Bands were playing, and a military honor guard snapped to salute. A scattered crowd cheered.

They stood there about four minutes, then went inside.

Cherry's eyes were moist.

During the parade, Scott tipped his top hat, but had trouble managing his cigar. He looked behind him to the car where his granddaughter rode.

As he left his car at the auditorium, 13-year-old Joan Piper of Raleigh ran up to him, shook his hand, and said:

"I'm certainly glad you're governor, Mr. Scott."

"I am, too," said Scott.

Watermelon Juice Helps Condition Of Stricken Boy in Crescent City

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 6—(UP)—The condition of little Joseph Duhy III, who has a grave kidney ailment, started to improve today on an emergency diet of watermelon juice.

But Dr. Leo Fisher, resident physician at Hotel (hospital) Dieu, declined to say whether the melons were responsible. Joseph started drinking melon juice yesterday after an all-night search for watermelons.

"They (the watermelons) may have helped," Dr. Fisher said, "but his general condition is good, although it is too early to say that he is recovering."

Watermelon juice was prescribed for Joseph because it helped in similar cases in New York. He had been growing steadily worse since he was stricken three weeks ago.

But finding the first watermelons was difficult. None could be found in New Orleans or in five cities around New Orleans. Then two state troopers remembered they had seen five in a fruit dealer's refrigerator 40 miles from New Orleans.

His parents were wondering yesterday where to find more watermelons when those five were gone. They were wondering tonight how to stop people from offering them watermelons.

"Please ask people not to offer us any more watermelons," Joseph's mother said. "It's wonderful, but we're getting so many telephone calls from all over the country that they are disturbing things at the hospital."

Neither Dr. Fisher nor Mrs. Duhy would say they think Joseph's life is saved. Nor would Dr. Fisher say specifically what his ailment is, although he said it is not uncommon.

He has an infection which prevents his kidneys from acting. Watermelon juice acts as a mild diuretic.

DU PONT—Digest
For Students of Science and Engineering

a giant on the farm

Du Pont agricultural specialist Dr. Arne Carlson, M.S., '40, Ph.D., U. of Minnesota, '48, helps develop sprays and dusts to control fungous diseases.

Products of the laboratory are saving time, toil, money for the American farmer

Through chemistry, farmers are gaining control over many of nature's uncertainties. Costly losses of crops and livestock are being curtailed or prevented. Efficiency is increasing. New applications of chemistry to agriculture are becoming more important than ever as demands for more production increase.

Today, new organic insecticides and fungicides help control insects, plant diseases and blights that threaten crops. Seed disinfectants and protectants help guarantee bountiful harvests by protecting crops in the critical period after planting. Plant hormones hold fruit on trees until fully ready for picking.

Days of labor saved

Du Pont weed killers and explosives accomplish in minutes tasks that used to take hours or days of back-breaking labor. With 2,4-D farmers can kill weeds without harming certain crops. Dynamite removes stumps, digs ditches for draining and irrigation, and loosens the soil to forestall erosion.

New fertilizer formulations meet the changing nutritional requirements of plants during the growing season. Thus the farmer has better control over crop development, and he can utilize his materials, labor and equipment more efficiently.

Feed compounds, developed by industry, are making poultry flocks and livestock herds vastly more productive. Research on chemicals to control animal diseases and internal parasites is making great progress. Control of insect pests is already changing livestock management practices.

Turning ideas into products

Achievements such as these are the result of Du Pont's team research. An idea may start with one or two individuals. But many specialists—chemists, physicists, biologists, plant pathologists, and entomologists—must contribute their skills before a new product is ready for market. Normally, engineers—chemical, mechanical, civil, and electrical—develop the commercial processes and plants for making the finished products.

The new Du Pont employee, whether he holds a bachelor's, master's, or doctor's degree, enters into this cooperative effort. Yet the immediate group with which he is associated is small and congenial, offering him every opportunity to display individual talent and capabilities.

Phenothiazine kills more kinds of livestock worms in more kinds of animals than any other drug . . . promotes normal growth.

For growth insurance, farmers treat seeds with disinfectants. "Ceresan" treated wheat gives up to 20% better yields.

Spraying orchards controls infestations of insects or plant diseases . . . or holds fruit on the trees until it is fully ready for picking.

Marshall Quits; Acheson Made New Secretary

Webb Takes Over Lovett's Position

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—(UP)—President Truman today accepted the resignation of ailing Secretary of State George C. Marshall, named Dean Acheson to succeed him, and firmly squelched any idea the change indicates a softer policy toward Russia.

The 55-year-old Acheson, one of the architects of the "cold war" against the Soviet Union, immediately promised to do his best to "carry out the President's policies" and to meet his "crushing responsibilities."

The new secretary declined to discuss specific foreign issues at this time. But he stands four-square behind the President's frequently-announced aim of working through the United Nations for eventual world peace.

The far-reaching shift, enforced by Marshall's failing health, also brought the resignation of Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett who will be succeeded by Budget Director James E. Webb. Lovett has guided foreign policy during Marshall's frequent absences.

Webb, who probably is closer to Mr. Truman than almost any other government official, also is a close friend of Acheson. He will be succeeded by Frank Pace, Jr., now Assistant Chief of the Budget Bureau and a government career man.

The resignations of the 68 year-old Marshall and Lovett were timed for Jan. 20, the day President Truman is inaugurated for his first elective term.

Marshall, war-time Chief of Staff, has wanted to shed his heavy responsibilities for some

Maceyko Is Named Head of Sigma Chi

Bill Maceyko was elected president of the Sigma Chi fraternity at the last meeting spokesmen for the fraternity announced yesterday.

Other officers elected were George Clark, vice-president; John Langley, secretary; Lee Keiger, treasurer; and Dixie Ward, pledge master. The new officers will serve until June.

Outgoing president and vice-president of the fraternity are Len Butts and Jack Thompson, respectively.

Officers for the pledge class are Ken Wright, president; Eddie Knox, secretary; and Alan Johnson, treasurer.

Playmakers On Tour With 'Scandal' Show

By Sam Hirsch

Backing away from their scene shop in a big, shiny bus Thursday afternoon, the Carolina Playmakers began the first leg of their 40th tour with a production of Richard Sheridan's "The School For Scandal," which they opened in High Point that evening.

Twenty young actors from the University, plus the director, Harry Davis; the business manager, John W. Parker, and the scenic designer, Lynn Gault, who is also acting, shared the roomy bus with the driver, luggage, overcoats, last-minute bundles, school books, and odds-and-ends of equipment, make-up, and props needed for their 10-day barnstorming trip to eight North Carolina towns and one stop at Spartanburg, S. C. They followed a large truck loaded with scenery and lighting equipment which had started early that morning.

Old timers, seeing the luxurious streamlined coach and happy players off, recalled "the good old days," when they toured with the late "Proff" Koch on old, shabby busses, so loaded down with scenery, electrical equipment, props, luggage and actors that the fenders practically scraped the ground, and the entire expedition resembled a Hollywood version of Steinbeck's version of the "Okies!"

Opening in High Point on Jan. 6, the trouping college players will subsequently take "The School For Scandal," called the wittiest play of the Restoration, to Gastonia on Jan. 7, Asheville Jan. 8, Statesville, Jan. 10, Spartanburg, Jan. 11, Buie's Creek, Jan. 12, Wilmington, Jan. 13, Rocky Mount, Jan. 14, and Goldsboro Jan. 15, thus completing the first tour the Carolina Playmakers have made since the war.

Plans Are Made For Paper Drive By High School

Students of the Chapel Hill high school will conduct a paper drive Sunday afternoon to obtain money for the local recreation center, Roy B. Barham, adult chairman of the drive, said yesterday.

Barham and Bill Bland, student chairman, requested that all residents of Chapel Hill place any scrap paper in front of their homes by 1:30 Sunday afternoon. Students using trucks furnished by the local merchants will pick up the paper.

The paper drive Sunday will be the third collection of scrap paper that the students have made this year to obtain money for the local recreation center which is maintained for high school students. All residents were urged to cooperate in the drive.

Milner Wins Top Position Of Kiwanians

Follows Hogan As President

Charles F. Milner succeeded W. S. Hogan as president of the Chapel Hill Kiwanis club at its regular weekly meeting in the Carolina Inn.

Other officers installed were Lonas Williams, secretary; Kenneth Putman, treasurer; and the following members of the board of directors: J. T. Gobbel, R. M. Gruman, Dr. John Riggsbee, T. A. Rosemond, F. E. Stroud, and R. S. Winslow.

Dr. W. P. Richardson of Chapel Hill, retiring lieutenant governor of the fifth district, and Dan Rader of Graham, the new lieutenant governor, officiated at the installation ceremonies.

Sooner Students Hit Racial Segregation

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 7.—(UP)—Negro and white students who picketed the state capitol to protest segregation in state colleges and universities charged today that "separate but equal education is a myth."

The students, including 40 from Langston university for Negroes and three from the University of Oklahoma, were joined by students from Oklahoma A & M and Phillips at a meeting of the Oklahoma Joint Equal Education committee after picketing yesterday.

NSA to Hold Foreign Tours Next Summer

Trips in Europe Planned for 500

Two low-cost student tri-nation tours of England, Holland and France scheduled to begin in July are now being planned for the coming summer by the International Commission of the United States National Student association.

The Harvard University- Radcliffe college NSA sub-commission, in charge of the tours, has reported that the six-week tour will cost each student approximately $550.

Operated by the NSA with the cooperation of the British, Dutch and French national unions of students, the tours will be non-profit with the aim of enabling students to carry on studies in their own fields and meet international students with similar interests.

The tour will be split into two groups, one a general interest group of about 45 students, the other more specialized group consisting of those interested in art, socio-economic problems and general interests. Because of the unexpected flood of applications for last year's tours, the capacity of this year's two tours will be approximately 500.

Students interested in this year's tour should contact Don Shropshire, chairman of the NSA campus committee, who will supply them with additional information and forward their applications to the Radcliffe college NSA office.

By passing over the usual tourist accomodations in an effort to make the tour worthwhile, American students will come into direct contact with foreign students and their families.

Pan-Hel Council To Adopt Child

The Pan-Hellenic council will adopt a foreign child through the Foster Parents for War Children, Ferne Hughes, president of the council, announced yesterday.

At the meeting held last Wednesday, plans were discussed for raising the money to support the child for one year.

Under this plan the five sororities will be responsible for the financial support of the child chosen by the Foster Parents for War Children and will send their collected contributions to supply food, clothing, medical aid, and education at a special school for displaced children.

The annual Pan-Hellenic dance, which will be held Saturday, March 26, will be a benefit dance to raise funds for the adoption.

Court Upholds Segregation In Chapel Hill Bus Incident

Men Convicted For Breaking Seating Laws

RALEIGH, Jan. 7.—(UP)—The North Carolina Supreme court today upheld the state's public carrier segregation law today in a case brought by two white men and two Negroes.

The court upheld the conviction of Andrew S. Johnson and Bayard Rustin, Negroes, and Igal Roodenko and Joseph A. Felmont. They had appealed from two lower courts where they were found guilty of sitting together on an intrastate bus.

The four were brought into court in Chapel Hill in April, 1947, after they refused to obey a busdriver who ordered them off an express bus bound from Raleigh to Charlotte.

The driver, Ned Leonard, testified that Johnson and Felmont had taken seats together in the front of the bus. When they refused to move apart he went for a police officer, Leonard said. On returning he found that Rustin and Roodenko also were sitting together.

Roodenko, only defense witness who appeared in the case, argued that they were en route from Danville, Va., and that the Interstate Commerce commission ruling against segregation applied to the case.

Chief Justice W. P. Stacy pointed out that the driver told the men they were on the wrong bus and offered to change their tickets, but they refused.

Roodenko's attorneys also contended that the North Carolina law was written to apply only to public carriers operating within cities.

That argument, said Tracy, was "without merit."

Roodenko denied in the Supreme court hearing that they made the trip expressly to test the law, though Stacy said it appeared to be a test case.

He listed his home as New Jersey, and said he was in the South as a representative of the "Fellowship of Reconciliation" working "to promote better understanding between the Negro and white races."

Western States To Get New Blow

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—(UP)—A new storm headed for Montana and Wyoming today on the heels of a great western blizzard that left 18 persons known dead and killed countless numbers of livestock.

Weather forecasters said, however, the new blow would be milder than the blizzard and bring lighter snow.

It was moving down from Canada to invade Montana and Wyoming late today. Colorado, a state hard hit in the blizzard, was expected to feel the new blow tomorrow night.

Forecasters said the weather generally was fair over the country. In the Midwest and plains states a "heat wave" sent the mercury soaring to as high as 50 degrees.

Banks Talley Elected To CP Chairmanship

BANKS TALLEY

Banks Talley, junior from Bennettsville, S. C., was unanimously elected chairman of the Campus party Wednesday night. Talley, a history major and member of the Student legislature, succeeds Jack Worsham of Ruffin as head of the party.

The post of vice-chairman went to Johnnie O'Neal, a junior from Middlesex and also a member of the Student legislature. He succeeds Ellis Hall in that post.

Davis Byrd, freshman from Goldsboro, was elected as secretary. Byrd, who was a candidate for the presidency of the freshman class in the November elections, succeeds Eloise Jacobi.

Re-elected to the post of party treasurer was Anies Daye, a junior from Winston-Salem. Daye ran for the Student legislature and the position of secretary for the junior class in the recent elections.

Harris Evans, freshman from Henderson, was re-elected as publicity chairman of the party.

Talley is also president of the Chi Psi pledge class and secretary of the Carolina forum.

SDA Discusses Proposed Meet On Civil Rights

Discussions for a Civil Rights conference to be conducted by Students for Democratic action were introduced to the group, meeting in Graham Memorial Thursday night.

The proposed project would bring together various groups of students from other universities. The meeting place would preferably be at Chapel Hill, however, there will be further discussions on the matter. Subject matter and the nature of the conference will also be chief factors in planning the meeting.

Nominations for the position of chairman of the group was postponed until the next meeting.

Bob Lindsay, named to succeed Charlie Sellers as chairman, announced his resignation at the meeting last night.

Baptists Secure Guest Speakers For Programs

James Street, Norman Cordon, George Kelsey and Paul Green will be guest speakers for the Baptist supper forum's January programs the forum said yesterday. "Religion Speaks Through Many Voices" will be the theme for the month.

Street, first of the speakers will discuss "Religion and Literature" Sunday night at 6 o'clock. Metropolitan Opera star Norman Cordon, now living in Chapel Hill, will speak Jan. 16 on "Religion and Music."

On Jan. 23 George Kelsey, well-known Negro educator, will discuss the "Negro's Contribution to the Arts." Paul Green, last of the speakers will speak Jan. 30 about drama in connection with religion.

Don Shropshire and William Koehnline are co-chairmen of the program committee.

Crescent Cops Clamp Down On Bourbon Street Strippers

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 7.—(UP)—Superintendent of Police A. A. Watters summoned 50 French Quarter nightclub operators to a closed meeting today and warned them that Bourbon street strip teasers are putting more into their bumps and grinds than the law allows.

Watters said they could either restrain the girls or the police would. He said that not all nightclub operators are running "lewd and lascivious" shows, but some are to "frantically compete for diminishing dollars."

He also prohibited: (1) Sidewalk barkers; (2) Signs "showing nude, semi-nude or suggestive pictures. (3) Pennants across the street "giving the impression of a ship in distress," and (4) Pandering taxicab drivers.

"We don't want to make the Quarter a Boston Common, nor do we believe it is good community advertising to permit this area to degenerate into the atmosphere of a cheap, noisy bawdy house," he said.

Watters had hardly dismissed the nightclub operators' meeting when the State Alcohol Beverage Control board announced it had served summonses against two Bourbon street establishments.

Two policemen complained that a place called "Sloppy Joe's" had permitted Evelyn West, an entertainer, to perform a "suggestive dance with a dummy." Miss West has been advertised in New Orleans newspapers as the "girl with

Rendezvous Room Being Renovated; Other Changes Taking Place in GM

While a few wise students renovated themselves with a bit of sleep during the holidays, Graham Memorial also received a facelifting job, with the aid of scrub brush and elbow grease.

The ceiling of the main lounge, the entrance hall, and the Rendezvous have been restored to their original shade of off-white, and operations are still under-way for the complete redecoration of the Rendezvous room. The most useful part of the job, said Arnold Wilson, is the extension of the stage.

Upstairs changes in the office arrangement include the partitioning of a new room to house the travel agency. With its enlarged office capacity, the agency has also extended its hours. The new room has been set up next door to the DTH business office.

As added protection against fire hazards, five fire extinguishers have been placed at various points about the building. Director Bob Watson recently urged students to be more careful about disposing of their cigarettes in the building to cut down on the possibility of possible fires.

TMA Plans New Membership Drive; Officers Are Elected at Last Meeting

Publicity for the present membership drive, election of several club officers and the adoption of a new order of business for future meetings featured the meeting of the Town Men's association Wednesday afternoon. Attendance was termed as "good" in response to the 500 letters sent during the past week to men living in town.

Plans were completed to have representatives of the TMA on hand at the Y during the hours 8:30 to 1 o'clock Monday through Wednesday of next week when new members will be signed up.

In the election for treasurer Ralph Hebb was given the position, replacing Bud Freeman, who resigned. In a contest for University club representative from TMA, John Van Heck defeated two opponents for reelection to the post.

The meeting adjourned after a resolution was adopted to cooperate with the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Chapel Hill and Carrboro in a move to improve restaurant facilities of the two towns. A representative of the JC's will be present at the Thursday meeting of the association to discuss further plans for cooperation.

Strange Writing Holds Up Professor En Route Here

By Mike McDaniel

Holding in his hand a photostat of what might have been copies of subversive literature in cipher, the customs officer at the docks in New York growled, "I can't read this!" A heavy English accent, belonging to Charles J. Sisson, distinguished paleographer and Lord Northcliffe professor of Modern English at the University of London, answered frankly, "Of course you can't!" Dr. Sisson obligingly translated. (By the way, a paleographer is a man who can read ancient writings, inscriptions, and can figure out where they came from and when and by whom. sometimes, they were written.)

After two hours with customs, Dr. Sisson succeeded in convincing them that the strange writings were copies of original manuscripts recently discovered, and were on their way with him (as a letter from Chancellor R. B. House indicated) to Chapel Hill, where they would form the principal materials for a seminar this winter in Elizabethan Literature.

Dr. Sisson and his wife, living now at the Carolina inn, have made several visits to the United States, but he says what with customs and the blizzard in New York, he never had such a hard time getting in. He was very eager to come to the University, as he is an old friend of Dr. Hardin Craig, at whose request he came here.

Also, much of the material he has discovered pertains to colonial America, particularly the South.

Students taking English 310, will be given these photostats to decipher, and then they will write articles concerning them which Dr. Sisson hopes to incorporate into a book on these new discoveries. Among the manuscripts are some interesting new facts on dramatist George

Letter to a Car Owner

Dear Florida 2-20241:

I barely had time to catch your license number as you whipped by me and my model T on the Raleigh road the other afternoon.

Now, don't misunderstand me, I noted your license plate number only because I should like to see how long you manage to drive like that and get away with it. Of course I must in all honesty say it wasn't too dark, and the road wasn't too slippery from the rain, but I couldn't help but feel that if only you had blown your horn I might have saved you the fright you must have gotten (or did you?) when you pulled abreast of my T only to find the road blocked by an oncoming car.

Later when you did get past I had to admire the speed which your car developed. By the way, did you notice the ambulance you passed down by Paul Green's place? I wondered if the driver wasn't looking for you . . .

I have always been one to admire modesty in a man, but there is a time for blowing your own horn . . . particularly on a narrow road . . .

RAMESES

P. S. That blue parking sticker on your car assured me that you were one of my boys.

There Is No Comparison

It has been a practice of the Communist party members of late to draw comparisons between themselves and the founders of our nation. It seems that George Washington and his followers were revolutionists and the Communist party is also revolutionist. On the basis of this, Communists find that they are of the same ilk, with time the only ingredient necessary to place them on the same plane. This identifying themselves with the revered founders of our nation is misleading and absurd.

The ancestors of this country were men who fought for a change of government and so also are the Communists, but the main, the important difference lies in the type government each group personifies. We, in America, believe that the Four Freedoms are essential to our life and happiness and we believe that any system that denies these is inherently bad. By our criteria, Russia and her political philosophy represent the crushing of these freedoms we hold so essential, and therefore represent a change of government which, for us, would be regressive.

Our forefathers lived under a system that approached tyranny, and they revolted when they felt their inherent rights had been violated. They replaced a monarchy with a republic and guaranteed those rights to the people of this country, an undeniably progressive step. They succeeded so well that the Write-Away column will probably carry letters attacking their political beliefs and advocating the return to the Dark Ages of tyranny under a banner carrying new slogans but still supported by mental and physical slavery.

This propaganda trick of identification with what we hold dear should not confuse anyone, for the difference is vast and deep and the recognition of this difference by the people of this country is necessary if it is to remain as its founders dreamed.—B.L.

Nellie and the Coffee Cup

Little Nellie, neat and shy,
Bought some coffee in the Y
And with a candy bar in hand
In the Y court took her stand.
Candy finished, coffee gone,
She tossed the cup upon the lawn.
Forty dozen others, too,
(One of whom was likely you)
Dropped their litter on the grass,
Which can no more be seen, alas.
The moral here we clearly paint—
Grass is pretty, refuse ain't.

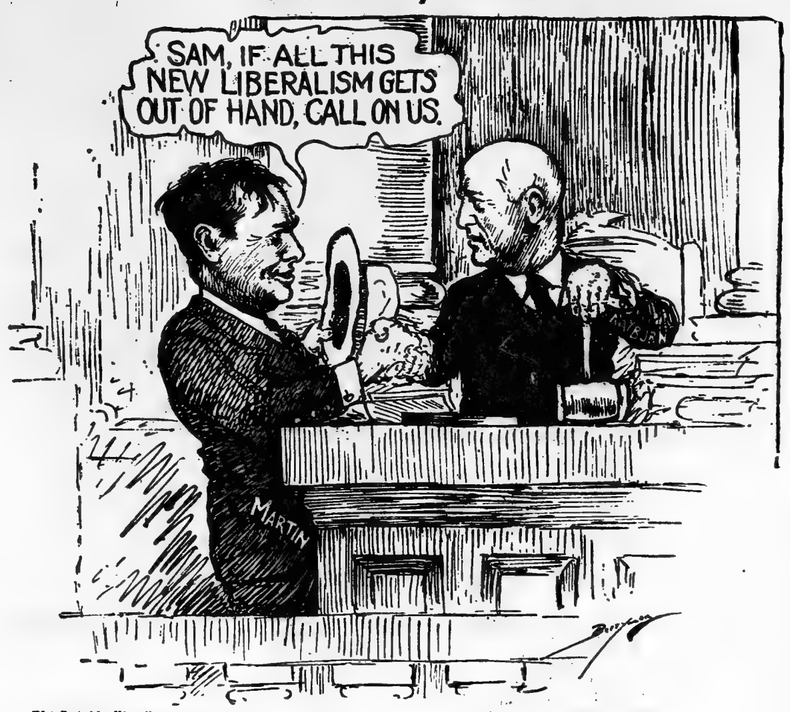
I have told you of the man who always put on his spectacles when about to eat cherries, in order that the fruit might look larger and more tempting. In like manner I always make the most of my enjoyments, and, though I do not cast my eyes away from troubles, I pack them into as small a compass as I can for my self, and never let them annoy others.—Robert Southey.

Drive to Open

WSSF's Goal $5,000 Here

By Charlie Gibson

The World Student Service Fund that contributed $517,428.68 of American money towards meeting war-created needs of students throughout the world will challenge the University next week with a week-long drive to surpass its $5,000 contribution last year.



WSSF is the United States component of World Student Relief, an international charity that operated all during the past war to relay financial aid from students in fifteen countries to their fellow students in twenty more badly devasted nations everywhere. Although the U.S. was economically able to give slightly more than half of the money in 1948, other small countries did contribute substantially. Little Switzerland, for example, gave 503,457.40 Swiss francs or $118,460.56.

From WSR headquarters in Geneva went tons of bean milk to reenforce student diets in China, hundreds of microscopes to reopen valuable scientific laboratories all over Asia, countless sets of mimeographed notes crudely bound together as books for awakening German intellectuals; and specially trained social workers to carry medical aid, clothing, and impromptu housing.

These bare essentials went to student victims of the Chittagong floods in India, to Burma students holding classes temporarily in bamboo and coconut leaf huts, to Japan where thirty per cent of the 72,000 students in 58 universities are returned prisoners of war. In Poland 50,000 vitamin tablets were distributed from hospitals and rest centers to combat tuberculosis. In Rumania WSR hostels accommodated 5,832 youths who studied by candlelight because they could not afford to pay the tax on electricity.

University expression will come next week when University students are informed of WSSF work by door-to-door solicitors, when a charity beauty contest will be staged to name a coed "Miss Pay-Off," when the faculty good-naturedly volunteers to participate in a daffy auction of peculiar personal services. In brief, funds will go from a student here to a student somewhere abroad whenever a University Tar Heel realizes that "A contribution TODAY is an investment in TOMORROW."

Proms Now a Big Business

Colleges Start Dance Trends

By Jay L. Michaels

NEW YORK, N.Y.—Several name bandleaders are out to cure the ills that exist in the dance business. Paying particular attention to college engagements, these progressive maestri have been collecting information from dancers and buyers wherever they appear. The consensus of opinion is that whatever problem exists was brought on by the bands themselves.

Showing the way during recent months have been trumpeter Ray Anthony and pianist Elliot Lawrence, the latter an all-time prom favorite. Both leaders claim that they have found the answer to successful campus engagements. Anthony, with 41 prom dates in 1948 and Lawrence, with 89, are fully qualified to speak on the subject.

Says Anthony, "You have got to provide more than just music. The days when nineteen guys sat on a bandstand and played for their own amusement are over. From now we'll have to please the dancers.

"I've got my orchestra doing everything but cartwheels during a dance. We play, we sing, we march and we even smile (an unusual feature in music today). In every arrangement the accent is on tempo so that even while we entertain the dancers can have their way. After all, who knows what the public wants more than the public itself."

Lawrence is unquestionably the prom leader among all name bands. He was voted tops twice in the Billboard Magazine Campus Poll. The University of Pennsylvania graduate has played to more than 350,000 students in the three years he's been touring the college beat.

"Music today is better than at any time during the past twenty years," says Elliot. "Popular bands are improving their styles and arrangers are showing more versatility than ever before. But much of this improvement has not been directed at the dancing public. Bebop and progressive jazz are not danceable in their present forms. The 'new music' as played by the jazz enthusiasts is intended for concert audiences.

"The greatest reason I can give for my band's success on prom dates is our steady beat. We play the modern, slower tempos that the younger crowd endorses. In my position I must look to the college dancers for most of my popularity. The least we can do is play what the people want when they want it."

Anthony and Lawrence are not the only bandleaders who have been keeping tabs in dancing trends. Ray McKinley, second to Elliot in total prom dates during '47 and '48, has claimed that "the college dancers have consistently set the trends. The college students are the best judges of modern music."

Johnny Long, who started his band at Duke University, has been a leading prom favorite for years. Quoth Long, "When I stop taking an interest in what the people want and start playing what my personal tastes might be, it will be time to write an epitaph to the career of one Johnny Long."

Hal McIntyre—"Let's cut out the comedy and settle down. Real jazz belongs in the concert halls. All I'm interested in selling is dance music, entertainment, tempo and melody."

Frankie Carle—"So they call me corny. I'm making a lot more money than the knocked-out cats on 52nd Street."

Jimmy Dorsey—"When they call out for Amapola and Green Eyes, I don't think it's fair to play some wild flag-waver that scares 'em off the floor."

Stan Kenton has been selling non danceable "Progressive Jazz." He gave up his band this month to crusade for "Halls Of Jazz" where fans can enjoy unadulterated bop and Kentonia without being hampered by a dance floor. Says Stan, "I am not against dancing. But my music has to be heard to be enjoyed and I cannot show to best advantage when there are a multitude of side-features to detract from my performances. I owe the college kids a vote of thanks for the confidence they have given me. I'd like to play all the college dates there are, but it wouldn't be fair to sell Stan Kenton's music for a prom. We'll play the auditoriums and field houses in concerts. Let those who are best qualified take the responsibilities of a dance date.

"Music must be broken up into three categories now. Classical, popular and jazz are the basic trio. The jazz bands and instrumentalists should be sold as such and not as dance artists who neither like nor feel popular music."

Of course there are the reactionaries. They want to go on year after year playing the same things in the same way. But the progressive element is running them out. The day of reckoning has come in popular music and the colleges and universities are being used as the examples. For the first time in ten years popular music is being given back to the people.

Outlook Gloomy?

Student Governments in U. S. Are Failing

By Dick Heggie, Vice President, National Students Association, in charge of Student Government work

In a student election held at one large university last month the total vote recorded represented less than one-fourth of the eligible student body. If this event were an isolated one, there would not be great cause to worry. But such a vote was typical of too many United States colleges and universities.

Only in the small, tightly-knit school has the vote normally been relatively large, but in view of the character of the particular student governments such votes do not necessarily indicate that the students have an awareness of their privileges and responsibilities.

The causes of student apathy lie not only with the individual student, but must also be attributed to the failure of student and faculty leaders to develop in the student an understanding of the importance of his campus institutions.

This failure is built upon the following specific deficiencies:

1. THE STUDENT LEADER too often places himself on a plane above that of the average student. The leader groups are so often concerned with their own particular problems that the students as individuals are forgotten. The leader becomes an unreal and sometimes a vacuous figure to the people whom he is supposed to represent.

2. THE STUDENT GOVERNMENT too often devotes itself to activities in which the bulk of the students is relatively uninterested. This condition has become especially apparent with the great influx to the campus of veterans who are primarily devoted to acquiring a classroom education.

3. THE STUDENT LEADER is too often inadequately trained to properly handle his responsibilities. He does not understand that immature leadership becomes mature only with basic grounding in the more elementary branches of campus activities and with counsel and guidance from experienced advisors.

4. THE ADMINISTRATION too often so restricts student government in its activities that its very nomer is a farce Administrators from such schools fail to realize that student leaders must have responsible positions to develop a sense of responsibility and that students can only learn democracy by practicing democracy.

5. THE FACULTY is too often indifferent or even scornful toward the extra-curricular affairs of students. Many professors consider such activities to be mere froth on the deep oceans of formalized education. They lack the insight to detect that within the context of student government, athletics, and their related programs theoretical classroom knowledge can be directly applied, and thus the educational whole, that should be the true goal of the college, achieved.

The inadequacies cited must be eliminated if student governments are to become more than the playthings of the few.

Every student and every educator interested in the development of a more intelligent and aware citizenry must redouble his efforts toward such elimination if his hopes are to reach fruition. The NSA stands ready at all times to assist and promote these efforts.

These Days

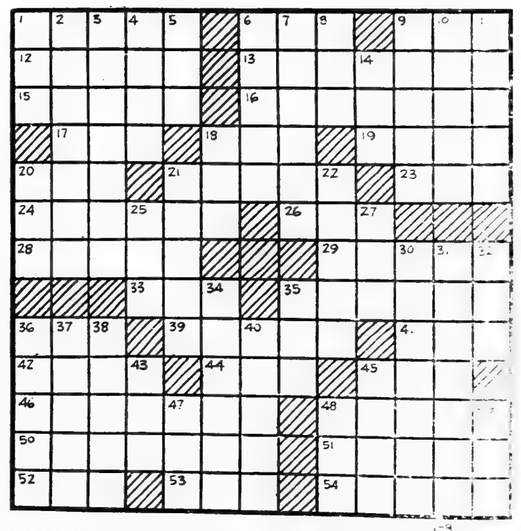
Communism in Unions

By George E. Sokolsky

The International Ladies Garment Workers Union has organized itself for social service to its own members. This has been variously interpreted, but the outsider need only view the fact that its officials are more amenable to its members than is usual in a unionism which has been invaded by racketeers, used by politicians and which has often become the private business of its officials. The I.L.G.W.U. is not like that.

The leader of this union is David Dubinsky who possesses the usual qualities of statesmanship. He is an old-fashioned social democrat, which makes him violently anti-Communist and sometimes leads him far afield into European politics. Yet the money his union spends fighting Communism in such countries as Italy and Poland is better spent than lots of funds other unions spend in ways less commendable. One may be critical of such extra-mural activities without failing to recognize that American unions are reservoirs of capital which need siphoning off lest they become too large and therefore dangerous.

So, in the discussion of the amendments to the Taft-Hartley act, Dubinsky jumped the gun with a constructive program which realistically recognizes first, that labor unions, like corporations, cannot exist in an anarchy; secondly, that many phases of the Taft-Hartley act are beneficial to labor as well as management and need to be retained; and finally that those to which the labor unions object must not be completely abandoned unless for them are substituted measures which protect the American system of government by law.



While many will quarrel with this or that phase of his proposals, the fact that his offering admits the need for regulation seeks to protect the United States from sabotage and whimsical disorganized non-production, forces a recognition of his sense of responsibility and statesmanship. It is particularly encouraging to find a labor leader courageously facing not the fact of the November election but the welfare of the United States in troubled times.

Before anyone can honestly make up his mind on the Taft-Hartley act and what should be done about it, he should read the "report of the Joint Committee on Labor-Management Relations" made to the congress of the United States. This is a report on how the Taft-Hartley act actually performed up-to-date, in detail. For instance, on the subject of strikes, the comparison between 1947 and 1948, the period when the act was in existence, shows a marked gain; also wages increased; union membership increased; the Communist control of unions lessened. On the subject of the non-Communist affidavit, the report states:

"Despite the protests by many union leaders and officials against the act, and against the filing requirements, accompanied by a threat of concerned refusal to file affidavits and registration statements, it is to be noted that no such boycott of the National Labor Relations Board and of the procedures of the law has occurred. Officers of a large majority of labor organizations have complied with the filing requirements.

The question of Communist infiltration and control of unions is as important as their widespread influence in the state department. Communist unions can cripple us at the outset of the next war, depriving this country of the initiative in the most critical moments of the beginning of hostilities. For instance, control of the electrical equipment industry and the transportation industries by Communist unions, partisans of our enemy, could, at the outset of a war, leave this country helpless for a sufficient period to produce defeat.

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

The Last Bit of Hash

THE ONE THING most people don't like about holiday dinners is the hash you have to put up with for the days that follow. And about the same thing goes for holiday athletic contests which announces this to be a final rehash of the Sugar bowl and the 1948 Carolina football team.

Carolina's latest bowling venture didn't quite turn out as well as the 1947 junket did from the apparent looks of things. The Tar Heels gained prestige last time in being tripped by Charlie Trippi on a brilliant assist by some hazing officiating. This time around they gained little more than experience. A bad afternoon produced few good clippings for the scrapbooks.

The two showings on the same hallowed ground in the span of three years has motioned a horde of people to the thought that maybe you don't make much more than sugar playing post-season games in the first place. Win or lose, bowl contests seem to be a tedious and tremendous task for a single extra afternoon of New Year's football.

The Sugar Was Sweet

ALL THIS ANTI-BOWL talk is no reflection on the homespun hospitality of the Sugar Bowlers who played host as if they had invented the word. New Orleans greeted the Tar Heels with open arms and bars. Everybody bent over backwards to the wants and needs of Carolina fans and footballers—everybody from Bowl President Frank Schaub right down to the Cat Girl.

But most of the enjoyment of the Bowl—the night clubbing, and partying isn't part of the daily dozen of a training footballer. The Tar Heel gridders spent their hours right up to game time on the training fields of Hammond, which has wonderful food and followers, but not much to hold the interest of vacationing college men. Christmas means home and home is the place where you hang your hat, not your helmet.

Then there is the extra month of practice that a bowl game requires. That is not only a drain on the physical and mental attitude of the gridders, but doesn't help their efforts for the campus' academaniacs. Carolina's 1947 football team suffered from its bowl appearance of the previous season. They were obvious overfootballized with pigskins running out of their ears, the result of trying to make football a year-round occupation.

The Circus Parade

THE BOWL TRIP is not only hard on the players but the staff of the University as well. It is no easy problem wheeling a team the size of Carolina's around the countryside especially when you travel in the bulk and style that the Tar Heels do. Travel a trip with the locals to a bowl and you begin to appreciate what must go on back stage at the circus.

The Tar Heels have all Ringling Brothers' problems. There are ticket problems—both for transportation and the game itself, food problems, housing worries and a million little problems that even a thousand Mr. Anthonies would have trouble solving. There just isn't enough of anything to take care of everybody. Someone always gets lost in the shuffle.

The solution, it would seem, is one the Tar Heels seem to be working towards—the playing of the schedule strong enough to make a bowl game totally anti-climatic. Ten good games of football a season should settle the most avid of football appetites.

The University faculty may settle the entire question once and for all in its quarterly meeting this winter. The profs, who may be wiser at times than some may think, might refuse to pass the post-season question for the future. The bowl course has been a pretty one for the Tar Heels.

Winners and Sinners

EVERYBODY LOVES A WINNER, but a sinner is quite a different story. The fans don't worry when the points are going up on the right side of the score board, but lose one game and people start thinking—which is a big mistake for the majority of fans and sports writers. Some contend that the Tar Heels never played quite up to capacities after the Texas game. Others say the team never did reach its pigskin pinnacle.

Talk is cheap, but from the depths of the football team itself come a few possible answers to many of the questions. The Texas game was the one game of the year that the Tar Heels were the underdog. They were expected to win the others. There was nothing creditable to do but be a continual winner—a difficult task in this day and time. Then the locals lost Don Hartig, their No. 1 blocking back, in the Georgia game. Though the Tar Heels remained equipt with a group of capable blocking backs, Hartig's loss was never replaced. Fred Sherman, a promised hand, next went to the sidelines and with him a little more polish from the Tar Heel grid machine. So it went all season.

Yet, probably the greatest contributing factor to any measurable degree of disappointment caused by the Carolina football team was sized up by a regular lineman who offered, "We were mostly seniors who haven't had to hustle the way we should. Maybe some of us have been playing college football a little too long. It is not that we didn't want to play, but they knock some of that fire out of you after three or four years of it." The fire was dim and cold at times.

What's Ahead?

WHAT THE FUTURE holds for Tar Heel football requires a crystal ball that can run, kick and pass itself. Gone will be over a dozen and a half of the gentlemen who have been regular members of the 22 who offensively and defensively have held down the fort and the score for Carolina and reap much of the glory, story for the past three years.

Moving up to the big time where they hit a little harder and run a little faster, will be the Tar Heel's great freshman team of the past fall together with some talented sophomores who held the varsity bench last fall mostly out of respect for their elders of the field. Coach Snavely looks no more worried than usual and you can almost read promising signs between the lines in his forehead.

Cagers, Swimmers Meet Foes On Road

VPI Is Opponent For Scott's Club In Loop Contest

By Frank Allston

Carolina's once-defeated cagers will attempt to get back into the win column tonight when they meet the Virginia Tech five at Blacksburg, Va., at 8 o'clock.

Fresh from a 72-48 trouncing by the NYU quint in Madison Square Garden Thursday night, the Tar Heels are expected to be at top strength and are favored in this Southern conference contest. The Tar Heels have won seven of eight games while the Gobblers are in the midst of a poor season.

The Carolina hardwooders will probably present a starting lineup of Coy Carson and Hugo Kappler at the forwards, Nemo Nearman in the pivot position and Dan Nyimicz and Rip Ryan, guards.

Same Starters

Coach Tom Scott has stuck with this quint of starters throughout the season and his team has been successful to the extent of maintaining an .850 winning percentage. Scott tried out freshman Howard Deasy at both guard and center, but decided to string along with the starting five.

Carson, Asheville's gift to the cagers, is the team's leading scorer with 123 points in eight games, an average of 15.38 per game. Trailing Carson in this department are Nearman, 79; Nyimicz, 65; Kappler, 64; Ryan, 52 and Tsantes, 24.

In Good Shape

The team is in good physical shape with no major injuries to report. Carson apparently has recovered from his sprained ankle received in the Camellia bowl and reinjured against Maryland.

Scott's boys will go into tonight's game with one victory against no defeats in conference competition as a result of their 55-47 win over Maryland. VPI has already dropped two conference contests, to George Washington and Maryland.

Tonight's game marks the first of a series of nine conference games for the Tar Heels. After a non-conference tilt with Tennessee, the Tar Heels have another string of eight league games carded.

Untested in League

The Tar Heels still are practically untested in conference play, but are not considered as contenders for the title in many quarters.

If the Tar Heels can dump Tech tonight and then follow with a victory over George Washington on Monday, they will up their stock both in the eyes of the experts and in the conference standings.

DEADLINE CHANGED

The deadline for entries in the dormitory division of the intramural handball tourney has been moved to Monday to afford time for entry. A record number of fraternity teams are already entered but as yet few dormitories and other organizations have entered teams.

Two Alleged 'Bribers' Out After Judge Reduces Bail

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—(UP)—Two of the four men accused of attempting to "fix" a basketball game at Madison Square garden were free on $20,000 bail today as a grand jury prepared to hear testimony again in the case from detectives from the office of District Attorney Frank Hogan.

Jack Levy of Miami, Fla., and William Rivlin of New York, two of the defendants, took advantage of a reduction in bail made yesterday by supreme court justice Ferdinand Pecora. The original bail was $50,000 each.

Joseph Aronowitz and Philip Klein of Brooklyn, were still in the tombs and apparently unable to raise bail.

The quartet, charged by Hogan with offering a $1,000 bribe to co-captain Dave Shapiro of the George Washington university basketball team to "throw" a game, are scheduled for a hearing on Jan. 11.

Six detectives and police officials testified before the grand jury yesterday, but Hogan said several more witnesses were still to be heard and an indictment could not be handed down before next week.

Hogan said it now was doubtful the four defendants had been involved in any other bribery deals. He said he had obtained no evidence that they were part of a national syndicate.

The four are charged with offering Shapiro $1,000 if his team would lose last Tuesday night's game to Manhattan college "by 18 or 19 points." However, Shapiro had been working with Hogan's office since Sept. 2, and reported the offer immediately. George Washington won the game, 71-63.

Western Grid Stock on Rise

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7.—(UP)—The pendulum is swinging upward in Pacific coast football and it will reach the peak again in the next two years, according to a poll of coaches at the NCAA convention taken today by the United Press.

Some of them believed that the post-war decline of grid power in the west was caused by the fact that so many schools out this way discontinued the game during the war; others that the "losing cycle" that hits all areas finally had caught up with the west.

"No question about it," said Harry Stuhldreher, director of athletics at University of Wisconsin. "The Notre Dame-USC tie game this year proved it. And so did the Northwestern-California Rose bowl tilt and Oregon's showing—although hampered by tough luck—in the Cotton bowl against Southern Methodist."

Lou Little, chairman of the NCAA rules committee and long-time head coach of Columbia university, was one of those who believed that the slump in standard of play in the west was just part of a cycle.

"If you will recall," said Little, "a few years ago—before the war—the west was knocking over everybody. At that time I heard comments that the east and mid-west never again would catch the far west in football power. But it's just one of those cycles—and it looks like the west is coming back again. At least the showings in the Rose bowl and the Notre Dame-USC game indicate that."

Strong Keydets Oppose Carolina In Second Meet

LEXINGTON, Va., Jan 7—The Carolina swimming team will meet the Keydets of VMI here tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. This will be the second dual meet of the season for the Tar Heels.

Coach Ralph Casey's mermen won their initial meet of the season against Duke by the score of 58-17. The Tar Heels are the defending Southern conference champions and have another strong outfit this year.

Although the Tar Heels will be favored tomorrow, the Keydets are expected to furnish them ample competition. The military boys always have a capable squad.

VMI gave the Tar Heels their closest competition last year when they met Carolina in Chapel Hill. The Keydets held the high scoring Carolinians to the score of 51-24.

Casey Former VMI Coach

Carolina's Coach Casey is well acquainted with the VMI squad, for he formerly coached the military boys. The outstanding swimmers for the Keydets are "Skip" Stephens, a sprinter, and Macon Michaux, a backstroker.

The Tar Heels arrived here tonight at 6 o'clock and are quartered in the local gym. After eating supper, the boys from Carolina moved over to the pool for a light workout.

Two of the Carolina stars failed to make the trip and another is a doubtful starter. Jerry Cook who has had the flu did not return to Chapel Hill 'till Thursday and failed to make the trip. Cook will be replaced by Charles Bartlett.

Osborne Injured

Steve Osborne pulled a leg muscle and will be replaced by the veteran star, Jesse Greenbaum who is beginning to round into shape. Jim Thomas has had a fever for the past few days and is a doubtful starter tomorrow.

In a preliminary engagement the Tar Babies will tangle with the VMI freshmen. Coach Ousley's freshmen will be seeking their initial win of the season.

The Tar Babies have been strengthened by the enrollment of two promising newcomers. They are Fack Cohen of Chapel Hill and Arthur Greenbaum, brother of Jesse, of Baltimore.

UNC Freshman Quintet Bows To Duke, 60-42

By Buddy Vaden

Following in the footsteps of the varsity squad, Carolina's Frashman quintet met defeat last night after an extended winning streak of four games. It was the flashy crew from Duke that gave the Tar Babies the taste of defeat to the tune of a 60-42 thumping.

The Tar Babies, paced by high scoring John Bowersox, stepped into an early lead as Bowersox sank one from the floor after 30 seconds had elapsed. But Duke tied it all up at five-all after three minutes had elapsed. Then for the remainder of the half it was a nip and tuck affair with the Blue Imps ahead one minute and the Carolina lads in the lead the next minute.

As the halftime gun sounded, Duke was in command with a five point lead, the score at 27-22.

Carolina Opens Up

Carolina again opened the scoring in the final period as Bowersox again was the first to hit the nets after 35 seconds with a set shot.

Then the Blue Imps started pouring it on the shorter Tar Heel Juniors and after six minutes had gone the Durham squad had mustered an eight point margin and proceeded to widen the gap with exceptionally accurate set shots from way out.

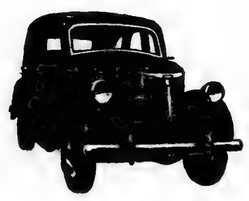
With only three minutes left the Blue Imps had hit the nets for 56-points, while holding the fading Carolinians to 35. As the final gun sounded the Blue Imps had an 18-point, 60-42 lead and the fifth consecutive of the season to their credit.

High Scoring Honors

High scoring honors for the game went to Duke's Dick Crowder, a forward. He scored 19 points, to edge out Carolina's Bowersox, who tallied 17.

Tar Heel forward Buddy Johnson collected 14 markers while Duke's Bill Fleming and Larry Ashley collected ten each.

Next game on the Carolina Freshman schedule is next Monday when they meet Louisburg Junior college in a return engagement that will preceed the varsity game with George Washington.



The Summary:

Carolina	Pos.	Duke
Johnson (14)	F	Fleming (10)
Harder (5)	F	D. Crowder (19)
Guyes (1)	C	Allen (6)
Bowersox (17)	G	Groat (3)
E. Crowder	G	Ashley (10)

Substitutions: Carolina — Redding (3), Godwin (2). Duke—Ginsburg (3), Brown (2), Kurzrock (4), Kulpan (3).

Score at half: Duke 27, Carolina 22.

Officials: Murray and Mills.

Federal Education Aid Bill Is Introduced By Senators

Bill Would Give $5-25 Per Pupil To Needy States

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—(UP)—A bipartisan Senate group has introduced legislation to provide federal aid to states for education.

Allotments would range from $5 per child annually in well-to-do states to $25 in poorer states. The bill would specifically prohibit federal interference in direction of state school systems.

The Senate passed such a bill last year but it died in the House.

Another bill introduced by Sen. Clinton P. Anderson (D.—N.M.), former agriculture secretary, is aimed at making it easier to import farm workers from South and Central America.

Other new bills included:

Rep. A. Leonard Allen (D.-La.): To increase by 25 per cent all pensions received by World War I and World War II veterans and their dependents.

Rep. Henry D. Larcade, Jr. (D.-La.): To build a post office building in Dequincy, La., not to cost more than $100,000.

Snowbound Pair Finds It Can't Keep Out Cold

(EDITORS NOTE: A Snow plow cut through mountainous snowdrifts on highway 36, east of Denver, last night and found Phil Dewing, 23, Denver Painter and Myrla Dodero, 17, high school senior huddled in a 1937 Ford convertible coupe in which they had been marooned for 45-hours. The young people were "cold and hungry" after three days on a diet of animal crackers and marshmallows, but otherwise were unharmed. Miss Dodero told the United Press the following story after rescue:

By Myrla Dodero

As told to the United Press

DENVER, Jan. 7.—It was almost fun sitting there in the ditch with Phil until we ran out of gas. We kept the motor running and with the two blankets in the car, we kept plenty warm. But after the gas ran out we didn't have any heater and I started to get scared.

When we left Elba, Colo., at 7:30 Sunday evening we thought we could make it home to Denver. It wasn't snowing badly, but when we got to Lindon it was almost blinding. They told us there that snowplows were going through, so we started on. But 13 miles east of Cabin Creek we hit a big drift and slid into the ditch.

The snow started piling up on the car, and pretty soon it was all covered except the left hand window. We could see out a little, but we couldn't see anything except snow.

After the motor died Phil said he would walk to Cabin Creek for help. He said it was about three miles and he thought he could make it. He climbed out and started, but he hadn't walked more than 50 feet until he was all covered with snow.

He came back to the car and I sure was glad to see him. Even though he hadn't been gone long and was in sight all the time it made me awfully lonely.

Then we just wrapped up in the blankets and huddled together to keep warm. Phil talked to me most of the time to keep me from getting scared. I didn't think much about freezing to death there, and I was sure that they'd find us Monday. What really worried me was what my parents would think when I didn't get home.

(Myrla's parents began calling the highway patrol and various towns along the young couple's route Sunday night to see if they could locate the pair. Monday morning her father and Phil's father left Denver to search but were themselves snowed in at Strasburg.)

All day Monday we tried to keep warm. At times we even sat on each other's feet to keep them from freezing.

About 6 p. m. we decided there was nothing to do but try to get some sleep. We couldn't sleep more than a few minutes at a time, and when we were awake we were afraid of freezing.

When we got hungry we remembered that my grandmother, whom we had been visiting Sunday, had put in a box of animal crackers and some marshmallows for my four-year-old sister. They lasted until late Monday and we ate snow for our thirst. We had nothing to eat all day Tuesday.

We had just about given up hope when the highway department reached us. We could hear the snowplow coming for an hour. Several times we imagined we heard something, but we knew this time it was really it.

When the snowplow reached us Phil had to climb out the window to show them where we were. When they pulled us out we had been in Phil's car for 45 hours. We got home about 9 p. m.—very tired, but very happy.

On the way home we stopped in Strasburg for food and it made us both ill. I'm all right now. Just a little stiff and sore, but no complaints otherwise.

Practice Hours Of Dance Group Are Announced

The Saturday meeting of the University dance group will be held from 3 to 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, rather than from 10 to 12 o'clock in the morning as is usual. The change in hours, a temporary one, is necessary because of Saturday classes.

Regular practices of the dance group, in addition to the Saturday one, are held Tuesday and Thursday afternoons from 4 to 6 o'clock in Memorial hall. Foster Fitz-Simons, assistant director of the Carolina Playmakers, is the director. The assistant director is Bill Hooks. Fitz-Simons danced professionally for several years with the internationally-known Ted Shawn group.

the $50.000 treasure chest."

Another place was accused of selling watered liquor. The Alcohol Control board can't make nightclubs clean up their performances, but it can revoke liquor licenses.

Watters reminded the nightclub operators that he had summoned them together eight months ago. He said they did better for several months but possibly because of slow business some were stepping over the border again.

He objects to such signs as one saying "Ten Beautiful Girls. Eight Beautiful Costumes." Most of the pandering he complained about has been for nightclub performances.

Some operators approved of the no-pandering edict. They said a few clubs had taxi drivers "lined up" and that when they picked up "suckers" they took them straight to the places that paid them.

The operators that hadn't made a deal with the taxi drivers claimed this was restraining trade. Watters said that if the taxi drivers did any more pandering, they would lose their licenses.

Truman Declares Nation Entering Turbulent Waters

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. —(UP)—The nation is entering turbulent economic waters and may have to buck cross-currents of inflation and recession at the same time in 1949, President Truman warned today.

Transmitting his third annual economic report to Congress, he predicted continued "bountiful prosperity" provided the government is promptly armed with a varied arsenal of weapons to fight a two-front battle against boom or bust.

He called especially for standby price, wage and distribution controls, higher taxes on corporation profits, a two-year extension of rent ceilings, broader curbs on bank lending, continued regulation of installment buying and exports, and a host of social welfare programs to "protect the victims of inflation."

First Congressional reaction to the report fell into a normal pattern.

Chapman, and "the real story" behind Ben Johnson's "The Alchemist."

Dr. Sisson, who is 63 years old, has seen a lot of the world since his graduation from the University of Edinburgh. He was a lecturer in English at the University of Dijon, France, 40 years ago; spent a year at the Egyptian university in Cairo; and at the University of Bombay, India, where he remained 13 years. He returned to England in 1925, and was given the post he now holds in 1928. His activities and positions in the field of education fill an entire column in Who's Who.

Of all his degrees and offices, there is none of which he is more proud than that of his captaincy in the territorial army. He is still active in what corresponds to our R.O.T.C., and is a commanding officer in a student training unit.

He regards as his best work a book called "The Judicious Marriage of Mr. Hooker," concerning Richard Hooker (1554-1600), author of "Of The Laws of Ecclesiastical Policy." This book is his latest. Other published works include "Public Taste and the Elizabethan Drama," written in 1922 at Dijon; and, "Lost Plays of Shakespeare's Age," published in 1936. He has been editor of the "Modern Language Review" since 1927.

Sisson said he hasn't played golf since before the war, but he brought along his clubs. He enjoys playing the piano and reading detective stories for recreation.

LOOKING LIKE ONE of the three wise monkeys, "Hack," a chimpansee at the Golden Gate Park Zoo in San Francisco, tries to still his chattering teeth in the unusual 36-degree temperature. This was the lowest for the date in San Francisco since 1888. Ice-coated puddles surrounded the monkey house, causing "Hack" to wear long underwear.

Duke Schedules Lecture Series By Top Law Men

The Duke university bar association invites all University law students to attend lectures by two prominent law authorities in February and March, Michael Carr, president of the University Law association announced yesterday.

The lectures are sponsored by the Duke Bar association, and law students from Duke, Wake Forest, and the University will hear the lectures together.

First of the speakers will be Frank E. Holman of Seattle, Wash., president of the American Bar association. Holman will address the student lawyers Friday evening, Feb. 11, in the amphitheater of Duke hospital, on the west campus of Duke.

Harrison Tweed, president of the American Law institute, will address the same group of students Friday evening March 4, at the same location.

Protest

Professor Frank W. Klingberg, knee-deep in protesting letters, had just about decided yesterday to curb his sense of humor when giving examinations.

Klingberg was the professor who topped off a fall quarter final exam with the question: "True or false: Charlie Justice is a better runner, passer and punter than Doak Walker." Naturally, the unanimous class answer was "True." The incident received widespread national publicity.

Klingberg said he has received an average of ten letters per day since that time from persons throughout the country who try to convince him the answer should have been "False."

Playmakers Plan Tryouts Tuesday

Tryouts for "Inherit The Wind," a new play by Gene A. McLain, university student whose show "Call Back Yesterday" was premiered by the Carolina Playmakers last season, will be held in the Playmakers theater, Tuesday from 5 to 7, and again on Wednesday from 3 to 5, Samuel Selden, dramatic art department head announced today.

McLain tightly written psychological study of a domineering mother and her three daughters, to be directed by graduate student Sam Hirsch will be the second original done by the Playmakers this season as part of a new series of full-length student-written plays on the experimental program, and will be shown on Feb. 2 and 3.

Enough Volunteers:

Halt Is Called To Draft For Two-Month Period

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—(UP)—Because of the high rate of voluntary enlistments, the Army announced today it will draft no men in February and March.

Voluntary enlistments and re-enlistments have averaged 35,000 a month for the past few months, the army said. This has made selective service calls unnecessary for the next two month.

Army secretary Kenneth Royall notified the munitions board, which controls draft calls for all services, that the army's previous 5,000 man draft call for February should be cancelled. In addition, the army told the munitions board it would make no calls in March.

In explanation, Mr. Royall referred to the Selective Service act of 1948, which requires the army to limit its draft calls to the difference between requirements and intake through voluntary enlistments.

About 50 per cent of the gains in the last three months have been re-enlistments and extensions of existing enlistments.

Haring Talk To Be Heard On Thursday

Latin America To Be Subject

Dr. Clarence H. Haring, Harvard professor of economics and Latin American history, will speak in Gerrard hall Thursday night at 8:30. Dr. Haring, who is appearing under the auspices of the Institute of Latin American Studies and the political science department, will speak on "Foreign Investments in Latin America, A Historical Retrospect."

A graduate of Harvard and a Rhodes scholar, Dr. Haring has had a great deal of experience with inter-American groups. He was secretary of the Venezuela group at the Second Pan-American Financial conference in 1920.

Dr. Haring was chairman of the United States delegation to the second general assembly of the Pan-American Institute of Geography and History in Washington in 1935.

Membership Drive Planned by TMA

In an effort to expand the 60-man membership of the Town Mens' association, a membership drive is planned for tomorrow through Wednesday. Representatives of the TMA will be on hand in the Y building from 8:30 to 1 o'clock to gather in an expected 100 new members from the ranks of the 2,000-odd men living in town.

First formed in the mid-30's under the name of the Town boys' association, the organization was made up mostly of local students. It branched out later to include all men living in the village.

During the war years the association dissolved due to the lack of man power on campus, but was resumed last spring under the title of Town Mens' association.

Bull's Head Tea Will Hear Hardre

Jacques Hardre, professor in the French department, will speak on the "Existentialism in the Theatre of Jean-Paul Sartre" at a tea to be given in the Bull's Head book shop at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. Admission is free and all students are invited to attend.

Dr. I. G. Greer Patient at Watts

Dr. I. G. Greer, executive vice president of the business foundation, is a patient at Watts hospital in Durham.

Choral Group Will Present 'Elijah' In Hill

Oratorio Will Be Given This Evening

Mendelssohn's oratorio "Elijah", sponsored by the University music department, will be heard in Hill hall this evening at 8:30. The program will be presented jointly by the Chapel Hill choral club and the University symphony orchestra.

Soloists will be Edgar vom Lehn, who will sing the role of Elijah; John Brinegar; Harriet Keen; and Mary Helen zum Brunnen.

The Chapel Hill choral club is a civic and student organization which has presented two oratorios annually for over 25 years. The 125 voices of the chorus were heard last year in Mozart's "Requiem" and Haydn's "The Seasons."

The University symphony orchestra will be appearing for the second time this season under the direction of Earl Slocum, its first concert having been given in November.

General Assembly Has Brief Session

RALEIGH, Jan. 8—(UP)—The North Carolina House and Senate met for two minutes today and did absolutely nothing.

Nobody said a word except the chaplains, the presiding officers and those who moved to adjourn.

The Saturday morning sessions are traditionally limited to local bills, and today nobody introduced any. There could be no reports on the few local bills already introduced in the House, because committees have not yet been formed to act on them.

University Club To Pick Officers

Election of a president will be the chief item of business at the first meeting of the University club for the New Year tomorrow night at 7:30 in Graham Memorial.

Plans will also be made for the entertainment of visiting sport teams during the coming season.

Drew Pearson To Speak Here At Press Meet

The North Carolina Press association yesterday announced a program for the 24th annual North Carolina Newspaper institute with a list of speakers headed by Drew Pearson, Washington columnist and radio commentator.

The three-day institute will be held here and at Duke university beginning Jan. 27.

The list of speakers included Jenkin Lloyd Jones, editor of the Tulsa, Okla., Tribune; George V. Allen, formerly of the Durham Herald and now assistant secretary of state; and Miss Beatrice Cobb, editor of the Morganton News-Herald and association secretary, who recently returned from a trip around the world by plane.

Sponsoring groups said advance registration indicated the number attending the institute would break all previous records.

Shoe-String Opera . . .

Promising Singers Will Star In Opera Presentation Here

In 1947 when three of North Carolina's most promising young singers decided to found a touring opera company for their state, they discovered that the initial theater business was by no means a sing. However, local proof of their determination and ability will be their presentation of two comic one-act operas here on Tuesday evening in Memorial hall under the auspices of the Student Entertainment committee.

From the very beginning Ted Bodenheimer and Josephine Fisher of Winston-Salem agreed with Amelia Cardwell of Greensboro that their fellow North Carolinians would enthusiastically support a native innterpretation of the lighter operas of such old masters as Debussy, Mozart, Verdi, and Humperdinck.

So these three talented music-world newcomers banded together with Dorothy Allcorn, soprano, and two piano accompanists, Margaret Leinbach Kolb and Sarah Ingram; engaged as stage director Clifford E. Blair, sympathetic Winston-Salem opera impresario who had himself founded the National Association for Opera: and called the entire results the Music Theatre Repertory group.

MTRG began receiving recognition from leading music journals and other magazines throughout the country.

Then this shoe-string opera company immediately began more often to chirp choruses of "Hallelujah." A repertoire of seven original one-act operas was worked out.

A second year of touring was alined more easily this time with a 1949 opener in Chapel Hill. Now with Gian-Carlo Menotti's "The Old Maid And the Thief," the bell-ringer at State last year, as well as Menotti's "The Telephone," the Music Theatre Repertory group has come a long way to gauge a college audience's reaction to home-brewed musical culture again next Tuesday night.

Domestic Troubles Now:

Hustle Them Lightbulbs, R. Gregg

GASTONIA, Jan. 8—(UP)—R. Gregg Cherry, attorney at law, wondered today whey he ever went to Raleigh in the first place to become governor of North Carolina.

The four years in office weren't so bad, Cherry admitted, but the homecoming has been most trying.

The Cherrys left Raleigh immediately after the new governor, Kerr Scott, was sworn in.

Returning to Gastonia, they found their home in Gastonia without a single light bulb and flooded with six inches of water. They spent the night with a friend, banker Kay Dixon.

"Well," drawled the never-excited Cherry, "it looks like the picnic's over."

It's not exactly home to which they returned. Cherry sold his house when he moved into the governor's mansion in Raleigh four years ago. The present dwelling is rented.

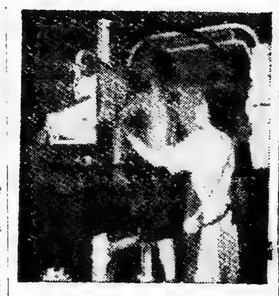
Mrs. Cherry dispatched her husband to purchase a broom and light bulbs and yesterday was spent in housecleaning.

Most disturbing to Mrs. Cherry was lack of a telephone in the new home. She got little sympathy from her husband, who joked:

"That's an easy problem. If the company doesn't put one in right away, I'll go elsewhere and put in a call for Kerr Scott. Maybe he'll get some action."

Governor Scott has been outspoken in critizing telephone companies for slow expansion to meet the state's needs.

The ex-governor had a new car to do his homecoming errands. It was presented him by a group of friends in the capitol before his term ended.



Undernourished Oriental students are shown weighing in at food distribution centers set up by WSSF in China. Only those who are found to be as much as 25 pounds underweight are given additional rations of fat meat at the dole points where food is a cherished scarcety.

WSSF Campaign Begins Tomorrow

The 1949 World Student Service fund drive beginning on campus tomorrow will feature three novel highlights in an all-out effort to surpass the University's $5,000 donation last year to the international charity which offsets war-created needs of students all over the world.

The week-long WSSF drive here this year will be sponsored by the Council for Religion in Life. While Dr. Frank P. Graham, Greater University president, is a national WSSF sponsor, student Dortch Warriner has been appointed locally as general drive chairman for the world-wide organization that has spent more than $2,000,000 in the past two years for the relief of 870,000 needy university students and faculty members everywhere.

Tonight at 7:30 in Gerrard hall approximately 115 picked students will meet for final indoctrination about canvassing their respective campus areas from door-to-door. These personal contact solicitations will be made tomorrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday.

Austrian students are shown being examined for tuberculosis on the only X-ray machines that WSSF was able to furnish.

Also tomorrow ten-cent balloting will begin in the Y lobby to name a coed "Miss Pay-Off of 1949." Thursday, everyone eating in the Carolina inn, Lenior hall, and the N.C. cafeteria will be asked to contribute the price of their own meal to WSSF with the idea that they are giving to "Take a Foreign Student to Dinner."

Staff of Quarterly Asks Notification

The Carolina Quarterly requested yesterday that all who have subscribed to the Quarterly and who have not received the first issue contact the Quarterly office in Graham Memorial or write to Box 1117.

Numerous students have changed their addresses and have failed to notify the Quarterly office. There are a great number of copies that have been returned to the subscription office from the quonset huts and Miller and Nash halls.

Scott Upholds Housecleaning

RALEIGH, Jan. 8—(UP)—Gov. Kerr Scott made it clear today that he wouldn't "housecleaning" state officialdom before the end of the current legislative session.

Scott announced in his first press conference as governor late yesterday that he asked three top officials to stay at their posts until then. However, he expected them to resign by July, he said.

Scott talked freely and in detail about his "go-forward" 15-point program and a half-dozen other subjects with 18 newsmen at the conference.

No Taxi Call . . .

Three-Way Radio Hookup Is New Crime-Fighting Device

By Herb Nachman

When an officer in local police headquarters throws a switch and says "Calling car two, signal 10, corner Franklin and Columbia" he won't be calling a taxicab.

He'll simply be reporting a wreck at that location and directing one of the town's two police cars to the spot. It is all made possible with the special Farnsworth receiving-transmitter three-way radio set-up which is now in operation.

Al Barnhill from Greenville assembled the outfit in both police cars and in police headquarters. Barnhill is a member of the Swain hall technician staff and a radio ham operator.

He said if the surplus equipment were new it would cost nearly $2,000 normally.

Chief Sloan said police protection will now be greatly improved with the new equipment. Under the three way system the cars may transmit to each other as well as communicate with headquarters.

One of the officers said. "Before we had this, we might ride right by a place where a person was breaking in and never know it. Then when we got back to headquarters, we'd find a phone call waiting for us. By that time the thief was out of the state. Now, that will all be changed."

According to Barnhill, the range of the set is up to a radius of 50 miles. The transmitter operates on a narrow-band FM with special antennas installed in the cars and on the roof of headquarters. The system has a power of 50 watts.

Misses Payoff To Start Race In Y Tomorrow

Ten Contestants Already in Fight

A partial list of the coeds to compete for the title of "Miss Pay-Off of 1949" during the campus-wide World Student Service fund drive beginning tomorrow was released yesterday.

Girls whose pictures will appear on ballot boxes in the Y lobby tomorrow morning and the campus organizations sponsoring them are as follows, alphabetically: Gwen Finley, Alpha Gamma Delta sorority; Pat Frizzell, McIver dormitory; Ann Green, Alpha Delta Pi; Marty Hinkle, Carolina Independent Coed association; Louise Horner, Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity; Ferne Hughes, Pi Lambda Chi; Mike Merker, Pi Beta Phi; Mary Louise Powe, Beta Theta Pi; Betsy Ross, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, and Betty Smith, Delta Delta Delta.

Any other campus groups desiring to nominate a "Miss Pay-Off" contender should turn their choice's name and photograph as well as a $5 entrance fee over to Edie Knight, WSSF beauty contest chairman, Alderman dormitory. The latest possible deadline for any further entries will be 11 o'clock tonight.

The five dollar entrance fee will be tabulated as the first 50 10-cent votes towards selecting the charity queen. The three nominees who have accumulated the most dime votes will be announced daily in the DTH through next Friday. Votes will still be cast until Sunday evening.

Bunn to Appeal To High Court

DURHAM, Jan. 8.—(UP)—Colonel Heartman Bunn, the slight, wiry leader of a snake-handling religious cult, was ready to appeal to the United States Supreme court today to be allowed to practice his strange worship.

Bunn and Benjamin R. Massey, an elder in his Durham Zion tabernacle, lost their appeal to the state Supreme court yesterday in an attempt to have a city ordinance against snake-handling declared unconstitutional.

CPU Business Meet Scheduled Tonight

There will be an important business meeting tonight for members of the Carolina Political union, in the Grail room of Graham Memorial, Herb Alexander, chairman, announced yesterday.

Plans will be formulated for activities in the winter quarter. Next Sunday night, the union will hold a regular discussion and visitors will be welcome. There are several vacancies in the membership of the organization, and applications can be obtained at the YMCA office or at the regular meetings.

PL16 Veterans Must Report to Honeycutt

All Public Law 16 students, excepting law and medical students, who have not contacted veterans adviser Wilson Honeycutt this quarter are requested to see him in his office in Peabody hall next Monday, Wednesday or Thursday.

Buckshot

It might have been a false alarm yesterday afternoon, or it might not. At any rate, Albert Pendergrass, local police officer, didn't stop to ask.

The dog was foaming at the mouth and staggering. But he doesn't stagger anymore. A black and grey German Police, still unclaimed, lies dead at 309 McDade street. Full of Officer Pendergrass' buckshot.

Red, White, and Blue

One of the most persistent objections to be heard whenever a drive is underway to raise money for the World Student Service Fund is that in some way the WSSF is a Communist-front organization. When this question was raised on another campus, the editor of the campus newspaper there wrote to the U. S. State Department and received a rather conclusive reply, which ought to obviate any sincere doubts about the WSSF on this score.

The complete text of the letter from the State Department was:

Dear Mr. Perry:

We have been asked to reply to your letter of October 15 with respect to the activities of the World Student Service Fund.

The Advisory Committee on Voluntary Foreign Aid was established at the request of the President to guide the public agencies seeking the support of the public in the effective use of voluntary resources for foreign aid. In order to fulfill this purpose, the Committee invites voluntary relief organizations to register with it. Based upon this registration, the Committee makes recommendations to the various federal agencies concerning the organizations' activities.

The World Student Service Fund (i.e., the United States branch) is an agency recorded with the Advisory Committee and its activities, therefore, may be said to have the approval of the Government. In connection with your questions regarding activities in the eastern European countries, it might be well to keep in mind that no United States voluntary agency may operate in these countries unless it is accorded the right of free distribution and the right to conduct its activities free of political interference. In many instances, the relief given by United States agencies go to those groups who are not active supporters of the particular government, as they are the groups most frequently in need due to denial of ration cards on the part of the government. Where American relief can continue it is, we believe, of great value in keeping alive in these countries the knowledge that Americans are interested in assisting the people who are in need.

This organization has the approval of the Advisory Committee and there has been no indication that this agency is in any way subject to charges of being Communistic.

Florence M. Black, Executive Assistant

The worthwhileness of the whole project seems so manifest that supplementary good wishes from the Tar Heel ought not be necessary to send Carolina's contributions soaring well past the "minimum goal" here of $5,000.

Power of the Women

Never underestimate the power of a woman, and particularly of coeds. This is something that is often done here, except immediately before campus elections when the political parties enter into avid competition for the coed vote and influence. The rest of the year most men students carefully ignore the fact that in proportion to numbers the women outdo them in both scholastics and extra curricula activity.

Possibly because the men dominate most campus organizations by force of numbers, (all true males will immediately deny any prejudice against their feminine coworkers) the best in coed leadership and working ability gravitates to organizations which are exclusively coed. The result is that several of these coed organizations are consistently better led and more active than their male counterparts.

One example is the Young Women's Christian Association. It may be that the women merely surpass the men in publicizing their activities, but it seems that the various divisions of this group are constantly engaged in constructive programs while little is heard from the YMCA.

Another active coed organization is the Pan-Hellenic council, whose latest project is the adoption of a foreign child through the Foster Parents for War Children program.

For their activity in their own organizations the women are to be highly commended. At the same time it might be pointed out to members of other organizations and to the student voters of the campus that by relegating coeds entirely to the minor, work-horse positions they are overlooking some of the best leadership ability to be found at the University.

From the Inside

Legislature: No Majority

By Jim Southerland

The major political question of the week is the new student legislature. With no one of the three political parties holding a majority of the seats, there will be a lively session Thursday night when new officers and committee chairmen are elected. The line up of the 50 seats is: 22 UP, 14 SP, 6 CP, 5 SP-CP, 2 UP-SP, and 1 CP-UP. For what it's worth the percentage line up is: UP 47, SP 35, and CP 18.

Percentages and party endorsements are significant but political questions in the new legislature must bow before burning problems that may well determine the success or failure of the most powerful student government in America.

The student legislature handles the appropriation of over $100,000 of student fees. The judicial councils have almost complete control over student conduct. The president of the student body performs extensive administrative functions. These functions of student government are important but its most important function is to show the administration and the board of trustees that it is competent to handle not only these but even greater powers. In this duty it has been failing. Student government is cluttered with incompetent men. It is riddled with inefficiency, lethargy, and the fear of a little hard work. This must stop. If it continues we may lose the rights we now have in the determination of our own affairs. Certainly we will always be powerless to force appreciation of our interests and opinions on questions such as the Emerson scuttlebutt and Saturday classes.

The campus politicians and the new legislators have the future in their hands. They have the information on what student government can do, on what should be done and on what isn't being done. Give it to the student body and student interest in its governmental affairs will follow. New men and women will enter politics. They must not be met with futile bickering, petty job-hunters, and a situation of the blind leading the blind.

The student legislature particularly has a great responsibility on its shoulders. Important issues are before it this quarter. It must consider the reorganization of the whole judicial system. The election laws are badly in need of revision. The budget for next year must be passed. Almost wholesale amendment of the student constitution may be necessary in the light of two and a half years of experience.

It is time to roll up some sleeves and make Carolina student government an instrument of which the student body can be proud.

These Days

This U. S. 'Imperialism' Talk

By George E. Sokolsky

M. Urnov, writing on "Howard Fast and America," gives Howard Fast the build-up as one of America's foremost literary lights and social philosophers. If you have never heard of Howard Fast, he is a Communist who has had a brush with the law and is therefore a martyr. He has written biography and fiction with a Marxist slant and is now a columnist for the Daily Worker.

Now, I do not wish to devote this space to Fast, but to Urnov, who, writing in a Soviet publication, has this to say about our country:

"While the Soviet army in combat with the Nazi hordes decided the outcome of the second world war, the American monopolists were hatching new political and military adventures. After the defeat of German facism, Wall Street openly assumed the criminal role of a new pretender to world domination, and the United States took its place at the head of the anti-democratic and imperialistic camp. In order to substantiate its aggressive aspirations, American reaction let loose a torrent of mendacious, arrogant propaganda trumpeting the 'achievements' of American bourgeois democracy in the past and the present. . ."

Apparently, the United States was not in the last war at all. That was just propaganda! The Battle of the Bulge never took place. We never fought in the Pacific. We never threw the Bomb at Hiroshima or Nagasaki. We never spent more than $300,000,000,000; we never provided lend-lease, $11,000,000,000 of it to the Russians. No! We came into it only after the Soviet army beat the Nazi horde! The Russians never begged us for a second front nor influenced us to reject Winston Churchill's now demonstrably sound plan of going into Nazi Germany through the Balkans, which would have saved us from the perils of the Iron Curtain!

That apparently is what the Russians have been told and believe. They have not been told that we contributed 70 percent of all the expenditures of UNRRA or that we are contributing about $5,000,000,000 a year to reconstruct Europe and Asia.

Nor have they been told that the United States has come out of this costly and disastrous war without acquiring an inch of territory or domain over any people. On the other hand, Soviet Russia has seized more than a dozen countries and has dominated a vast multitude of peoples, many of whom are totally enslaved not only to Russia physically, but mentally and spiritually. Nor have they been told that their country maintains in every nation a spying, subversive, poisonous fifth column which is a direct interference in the internal life of a people. The Russians apparently have been told none of that.

These Russians somehow have been made to believe that the United States is nearing the end of its history. Discussing Fast's novel, "The American," Urnov uses a curious phrase:

"The action of 'The American' takes place in the second half of the 19th century, chiefly in the latter decades, when capitalism was entering upon its highest and final stage—the stage of imperialism. . ."

Of course, Marxists believe in the mysticism of "inevitability"; they are more dogmatic than the most bigoted fundamentalist in religion, accepting on faith that the Marxist progress must be correct, no matter what the facts may be. And one of their assumptions is the "American bourgeois democracy" has "inevitably" degenerated and is now in its final stage. The next stage is economic disaster, to be followed by a workers' revolution, finally by a soviet republic affiliated with the Soviet country, Russia.

All this would not be worthy of comment were it only accepted as correct by Russians. The fact is that a large number of Americans—an increasingly large number of our young people—find the success of the Russian effort in Europe and Asia, the astonishing lack of intelligence in the state department, the current inadequacy of American political thought, are turning to the Marxist concept of "inevitability." The fact that the Harold Ware cells spread through the highest intellectual strata of official Washington—brought to the surface by the Chambers-Hiss case—cannot be ignored. It must be studied, analyzed, debated and a solution found as to how to reteach America to Americans.

Since Lenin Was a Pup

Editor:

About 95 per cent of all reformers make the mistake of denying that the general public possesses either sincerity or intelligence. Thus they stir up trouble and solve nothing. Mr. Cherry has asked a question which older and wiser than he have wondered about, and his answerer had nothing but sarcasm to offer.

The answer, simple, straightforward, and Biblical was hinted at by Mr. Marrotte, who might learn something himself from its teachings: "By their fruits ye shall know them." The linking of Dr. Graham with Communism is the best compliment the Soviet has received since Lenin was a pup. If Dr. Frank's brand of Americanism be yclept Communism, here is one white Southerner who is beginning to reflect faint shades of pink.

No Evidence Produced

Editor:

The day before yesterday, J. R. Cherry, Jr., mentioned the House Un-American Activities Committee. Mr. Truman said that it was a dead committee. It is general knowledge that the chairman, J. Parnell Thomas, is under indictment for padding his payroll—the chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee padding his payroll and directly taking advantage of the American taxpayer by using his public office for personal gains! Truly, Mr. Editor, this is subversive activity of the foulest kind. It is like the preacher who preaches one thing and secretly does another. "Me thinkest thou protesteth too much."

By this time we have all heard the latest. The Un-American Activities Committee has charged that the Epworth League of the Methodist Church is infiltrated with Communists. Any good Methodist could have told them that the Epworth League was dissolved on Dec. 31, 1940, and replaced by the Wesley Foundation. (I can see Bill Robertson leading in the singing of "All Hail the Power of Marx's Name"!)

I am reminded of a cartoon which I saw recently of a big policeman handling a little fellow roughly as the little fellow says "But I'm an anti-Communist" to which the policeman replied "I don't care what kind of a Communist you are."

Chairman Thomas said that Dr. Condon was the weakest link in the Atomic Energy set-up;—he failed to produce the evidence. Thomas said that the TVA was loaded with Communists;—he failed to produce the evidence. Thomas said our army was being infiltrated by Communists; he failed to produce the evidence. Thomas said Panama was filled with Communists; he failed to produce the evidence. The committee has recently implied that the YMCA and YWCA have been infiltrated by the Communists—no evidence.

Gentlemen, the F.B.I. does a clearcut job of getting all the data necessary for our courts. We don't really need the Un-American Activities Committee. I agree with Mr. Truman. The committee should be dead.

Improvise Dixie Jazz?

Julia Lee and Her Boy Friends
 "Cold Hearted Daddy"
 "Living Back Street for You"

Julia steps out with something new in the way of instrumentals on "Daddy" as she adds a xylophone which in turn adds to the quality of the music. The vocal by the gal is as good as always, and the lyrics are catching. The reverse is not interesting and the only thing that keeps it from being a complete flop is Julia's vocal.

Morton Gould, "Do You Remember"
 Album rating

Morton here tries to do some of the old fast stuff with his incomprehensible string maze, and it doesn't click. Such things as the fine old "Chink of Araby" as well as "12th Street Rag" and "Dardanella" just don't lend themselves to this kind of treatment. All that comes of the attempt is a confusion of screaming of violins with no discernible feeling or meaning. Better Morton should have stayed in bed on the morning that he recorded this.

Tommy Dorsey and His Clambake Eleven
 Album rating

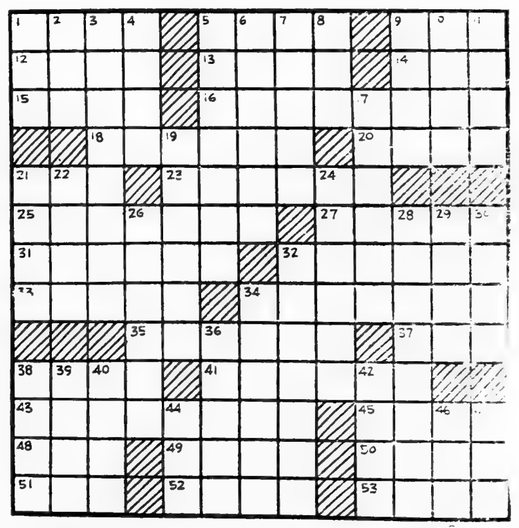
This is Dixieland in the Dorsey manner. Not bad, but why improvise on something as fine as the typical New Orleans Dixie? Nevertheless, many of the records in the album are only slightly short of terrific. And how could they not be, with such recording stars as Bud Freeman, Dave Tough, Johnny Mince, Pee Wee Erwin, Gene Traxler, and many others on some of the other sides. The selection includes "Sailing at Midnight," "Music Goes Round and Round," "At the Codfish Ball," "Josephine," "The Lady is a Tramp," "Shiek of Araby," "Chinatown, My Chinatown," and "Rancho Grande."



Sokolsky Not 'Extreme'

Editor:

I wish that I might share your elation over the President's State of the Union message. If his entire program is enacted our government will be more centralized (synonymous with "socialized") than ever before in our history. The "rights of the several states" are rapidly becoming meaningless words which serve but one purpose—to fill up space in the Constitution. Enlist me as one who pathetically screams, "Socialism!"

I do, however, share your excellent judgment in printing G. E. Sokolsky's column. He represents the right wing of American thought, of course—but, contrary to Mr. Marshall's opinion, I don't think he represents the "extreme" right wing. In these times we need more journalists like Sokolsky to write on the side of the "right."

UNC Cagers Beat Virginia Tech; Swimmers Submerge VMI

Carson Leads Tar Heels to 56-48 Triumph Over Weak Gobblers

BLACKSBURG, Va., Jan. 8—(SPL)—The North Carolina cagers turned in their eighth win of the season here tonight by whipping the Virginia Tech Gobblers in a thrill-packed 56-48 game before 5,000 howling fans in the VPI gym.

The Tar Heels, only recently decisively defeated by NYU in Madison Square Garden, jumped into an early lead and held it to the end despite the Gobblers' desperate try to avoid their sixth straight defeat.

Tonight's contest marked the Tar Heels' second consecutive Southern conference victory without defeat. The VPI quint meanwhile was suffering its fourth conference loss while failing to win a loop game to date.

Carson High Man

Cov Carson, high-scoring Carolina forward, lead the scoring parade for the victorious Tar Heels as he poured eight field goals and three throws through the hoop for a 19-point total. Tech's elongated center, Bill Sampson, hit for 15 to take runner-up honors behind Carson. Carolina's Howard Deasy and Jim Ryan each notched 10 points.

Carolina jumped into the lead at 0:55 when Carson hooped a free throw to make the score, 1-0. Shortly afterwards Sampson was fouled while attempting a layup and made good on his second shot to knot the count at 1-all.

Ryan, flashy Tar Heel guard, put Carolina into the lead at 1:-- of the first half when he dropped in a set shot from far out front. After Ryan had put the Carolina five into that lead, they never allowed VPI to pass them.

Deasy Makes Difference

Tech managed to stay close to the speedy Tar Heels during the first eight minutes of the half, but when Coach Tom Scott sent gigantic freshman Howard Deasy into the game, the Tar Heels pulled away. Deasy put his tremendous height to good advantage, snagging a large share of the rebounds and adding 10 points.

With both Deasy and Nemo Nearman in the game, Carolina used the double-post system against the zone defense of the Tech quint. This type of attack kept the Gobblers guessing and the Tar Heels put Gobbler hesitation to good advantage and scored at every turn.

At the halftime intermission, Carolina was holding an eight-point lead with the score standing 28-20.

Maintain Pace

The Tar Heels were able to maintain their pace during the second half and Scott sent every man on his travelling squad into the game. At the 10 minute mark of the second half, the Tar Heels had boosted their winning margin to 50 points, 42-32.

VPI made a strong bid to overcome Carolinians during those ten minutes, but never could overcome the Tar Heel lead.

Carolina's next home game is with George Washington university Colonials in Woollen gym at 8 o'clock Monday night.

Frosh Star Paces Carolina Runners In Practice Meet

Carolina's track team yesterday turned in a very impressive showing in their informal indoor meet with Duke in the Tin Can.

The meet was informal in every way with events and entrants being decided on the spot and the coaches of the two teams doing the officiating. No score was kept.

Freshman Bill Albans, a GI eligible for varsity competition, was the outstanding individual performer, winning the 70-yard low hurdles and the broad jump and tying for first in the 70-yard highs and in the high jump. Alban's time in the lows was 8.1 seconds and his broad jump performance was 22 ft. 1 in.

Carolina took nine out of twelve possible first places. In addition to Albans' four firsts, the Tar Heels were victorious in the 330-yard dash, the 660-yard run, the 3/4 mile run and the mile and a half run. Carolina's other first in field events was in the shot put.

Julian MacKenzie copped both the 660 and the 3/4 mile with times of 1:26 and 3:11.5 respectively. Distance star Sam Magill trotted home in 7:15.3, lapping the remainder of the field in the mile and a half run.

Duke's first places came in the 60-yard dash, the 3/4 mile relay, and the pole vault. Brandon Davis took the 60-yard dash in 6.6, edging out Carolina's Stan White. This event was run in heats and the best times scored. Both the hurdle events and the 330 were also run in this manner.

Duke's mile relay team, paced by a brilliant third leg performance by Reeves, copped their event in 2:39.2 The Duke team was composed of Grisso, Bullock, Reeves and Davis. Carolina's team edged out the Duke number two quartet for second place

Casey Boys Provide Greater University With Brother Act

By Bill Kellam

Duke had its Gantts, Davidson had its Peters' brothers, but the Greater University of North Carolina has its own inimitable Casey brothers. No other school can make that statement, though many would probably like to be able to do so.

For in Carolina's bird-legged, dry-witted swimming coach—Ralph and little-brother-institution State's Willis, the Greater University possesses two of the nation's up-and-coming young mermen mentors.

This season, which finds the local tankers stroking for their ninth Southern Conference championship, is the first for the popular Goldsboro native as head coach. Last year, Casey so capably aided the now-departed Dick Jamerson direct the Tar Heels to the loop crown that the Monogram club awarded him its annual trophy given to Carolina's best assistant coach. Later on athletic director Bob Fetzer wisely elevated the sandy-haired assistant to the head mentor's post when Jamerson shoved off for graduate work at Columbia university.

Runs PA System

"Sunshine," whose humorously cynical comments on the Woollen gym PA system enlivened some rather dull early season basketball games, practically backed into the coaching racket some 15 years ago.

Back in 1934, Casey became the manager of Goldsboro's new indoor municipal swimming pool. That winter some chlorine enthusiasts, noticing that other North Carolina high schools had launched swimming teams, decided that the good city of Goldsboro should also have one. So Casey, being well qualified for the post of head coach by virtue of his extensive knowledge of the intricacies of swimming pool operation and maintenance, was given the job.

"The first swimming meet I ever saw, I was coaching one of the teams," Casey commented. His previously-mentioned younger brother, Willis, captained the last of his three teams at Goldsboro.

Came for Degree

Casey entered Carolina in 1938 so that he might obtain the AB degree with which he'd qualify for a collegiate coaching post. That first year, Carolina had neither team nor pool, but he began tutoring the freshman team the next year, Bowman Gray pool's first season of use.

TEMPLE TOPPLES TRINITY

Ray Bobb hooped 28 points last night to pace the Temple Owls to a decisive 59-45 win over the Duke quint at Durham.

NCAA Elects New President; Discusses Major Problems

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 8.—(UP)—The nation's top collegiate coaches, athletic directors and faculty representatives will consider a curb on the growing number of bowl games today in the final discussions of the annual NCAA convention.

The report on bowls is expected to censure play in any post-season games in the future that are promoted by private enterprise. Such bowls as the Rose, Cotton, Sugar and Orange already have won the approval of the NCAA, but the score or more of other post-season classics may find themselves legislated out of business in 1950.

As for the television bugaboo, long a subject of conjecture in collegiate football circles, that subject hasn't been settled and won't be until there are more television sets in the country, the NCAA delegates decided after studying nationwide reports.

Television Discussion

In the television hearings yesterday, there was a divergence of opinion on just what impact television has had on game attendance to date. Father John Murphy of Notre Dame and Athletic Director Fritz Crisler of Michigan, said they had televised their games without any decrease in attendance receipts.

On the other hand, Jim Schwartz of the University of Tennessee, representing the Eastern Collegiate Athletic conference for Asa Bushnell said that a survey there showed television had caused a slight decline in attendance.

Sanity Code Violations

The compliance committee report on the "sanity code" yesterday drew little comment from the 600 assembled delegates. The report, turned in by Clarence P. Houston of Tufts college, indicated that 14 members of the NCAA were in direct violation of the code, but they were being given a chance to "straighten their houses." Twenty members have been under investigation.

Harvey Harman of Tufts, retiring president of the American Football Coaches association, said that the coaches "feared" the results of the code, aimed at keeping professionalism out of college sports. The fear was not in the code itself, he said, but rather that the NCAA would be unable to enforce it.

L. E. (Dutch) Meyer of Texas Christian university was elected to the presidency to succeed Harman.

Conzelman Quits Chicago Cards

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—(UP)—Colorful Jimmy Conzelman, the football "Jack of all trades" who made National league champions out of the Chicago Cardinals, quit professional football today to "settle down."

Conzelman intends to spend his time working for an advertising agency, his letter of resignation revealed.

The Cards officially announced the resignation and its acceptance after the United Press revealed from authoritative sources that the veteran coach intended to quit a year before his contract expired.

After the football magician came back to the Cards in the season of 1946, his team won 26 and lost nine games in league competition. The Cardinals tied Green Bay for third place in 1946, won the league championship in 1947, and headed the Western division in 1948.

Their loss of the 1948 league championship to the Philadelphia Eagles came in a tough battle that was played in a blizzard.

It was Conzelman's second resignation from the team. After coaching the Cardinals from 1940 to 1942, he left to join the St. Louis Browns baseball club as assistant to the president from 1943 to 1945.

Conzelman was revealed to have turned down an offer of $50.000 to coach another NFL club, presumably the Washington Redskins. He had completed his sixth season in the league last fall.

Yanks Peddle Bevens To Chicago White Sox

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—(UP)—Floyd (Bill) Bevens, New York Yankee pitcher who narrowly missed a no-hit game in the 1947 World Series against the Brooklyn Dodgers, was sold to the Chicago White Sox today on a conditional basis.

Bevens, a 31-year-old right-hander, was troubled with a sore shoulder since the start of the 1948 spring training season and was optioned by the Yankees to their Newark Bears farm team in the International league. He pitched only eight innings for the Bears last season.

Rauch to Yanks

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—(UP)—Georgia's Johnny Rauch today held a contract to play professional football next year with the Boston Yanks of the National league.

Terms of the contract with the star quarterback, who ranked among the nation's best passers for three years, were not announced.

INTRAMURAL ROUNDUP

MANAGERS MEET

There will be a meeting of all intramural basketball officials Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock in room 302, Woollen gym.

HANDBALL STILL OPEN

Intramural officials announced yesterday that handball entries will remain open through Friday, January 14.

The teams are made up of five men, enough for one singles and two doubles matches. All interested organizations should contact the Woolen gym Intramural office, phone F-3321, before the deadline.

BADMINTON TOURNEY

All badminton players, both men and women, who wish to enter the all-campus tournament have been requested to register at the Intramural office before the night of January 17, when the tourney will begin at open house in Woollen gym.

MONDAY'S BASKETBALL

5:00—Court 5, Emerson vs Skyscrapers; 6, C Dorm 2 vs Shotgun; 7, Y Cabinet 2 vs BVP 2.

WAA MEET

Carolina's winter athletic program for the coeds will get underway at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the Women's gym with a meeting of the Basketball club. This will supercede the actual cage tourney that will commence on Jan. 25.

Caseymen Chalk up 63-12 Win Over Keydets at Lexington, Va.

By Bill Burgess

LEXINGTON, Va., Jan. 8—Coach Ralph Casey's powerful Carolina swimming team swept to its second straight one-sided victory of the season here this afternoon by completely outclassing Virginia Military Institute, 63-12.

In marking up their easy triumph, the Tar Heels romped to first places in all nine events. Moreover, Coach Casey's charges established new Southern conference records.

The Carolina 300-yd. medley relay team set a new mark in that event by clipping off a 2:50.7 time, which easily surpassed the old record of 3:01.1. Swimming on the team were Norm Sper, Dick Twining, and Jesse Greenbaum.

Jim Thomas set the other new conference record today. He did the 440-yd. freestyle in 4:57.6, which also was much better than the old time of 5:05.2.

The summary:

300-yd. medley relay—Carolina (Sper, Twining, Greenbaum). 2:50.7 (new conference record. Old record 3.1.1.).

220-yd. freestyle—McCauley (C), Basescue (C), Fleming (VMI). 2:26.9.

50-yd. freestyle—Drew (C), Raeburn (VMI), Barton (VMI). 0:-- 23.9.

Diving—Crone (C), Whitehard (C), Maxwell (VMI). 84.7.

100-yd. freestyle—Twining (C), Norwood (C), Bolvig (VMI). 4:53.9.

150- yd. backstroke—Sper (c), Bippart (C), Michaux (VMI). 1:-- 41.4.

220-yd breaststroke—Breeden (C), Park (VMI), Bartlett (C). 2:39.2.

440-yd. freestyle—Thomas (C), Hutton (C), Fleming (VMI). 4:57.6 (new conference record. Old record 5:05.2)

400-yd. freestyle relay—Carolina (Greenbaum, Dietzel, Drew and Mericka) 3:51.6.

Frosh Fish First

LEXINGTON, Va., Jan. 8—Carolina's freshmen swimmers followed the example set by their varsity brothers today by notching their first win of the season over the VMI frosh squad, 44-31.

Although the score was fairly close, the Tar Baby tankmen garnered six first place honors compared to three for the Kaydets. Leading the yearling victors were Kirby Ambler, winner of 50 and 100 yard freestyle, Cecil Milton, victorious in the 220 and 440 yard freestyle and Bob Raskin who stroked to triumph in the 220 yard breaststroke.

Chi Omega Pledges Honored At Group's Yearly Presentation

At the Chi Omega annual pledge dance, held last night in the woman's gymnasium, the sorority's pledge class was presented to the University against a background of magnolias and frosted pines.

Pledge officers, President Helen Eppes, vice-president June Fleenor, and secretary-treasurer Mary Brown Hill were introduced through an archway of synthetic ice cycles, carrying out a theme of winter-time. Descending the steps from the arch, the officers were given a bouquet of white carnations, the sorority flower.

The theme remained constant as a giant Jack Frost stood beside the arch, painting the Chi O emblem above the archway. From his outstretched pallette, the rest of the pledges received a single carnation. After the presentation of the pledges, each active member presented a Chi O charm to her "little sister," during a no-break dance to the music of the Stormy Weathers.

At intermission-time pledge members and their dates formed the Chi O figure. While the pledges formed an X, their dates completed the Chi O seal with the formation of the traditional horse shoe. After the dance all members and their dates ate brunch in the sorority house.

The pledges and their escorts were Helen Eppes with Ed Moran, June Fleenor with Jimmy Hedgepeth; Mary Brown Hill with Rockwell Poisson: Gene Frances Carriher with Marty Carmichael; Musette Brown with Jack Thorpe:

Betsy Ross with Dike Peebles; Sara Barbee with Mabrey Bass; Sara Wakefield with Dik Munis; Polly Rudolph with Ed West; Mary Louise Rice with Charlie Behron; Frances Powe with Vic Grainger; Betty Heath with Gene Brigham; Barbara Austin with Joe Williams;

Peggy Misenheimer with Frank Curran; Carolyn Tillett with Cal Woddard; Ann Llewallan with Neil King; Carolyn Van Sant with Red Wells; Armecia Eure with Norman Black; Estelle Suddreth with Bill Dyer, and Nell Lee Greening with Etaoin Shrdlu.

Coeds Planning Gala Seasonal Entertainments

The Carolina Independent Coed Association and the Alpha Gamma Delta, Alpha Delta Pi, and Delta Delta Delta sororities are planning dances to continue the gala season of coed entertainment begun this week-end by the Pi Beta Phi and the Chi Omega pledge dances.

The Alpha Gams and CICA members will give dances for their new members next Friday and Saturday night, respectively. The Tri Delts will present their pledge members during a dance at the Carolina Inn Jan. 21. The Alpha Delta Pi's have not announced the date of their pledge dance.

Today the Pi Phi's are celebrating Pi Phi Loyalty Day. Honoring an outstanding sorority member each year, the Carolina chapter this year is remembering the late Carrie Chapman Catt, women suffrage leader.

The sororities regular Sunday night entertainments continue. The ADPi's will hold Open House from 7 to 8 tonight while the Pi Phi's will serve Sunday night supper beginning at 5:30. The Chi O's and the Alpha Gams will serve coffee from 7 to 8.

Carolina Men Fete Snavely; Plan For Ball

A large number of Carolina Zeta Beta Tau's were present at a dinner party honoring Coach Snavely in Hammond, Louisiana, during the Christmas holidays. Fish Salmon and John Godchaux, ZBT's who graduated from Carolina last June, presented Coach Snavely with the key to the city of New Orleans on behalf of the mayor.

Among the marriages that took place during Christmas vacation was that of ATO Bill Spurlin and Sara Crowder, Raleigh. Leon Melvin, Kappa Sig, and Bunny Winslow, a former Carolina student, were also married during the holidays.

ATO Bill Thompson and Sue Landon, Tri Delt, were recently pinned.

Ballet Classes Will Be Held

Winter quarter ballet classes for children of University students will begin Tuesday in the Vets' Club, Ida Constable, chairman of the Y Social Service committee which is sponsoring the classes, said today.

The group, which consists of 30 children, will be divided into three classes, the first of these to be at 2:30 each Tuesday afternoon with Helen Hord acting as secretary. Connie Penn and Barbara Payne have volunteered as secretaries for the 3:30 group and Nell Greening is secretary for the 4:30 group.

University students may register their children for classes in the YWCA office or notify Ida Constable, 204 Spencer.

Pi Beta Phi's Begin Quarter 'In the Stars'

CHIC BURROUGHS

With stars in their eyes as well as their decorations, Pi Beta Phi's pledges were honored at the sorority's annual pledge dance at the Carolina inn Friday night. Chic Burroughs and his Carolinians played for the occasion.

The main feature of the "Stairway to the Stars" dance was the presentation of the pledges before the Pi Phi arrow. After the figure the girls were presented with wine carnations and danced with their dates to the melody of "Stardust." The ballroom was decorated with stars and clouds.

Jack Thompson announced the pledges as they came before the arrow. The officers and their dates who lead the figure were Ann Chandler, Macon, Ga., president of the pledge class, with Karl Schwartz, Sarasota, Fla.; Pat Sullivan, Chapel Hill, vice-president, with Jack McDuffie, Lake Lure; Lucile Conly, Wilmington, secretary, with Bob Pleuthner, Buffalo, N. Y.; Judy Nunally, Roanoke, Va., treasurer, with Stan Northup, Concord.

Town Congregations Discuss Year's Plans

PRESBYTERIAN: The Rev. Mr. Charles Jones will preach at two services this morning at 9:45 and 11:00. Mr. Jones will discuss Josuah with the married students' group, which meets at 6:00 tonight in the annex building behind the church. Tonight Westminster Fellowship is planning a panel discussion, which will be led by Gray Sanders and Bill Mackie, speaking on what a Christian organization should be, what Westminster Fellowship has accomplished this year, and improvements and goals for the coming year.

EPISCOPAL: Holy Communion will be celebrated this morning at 8:00. A new Sunday school class for students will be taught by Dr. Clairborne S. Jones, associate professor of zoology. It will be at 9:45. "Numbering Our Days" is the topic of the Rev. Mr. David Yates' sermon at the 11:00 o'clock service. The annual Feast of Lights for Epiphany will be celebrated tonight at 7:30. The service is earlier than usual so students may attend the choral club's presentation of "Ellijah" at Hill Hall at 8:30. Chapel of the Cross will begin a series of meetings for those interested in learning more about the Episcopal church with a view to confirmation at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

The Student Vestry of the Episcopal church has announced a student bible class will be held tomorrow morning and every following Sunday morning at 9:45 in the Parish House of the Episcopal church.

The classes will be conducted by Dr. Claiborne Jones, noted member of the university zoology department. The topics to be discussed by the group will be determined by the students themselves at the first meeting Sunday morning.

LUTHERAN: The Rev. Mr. E. C. Cooper will speak on "The Challenge of the New Year" this morning. Tonight at 6:30 the Lutheran Student Association will have a devotional and then discuss program plans for the new year.

BAPTIST: "On Getting Fit for the Future" will be the topic of the sermon by the Rev. S. T. Habel this morning. The choir is planning a special anthem, "Come Unto Me," by Chadwick, for the service. James Street, author of Tap Root, will speak on "The Historical Novel" at BSU tonight.

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN: "Prayer for Things Essential" will be the topic of the Rev. Mr. Bernard Munger's sermon this morning. At the service, also, new members will be received and infants will be baptized. Evening services have been discontinued until March.

METHODIST: The Rev. Mr. Henry G. Ruark will preach at the 11:00 o'clock service this morning. Tonight at Wesley Foundation, the worship committee, headed by Jim McAllister, will be in charge of the program.

Martha Manning, Plymouth, became the bride of Ed Davenport, K. A., in a formal candlelight ceremony on Dec. 21 in Plymouth.

Recent engagements include: Jake Bowman, Beta, to Shirley Johnson, Mount Airy; Bob Kelly, Kappa Sig, to Betsy Toms, Wilmington; Paul Fitzgerald, Beta, to Nancy Black, Durham; and Grady Shuford, KA, to Barbara Ann Turner, Forest City.

HERE IS THE THIEF, of "The Old Maid and the THIEF," one of two comic operas being given tonight under the auspices of the Student Entertainnment committee. The presentations are free to members of the student body.

Repertory Operas Scheduled Tonight

The Music Theater Repertory group, North Carolina's first touring opera company, will present two comic one-act operas tonight at 8 o'clock in Memorial hall under the auspices of the Student Entertainment committee.

The presentation of "The Old Maid and the Thief" and "The Telephone" tonight will be free to the student body, this entertainment being furnished with part of the block student fee paid upon registration.

Faculty members and their wives, student wives, and townspeople will all be given the opportunity to purchase admission tickets at 75 cents each. When the Memorial hall doors are first opened at 7 o'clock, faculty members, their wives, and student wives will be admitted. By 7:30 doors will be opened to townspeople at large.

The two comic one-act operas will be staged completely by Tar Heel musicians who are now in their second year of cross-state tours. The trio which founded the company in 1947 are Ted Bodenheimer, technical director and baritone lead in both plays; Amelia Cardwell, business manager and soprano lead in "The Telephone;" and Josephine Fisher, treasurer and contralto lead in "The Old Maid and the Thief."

Others engaged by the company are Dorothea Allcorn, soprano who sings the role of the other old maid, and two piano accompanists, Margaret Leinbach Kolb and Sarah Ingram.

Clifford E. Blair, noted Winston-Salemite who founded the National Foundation for Opera, is stage director for all the seven productions in the repertoire of the Music Theater Repertory group.

TMA Campaign Will Continue Until Tomorrow

Today marks the mid-way mark of the Town Mens' association membership drive which began yesterday. Response to letters mailed to men living in Chapel Hill has been reported as "favorable" by association president Nelson Taylor.

Officials will be present in the Y building today and again tomorrow from 8:30 to 1 o'clock to receive new members. All men living in town are encouraged to sign membership cards then.

"However," Taylor said, "If this is not convenient, interested students are welcome at the TMA meeting Thursday afternoon at 4:30 in Graham Memorial.

"I should like to remind all men," Taylor went on, "the Town Men's association is not a political organization, nor will it ever be one. We are organized for the benefit and entertainment of the men living off campus."

W.S.S.F. ROUNDUP

The campus World Student Service fund drive began with a bang yesterday as door-to-door solicitations were begun and the "Miss Payoff" contest got underway in the Y building. No reports were available on the solicitations last night.

Ferne Hughes, sponsored by the Pi Lambda Phi fraternity, led late yesterday for the title of "Miss Payoff of 1949" with 159 dime ballots. Second was Betsy Ross, backed by the SAE's, with 79, and in third place was Mary Louise Powe with 75. Mary Louise is sponsored by the local chapter of Beta Theta Pi.

The latest entry for the contest is Marie Nussbaum, sponsored by the Delta Psi fraternity.

Phi to Debate DTH Ousting Of Robertson

Resolution to Ask For Reinstatement

Bill Robertson's dismissal as a columnist for the Daily Tar Heel will be debated by the Philanthropic assembly meeting in Phi Hall on the fourth floor, New East at 7:30 tonight.

Peter Gerns, chairman of the Ways and Means committee, announced the following resolution for discussion: That The Daily Tar Heel be asked to reinstate Bill Robertson as columnist, proving itself to be a representive of a democratic and free press.

Ed Joyner, editor of the Daily Tar Heel, has consented to an invitation to address the assembly to give his views on Robertson's dismissal. Managing Editor Chuck Hauser and News Editor Sally Woodhull have also been asked to represent the staff at tonight's meeting.

A special request has been sent to Robertson asking him to give his opinion on the subject.

A member of the assembly stated that the constant flow of letters to the editor challenging Robertson as long as he wrote for the Daily Tar Heel and the protests incurred by his being fired have shown the interest of the students in the matter.

Air ROTC Unit Promotion List Includes Eight

In the first special order of the winter quarter from the Air ROTC unit, Col. Byron R. Switzer announced the promotion of eight members of the junior class.

Privates Alton S. Horn and Robert M. Mebane were promoted to the grade of technical sergeants and will serve as 1st sergeants of A and B squadrons respectively.

Other promotions include Donald B. Carmichael, Henry M. Goodwin, and John E. Taylor, from privates to flight sergeants of squadron B; Edward M. Knox, John M. Loftis, and Harold J. Sharpe from privates to flight sergeants of squadron A.

The promotions were made on the basis of outstanding qualities of leadership and ability, as demonstrated by the students in past performances, Col. Switzer said.

British Fleet 'In Readiness'

LONDON, Jan. 10—(UP)—Britain's highest military chieftains were called in to consult cabinet leaders on the Palestine situation today and it was made known that the powerful Mediterranean fleet had been put in a "state of readiness."

For 'Uppity' Manner

Georgia Lynching Party Ends In Trial Scheduled Tomorrow

LYONS, Ga., Jan. 10.—(UP)—Two white farmers go on trial here tomorrow for the murder of Robert Mallard who allegedly was lynched for his "uppity" manner in a section where the Negro is traditionally humble.

A jury of their fellow Toombs countians will try Roderick L. Clifton, 32, and William L. (Spud) Howell, 24. Mallard's widow, Amy, said they were members of a hooded mob that waylaid and shot down her husband as the family returned from a school picnic Nov. 19.

Joseph M. Goldwasser, businessman from Cleveland who has attached himself to the widow's cause, wants a change of venue to Atlanta or Savannah. Goldwasser said he dosen't believe a Toombs county jury would convict Clifton and Howell.

However, the prosecution is in the hands of Solicitor Gen. W. H. Lanier and Lanier said he will not seek a change of venue. Furthermore, the solicitor added, he wants "nothing to do with" Goldwasser in connection with the trial.

Goldwasser claims a full power-of-attorney from Amy Mallard and contends that he originally broke the case by unearthing evidence against Howell and Clifton. He also promises "new sensational evidence" to link a third white man with the purported lynch mob.

Lanier said Goldwasser "has never conferred with me about anything and I know nothing of any evidence he says he has uncovered."

Lanier did say that he would be assisted by Aaron Kravitch, the widow's active counsel in the case. Kravitch is a well-known upholder of civil rights in criminal and civil cases.

Editor Of Communist Daily Worker Will Appear Here Tomorrow Night

Rabbi Perlman To Give Talks On Judaism

First Lecture Will Be Today

Rabbi Samuel Perlman, director of the Hillel foundation, will begin a series of lectures on modern Jewish history this afternoon at 4:30 in the Y building. The lectures will be presented every Tuesday afternoon.

The subject for this afternoon will be "Shylock—The Facts Behind This Fiction." The lectures are sponsored by the Hillel foundation, and the public is invited to attend.

Rabbi Perlman was awarded his master's degree in Hebrew literature at the Jewish Institute of Religion in 1930, and a B. S. degree in social science at the College of the City of New York in 1926. He also did graduate work in sociology and social legislation at Columbia. Rabbi Perlman has been at the University since September.

AVC to Discuss Proxy Balloting

A discussion of proxy voting will be the topic for discussion tonight when the American Veterans committee meets in the Presbyterian church on Franklin street.

The renewal of memberships will also be on the agenda of events. All AVC members must renew their memberships for 1949. According to a new rule recently passed by the national AVC convention, known Communists cannot join AVC in good faith. However, any person desiring to join AVC can request a hearing by the membership committee.

Vice President

DURHAM, Jan. 10—(UP)—Dr. Paul Magners Gross, dean of the Duke university graduate school, has been named vice president of Duke university.

Gross' election was announced by a spokesman for the Duke board of trustees. He succeeded Dr. W. H. Wannamaker, who became vice-chancellor of the university last September.

Gross is a member of the panel of experts advising the Tennessee Valley authority on research program developments.

GM Janitor Has Perfect Score In Bowl Contest

T. R. Stone, Graham Memorial janitor, correctly named the winner in the seven bowl games on the ballot to win the Bowl Picking contest.

His prize will consist of eight cartons of Chesterfields.

Wilburn J. Lowe, 209 Ruffin, named the correct winners in all but the Dixie bowl to place second and win four cartons of Chesterfields.

Kirby Sullivan, 500 N. Columbia street, missed the Sugar bowl winner and will receive two cartons of Chesterfields.

The Chesterfields can be picked up by the winners in the Tarnation office located in the basement of Graham Memorial.

Farmers' Co-op To Demonstrate

A team from the Farmer's Dairy Co-operative will give a nutrition demonstration on dairy products at the meeting of the Carolina Dames club on Wednesday night, Jan. 12, in the Pine room of Lenoir hall.

All members of the club and other persons interested are urged to attend the meeting.

Hospital Program Cut

Veterans' Bonus Frowned on By Truman Budget Message

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—(UP)—President Truman made it plain in his budget message today that he frowns on a veterans' bonus at this time.

He also announced a major cutback in the veterans' hospital construction program, cancelling 24 hospital projects in various parts of the country.

Mr. Truman asked $5,500,000,000 for veterans benefits in fiscal 1950. He said that is down $1,300,000,000 from the current year but still represents one-eighth of the entire cost of government.

He emphasized that there will still be plenty of veterans hospital space in every section to take care of everyone with a service-connected ailment, and beds left over.

But Rep. John E. Rankin (D-Miss.) who will be chairman of the House Veterans committee, said he was "extremely disappointed."

"Our first duty is to the men who fought the nation's battles in time of war, and who are now physically unable to take care of themselves," Rankin said.

Mr. Truman agreed, in his budget message, that the nation's "primary long-run obligation" is to disabled veterans and dependents of those who died in service.

But at the same time he raised a go-slow signal on new benefits for men who left the service as hale and hearty as they went in.

Bad Weather Plagues Whole Nation As Snowstorm, Rain Hit California

CHICAGO, Jan. 10—(UP)—Rain, sleet and snow plagued much of the nation from the Pacific coast to the Appalachians today and highway travel was hazardous.

Rain fell in southern California after a rare snowstorm and Los Angeles reported a mid-day temperature of 38 degrees.

Forecasters said the worst weather stretched from the Appalachians westward across the Ohio valley, over the central Mississippi valley and from South Dakota across the plains states to Oklahoma and northern Texas.

Yesterday's cold wave moderated as it moved east, but the western states still were bitter cold.

At mid-day it was 17 below zero at Billings, Mont., and 18 below at Havre, Mont. Minot, N.D., reported minus 13 and it was five below at Valentine. Neb.

Some snow fell in Colorado and at Las Vegas, Nev. It was a shivering eight above zero at Reno, Nev., at mid-day.

Religious Week

Church Field Secretary To Take Part In Seminar

DR. GEORGE D. KELSEY

Dr. George D. Kelsey, associate executive secretary in field administration of the Federal Council of Churches, will be one of the seminar leaders during Religious Emphasis week, to be held Jan. 24 through Jan. 27.

As executive secretary, Dr. Kelsey, who was previously the director of the School of Religion at Morehead college, travels the country, explaining the federal council's program.

A native of Georgia, Dr. Kelsey attended Morehead college, Andovor - Newton Theological seminary, and received his Ph.D. from Yale university. He has fellowships from the General Education board, the Julius Rosenwald fund, and the Charles Foster Kent Fellowship in Religion in Higher Education.

Dr. Kelsey is a member of the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen, the Young Men's Christian association, and the National Council on Religion in Higher Education. His journalistic writings include articles on "The Nature of the Christian Ethic," "Christian Love and Race Relations," and the "Christian Way in Race Relations."

German Fraternity To Meet Thursday

The Beta Rho chapter of Delta Phi Alpha, national honorary German fraternity, will hold its quarterly business meeting Thursday at 7:30 in Roland Parker lounge 3 of Graham Memorial.

All active members are urged to attend, since several vital items must be brought before the entire membership.

Bewildered and Confused

Mother Jailed, Father Dead, Six-Year-Old Comes to U.S.

WESTOVER FIELD, Mass., Jan. 10—(UP)—Bewildered and confused, six-year-old Jimmy Ybarbo returned to the United States today—still unaware that his father was dead and his mother in prison.

He stepped from a C-47 transport plane into a blaze of floodlights and flashbulbs. He punched at his eyes and complained that he couldn't see.

When the lights went out, Jimmy looked around and rushed into the arms of the first woman he saw. He kissed her.

The woman, a total stranger, was a reporter whom Jimmy apparently thought was an aunt on hand to greet him.

Like all other stops, however, the people hovered about him were strangers. Jimmy wasn't even sure about Charles B. Bailey, Jr., of Malden, an uncle, who had come to take him home.

Bailey told the boy about his grandmother and her dog. Jimmy perked up a bit and said he was "glad to be home."

"I want to see Rex," he said.

Jimmy still thinks he flew from Germany to the United States to visit his grandmother. His mother, he believes, is sick in a hospital. No one has told him yet that his mother, Wilma, 23, was sentenced to 20 years in prison for shooting her soldier husband.

Bailey said that neither he nor the grandmother had any idea of how or when they would break the news to the boy.

He had been waiting all day for Jimmy to arrive and was ready to leave the field after he learned that the plane carrying Jimmy from Germany had been delayed at Stephenville, Newfoundland.

Gates to Talk On Viewpoint Of Indictment

Communist Party, Forum Sponsoring

By Sam McKeel

John Gates, editor of the Daily Worker, New York Communist newspaper, and one of the 12 men recently indicted by the federal grand jury of New York, will speak in Memorial hall tomorrow night at 6:45.

Co-sponsored by the Carolina Forum and the Communist party of Chapel Hill, Gates will present the views of the men who were indicted for "conspiracy."

Gates is one of the 12 members of the national board of the Communist party. The board in its entirety was indicted.

A long list of activities and arrests lie behind Gates. In 1933 he was arrested in Warren, Ohio and charged with "making a loud noise without a permit."

In releasing the news that it was co-sponsoring a Communist speaker on the campus the Carolina Forum made the following statement: "The Carolina forum was founded for the purpose of bringing to the campus of the University well informed persons to speak on current national and international problems. The Forum maintains that it is its duty to present all points of view on these subjects.

"Embracing five major organizations who frequently brought speakers to the campus, the forum at times co-sponsors with minor organizations, speakers whose affiliations or backgrounds would make them of interest to the entire campus.

"The forum was approached by the Communist party of Chapel Hill in the hope that the forum would co-sponsor with them a speaker who would present clearly the case of the 12 Communists recently indicted by the federal grand jury of New York.

"Thus, in line with the University's tradition of fairness to all points of view, the forum and the Communist party of Chapel Hill will jointly sponsor the speech of John Gates.

Tribute from Oklahoma

A fine compliment to the conduct of Tar Heel fans at the Sugar Bowl came last Friday from a University of Oklahoma student in a letter to the editor of the Oklahoma Daily. The letter said in part:

"I am afraid that tributes will go unspoken, and I know that a very sincere one is due the Tar Heel fans. Never have I seen or met so many or so fine a group of football enthusiasts. Southern charm and dignity, which lacked the loud braggart, obnoxious air which is rampant and typical of an Oklahoma crowd.

"Sportmanship was on Bourbon street, as well as on the football field. Before the game it was, 'May the best team win, you all,' and afterward it was 'North Carolina has the second best team in the nation'—as fine an eulogy to a victor as I've ever heard.

"So hats off, and sincerely, to the backers of the Tar Heels, to the ladies and to the gentlemen from Chapel Hill."

Such a compliment is one to be appreciated and one which North Carolinians hope is well deserved at all times whether at athletic events or otherwise, at home or away. But the Oklahoma writer underrates his own university's brand of western friendliness, for Tar Heel fans came back from New Orleans impressed with the spirit and sportsmanship of th Soonr supporters. One compliment in particular it would be pleasant to hear more often in this section of the country where winners are prone to "rub in" their victory—"The Oklahomans were good winners."

A Sampling of Culture

Not least important among the opportunities for obtaining a liberal education at the University are those found outside the class room. Hardly a week goes by but the extra curricula calendar is studded with well known men here to speak on politics, art, religion, music, drama, current affairs and all the other fields of human interests; with talented singers, good music and good plays presented by the University's own bands, glee clubs and theater groups and by visiting artists. Of course, professors and textbooks provide the backbone of learning, but these added attractions are valuable supplements in giving students a small sample of culture in a wide variety of forms.

This week, for instance, events taking place from Sunday to Sunday include the presentation of a Mendelssohn oratorio by the Chapel Hill choral club, two one-act comic operas given in the Student Entertainment series, tryouts for a new Playmaker production, performances of Shakespeare's Macbeth and Hamlet, architectural exhibits and lectures at Person hall, a speech on Latin American affairs by a Rhodes scholar, a talk on the aspects of the French Theater at a Bull's Head tea, and a speech by the editor of the Communist newspaper, The Daily Worker.

Nowhere else in North Carolina and in few places in the United States outside the large cities is there as much cultural activity as in Chapel Hill. Many people are able only once or twice a year to make long trips and pay dearly for the privileges which are to be found here freely and abundantly at all seasons of the year. Perhaps, as some of the University's more sarcastic professors would say, it is a shame to waste such benefits on the callowness of youth. But in all likelihood many present students will return later in their lives to drink deeper of the cultural attractions which they are now too busy or too unheeding to bother to taste.

What $$$$ Have Done

Among the specific things that WSSF contributions have been used to accomplish in the past two years are:

Establishment of nine complete book publishing units for universities where libraries were destroyed.

Provision of 100,000 pounds of food for European students in the academic year of 1947-48.

Support and provision for supplementary feeding centers serving 70,000 Chinese students in the academic year 1947-48.

Shipment of more than $12,000 worth of laboratory equipment to uhiversities in Europe and Asia.

Establishment or support of student rest centers and t.b. sanatoria in China, India, Poland, Germany, Greece, Austria, Italy, Switzerland, and France.

Chollie's Follies

Bulgarians Worse Off

By Charlie Gibson

TOUSHAY for TODAY: The next time you look at Lenoir hall food, remember that canteens operated in Bulgaria by the World Student Service Fund are able to serve only a thin soup and a plate of mashed potatoes at noon, and soup and cabbage at night. Think, too, about the 90 per cent of all students in Japan who are hoping that WSSF can afford the santonin to cure their acute cases of intestinal worms. Then give today for the world's tomorrow.

CAROLINANTICS: One University psychology major who is already applying his mental-earning is Tom Shetley. The amateur hypnotism show that Tom gave for the CH Junior Chamber of Commerce at Terrace View last week was almost fine enough to send all the Chamber boys out to publicize Chapel Hill as the South's own New York. . .WSSF. . . Priscilla Moore is having great difficulty explaining how a playfully intended slap blacked the eye of a date of hers—an ex-intercollegiate boxing champ, at that. Quick, somebody notify Wheaties. . .WSSF . . .Then there's the lad who pulled the wrong yellow class schedule sheet out of his pocket when cute and chipper Margie Norris passed by and spoke to the boy behind him in the book-ex line. The poor passonized critter went all the way through Steele basement trying to buy texts for courses that he took last quarter. . . WSSF—We Should Stop Fighting.

"S'IL VOUS PLAIT" PLAY: It was love unlimited aboard a limited for Alan Smith and Jean Farnoff. When Jean entrained for New York to marry a fiance waiting there, Alan was in the same Pullman. Having known each other casually in a University French class, the two struck up a conversation. Chatting on, Jean found that Alan obviously had lots more in common with her than some people she could mention. So they got off together, whistling Lohengrin at a whistle stop en route. A few hours later, the New Yorker got "Dear John" telegrammed. Now congratulations are in order for Chapel Hill's newest Mr. and Mrs. Smith.

Report from Germany

'Little People' Not Repentant

(The following is an extract from a letter written by Jack Andrew, President of the Associated Student Union of the University of California, to the U. of C.'s Californian following a visit to an international student rest camp in the French zone of Germany during the past summer. Mr. Andrew was a delegate to the International Student Service conference in Combloux, France, representing the students of the University of California. The rest camp which he visited, Foyer International des Etudiants, is run by ISS)

The rest camp was set up to accommodate 30 students: 20 Germans 10 French and five displaced persons of other nationalities. Because of the currency reform in Germany it is impossible for any German students to pay even their transportation expenses, in spite of the fact the the ISS will accommodate them at no cost to the individual.

The Foyer is not a sanatorium, and an effort is made to restrict it to those students who are post-convalescent. If able, the students take care of their own medical bills, but otherwise, ISS arranges for payment. The usual time spent at Muggenbrunn ranges from three weeks to a month, but if poor health or lack of money necessitate it, thee students often stay longer.

JULY 14, (BASTILE DAY) was, of course, an excuse for a party, and wine was served at dinner, an occasion for the Foyer. Everyone was to dress in some revolutionary costume; the few Americans, for lack of other costumes, dressed as American Indians, with blankets, lipstick and long slender leaves as feathers. The British thought it was the Boston Tea Party, the French thought it was the French and Indian War, and the Germans, Czechs and the rest just looked. All of us had an enjoyable evening, and I feel that little incidents such as this one, which tend to break down formality, are perhaps shaping incidents which may eventually help to achieve a measure of the vague term "international understanding."

There is a great shortage of material supplies in Germany, but there is equally a starvation for contact with the outside world. Of the five German students with whom I talked, there were two ideas which seemed prevalent:

1) They were not repentant for any wrongdoings committed by the Nazi party. The leaders had made mistakes, but as they were only "little people" they could not be aware of the implications, and they were forced to comply with instructions.

2) An idea equally as damaging to international cooperation was that no country, no problems existed other than those of Germany. They were of little importance to these five German students, as well as to other German students to whom I talked. While this may seem to be a natural tendency for these people, I feel that it must be overcome.

One student (in the European sense), a doctor of philosophy, would admit the mistakes of Germany and then attempt to rationalize them. He was apparently thoroughly indoctrinated by the Nazi machine, and quite often he would approach the old concept of the superrace.

One entire evening was spent with him discussing the reasons behind the persecution of the Jews in Germany. In describing the situation to us, he very frankly told us that there was a great deal of envy involved, as many Jews were in responsible and profitable positions—an idea used extensively in the Nazi propaganda and to a great extent within the United States.

PRIOR TO 1932-33 (this student is 32 years old), he did not think that there was too much feeling either way concerning the Jews. He did feel that the persecution and resentment against the Jews was the direct result of Goebbels' propaganda campaigns, and that the problem will exist within Germany for many years as a result of this. This particular student still feels that there are racial differences between the Germans and the Jews, and does not care to associate with Jews even now.

One German, a chemistry student about 20 years old, was apparently very much baffled by the whole situation.

"THE YOUTH OF GERMANY, of which I am one, are expected to lead this country from its present despair," he said, "but how can I do this? My education has been all of a military nature, and there have evidently been many false things taught me. My examinations were always easy enough so that everyone could pass them; now I am not prepared to study as I should be."

He, as are all the German students with whom I talked, is very eager to go to the United States to study.

Civil Rights Will Come, So--

By Bob Lindsay, Acting Chairman of the U.N.C. Chapter, Students for Democratic Action

The South is almost certain to see some form of civil rights legislation passed by the new Congress. It would be far, far wiser for us to quit our negative screaming and pitch in with positive suggestions. We must bring our Southern experience into the writing of these laws.

* * *

The mandate that the American people gave Mr. Truman in the recent election is far from clear-cut. They may have elected him because he promised to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act. They may have liked his farm program. Maybe it was his plan for fighting inflation.

But the one great lesson for the South is that Mr. Truman was elected WITHOUT the Dixiecrats. The Southerners who led the opposition to the civil rights proposals tried every trick they knew to defeat Mr. Truman. They put up another candidate, they spent thousands of dollars, they called him horrible names and distorted his recommendations shamelessly.

And still Mr. Truman won.

So the South should realize that the nation has made up its mind to have some form of civil right legislation. True, our senators can filibuster for weeks. But even filibusters have failed, and we should look beyond to the possible day when the Congress will pass civil rights bills, anyway. Isn't it time now for us in the South to begin offering some positive solutions to problem of civil rights—specifically, the discrimination against Negroes

We recommend, first, that every thinking Southerner examine the legislation that has been proposed. Through most of the campaign last year, the loudest opponents of the bills consistently avoided any clear statement of them. These same laws—or, at least, very similar ones—will be coming up again in the next few months, or even weeks. If we are to take any positive part in the discussions, we must know what the bills say in the first place.

We should realize too, that the answer to race discrimination comes in three packages. Legislation is only one of these; the other two are education and economic opportunity. That means that, along with the legal protections of civil rights, we must begin wrapping the other two packages with stronger twine. One of the most obvious ways to do this is to swing behind many of the measures Mr. Truman suggested this week in his State of the Union message—federal aid to education, expansion of social security, more TVA projects, and the like.

But we must not allow our consideration of the economic and educational packages to draw us completely from the package marked "legislation." For this last one is sure to be delivered to us in some form or other. We must bring our knowledge to bear on the actual content of it.

We must quit pouting in the wings and come out on stage to join the rest of the chorus now. If we don't, we may find ourselves singing badly out of tune later—an uncomfortable procedure for all concerned. Congress is almost certain to write some song for us. Since we're most familiar with the key the song must be in, we are hurting ourselves as well as the rest of the nation if we don't help select the actual notes that go into the song. We must make positive contributions, and make them now.

These Days

Even Among Conservatives

By George E. Sokolsky

Certain adjustments must be made in our thinking, even among the most conservative among us, about the economy of this country. We are capitalists—believing in private enterprise. But what do we mean by that?

I could not help asking myself that question as I watched President Truman, on television, read his speech. Obviously so many, including the President, are for "capitalism," that not define their terms nor identify their implications. The President stated:

"In this society, we are conservative about the values and principles which we cherish; but we are forward-looking in protecting those values and principles and in extending their benefits. . ."

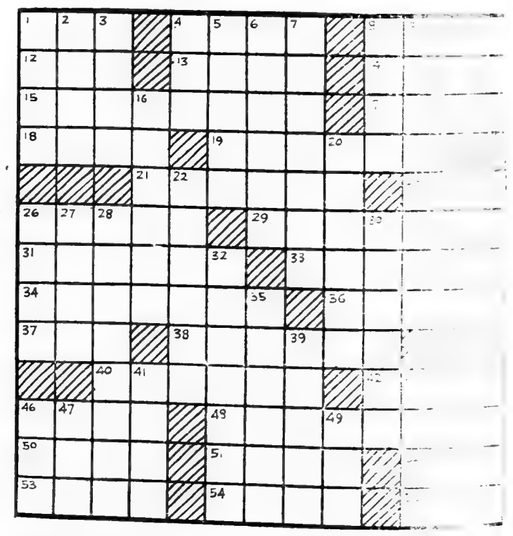
No one can object to this statement of the attitude of the American people. But what are the "values and principles which we cherish"? The President says further:

"This progress has confounded the gloomy prophets—at home and abroad—who predicted the downfall of American capitalism. The American people, going their own way, confident in their own powers, have achieved the greatest prosperity the world has ever seen."

It is at this point that we must pause to define American capitalism. In the United States, capitalism is an economic system which permits the earner to save a portion of the return from his work, to invest his earnings riskily according to his own judgment, to gain or to lose, in such economic devices as he may choose to be advantageous to himself.

The concept of free competition has never been accepted in Europe, where chartered companies, government-subsidized imperialistic enterprises, cartels in restraint of trade, control of production and the protection of the obsolescent had their way. Europe has never freed itself from vestiges of the guild system of the Middle Ages. In the United States, it has been assumed that as we believe in equality of opportunity, we must oppose monopoly in any form—private monopoly and state monopoly.

From this standpoint, it may be said that the United States has come closes to a competitive capitalism in which the individual pursued his course in the marketplace with the least hamper. The New Deal rejected this concept.



The New Deal never clarified its economics, perhaps because it was too busy with politics, but viewed over a ten-year period it is possible to say that it was a form of Fabian socialism, a product of Thorstein Veblen and Sidney Webb as much as John Maynard Keynes, Harold Laski, David Cushman Coyle and Stuart Chase. It accepted the redistribution of wealth by taxation rather than by revolution; the guarantee of a livelihood on a level determined by government; the control of production and distribution and the flow of capital by administrative agencies of the state. But it rejected the concept of government ownership except in cases where private enterprise failed.

This broad concept of the New Deal has come to be accepted by the American people, whether wittingly or unwittingly. Much of it is included in the President's speech on the state of the Union. For instance, President Truman proposes legislation to authorize an immediate study of the adequacy of productive facilities for materials in critically short supply, such as steel, and if found necessary, to authorize government loans for expansion of production facilities to relieve such shortages, and furthermore to authorize the construction of such facilities directly if action by private industry fails to meet our needs.

The phrase, ". . .to authorize government loans for expansion of production facilities to relieve such shortages, and furthermore to authorize the construction of such facilities directly if action by private industry fails to meet our needs" is the essence of Fabian socialism. For the outcome of such governmental intervention in basic industry can only be to lead to socialization of the entire industry. Curiously, Mayor La Guardia had such socialization in mind when he advocated "yardsticks"—government production—to set costs and prices.

Now, we face all this as facts which we need not face theoretically if we are to act upon them. For what is no longer a capitalist economy. We have a mixed capitalist economy, different from England's, yet unlike the other forms of American life upon this continent for three centuries.

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

Worth a King's Ransom

MURPHY DALE RANSOM is a track coach who likes to spend time telling trackmen who to run and Daily Tar Heel sports tells how to run a sports page. But the nice thing about Mr. R. that he is quite sincere in both departments which is why Carolina track teams win many a foot race and the illustrious Dale Ransom now breaks into print.

Mr. R.'s complaints center around the lack of horn blowing by the press in the best efforts of track, and he adds the further charge that a few stars monopolize the squibs of haste that do appear. There are some boys, says Dale, who like old Man River just keep rolling along—with no fans or fanfares.

Now, Mr. R. has a point which he makes in a syrupy Southern drawl that doesn't allow too much reply for those on hand. Track doesn't receive the play as football, basketball and baseball. And the cinder team is probably the biggest single athletic unit in the college which doesn't make it look too good for the home team. But space, debutt the writers, is allotted according to reader appeal, which is in turn based on the number of fans that turn out to see the different sports.

Enter Our Hero

NOW MR. R. WON'T claim that track can outdraw many sports around the University, but he will also blame this on the now-terek-trodden scribes who just aren't making much with the words on sardining Fetzer field for each track meet. Noise this track thing around a bit, says the Coach, and the place will outdraw anything short of the Cat Girl. Look what publicity did for her, he would say. Publicity is certainly a new name for it.

In search of a sheltering opinion on the question, Gullivering Chunk Simmons, who has crossed more borders in the past few years than most fellows have finish lines, was approached for a few words of worldly wisdom at the recent Sugar Bowl orgy.

Chunk, looking his Grecian best, thought for a moment as though waiting for a starting gun somewheres, and then reckoned how it would take a good push from all sides to get track back on fan-drawing feet. "Coach Dale has had the idea it needs in his pocket for a long time," he finally revealed.

Flight by Night

THE IDEA TURNED out to be night track—putting the arcs on Fetzer field in the spring and stopping the competition on sunny Saturdays with baseball and tennis for customers, paying or otherwise. Simmons commented on the large crowds that night track meets had drawn on the Pacific coast and seemed to be wondering why it couldn't happen here.

Mr. R., a man who must be given credit for thinking many times faster than he delivers wordage, therefore must have more up his sleeve than his stop watch. Though the operational cost of afterdark track and fielding would be more expensive than using the free rays of old Sol, it might be a case of spending money to make a trifle more. Maybe we should throw a little light on the subject, Mr. R.

Getting back to Simmons for a paragraph or so, Chunk went on to tell about the huge crowds that turned out to see track in Europe. It seems the people there who have been running for years, must enjoy watching someone who can run a little faster than they can. The gentleman from Charlotte said it was certainly in the blood over there compared to the anemic fans and sports writers in this country.

Mr. S. advanced the theory that track in this country was suffering with the rest of athletics which are hurting from the slump of the postwar boom. And as boxing is being counted over from the lack of an adequate heavyweight class, American track has eased off some with the absence of a sparkling mile field which used to get the most tinkles from the cash customers. "It's just a cycle," finished Chunk who then pedalled off into the crowd.

A Present for the Boys

MEANWHILE, COACH RANSOM plods cheerfully along with or without the fans or clippings. His trackmen are currently banging the boards of the sturdy Tin can in preparation for some invitational meets in the North this winter along with the institutional Indoor games. The latter is one attraction where Mr. R. will find little trouble drawing to a full house. Who else should enjoy turning away spectators?

As to what Mr. R. has for the scribes to write about, he certainly did better by the writers in the nature of a Christmas present than they supposedly ever do by him. The surprise package this year is a gentleman by the name of Bob Albans, who seemingly has more honors than Mr. R. has trackmen. Albans is an Olympic veteran having won two 3rd places, which isn't bad when you've got the rest of the world competing against you.

The newcomer from New Jersey is a freshman, but being a veteran, is eligible for immediate competition. Last Saturday he proved to be top man on both high and low hurdles, then proceeded to high jump like a fellow who'd been living in a upper berth all his life. Albans next moved to his specialty—the broad jump—winning the event, but with a jump several feet short of his usual performance.

It turned out the pit just wasn't any bigger.

Tar Heels Trounced By GW Five, 64-41

4,000 Disappointed Fans See Locals Bow for Second Time

By Dick Jenrette

George Washington's Colonials, beaten in two previous outings against Big Four clubs, turned their wrath on a hapless Carolina quint to the tune of 64-41 before 4,000 disappointed fans in Woollen gymnasium last night.

The Tar Heels of Coach Tom Scott simply had a bad night, but it was more a question of the visiting Colonials turning in an inspired game. George Washington had been beaten by State, 66-37, and Wake Forest, 50-38, previously. Last night they turned in an aggresive game under the boards and worked the ball under the basket frequently for layups to gain a rather easy victory.

Carolina, relying on long set shots for the majority of its points, could not keep up with the hard-driving Colonials, and after eight minutes of play in the game had run up an 18-5 lead. Coy Carson, who along with Dan Nyimicz turned in the most creditable performance for Carolina, entered the game at this point and promptly hit on four quick field goals. Nyimicz contributed another long set to make the score 26-15, but that was the closest Carolina could get to GW for the rest of the game.

Conference Loss

The defeat leaves Coach Scott's outfit with an overall 8-2 won-lost record. The game was a Southern conference affair, and Carolina has a 2-1 mark now within the loop.

Bill Cantwell, 6-2 forward for the visitors, easily copped individual honors for the evening. He looped in 21 points on a variety of jump and hook shots. Moreover, he turned in a great game under the boards.

Although the Tar Heels had a record of only 17 hits in 65 shots at the basket, their biggest trouble was in foul shooting. The locals connected on but seven of 25 free throw attempts. George Washington did twice as well in this department, making 14

Frosh Quintet Tops Louisburg In 64-46 Tilt

By Joe Cherry

Carolina's freshman cagers notched their fifth win of the still young season last night in Woollen gym by trouncing Louisburg junior college, 64-46. The only defeat the frosh have suffered thus far was at the hands of Duke's strong Blue Imps.

Led by Ham Crowder, who racked up 18 points, and John Bowersox, who hit for 17, the Tar Babies recovered from a shakey first half and made the game a runaway in the final stanza.

The first few minutes of the scrap were nip and tuck, with the lead changing hands 6 times before Dick Harter and Bowersox teamed up to put the Tar Babies out in front, 18-15.

The visitors, led by Joe Carter, who sank three quick field goals, fought back and managed a 21-20 lead with five minutes remaining in the first half, but at this point the Carolina frosh caught fire and hit the nets for eight straight points to leave the floor at intermission with a 28-21 edge.

The Louisburg five pulled to within 2 points of the Tar Babies in the opening minutes of the second half when forward Sam Cole got hot and poured five points through the nets before the locals could find the range, but Crowder and Eckert started a rally to put Carolina back in the running and the visitors never threatened again.

Buddy Ussery, sharpshooting forward, and Bill Griflin, lankey pivotman, paced the Louisburg quint, with 14 and 8 points respectively.

The lineup:

Carolina (64)	Louisburg (46)
Johnson 9	Cole 7
Harter 6	Ussery 14
Guyes 2	Griflen 8
Bowersox 17	Gaster 3
Crowder 18	Shotwell 2

Substitutions—Carolina: Eckert (6), Smith, Shacht (1), Check (2), Barr, Redding, Reuning, Slemp (1), Godwin (2). Louisburg: Carter (6), Snyder, Bennett (1), Cooper, McKinney (1), Evans, Thomas (4), Miles.

Half-time score: Carolina 28, Louisburg 21.

Officials: Hayworth and Strayhorn.

Free Substitution Rule to Be Big Problem at NCAA Meeting

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 10—(UP)—The controversial "free substitution" rule, in which the rules committee of the American Football Coaches association asked some changes, will be a major subject at the meeting of the NCAA rules unit later this week at Palm Springs.

The coaches' rules committee, presided over by Lou Little of Columbia, recommended that platoon substitutions be allowed only when the ball changes hands or during a time out; and that single substitutions not be allowed when the clock is running. Little believes this will curb mass substitutions at frequent intervals.

However, Harry Harman of Rutgers, retiring president of the AFCA, maintained that Little's suggestion would result in more substitutions than ever—because in the past platoon substitutions could not be made when the ball changed hands unles there was a charged time out.

Coach Lynn (Pappy) Waldorf of California thinks that there wouldn't be much difference.

"The rule that prohibits single substitutions when the clock is running," says Waldorf, "will mean that it will put an end to the public's belief that every substitute carries instructions from the coach. Other than that, I can't see much difference from the old rules."

The coaches' rules committee only makes recommendations—and the NCAA has the final say. In the past they usually have followed the coaches' suggestion.

Golden Opportunity

The Eastern Carolina Golden Gloves tourney, staged annually by the Raleigh Times is slated for January 17-19 in Raleigh Memorial auditorium. Entries are now open.

Several University boxers entered the event last year and one, Ed McGee, captured his class title. There will be both individual and team competition. Teams must consist of not less than four nor more than eight men.

Trophies will be awarded to the winner and runner-up in each of the eight weight classes and in both the novice and open divisions. Special awards will be made to the winning teams, the most outstanding boxer, most popular, etc.

Full data andd entry blanks may be obtained from Neale Patrick, The Raleigh Times, Raleigh.

MONOGRAM MEETING

There will be a Monogram club meeting tonight at 7:30 in the club house. All members are strongly urged to attend.

LOCAL HIGHS WIN

Ivalee Hill tossed in 11 points last night to lead the Chapel Hill high school cagers to a 35-12 win over Sanford on the local court.

Matmen Prepare For Initial Meet With State College

Coach Chuck Quinlan's varsity and freshman wrestling squads, preparing for opening meets with N.C. State in Raleigh January 19, face a rebuilding occasioned by the absence of four of last year's regular varsity starters.

With four men from the team that last year finished the season with a record of four wins and two defeats, the Tar Heel grapplers will be looking for capable starters in the 121, 128, 136, and unlimited divisions. Carroll Fisher, Phil Kemp, Oscar Gupton, and John Stoloff, all regulars last year, will form the nucleus of the squad, with others such as Paul Edmundson, Ken Huffman, Charlie Harless, Norman Booker, and Ed Turnley filling in the lighter weight divisions.

Other men in the heavier classes that are pushing the experienced wrestlers are Tom Chatham, Bob Blades, Ray Swigert, Lyn Bond, Bernard Harris, Buck Vest, Solomon Monsour, and Bill Meads.

Gupton, who suffered a head injury in an auto accident late last year, is listed as a probable starter at this time. Should he not be ready for the State meet, Lyn Bond, who wrestled against Davidson last year, will probably start at the 165-pound position.

The Freshmen, coached by last year's varsity co-captain Irv Zirpel, are having trouble finding a lightweight for the 121-pound

Justice Receives Camp Trophy

Charlie Justice received one of football's most coveted awards Saturday night when he was presented the Walter Camp Memorial trophy at the 14th annual dinner of the Touchdown club in Washington, D.C.

More than 500 guests attended the dinner at which Choo Choo's name was added to football's honor roll. Other gridiron greats who have been chosen player of the year are Tom Harmon, Charlie Trippi, John Lujack, Bill Dudley, John Kimbrough, and the late Nile Kinnick.

House Speaker Sam Rayburn presented the award to Justice.

Harry Wismer, who announced this year's Sugar bowl game, was picked by the club as the outstanding sports announcer in the country.

Other awards went to Bennie Oosterbaum of Michigan, outstanding coach; Bill Fischer of Notre Dame, who won the Knute Rockne memorial trophy; Andy Davis of George Washington, outstanding athlete of the District of Columbia.

Steve Van Buren of the Philadelphia Eagles, National football league's most valuable player; and Otto Graham of the Cleveland Browns, All-America conference's most valuable player.

Undernourished Greek students are shown eating lunch in a student canteen operated by WSSF in Athens. Here medical examinations can be afforded for only those students who are as much as 30 pounds underweight.

WSSF Funds Will Ease Greek Housing Problem

(Editor's Note: This is a vivid account of the dreadful need in Athens, one of the many cities all over the world where WSSF aid is being applied.)

ATHENS, Jan. 10—Buildings are [illegible] materials everywhere today. A former [illegible] been [illegible] seems [illegible] luxury in [illegible] Hatzikyriakon refu[illegible] where walls are [illegible]

Before the war, Hatzikyriakon was a [illegible] building with [illegible] for the children. Now converted into a center for Greek refugees from countries to the North, a shortage of building materials has made it impossible to partition off individual rooms or living quarters for families. In lieu of anything more substantial, family units have made private quarters for themselves by hanging blankets and rugs in such a way that they form little square cubicles. Inside these tiny rooms, entire families sleep, eat, and even manage to do a little cooking.

Hatzikyriakon, which houses most of the refugee students from the other Balkan countries, has separate provisions for single men and women, who are housed in tents behind the main building. Many of the students there, since they fled with their families, live in the "wooden-walled" rooms of the main building, however.

World Student Service fund representatives in Athens have been able to supply materials for some students to build their own hostels, but the number of hostels must be greatly increased before a large number of students can be benefitted. During the coming year, the WSSF delegates in Greece, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Elmendorf, of Dallas, Texas, hope to obtain enough supplies to allow the doubling of present hostel capacity. In addition, student relief offices in Athens will continue to issue food supplies for supplementary feeding in student canteens in the city.

Wadsworth Says Rooms Available For 86 Students

Dormitory rooms are now available for an additional 86 men, James E. Wadsworth, housing officer, announced yesterday.

Informal Shots Wanted by Yack

Editor Bill Duncan of the Yack was in a dither yesterday afternoon — he had just been informed by his associates that the Lambda Chi's were far ahead of his own Kappa Sigs in their response to his call for informal shots to be used in the '49 Yack.

Duncan is afraid the Yack will never meet its deadline if the shots are not turned in "immediately, if not sooner." He will be in the Yack office in Graham Memorial from 2 o'clock to 5 o'clock every day to receive all contributions. Not only Kappa Sig shots are wanted, but all are welcome.

Duncan said, "All students, organized or individuals, are invited to submit glossy prints, [illegible] And it might be well to bring along names of the people in the pictures, if you know them."

THE BATTLE of climates between California and Florida ended in a clear victory, at the moment, for Florida as an unprecedented cold wave gripped the west coast. Comely Rae Stratton appears at Miami Beach, showing the latest headline.

Hillel Foundation Will Offer Hebrew

The Hillel foundation, under the direction of Rabbi Samuel Perlman, is planning to offer a course in conversational Hebrew to any interested students.

Those interested in the course are asked to get in touch with the Hillel office, and an hour for the course will be worked out to suit the convenience and schedules of the students who wish to take it. Classes will probably get underway next week.

WEATHER

Cloudy and colder with occasional light rain

Carol Goodner, leading actress with Margaret Webster's Shakespeare company, will be seen here on Monday as Queen Gertrude in "Hamlet" in the evening performance, and as Lady Macbeth in "Macbeth" in the matinee.

Playmaker Tickets Still Are Available

High Schoolers Will See Plays

"We have very few tickets left for Margaret Webster's productions of "Hamlet" and "Macbeth" for next Monday," John W. Parker, business manager of the Playmakers announced yesterday. "Students and faculty who have been putting off getting tickets for this matinee and evening should come over to our office in Swain hall as soon as possible."

Parker explained that the reason both performances in Memorial hall are almost entirely sold out is that high school groups from all over the state have been reserving large blocks of seats and will be arriving by bus to see the plays.

The only seats available for both performances are in the first section of the orchestra and in the last section of the balcony. "There will be a limited sale of standing room tickets when these go," Parker added. "All signs point to standing room only in Memorial hall for the Shakespeare double-header Monday."

Newcomers Club To Sponsor Lunch

The Newcomers club is sponsoring a luncheon for all faculty women and faculty wives at the Carolina Inn Tuesday, Jan. 18, at 1 o'clock.

Dr. and Mrs. I. G. Greer will give an interpretive program of ballads and early Appalachian folk songs. Accompaniment to the songs will be furnished by the dulcimer, a quaint stringed instrument which is still found occasionally in some mountain communities.

The price of the luncheon is $1.50. Reservations may be made through the department representatives or by calling Mrs. John O'Neil, telephone 9166.

W.S.S.F. ROUNDUP

The World Student Service fund rolled along yesterday, with very incomplete financial reports showing the total sum to be collected for the charity so far at $157.73.

Alderman dormitory led the door-to-door collections with $50. Third floor of Mangum was second with $6.42 and trailing with the second floor of Lewis with $5.63. The total from solicitations was $62.05. Chairman Dick Gordon yesterday asked all solicitors "to turn in your money to the Y secretary daily. . . . . PLEASE."

Door-to-door solicitors are meeting for a sandwich luncheon at 1 o'clock in the basement of the Methodist church. Miss Payoff contestants will meet in the YWCA office at 4 o'clock.

Dr. Hanft To Address Di Tonight

Pettigrew Is New President

Dr. Frank Hanft of the University Law school will address the Dialectic senate tonight at 8:30 at the inauguration of Jerry Pettigrew as president of the Di for the winter quarter.

Dr. Hanft, well-known for his lectures on the student and religion, will speak on "The Responsibilities of Students as Campus Citizens." He has been a professor of law here since 1937 after receiving several law degrees from the University of Minnesota and Harvard university.

Pettigrew, senior pre-medical student from Reidsville, is a former member of the Interdormitory council and was critic of the Di during the fall quarter.

Other officers to be installed tonight are Banks Talley, president pro tempore; Richard Bowen, critic; Cam West, clerk; Sam Manning, treasurer; James McLean, sergeant-at-arms; Harry Horton, Carolina forum representative; and Don Shropshire, chaplain and Debate council representative.

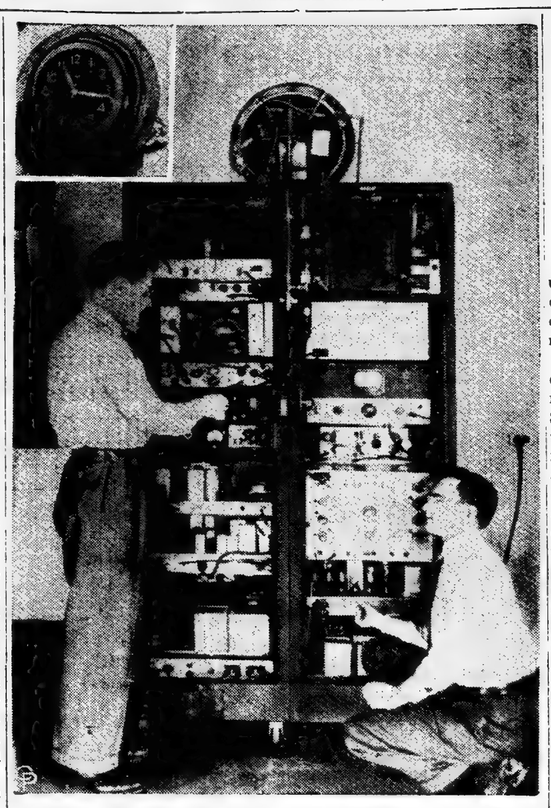
Following the inauguration ceremonies in the Di hall on the (See DI, page 4)

YMCA to Start Financial Drive In Near Future

Charlie Fox, YMCA finance chairman, announced yesterday that the YMCA will begin a fund raising drive in the near future.

According to Fox, the University YMCA is at one of the lowest financial points in its history. He said the YMCA has a 1949 budget of $9,000, and a minimum of $8,000 is needed for salaries and supplies.

Fox declared the YMCA had looked forward to student contributions at the beginning of the school year as a source of money, but that student donations had been disappointingly low. Only $4,500 has been received in student donations, Fox stated, and only 1,500 students have joined the YMCA this year.



Fox said the YMCA finance committee had worked out tentative plans for a fund raising campaign, but the committee would make more detailed plans before announcing the beginning of the drive.

Nebraska Hit Hard By Heavy Ice Coat

CHICAGO, Jan. 11—(UP)—Winter laid a heavy coat of ice across central and western plains states today, isolating communities, tearing down power lines and disrupting traffic over a wide area.

Nebraska was one of the hardest hit states and Army helicopters were ordered out of Lowry Field, Denver, to rush medicine and food to isolated areas.

Eight to 10 inches of snow fell in some mountainous sections within the city limits of Los Angeles, while three to four inches was recorded at Pasadena, five inches at Altadena and three inches at Burbank and North Hollywood.

Replaces Sessions

Moose Chosen Editor Of Carolina Quarterly

Roy C. Moose, senior from Mooresville, has been appointed by the faculty advisory board as the new editor of the Carolina Quarterly. Moose, former associate editor, replaces William Sessions who is doing graduate work at Columbia university.

One of the original founders of the Quarterly, Moose is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, is working for honors in the English department, and is literary columnist for the Daily Tar Heel. He is a past president of the University Veterans' association and was a member of the Student Audit board. Moose is also a free lance writer for state newspapers.

As new editor, Moose has appointed Harry Snowden associate editor. A senior from Flushing, L. I., in the English department, Snowden is former feature editor of the Quarterly.

Alice Sharp has replaced Virgie Matson as fiction editor. A member of the Yack staff, Alice is a senior from Jacksonville, Fla.

In regard to the Quarterly, Moose said, "We hope to continue the work already begun under the leadership of Bill Sessions. It is our desire to make the Carolina Quarterly a publication of which North Carolina can be justly proud."

He continued, "We believe North Carolina is blessed with an abundance of talent which will support a publication such as the Quarterly. The reception has been most gratifying and we hope the public will rally to the support of its continuation."

The entire staff of the Quarterly is now working on the second issue which will appear early in March.

Jacques Hardre Guest Speaker At Bull's Head

Dr. Jacques Hardre, professor in the French department, will be the guest speaker at a tea to be given this afternoon at 4 o'clock by the Bulls Head book shop in the library staff room.

Dr. Hardre will speak on the "Existentialism in the Theater of Jean Paul Sartre." Dr. Hardre was a member of the Free French movement during the past war and was awarded the Croix de Guerre. His subject is in line with the Bull's Head's policy of obtaining speakers on timely literary subjects.

Jean Paul Sartre's play "Red Gloves" is now playing on Broadway and Mr. Sartre's criticism of the changes made in the play has figured quite prominently in recent news.

North Carolina Legislative Session Hears First Series of Important Bills

RALEIGH, Jan. 11.—(UP)—The North Carolina senate, which handled only resolutions in its first five days of the 1949 session, today received its first bills, including one to keep a tighter rein on the state's sprawling system of licensing boards.

Sen. Julian Allsbrook of Roanoke Rapids introduced a bill to require state agencies and administrative boards to submit their rules and regulations to the General assembly each time it meets. The bill would apply to all rules whose violation is a crime. It would be effective within 15 days of passage.

Allsbrook introduced another bill to allow municipalities to reduce the speed limit in residential sections below the limit set by State law.

Atty.-Gen. Harry McMullan ruled after the last General assembly that towns could not lower the State speed limit in their areas.

Sen. George T. Penny of Greensboro introduced a local bill to provide for a stadium at the senior high school in Greensboro.

261 Students 'Flunked Out' Last Quarter

Three Per Cent Are Ineligible

By Margaret Gaston

Two-hundred and sixty-one undergraduate students "flunked out" of the University at the end of the fall quarter, the administration reported yesterday.

That number of students received notices of ineligibility to return for the winter quarter. Some of the cases were reversed, with 194 of the students being refused readmission in the final analysis.

The total number does not include the students who dropped out of the University during the fall quarter.

Figured in percentages, the number of students ineligible to return this quarter was 3.1 per cent of the undergraduate enrollment of 6,144.

A total of 67 students out of 143 who appeared before readmission boards were readmitted into the University. The number rejected by the boards was 76. Students are sent notices of their ineligibility to return to school both at their local and home addresses, and to their father or sponsor. It is optional on the part of the student if he chooses to appear before a readmission board, but a student must appear before the board if he wishes it to review his case.

In the department of Arts and Sciences the greatest percentage of ineligible students was found. Six per cent of the students in this department of 1,737 students were ineligible. This is almost double the number of ineligible students fall quarter of the past school year, when 3.2 per cent were ineligible.

A total of 90 students received notices from the board of readmission of the arts and science department that they were ineligible to return to the University because of a deficiency in the number of hours passed by the student. Of the 41 students who chose to plead their case before the board, 16 were readmitted. Seven girls received notices from the board, and of these two appeared before the board. One was readmitted.

The readmission board for students enrolled in the schools of (See FLUNK, page 4)

Rolader To Head University Club

Ike Rolader was elected president of the University club Monday night to succeed Joe Pete Ward. Rolader, a Chi Phi, is a junior.

According to Rolader, the club is now planning some type of entertainment to be held at the half-times of the basketball games. A beer party at the Terrace View for members of the club is also being planned.

Trapps to Sing

Well-Known Musical Family Schedules Concert for Friday

By Sam Whitehall

The Trapp family singers, a musical clan widely renowned throughout both their native Austria and the America that they have adopted, will appear in concert at 8 o'clock Friday evening in Memorial hall under the auspices of the Student Entertainment committee.

The Trapp's program of classic arias, appealing folk-songs, and rare church music will be free to all University students, this entertainment being financed with part of the block student fee paid upon registration.

For their appearance here during a hundred-stop concert tour, Madame Maria Trapp and family will perform on the recorder and blockflute, two quaint old instruments whose popularity the Trapps are largely responsible for reviving.

They will wear colorful costumes of their native Austrian Tyrol, the girls and their mother in floor-length dirndls with varicolored aprons and shawls and billowy white blouses, the boys in picturesque gray and green Tyrolean hunting suits.

The Rev. Franz Wasner, who was chaplain to the Trapp family in their former home in Austria before the war, is now the director of the ensemble. All of the Trapps are now American citizens, the girls by naturalization last winter and the boys by virtue of their service in the U.S. army.

WSSF to Ask Contributions From Dinner

BSU Will Stage Campaign Idea

Tomorrow University students will be asked, figuratively speaking, to "Take a Foreign Student to Dinner" as the next project of the current campus drive to raise funds for the World Student Service fund.

The Baptist Student union will stage this fund-raising idea for the second straight year in WSSF campaign history.

"All who eat an evening meal in N.C. Cafeteria, the Carolina Inn or Lenoir hall tomorrow will first be given cards explaining this program when they get in line to buy their own food. Then when paying the cashier, they will also be asked by BSU members to make WSSF contributions up to the price of their own meal.

"The idea," according to Betsy Huggins, BSU president, "is to afford University students an impressive reminder of the starvation in the war-devastated countries all over the world today, and then to appeal to them to give the funds to feed their (See WSSF, page 4)

Dean Addresses N. C. Architects

"Chapel Hill has not participated in progressive architecture since about 100 years ago," said Henry Kamphoefner, dean of the School of Design at State College, speaking to a group of students and members of the North Carolina chapter of the American Institute of Architects at Person Art gallery on Sunday at 4 o'clock.

Kamphoefner added, however, that he detected an innate progressivism in the thinking of most North Carolinians which will prepare the ground for a new indigenous architecture.

One purpose of the School of Design, according to Kamphoefner, is "to develop a tradition really our own." The purpose is to originate an organic architecture for this part of the country by using local geographic material with topographic and climatic factors as guides.

Commenting on a show of recent works of North Carolina architects in Person hall, Kamphoefner said that apparently work exhibited is a more progressive representation than shown in former years. The exhibit will continue through Jan. 25.

Indictment To Be Topic Of Address

Speaker Claims Police Record

By Sam McKeel

John Gates, editor of the Daily Worker, New York Communist organ, will address a Memorial hall audience at 6:45 this evening on the case of the 12 members of the national board of the Communist party who were recently indicted by a New York federal grand jury.

Speaking under the auspices of the Carolina Forum and the Communist party of Chapel Hill, Gates is expected to present the Communist side of the men who were indicted for "conspiracy." A reception will be given for the editor in Graham Memorial after his speech.

Gates has been arrested several times before. In 1935 he was arrested for having distributed leaflets to a steel workers' picket line. Gates says, "That was my first glimpse of feudal justice. The judge was notorious for giving drunks who came before him the choice of a stretch in jail or a glass of castor oil. I got 30 days before I could open my mouth to answer to the formal charge."

Gates has 17 years of Marxist study and Communist activity to back up his contentions. Stockily built and cheerful by nature, he is a native New Yorker.

Long an organizer in the Communist party, Gates has been editor of the Daily Worker for the past year.

When asked about the "conspiracy" charges, Gates refers the questioner to the judge who wanted to silence him for demanding unemployment insurance. That was in 1933 in Warren, Ohio. He was arrested and charged with "making a noise without a permit." The principles are the same now as then, he says. "Only the issues have grown with the times. History and the mass struggle overrode the feudal judge, and I'm confident that Tom Clark, Truman and their Republican competitors will not be more fortunate."

Student Recital To Be Presented

A student recital will be presented this afternoon at 4 o'clock in Hill hall, with the public invited.

The program is as follows: "Sonata in B minor," "Sonata in C major" (Scarlatti), Sybil Drake, piano; "Prelude and Fugue in B-flat minor," from "Well Tempered Clavier," (J. S. Bach), Richard Cox, piano; and "Sonata in C minor" (Beethoven), Jocelyn Rhyne, piano.

Music Fraternity National Secretary Will Be on Campus Today, Tomorrow

Mrs. Clarence Sales, of Fort Worth, Texas, national secretary of Sigma Alpha Iota, national honorary music fraternity for women here, will pay her periodic visit to the fraternity today and tomorrow.

Mrs. Sales, during her visit will confer with Dr. Frank Graham, Dr. Glen Hayden, head of the music department, Miss Catherine Carmichael, dean of women, and Gwen Howard, president of the fraternity, and will be a guest at the initiation ceremonies of 11 pledges tonight in Hill hall.

An impressive secret installation which only members may attend, the ceremony will begin at 7 o'clock in Hill auditorium. The 11 pledges to be formally inducted are Mrs. Polly Davis, Jean Hillman, Virginia Johnson, Katherine King, Janet Lewis, Ruth Ling, May Marsbanks, Ann McNeely, Betty Proctor and Barbara Young.

Following the ceremony will be a banquet given by the 7 old members for the initiates at the home of Mrs. Slocum, adviser to the fraternity.

JOHN GATES, editor of the Daily Worker, will speak tonight in Memorial hall on his indictment with 11 other high Communist leaders in the country.

Evans to Speak At Hillel Meet

Emanuel Evans, prominent Durham businessman, will speak on the Jewish community at a supper meeting to be held Sunday at 5:30 in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial, sponsored by the Hillel foundation.

This meeting is to be the first of a series of such supper meetings to be arranged under the auspices of the Hillel foundation. Anyone who is interested in attending these meetings is asked to make reservations at the Hillel office.

Evans is a leader of the Jewish community in Durham, and is president of the alumni chapter of the Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity at the University. He is also vice-consul of the national TEP chapter.

Friday night at 7:30 Alfred Green, vice-president of the Canadian Jewish congress, will speak at the Hillel religious services to be held in the Roland Parker lounge. Green's subject will be "The Canadian Scene."

The Communist View

A national figure in the Communist party of America will speak in Chapel Hill today. John Gates, editor of the Communist newspaper, the Daily Worker, will appear in Memorial hall this evening at 6:45 to present the views of the 12 members of the national board of the Communist party indicted by a federal grand jury on conspiracy charges. On this subject Gates is well qualified to speak, since he is one of the twelve indicted.

Students will crowd the auditorium to hear Gates as they have in the past to hear Glen Taylor, J. Strom Thurmond and others presenting "radical" points of view. And because of the speaker's political label most students will carry with them the preconceived conviction that will disagree with everything he says. What has happened before under similar circumstances and what will probably happen again tonight is this:

A small group which agrees with the speaker will arrive early, sit together and clap loudly no matter what he says. An even smaller group with definitely antagonistic opinions will actively heckle him by booing. Others will join in the booing at times when the speaker makes statements with which they violently disagree. Between clapping and booing a good part of the address will be heard by no one, and the handful of students who might possibly have come with open minds desiring to base their approval or disapproval upon the merits of the speech will have wasted their time.

Regardless of whether they agree or disagree with John Gates' views, most students who attend his address will want to hear what he has to say. Those who go primarily for the purpose of voicing their sentiments upon his political affiliations have a right to express themselves, but their right is valid only if they exercise it with consideration both for the speaker and for the other members of the audience.

Failures Are Encouraging

The scholastic mortality rate among undergraduates was high last quarter. Two hundred and sixty-one students of the 6,144 who began the quarter failed to earn a grade average which would warrant their remaining in school. (The enrollment figure does not take into account the number who dropped out during the session.) However, 67 of those appearing before readmission boards were reaccepted, which drops the total number not returning to school to 194.

University officials report that failures always run higher in the fall than at any other time, and only in the college of Arts and Sciences was the percentage higher this year than last. There failures were almost twice as prevalent this year, running 6 per cent as compared with 3.2 per cent last fall.

The 194 vacancies will make little difference in the large size of individual classes, but the increase of "flunkouts" in Arts and Sciences does indicate something that many have already observed from their own experience—departments are tightening up on their requirements. This, we think, will be beneficial for all concerned. It will serve to weed out many students who merely take up space in the University to the detriment of themselves as well as others and it will also cause students who remain to dig in harder and get more out of their educational opportunities.

'Baptism of Fire'

On a Train Going South

By "Wink" Locklair

The much publicized Chapel Hill Bus Incident came to an end last week when the North Carolina Supreme court upheld this state's public carrier segregation laws. The case reminded us of our first sans Jim Crow experience the week before.

Our "baptism of fire" took place on a crowded Seaboard Railway coach rattling its way down to Raleigh from Washington. Every seat on the train was occupied when we got aboard. People were standing in the aisle.

A few miles outside of Quantico, Virginia, a conductor entered the coach and announced that there were a few "single" seats up forward. We moved with the other standees in that direction.

The coach that the conductor mentioned did have some single seats. But we were somewhat alarmed to discover that (a) this car was marked: For Negroes," and (b) the only empty seats were beside negroes!

What to do! Here was a really first-class dilemma. We who had been born and reared in North Carolina, we who had been taught from childhood to expect seating privileges ahead of "colored patrons," we who had assumed a superior attitude in any sort of racial incident, were now confronted with the monumental possibility of sharing a seat with these people.

There were about 10 empty seats in the coach and they were rapidly being filled by white, presumably Southern, passengers who were not concerned with breaking old tradition. We must have aroused some Caucasian curiosity, standing there, blocking the way, obviously pondering. So, realizing that the trip ahead was a long one, and fervently hoping that we woudn't see anyone from the old home town, we took a deep breath and sat down beside one.

She was a Negro woman. She had on a dark skirt, a blue sweater and she was reading a copy of Carl Sandburg's" "Rememberance Rock." She glanced up briefly and the pained expression on our face must have given her the impression that we wanted to go to the bathroom.

Looking back on it now, we don't feel too bad. After all, the coach was marked: "For Negroes." Come to think of it, the woman might have had some interesting things to say if we had attempted to draw her away from her book. And it is important to note that she did not object in any way to our presence.

It seems much of this pro-segregation is in the mind, a law handed down from one Southern generation to another. It will take some time and much education to change however, and it will be interesting to see what the Congress does with Mr. Truman's proposals along these lines.

Clock Now More Important Than Life Itself

By Jonathan Marshall

Rameses' recent editorial on safe driving was the best thing that has appeared in the DTH this year.

How many people read it? But more important, how many drivers here took it seriously? Judging from the way a brand new Nash tore past the bell tower Sunday, and the way a red convertable with a North Carolina license plate number 257-330 raced down the wrong side of Franklin Street that evening, not too many people care about other human beings' lives.

When Lewis Mumford, in "Technics and Civilization," said that the clock had done irreperable damage to mankind, he was right. We now race the clock so much that it is more important than life itself. Yet, for some strange reason, most of the speedsters don't really get anyplace.

It isn't at all surprising that most insurance companies do not like to give automobile insurance to college students, and consider us bad risks. A few companies even, I am told, refuse to insure college students.

Few people will change their driving habits because they read a few facts about accidents, or because newspapers carry editorials; most of them have to be in accidents before they will change.

Several things can be done in Chapel Hill, however, to improve conditions here. The first thing is for the police to be less lenient on us.

Many residents of Chapel Hill have suggested, both officially and unofficially, that the U turn on Franklin Street should be eliminated. Every day someone has a close call there, even when the driver is careful. There is no excuse for a U turn in the middle of a main street, and it should be stopped.

Bus and truck companies that run regular routes through town might be notified that speed limits must be observed. Students aren't the only violaters, and a bus going 30 miles an hour can make quite a dent in a person's skull if they should meet.

The University made a good start on the parking problem, but the task of preventing reckless driving is far more important, and both University and town officials should do something about it. Perhaps a campaign by students sending in license numbers of reckless drivers to the DTH might sober a few drivers after their numbers are printed.

World Federalists Believe

Dutch Action Can Break UN

By Russell G. Baldwin

Supporters of the United Nations were given a resounding kick in the teeth by our good friends, the Dutch, recently. By their direct, unblushing disobedience to the UN and to world opinion; they have not only snuffed out the flicker of freedom in Indonesia; they have not only driven a spike into the coffin of freedom everywhere; they have perpetrated a vile act of seven greater moment—they have challenged the supremacy of the UN.

'Tis a grave thing to smother a spark of freedom, but new sparks can be produced by spontaneous combustion. With the UN it is another matter. The UN is the product of a universal endeavor, artificially created, while freedom is an urge inherent in the individual. It follows, then, that the fate of the UN is a matter of paramount importance and that Dutch action in Indonesia becomes a matter of great concern to you and me, and to all alive how and who may live in times to come.

Among advocates of a strong UN—which we generally refer to as world government—the reaction to what happened in Indonesia was mixed. Most of us agreed that it was a very serious matter and might possibly lead to dissolution of the UN. Most of us condemned the Dutch on moral grounds; but on one point there was no dissent: Unless the UN takes courageous, punitive action against The Netherlands leaders responsible for the Indonesian outrage, thereby establishing its supremacy over nations, its inaction will confirm the long-suspected belief that the UN is a League of Nations by another name.

Few people acquainted with the structure and the record of the UN believe that it can, in its present form, take effective action against the Dutch unless they acquiesce willingly. The following open letter from United World Federalists, which is the most active of the groups in the U.S. working for world government, to President Truman is a representative expression of the sentiment of most of us who wish to see the UN strengthened before it is too late:

"We condemn the precipitate action taken by the Netherlands against the Republic of Indonesia. The Dutch Government has presented to the world no evidence to justify its sudden and brutal attack upon the Indonesia government while negotiations were still continuing through the Good Offices Committee of the United Nations. If this aggression is allowed to go unchallenged through failure of the United Nations to act and through unwillingness of the United States to take effective measures, the consequences will be disastrous both for the United Nations and our own country. The millions of human beings who live in Asia will come to suspect as empty propaganda American protestations of devotion to human liberty, if the United States attempts to act as the defender of freedom in Western Europe while at the same time permitting Marshall Plan funds to be used directly or indirectly for the reestablishment by force of colonial rule. Only the communists stand to gain from the fact that an armed attack has been the Indonesian government's reward for its successful effort to put down a communist revolt within its own borders.

"Pending enforcement action by the UN, we believe that our government has no choice but to halt Marshall Plan aid to the Netherlands, until the Dutch government has withdrawn its forces, released the Indonesian leaders, and reopened negotiations in good faith.

"Finally, the complete lack of respect that the Dutch Government has shown for the recommendations of the UN and the failure of that organization to halt this obvious act of aggression provide conclusive proof of the fatal weakness of the UN's present structure. Just as Mussolini's invasion of Ethiopia reduced the League of Nations to final impotence, so the Dutch attack may well end all hope for international security in our time, unless the UN is quickly given the legal authority and material power it now lacks.

"We therefore urge that our government immediately declare its willingness to join with all other nations in strengthening the UN by fundamental amendment of its charter. If Indonesia or the United States or any nation is to be freed from the danger of sudden attack and the increasing burden of competitive armaments, the UN must be given the constitutional authority to prevent aggression through world laws binding both on individuals and national governments. UN executive, legislative and judicial organs and a world police force must be established through which such laws can be justly administered and promptly enforced. This act of aggression by the Netherlands, a small and traditionally peaceful nation, finally demonstrates that resolutions that cannot be enforced are meaningless. If our government, backed by strong popular support, will move now to propose transformation of the UN into an effective instrument of government, there is still time to substitute world laws, courts and police force for naked force and the suicidal game of power politics."

Soon Followed By Action

LEADERSHIP. Perhaps the most encouraging news from the political scene this past week came with the announcement that Banks Talley was unanimously chosen to head the Campus Party. Talley has proven his ability in many fields of endeavor in the relatively short time he has been active in the extra-curricular set-up. His placement in the Legislature by the dorm men was soon followed by action—something which, in many cases, is a rare quality for a student legislator.

Few of his colleagues have gone out of their way, as Talley has, to sample opinion on many issues which have been placed before that group. Even fewer have copied his determination to consider those things which should be acted upon. It is entirely possible that he will figure prominently in the spring elections, and his talent could be more effectively used. As for now, this column can think of no better person to head the new Ways and Means committee of the Student Legislature than Banks Talley—an experienced legislator, President pro tem of the Dialectic Senate, Secretary of the Carolina Forum, and President of the Chi Psi pledge class.

SAFETY. The University Safety Committee has taken many helpful steps to correct undesirable situations since its formation, but one of the most dangerous threats to student safety now apparently goes unnoticed. In the lower "quad" on Raleigh Street, parking is still allowed on both sides of this narrow thoroughfare in spite of reports of scratched fenders, broken limbs, and narrow escapes. To permit a situation like this to remain so is extremely unwise. This column suggests to the Safety Committee that it immediately consider the seriousness of these conditions, and act at once to remedy them. Even the elimination of parking on one side would help considerably.

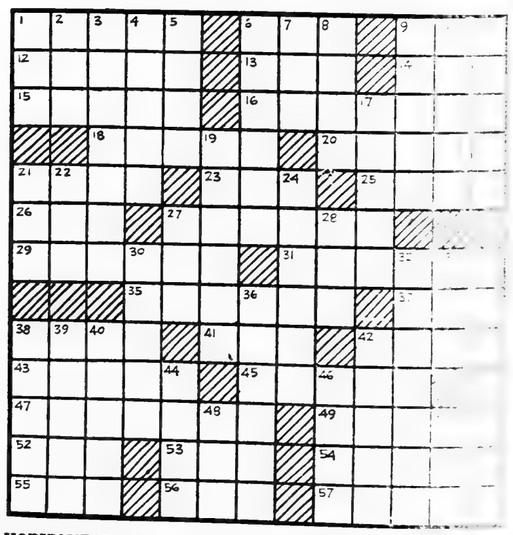
Chiang Will Fight Russia

By George E. Sokolsky

Chiang Kai-Shek may be forced to make a last stand at C or even in Formosa, but the latest news I hear from China he will not surrender to Soviet Russia. He fought Japan 1931 to 1945 and he will fight Soviet Russia.

Nor has Madame Chiang Kai-Shek's mission to this altogether failed. For ten years, a vicious propaganda, muc emanating from the state department, has been violently Chiang. They built a picture of incompetence and corrup which there has undoubtedly been plenty in China as in countries, including the United States. Furthermore, our sador to China, the aged missionary, Dr. Leighton Stuart, pu the "Vinegar Joe" Stilwell line, has been supporting an Chiang coalition movement in spite of our "cold war" with Russia. Much of the news that comes to this country fr foreign country emanates from our embassies and Dr. Stuart a most reliable source because for more than three decades been so immersed in Chinese affairs that he is not wholly tive.

Well, Madame Chiang's quiet visit seems to have arres violence of the anti-Chiang propaganda. I not one has yet apologized to our onetime ambassador Patrick Hurley, who was right and told the truth and b in the teeth of those who favored Soviet Russia while pay-check from the American taxpayer. With Madame C in this country, this infamous chorus has quieted down.



China suffers most in this country from mixed repres At a most tragic moment in her long history, when Manchu north China have been conquered by a foreign foe, Soviet some Chinese politicans are angling for American favor coalitionist theory. Their argument runs thus: "Chiang stand. He must fail because Soviet Russia objects to h fore, take me and I can make a deal with Soviet Russ the Chinese Communists."

Although common sense and any knowledge of the s would make such men suspect as traders between Russia United States, there are American officials who are so a to get China out of their hair that they would be willing an unseemly compromise now in the hope that events wi themselves out. The stupidity of it, is that any coalitio ment in China is bound to be a Communist government, an what happened in Poland, Czechoslovakia and Hungary wi pen in China.

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

A Point of Law

A PROFESSOR OF LEGAL knowledge in the Commerce school posed the question recently of just what did a sports writer get out of a class in Business Law. Monday night at Woollen gym a little law came in handy. Possession, according to the legal boys, is nine points of the law. For the Colonials of George Washington who laid down the law to the local basketballers, it proved to be the 23 points of the ball game.

The Tar Heels, according to the score sheet, have now lost two contests this season and in each defeat, they showed a definite lack of ability to control the backboards and thereby keep top tabs on the basketball. The old saying of "You can't score without it, and they can't score if you've got it," never rang truer than it did Monday night. The Tar Heels, beaten on the backboards, were consequently overcome on the scoreboard.

The lack of control on the part of the Carolinians isn't too easily explainable. Coach Tom Scott had seemingly enough height on the floor at the start of the game in deploying Nemo Nearman and Howard "Easy" Deasy in the same starting five. The tougher Colonials not only brushed by these formidable towers of strength, but the visitors had Nearman back on the bench with a dangerous number of fouls before you could say "Shapiro."

Charity Begins at Home

AFTER AN EARLY POINT in the ball game, the Tar Heels were not too long with it, and slipped into arears, never to return into the ball game. The continual loss of rebounds to the enemy and a number of baskets on taps by the Colonials broke the back of the Carolina offense and defense for the evening. The Tar Heels too seldom got but a single shot on each venture into the front court, and they weren't hitting the target enough the first time around to make up a 23-point difference.

The Tar Heels were notoriously delinquent in still another department. Charity, which supposedly begins at home, never quite got underway for the Scottmen who missed the amazing total of 18 out of 25 free throws. Those little points lost here and there could have kept the locals in the ball game throughout the evening.

George Washington, to add to the troubles of the Tar Heels, had a good night when it came to throwing the ball up for field goals. They tossed the ball around like their namesake had his silver dollar, hitting from inside and out and getting a lot of shots from the sometimes defensively lax Tar Heels. To play as loosely and carelessly as they do, the Colonials have a fine basketball team.

Competition Looms

COACH TOM SCOTT has his work cut out and plastered on all the sport pages from here on out. He has a team that started like a house afire, but has done little more than simmer through the last three ball games. They will need a mental push from their leader, and Scott can also count on a student body that lifted the roof noisily from the foundations to accord each spot of Tar Heel brilliance.

Carolina faces a tough season ahead with a large number of good teams out to get into the act of beating the Tar Heels. The conference competition as typified by George Washington is probably the best in many a season. At Wake Forest tonight the Scottmen will encounter another capable opponent in the Demon Deacons who have already given the Colonials a thorough dry cleaning operation.

In neighboring Durham stands still another out to turn the Tar Heels Scott-free of any chance at Conference honors. Duke is a well-balanced aggregation headed by a tall Collins who has a Mickey of a scoring punch. Davidson also bears a watchful eye.

The State of State

AND THEN THERE'S the big question mark of the entire Southern, if not national, basketball picture—the Tar Heels' brothers in barns at nearby State College. The Wolfpack, who prefer to be called Hoosiers rather than be soiled with an agricultural connotation, are difficult to understand especially if you had the privilege of seeing them play in the pre-Christmas period.

Since then they have hit the road on an idiodyssey of some 12,000 miles which must have brought something into the till for what it took out of the State basketballers. They returned home last week with a record of six and six which goes better in a crap game than it does in the current cage picture. The five losses which occurred on the trip were, of course, all to good teams, but five losses are still five losses.

The latter observation is rendered because a team with the Wolfpack talent has no apparent reason to lose games with such rapidity. The explanations rendered for the actions seem to boil down to the following.

(1) Too much trip.

(2) Too much basketball. The Wolfpack has placed basketball on a year-round basis and all play and no diversion makes Johnny a dull basketball player. The 1947 Carolina football team proved that.

(3) Too little training and adherence to rules and regulations. Though one's conduct off the court is actually no one else's business, search for national honors means the revealing of private lives to a hungry public. Ed Bartels' dismissal from the team on the Coast is an outward sign that all is not well, and the rumors are flying like elbows under a college backboard.

One wishes State all the best in its quest for national honors, but hopes that in its efforts, the Wolfpack does not damage the fine name of Southern basketball. It looks to be having one of its better seasons.

Cagers To Play At Wake Forest Tonight

Deacons Favored In Big Four and Conference Game

By Zane Robbins

A hot-and-cold Carolina quintet will invade Baptist Hollow for a game with Wake Forest in Gore gymnasium at 8 o'clock tonight. The Deacons will hold a slight edge over the Tar Heels in tonight's Southern conference contest.

The Carolinians were rolling along in top form until they ran into a fighting band of NYU Violets last week in Madison Square garden. The Violets kicked the lid off the Tar Heels' Carolina winning skein at seven straight.

A couple of nights later the Scottmen blasted a mediocre Virginia Tech crew in Blacksburg, Va. and headed back to Chapel Hill with an even break on the road and an 8-1 record for the season. Monday night's lop-sided loss to unheralded George Washington university did much to lower the Carolina prestige, however.

Tar Heels Ready

The Deacs swamped the Colonials, 50-38, last week in Gore gym, and on the basis of comparitive scores, which can seldom be depended upon, should wallop the Tar Heels tonight. Coach Tom Scott and his merry crew have other ideas, however, and will be out to keep the Deacons well up on their prayers in tonight's loop tussle.

Dan Nyimicz, Hugo Kappler, and Coy Carson all showed well in Monday night's offensive attack, while Rip Ryan and Nemo Nearman hogged the defensive laurels. Charlie Thorne, a reserve, has turned in some sterling performances in the past few games, and may crowd a starter off the first team with a little more seasoning.

Casey is Coy

The Wake Forest attack is centered around 6-4 pivotman Bob Corey. Corey returned to the Deac lineup only a few days ago after missing several games because of a fractured wrist. Will Kaylor and Stan Najeway pack

Lloyd Mangrum Wins In Los Angeles Test

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 11—(UP)—Lloyd Mangrum today credited a change in equipment and a lucky pair of pajamas for his two-stroke victory in the $15,000 Los Angeles Open tourney.

The lanky veteran shot a one-under par 70 yesterday for a four round total of 284 to break a four-way third round deadlock. It was Mangrum's first win in the 23-year-old classic and he called it the "one I'd rather have than any other."

Although he plays out of Chicago, Mangrum has long been a Los Angeles resident. He good-naturedly gave the rest of the star-studded field the secret of his success.

"I changed shafts on my woods yesterday," said handsome Lloyd, "and then, for luck, wore pajamas under my pants. It was mighty cold out there."

Tar Heel Tracksters to Run In Capitol Games Saturday

Carolina's indoor track season will get off to an official start this weekend when nine Tar Heels will participate in the Washington Evening Star Invitational indoor games in the District Armory.

Some of the nation's outstanding trackmen will be entered in this meet, which will be run for the second time since its post-war revival. Collegiate, high school and other amateur tracksters will compete against each other on Friday night and Saturday.

The meet will be run without a team score. Each event will be complete in itself with awards being made to each winner.

Coach Dale Ranson has high hopes of top notch Tar Heel performances in Washington and is entering his cinder standouts in five events. Indications are that the competition will be very tough in all five.

Tar Heel entries in the Washington extravaganza are Dick Taylor, in the timber-topping events; Sam Magill, two miler; Julian MacKenzie, in the mile; Jack Moody, high jumper and a mile relay quartet yet to be picked. Clarence McLain, Laddie Terrell, Bill Crimmins, Stan White and Percy Flowers are the leading contenders for positions on the team.

Ranson is trying to enter Bill Albans, freshman sensation from Cranford, N. J., in the Washington meet. Albans proved in last Saturday's practice meet with Duke that he is going to be one of the best track performers seen either in Woollen gym or on Fetzer field in the last few years.

BADMINTON TOURNEY

All persons who are connected with the University or are residents of Chapel Hill have been issued an invitation by the Intramural department to take part in the all-campus badminton tournament beginning January 19.

Entries will remain open from tomorrow night at open house through January 17. The tourney will consist of both men's and women's doubles and singles matches.

Tribe to Tribe

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., Jan. 11—(UP)—Tommy Thompson, center on the William and Mary football squad, has signed a one-year contract with the Cleveland Browns of the All-America Football conference, it was annouced last night.

Terms of the 215-pound gridder's contract were not revealed in full.

Thompson also has accepted an invitation to play in the College All-Star football game in Chicago next August. The All-Star tilt will match the college players against the Philadelphia National Football league champs.

NCAA Officials Discuss Changes In Football Rules

PALM SPRINGS, Cal., Jan. 11—(UP)—The NCAA rules committee today examined football's free substitution rule with indications that the chief change would eliminate substitution while the clock is running.

The committee opened its three-day meeting here yesterday, ending action begun at the full meeting of the Association last week in San Francisco.

Representatives of eight geographical locations met in subcommittees yesterday to go over recommendations to be considered at a meeting of the full committee today and Tuesday.

Leading coaches and athletic directors were present to participate in debate on possible rule changes, mass substitution in particular.

Lou Little of Columbia, chairman of the Coaches' committee, was the leading proponent of a change in the platoon system of subbing. He indicated that the substitution en masse only when major change would provide for possession of the ball changed or a time-out was called.

WSSF Basketball Pool

WSSF is sponsoring a basketball pool on the Saturday night game between the Carolina five and Washington and Lee at Lynchburg, Va.

To win this contest, the entrant must correctly predict the total number of points scored in this game or come closer to the correct total than any other entry.

A booth will be manned by a WSSF representative in the Y today through Saturday for the purpose of selling chances on the pool at ten cents each.

Each entrant may purchase as many chances as he wishes at ten cents each. He then will predict the total score and this will be recorded.

The winner (or winners) will receive five cartons of Chesterfields from the campus Chesterfields representative. In case there is more than one winner, the cigarettes will be divided.

An example of this contest would be the Monday night game with George Washington, which GW won, 64-41. Add 64 and 41 and the total number of points for the game is 105. If anyone holds that total, he wins the Chesterfields.

Eastern Officials Seek Organization To Stop Heckling

By Steve Snider

NEW YORK, Jan. 11—(UP)—Thirty-seven eastern basketball referees were enrolled today in a new "union" because heckling crowds and coaches finally got on their nerves.

"We're only human," said President Sam Schoenfeld of the College Basketball Officials association. "And nobody likes to be humiliated publicly the way some of us have been."

Schoenfeld reported that even the most thick-skinned officials have been distressed by the recent storms of heckling from the stands and coaching benches. He promised his outfit would do something about it.

Picket Crowds?

"I don't think there'll be any picketing of crowds for being unfair to referees," he said. "But we're planning an educational program that will include both officials and coaches to reach a better understanding."

Enrolled in the group are whistle-tooters down the Eastern seaboard from Boston to Washington. The main idea is to achieve a standard game of basketball at least in the East even if the rules interpretations remain at variance in other sections of the nation.

Schoenfeld expects to put the coaches on the spot in a series of clinics.

"We hope to stage full length games with the coaches acting as the officials," he said. "Then we'll find out just how they want the game handled.

Stop the Coaches

"That ought to stop some of the disputes with coaches. Officials can stand most of the yelling, sharpshooting, and heckling from the stands but it's tough to take when some of the men closest to the game lead the noise."

The new association was formed last March with the blessing of the Eastern College Athletic conference office which assigns officials for games played by more than 50 schools.

Its existence, however, just was made public at a time when criticism of Eastern referees, especially at Madison Square Garden, was about as high as anyone could recall.

"We're simply interested in having our work better received by the public, coaches and players," Schoenfeld said. "A lot of us wanted to do something before some of the older referees check out of this tough job of officiating."

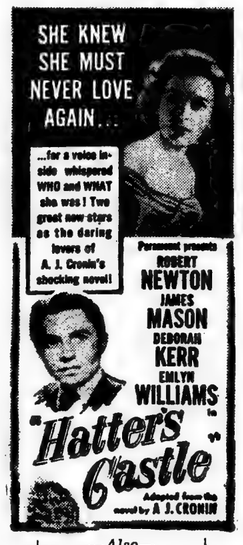
COED DEADLINE

The deadline is approaching for the entries in the coed basketball tourney and it is requested that all Dormitory and Sorority managers have the names of their teams and players with Billie Crawford at the Women's gym by January 19.

The Intramural department plunged headlong into a midst of activities Monday when the popular winter quarter basketball tourney was inaugurated with six games, all involving dormitory squads.

The tournament picked up momentum yesterday when 18 dorm and frat teams clashed on both the Woollen and Tin can courts, but the highest pitch possible will be obtained today when the mural teams will utilize every possible court in the Carolina athletic system in a total of 27 different games that will commence at 4 o'clock this afternoon and last until almost 10 o'clock in the evening.



So the cage tourney may function as smoothly as possible, Coach Rabb and his assistants will use all the courts in the Tin can and in Woollen, providing that the murals do not conflict with the varsity contests on the latter courts.

The officials are highly pleased with the interest that has been shown by the active Tar Heel students. This enthusiasm is easily discernible when one discovers that there are seven Dormitory leagues and ten fraternity loops which will promote plenty of mural activity these next four to five weeks.

Vick To Lead Seminar During Religious Week

The Rev. Marvin Vick, a delegate to last year's White House conference on The Family, will lead a seminar on Marriage and The Family during Religious Emphasis week, Jan. 24 to 27, it was announced yesterday.

The Rev. Mr. Vick, pastor of the Jonesboro Heights Methodist church of Sanford, is a member of the National Council on Family Relations and of the Planning committee for the North Carolina state conference on the family.

A member of the North Carolina conference, he has served pastorates at Roxboro, Bahama, and Sanford, and is the dean of the Youth Assembly program at Louisburg college for the Methodist church. He is a member of Groves conference on conservation of marriage and the family.

Vick, who served four years as an Army chaplain in the European theater of war, graduated from Southern Methodist university in 1939. He studied marriage and the family under Dr. Ernest Groves in 1938 and 1939.

Sound and Fury Completes Document

At the last meeting of Sound and Fury the completed club constitution was presented and ratified by the group. Adoption of the constitution set up official regulations for the musical comedy group and necessitated reelection of officers.

All persons in office prior to the adoption were unanimously re-elected until May when the general elections will be held. President Jerry Weiss, Vice President Faith Adams, Secretary Doris Weaver, and Treasurer Mark Barker will remain in office.

Bob Ferguson has been appointed head of the by-laws committee which will give its report at the meeting on Jan. 24. Other committee heads will also be appointed at that time.

This particular stunt to support the international charity is to be conducted by members of the Greater BSU council, the executive board for approximately 2,000 Baptist students enrolled in the University. The entire WSSF drive is being sponsored by the Council for Religion in Life, the inter-denominational organization of all campus religious groups.

Working for WSSF in the various dining halls from 5 to 7 o'clock tomorrow evening will be the following students: Carolina Inn—Oliver Gaskins, Anne Marshall Emmert, Coye Rogers, and Orman Hutcherson; N.C. Cafeteria—P. A. Gentry and Riman Muth; Lenoir hall—Edlyn Freerks, Betsy Huggins, John Hough, Fran Greene, Jo Bissell, Walter McCraw, Anne Carlton, Jim Huggins, Ed Strain.

Arts and Sciences and Commerce met together. There was no appointed chairman, as the chairmanship shifted to fit the particular need of the student. Members of the board included Dean D. D. Carroll of the Commerce school, Dean William Wells of the Arts and Science school, A. I. Suskins, Geroldine Foster, Roy Armstrong, Katherine Carmichael, and Fred Weaver.

To qualify to stay in school a student enrolled in the school of Arts and Science must pass five hours in one quarter, 20 hours in two terms, and 35 hours in three quarters.

In the Pharmacy school, Dr. M. L. Jacobs reported that only four students were not allowed to continue work in that school this quarter. The five-man readmission board, headed by Jacobs, sent notices of ineligibility to 14 students, and 10 were reinstated. Last fall quarter four students failed to meet the qualifications to continue in school.

Jacobs said that the Pharmacy school had a limited enrollment of 219 students. The school turned away a conservative estimate of three times that number, he said. The school enrolls a select group of students on a competitive basis. Forty-one students made the honor roll, and 87 qualified for the dean's list.

In the School of Commerce, all 45 students who received notices of ineligibility appeared before the readmission board. Of these 39 were rejected and six were readmitted. Fifty-three students dropped out of the Commerce school during the quarter. Last fall quarter 34 students were suspended because of failure to meet the stipulations of the department.

In the Commerce school a student must pass 35 hours in three successive quarters and 20 hours in two successive quarters.

In the General college 112 students received notices of ineligibility. Of these 36 appeared before a board of readmissions, and four were rejected. Last fall quarter 128 students received notices, and of the 85 that appeared before the board, 57 were readmitted into school, and 28 rejected.

Freshmen are required to pass 30 hours in the first three terms, and sophomores must pass 35 hours for the three quarters. A minimum of five hours must be passed per quarter.

The department of education, which was formed this quarter, did not declare any students ineligible, Guy Phillips, dean of the school said yesterday.

more scoring punch than any of the Baptists, and Charlie Meuller has been rapidly rounding into top form in recent games.

When Wake Forest was raking George Washington over the coals, the Colonials were playing without the services of team captain Dave Shapiro. The GW sparkplug was sorely missed but Coach Garber kept him on the bench in order to avert any unfavorable criticism after the recent gambling squabble which was uncovered by Shapiro.

Also lacking on the night of the Colonial-Baptist tilt was the George Washington spirit and hustle which has typified the Washingtonians play all year. When all the facts are taken into consideration, however, the up-and-coming Deacons, one of the conference dark horses, rate a slight edge; or maybe it's a toss-up.

Tau Epsilon Phi Fetes Colonials

Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity entertained in their home on Rosemary street Monday night for members of the George Washington basketball team after the Capital city quint defeated the Tar Heels in Woollen gym.

George Garber, coach of the Colonials, is a TEP brother of Tau Theta of George Washington and accepted the invitation of Carolina's Omega chapter for his team for an after-game visit.

After being treated to sandwiches and drinks, the courtmen were shown around the TEP house. Most of the evening's conversation concerned the game, co-captain Dave Shapiro's expose of a gambling ring, the Carolina football team, and other items of sports interest.

The highlight of the evening was the humorous reception giv-

'Feed a Student'

Eating Places Will Be WSSF Target Tonight

University students eating an evening meal in the Carolina inn, Lenoir hall, and N. C. cafeteria will be asked today to make contributions to the World Service fund in order to "Take a Foreign Student to Dinner."

The Greater Council of the Baptist Student union will man meal lines at these three eating points from five until 7 o'clock this evening. BSU members will hand all students getting in the lines a card explaining the urgency of WSSF support in war-strained countries abroad.

These cards will also explain the idea that by giving up as much as the cost of tonight's meal, a University student might, figuratively speaking, take some foreign student to a badly-needed dinner which he might otherwise go without. Voluntary contributions will be taken up by more BSU members when the students reach the regular cashier.

This program is a part of the ent campus drive to raise for the international student charity. Overall WSSF campaigning here is under the sponsorship of the Council for Religion Life, the inter-denominational organization of all University religious groups.

W.S.S.F. ROUNDUP

Contributions to the World Student Service fund rose to $337.05 yesterday as collections for three different projects totaled $174.32 during the third day of the drive.

Teams to house solicitors brought in $135.63 as they stepped up their effort. The "Miss" contest brought in $36.59 as students contributed for the privilege of voting for their favorite campus beauty. The basketball score-picking contest grossed $2.10.

The special WSSF project of the "Take a Foreign Student to Dinner" collection at Lenoir Hall, Carolina Inn cafeteria and Graham cafeteria. Tickets for the collection are also set to go on sale today.

Dr. Warner Talks On Japanes Art In Person Monday

Dr. Langdon Warner, distinguished archaeologist and curator, eulogised the artistic value of the "utilitarian things" of Japan in an illustrated lecture on 'Japanese Folk Art" at Person hall Monday evening.

Defining art simply as "things made by man for the use of the spirit and the body," Dr. Warner declared that there are often high artistic values to be found in the art products of "simple folk" such as the Japanese rice farmer.

He said that most folk arts are engaged in "without preoccupation with beauty," and that the occidental who tends to accept "loveliness" where it is so obvious that he cannot miss it, will have to train the eye to detect unaccustomed subtleties in the folk arts if he is to understand them.

Dr. Warner's lecture was sponsored by the North Carolina chapter of the Archaeoligical Institute of America.

Person Classes Can Use Models

Models, both male and female, for drawing and sculpture classes are needed by the art department during the winter quarter, an announcement made by the department yesterday revealed.

No previous experience or special type of physiognomy is necessary. Models will be employed by studio hours rather than over a long period of time; wages are from $2 to $3 per studio.

Students and townspeople who are interested in this type of part-time employment are asked to contact Lynette Warren, secretary of the department, 8801.

WSSF Auction To Be Staged Next Tuesday

Faculty, Coeds To Participate

Tickets will go on sale today for a daffy auction to be staged Tuesday at 7:30 in Hill hall at which faculty members and attractive University coeds will participate in the final and most novel stunt of the current campus drive supporting the World Student Service fund, international student charity.

Admission to the auction will be 50 cents. All groups sponsoring beauty contestants in the "Miss Pay-Off" balloting, another feature of the WSSF drive here, are asked to send representatives to pick up these 50-cent tickets in the YWCA office this morning. Each ticket sold by noon Saturday can be counted as five dime votes for any of the "Miss Pay-Off" contestants.

Jerry Weiss, chairman of auction plans, said the Tuesday stunt would be similar to the one staged successfully this summer to augment the University WSSF contribution last year. While the coeds are to be sold as dates to the highest bidder, the faculty members will be auctioned off for comic services.

The list of faculty members and the unusual services which they will volunteer Tuesday for the worthy student cause is only partially complete. Typical of those now scheduled to appear are Katherine Carmichael, dean of women, and Twig Branch, coed advisor, both to be cigarette girls among the audience. Norman Cordon, Metropolitan opera star, and Earl Winn, radio department head, will act as auctioneers.

Roy Cole Band To Give Concert

Roy Cole and his orchestra will present a concert in the main lounge of Graham Memorial Saturday between 5 and 6 o'clock. The last half of the program will be broadcast over station WDUK.

All members of the student body are invited to attend the program, said Bob Watson. Seats will be provided for those who attend. There will be no admission charges.

Solons To Elect Officers Tonight

By Gordon Huffines

The Student legislature will elect new officers at the first session of the winter quarter in the Di hall tonight. With none of the three political parties holding a majority in the legislature, a lively fight is expected in the contest for officers and committee chairmen.

Offices to be filled tonight are speaker pro-tem, held last session by Tag Montague (UP); clerk, filled by Jack Worsham, former chairman of the Campus party; sergeant-at-arms, held by Ed Washington (CP); and parliamentarian. The latter position was held by George Rodman (UP).

The chairmanships of the following committees are also to be filled: Rules, headed by Thurman Williams (UP); Elections, headed by Joe Leary (UP); Ways and Means, headed by Herb Mitchell (UP); and Coed Affairs, headed by Edith Knight.

The present line-up of the 50 seats in the legislature, as follows, does not give any one of the parties a majority: The University party controls 22 seats, the Student party, 14, the Campus party, 6. There are 5 SP-CP members, 2 UP-SP members, and 1 CP-UP member. Party chairmen refused yesterday to release the party slates of nominees for positions to be filled tonight.

Emily Baker Is New Head Of Senate

Angas Resigns As Coed Leader

Emily Baker, senior from Asheville, assumed the speakership of Coed senate Tuesday night following the resignation of Fran Angas. Eleanor de Grange, junior from Winchester, Va., was elected to succeed Miss Baker as speaker pro tempore.

Miss Baker has served as critic of the Philanthropic assembly, on YW Junior council. Hockey club, Philosophy club, intramural debater, representative to the National Debating tournament, WAA council, Student legislature, secretary of the Student party, representative to the United Nations seminar, Graham Memorial Student Activities committee, representative to the State Student legislature, and secretary of the YW Careers committee.

She is at present chairman of the YW Public Affairs committee, on the Daily Tar Heel staff, on the steering committee of the Student party, sergeant-at-arms of the Phi assembly, and social chairman of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority.

Miss de Grange is a transfer from Briarcliff junior college where she was executive editor of the Briarcliff Quarterly, and a member of the Drama club, Glee club, and Orientation committee. At the University she has served as an intramural debater, and a member of the Glee club, University dance group, and Coed senate, in which she was a member of the Elections committee. She is on the Dean's list and is Treasurer of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority.

Carolyn Tuck, junior from Virgilina, Va., was chosen as a senator to fill the vacancy created by Kit Finney, who did not return to school this quarter.

The blaze resulted from a clogged flue over a coal stove which caused sparks to ignite a sheet of thin board around the pipe.

House Invokes State Statute To Stop Talk

Chancellor Had 'Legal Advice'

By Chuck Hauser

John Gates, editor of the Daily Worker, New York Communist newspaper, and one of 12 Communist leaders in the United States under indictment for conspiracy to overthrow the government was told by Chancellor R. B. House yesterday that he could not deliver a scheduled address on the campus.

House, quoting a law in the North Carolina statutes, told Herb Mitchell, chairman of the Carolina forum, at 2:30 yesterday afternoon that Gates would not be allowed to speak in Memorial hall. The forum, non-partisan speakers' organization, was co-sponsoring the address with the Communist party of Chapel Hill.

"The Carolina forum," House said, "has a record of hearing all points of view on questions of public interest. It has had advice and support from faculty and administration.

"The invitation to Mr. Gates came about through collaboration of the Carolina forum with the Communist party of Chapel Hill and would have proceeded in line with traditions of freedom in the forum except for the point in the consolidated statutes of North Carolina.

"Mr. Gates was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of teaching and advocating the violent overthrow of the United States government in violation of

Phi Assembly Upholds DTH In Ousting of Bill Robertson

Ed Joyner's dismissal of Communist Bill Robertson from the staff of the Daily Tar Heel was approved by 47 of the 50 members and visitors attending Tuesday night's meeting of the Philanthropic 'assembly and unanimously supported by the Phi.

In discussing his policy Joyner declared that the editor of the Daily Tar Heel had as much right to drop Robertson as he had to drop any column. He reported that no protest of violation of freedom of the press occurred when "Odds and Ends" was dropped, and he doubted that Communists would complain of suppression when George Sokolsky's (Republican) column is terminated.

Joyner pointed out that John Gates, editor of the Daily Worker, does not permit Pegler, Pearson, or Sokolsky on the pages of that newspaper.

Estimating card-holding Communists on campus at 36, Joyner stated that other minorities such as the Vegetarians do not enjoy as much space as the Communists, and pointed out that the "Write-Away" column was still open to all students.

Hans Freistadt asked for the continuance of a column devoted to Communism and offered to write one. He declared that Robertson was not disloyal for attacking American foreign policy since the Constitution does not recognize a state of cold war.

Freistadt informed the Assembly that his party favors freedom of the press and is fighting to come to power by parliamentary means.

'Barnstorming Bach'

Difficulties Couldn't Stop Trapps

By Charlie Gibson

When Baroness Maria von Trapp decides to take all her children "Barnstorming with Bach," neither Hitler's plans for her native Austria, neither a collapsing Vermont farmhouse, nor pregnancy can stop her.

Little inconveniences which her family ensemble has encountered during ten years of concert touring are now nothing more than laughable anecdotes. Today the Trapps have become successful and widely renowned for taking their native costumes and instruments everywhere to give many programs of classical arias, folk songs, and rare church music. Typical of their concerts will be the program to be given here on Friday night at an 8 o'clock Memorial hall presentation of the Student Entertainment committee.

Yet back on the day that a Nazi flag was raised over a small Austrian town called Salzburg in the Tyrol Alps, Hitler would hardly have predicted the future of this ingenious musical clan correctly, either. Upon sight of the swastika, all the Trapps held a conference—the Baroness, their seven daughters (four by his first marriage), their two older sons, and Father Franz Wasner, family spiritual adviser and music teacher combined.

The family with Father Wasner as director were already veterans of many European folk festivals; and now at just the right time, a letter had come inviting them to make a concert tour throughout the United States. The Trapps voted to leave home and Hitler, setting out with only the $10 each was permitted to take out of the country. Upon arrival in New York their only other valuables were visitors' visas and high hopes of becoming American citizens.

House-hunting American-style was among the Trapps' initial problems. Visiting a musical friend for the summer at Stowe, Vermont, they found a 600-acre farm overlooking a valley that was strangely reminiscent of their native Austria during peacetime. True, the farmhouse tilted and the roof sagged, but that view was wonderful. They bought it.

A few weeks later the farmhouse collapsed in a windstorm. With characteristic briskness, the Baroness said: "After all, we only bought the view, not the house. Now we don't have to pull the old place down.

Later difficulties caught the

AVC Keeps Proxy Voting, Passes Other Measures At Tuesday Meet

Two motions to eliminate proxy voting were defeated by American Veterans committee members at Tuesday night's meeting in the Presbyterian church on Franklin street.

One motion, presented by AVC member Charlie Sellers was designed to eliminate proxy voting entirely, while the other motion, initiated by Chairman Audrey Williams, made a few changes to permit proxy voting under certain conditions.

A motion providing for a business agenda to be adopted at the beginning of each meeting was passed, as was another motion to write a chapter letter to the national AVC headquarters urging an increase in GI subsistence. A third motion to write a letter to the Oklahoma Equal Education committee indicating approval of its drive for equal educational opportunities was also passed.

Reports on various committees were given by AVC members John Webb, of the local policy committee; Henry Adams, of the publicity committee; and Glenn Fisher, of the cost of living committee.

Speaks To 1,000 On West Franklin

By Sam McKeel

Forced twice to move his speaking grounds, once because of an order issued by Chancellor Robert B. House and once by a gas station attendant, John Gates, editor of the Communist organ The Daily Worker, last night addressed an estimated crowd of 1,000 people in front of the Chapel Hill high school on West Franklin street.

JOHN GATES

At 6:30, 15 minutes before the scheduled time of the speech, several hundred people had congregated outside the locked doors of Memorial hall. At 6:45 a spokesman for the Carolina forum said that all formal plans for the speech had been cancelled. A policeman seen in the crowd said that he had not been sent there specifically, but that Gates "will not speak here."

Seeing Gates the crowd swarmed around the corner of Columbia and Cameron and gathered at the filling station on the corner of Franklin and Columbia streets. Chased from his second position by an attendant Gates asked the crowd if they wanted to hear more. Followed by cries of agreement, he made his way to the front of the high school.

After the speech the mob followed Gates as he walked some four blocks to Graham Memorial and a scheduled reception which was never held. The Communist party leader and his party holed up in one of the Roland Parker lounges on the second floor of the student union and waited for the crowds in the hall downstairs and outside the building to disperse.

One half hour later Gates left the building and slipped into a car waiting on Franklin street. He sped away to an undisclosed place in town where he planned to wait until time to leave for the airport and his New York plane shortly after midnight.

During his speech in front of the high school, the Daily Worker editor met a continued din of booing and heckling as he talked briefly on the charges brought against him and his 11 fellow Communist national board members who go on trial Monday.

"It is the common belief," Gates said," that I have been indicted, and that my 11 fellow board members have been indicted for trying to overthrow the government. That is not true. They've Gates Brands House Move As 'Outrage'

'Free Speech' Is Called Real Issue

By Herb Nachman

"I think the cancellation of my scheduled address by the University authorities is an outrage," Daily Worker Editor John Gates declared just 20 minutes after his arrival in Chapel Hill yesterday.

Gates was informed when his plane arrived from New York yesterday afternoon at 2:22 that his speech had been cancelled by University authorities on the grounds that it violated a state statute prohibiting a person advocating or teaching the overthrow of the United States or North Carolina government from speaking in a state owned building.

The editor of the Communist Daily Worker and professed Communist for 18 years was brought immediately for an interview in the offices of the Daily Tar Heel. During the interview, Gates was by no means non-committal.

He talked freely for a full hour concerning his indictment by the House Un-American Activities committee and about the action taken against him by the University.

"I think what is happening on the University of North Carolina campus on this issue is a replica, on a small scale, of what is taking place nationally. The real issue involved in my indictment is the suppression of free thought and free speech. The denial of my right to speak here at North Carolina is proof of that." Gates brought out.

He went on to say that the

Spokesmen for the Carolina forum said last night the forum acted in good faith in bringing John Gates to the campus to speak.

"When Chancellor House made his announcement that the forum could not sponsor Mr. Gates on University property, the matter was taken out of our hands," the statement said.

The forum members went on, "we are sorry that on such short notice we had a speaker and no hall in which he could speak. In the future, we shall endeavor to present speakers as scheduled and we hope to maintain our principle of fairness to all points of view—even those views with which we cannot agree."

'Unfortunate'

Jess Dedmond, president of the student body, last night commented that it was "unfortunate that the Carolina forum brought Mr. Gates down without having established the proper clearance.

"I am opposed to the use of the University's facilities," Dedmond continued, "for the purpose of his speech."

A number of students asked that Dedmond's statement not be printed as representing the feeling of the entire student body on the matter.

Chalk One Up for Joe

Well, the Communists have done it again.

An editor of an insignificant little propaganda sheet was scheduled to make a speech. He made a long trip to Chapel Hill in order to deliver the speech, in which he would have said precisely nothing that he and others who think as he does have not been saying for lo these many moons.

He would have drawn a large crowd, all of which except about one dozen of the Faithful would have been hostile. He would have said that nasty, old, capitalist, imperialist democracy is depriving people of their rights, and he would have been laughed at for his pains. He would have made precisely no converts, and he would have had precisely nothing to show for his extensive travels.

But then, ostensibly because a state law which has never before been invoked was being violated, this editor, one John Gates, was not allowed to address his meeting as scheduled. And now the editor of the little sheet can rest happy. All over the world people can be informed that in America, in the great democracy itself, in the bosom of a great center of learning, it was impossible to assemble peaceably in a public hall to hear a statement of a political creed. To compensate for the converts that could not have been made by a free interchange of ideas, there are now many thousands of potential converts to be filled with the news of the phoniness of democracy. Why, the editor has all but been turned into a prophet—for has not his newspaper been filled with the grim facts of "oppression" in America?

If Joe Stalin had paid agents in South building, they could not have handed him a nicer gift.

* * * * *

The otherwise-insignificant visitor to Chapel Hill yesterday is under indictment for conspiracy to overthrow the government of the United States by force and violence, and there is a law in effect in North Carolina which prohibits the use of public buildings for the purpose of advocating such doings. Editor Gates avers that he is not guilty of the charges contained in indictment, and that he came to Chapel Hill, not to use public buildings to advocate revolution, but to prove, to the contrary, that he does not believe in the use of force and violence.

The federal grand jury which indicted him and eleven other Communists did not find them innocent or guilty. It merely found that there is sufficient evidence to warrant that they be tried before a court of law. Editor Gates' trial is to start on Monday.

Under our Law, the Law which we are upholding and which Gates is charged with conspiring to overthrow, he is innocent until proven guilty.

The Daily Tar Heel happens to believe that Communists constitute a grave menace to the security of the United States and to the rights of human beings everywhere. But the Daily Tar Heel is not a court of law.

Neither is anyone in South building a court of law.

And to deny a particular Communist the use of a public building under the state law cited, someone must have decided yesterday that the twelve are guilty as charged; for clearly the law does not prohibit the use of public buildings to persons merely accused or suspected of advocating the violent overthrow of the government.

* * * * *

The real issues at stake, it seems to us, are far more profound. For the first time in our recent history, a man has been denied the right to speak his ideas freely in a public hall. Our proud heritage of hearing all viewpoints and welcoming all ideas in the marketplace of free competition is badly shaken today. Our appropriation may seem more secure, but our freedom has need of buttressing.

That supression is the way of life in Communized lands makes the matter even more grave, if it has any relevance at all. For we are struggling the world over for human decency; we preach our faith in the individual and we stake our claims for democratic world dominion on the premise that it offers a better life for humanity than do the repressive concepts of the totalitarian state.

That we should resort to Communist-like suppression in the name of fighting Communism might be almost funny were it not precisely the stuff upon which the Communists thrive. That we find ourselves infringing on the Bill of Rights in the name of preserving and extending this same Bill of Rights must give great satisfaction to the masters of deceit and violence in the Kremlin whose smug cynicism has led them to count on precisely such behavior from us "decadent democrats."

But Mr. Gates hit the nail on the head when he asserted that the American people have a faith in things democratic and have a tradition rooted too firmly in fair play and decency to forfeit these standards. Authoritarianism shall not long make headway here, be it of the Communist brand which Mr. Gates peddles, or of the brand which styles itself "anti-Communist." We shall fight Communism by further endowing our people with the blessings of democratic living which they have come to cherish as they cherish life itself.

And locally, we can learn by yesterday's performances too. For those values which we hold so dear when we speak of the "Carolina Spirit" will not long survive if we weekly circumscribe them with new "ifs" and "buts".

Eternal vigilance, you know.

Legislature In Spotlight

By Jess Dedmond
President of the Student Body

The political spotlight for the next few months may well be on the Student Legislature. Faced for the first time in years with the situation of no party holding a clear majority the legislature's leaders are at their best. For the past several days they have made the rounds of opposing factions in an effort to reach new and better understandings. Their interests at this time center around the committee chairmanships which must be filled at the Legislature's semi-annual reorganization. Political dickering is active but thus far quiet.

On the surface such dickering may appear obnoxious. But in our present situation it appears to be a healthy thing for Student Government. At least for once we have a legislature in which the political groups will cooperate as a matter of expediency. This may well presage a better understanding between factions and a more expeditious performance of student functions.

The new leadership of the three political parties will be directly connected with the legislature's activities, and will govern to a great extent the efficiency of our government. The new party chairmen: Banks Talley of the Campus Party and Joe Leary and Gran Childress of the University and Student Parties respectively many have their hands full. On them falls the task of rejuvenating a legislature which for the past three months rendered the poorest record of service of any since the ratification of the constitution in 1946.

At this time I see at least three major tasks which the legislature must take on during the next three months:

1. The formulation and submission to the campus for action of an amendment to the Student constitution to provide for a workable Summer School government. For this I recommend the establishment of a group from the legislature to work in conjunction with members of the Student Council in the writing of this amendment.

2. The submission to the campus of a constitutional amendment to abolish the appellate jurisdiction of the Student Council.

3. The writing and passage of a budget for the fiscal year 1949-1950 based on the needs of the campus. For this budget I recommend that consideration be given to changing the fiscal year from September to September since the block fee system is not in operation during the summer months.

Operas Praised

Excellent Musicianship

By Donald Roberts

There were no photographers darting about in the audience and no reporters on hand to record just which Mrs. Vanderbilt was putting her feet where, but opera came to the campus Tuesday night and came with a bang. Its bearers were the Music Theatre Repertory Group, a new group destined for a long and successful life if the reception afforded them in Chapel Hill is any indication.

In "The Telephone," the first of two short operas by Gian Carlo Menotti which made up the program, Amelia Cardwell and Ted Bodenheimer displayed both excellent musicianship and dramatic ability. Miss Cardwell especially showed her capacity for combining a brilliant voice with complete control of stage business, and with Mr. Bodenheimer, was able to set a rapid pace and sustain it throughout the opera.

The second opera, "The Old Maid and the Thief" (labeled "A Grotesque Opera in One Act") had again the rapid timing that Menotti so evidently requires for a successful presentation. In it, Miss Cardwell and Mr. Bodenheimer were joined by Josephine Fisher and Dorothea Allcorn, and the four singers moved through the terrifically funny recitatives and arias with remarkable agility and a flare for bringing out each line to its most humorous advantage. The only notable flaw was in the performance of Miss Fisher, whose sometimes rasping voice could hardly be totally accounted for by the adequate abstration of Menotti's score. Dorothea Allcorn was more than adequate in the role of a fluttering old maid who stole in order to harbor a handsome beggar in her house, and Ted Bodenheimer reached the climax of his performance in his drunken scene with the two women of the house.

Miss Cardwell as Laetitia added more laurels to her previous "Telephone" performance and probably the funniest scene in the opera occurs when she and Miss Pinkerton have broken into a local ABC store to steal whiskey for the beggar. ("What was that noise?" Miss Pinkerton croaks. "Nothing, that's in the orchestration," trills Laetitia.)

Indictments Are Not Convictions

By George E. Sokolsky

The federal grand jurors' association of the eastern district of New York got up one of those questionnaires which asked a lot of "yes and no" questions, and queried high school teachers, professional engineers, college students and miscellaneous human beings on the subject of the grand jury and how it operates. The answers were discouraging. No matter by what process the answers were calculated, they give evidence of an astonishing lack of knowledge of one of the most valuable defenses against tyranny.

I was particularly interested in the replies to their question, "what is an indictment?" Seventeen percent of the miscellaneous, 12 percent of the college students and 35 percent of the engineers thought that an indictment was evidence of guilt; astonishingly, 11 percent thought that an indictment was evidence of innocence.

This explains in a large measure why so many believe that a man is guilty even if he is interrogated by a congressional committee, or why so many are sure that a man, like Alger Hiss, is done for if a grand jury indicts him. The old Anglo-Saxon dictum that a man is innocent until he is proved guilty seems to have passed out of our political thought along with many other fine ideas in these troubled and confused times.

Of course, in the totalitarian countries, a man is guilty if the government says so, with or without trial. Our assumption is that the law exists not only to punish the guilty but to protect the innocent. Our law deals with the individual man and his inalienable rights defined by the constitution; the totalitarian concept is that the law is an instrument devised by the state, bendable to the purposes of the state.

The grand jury is an ancient institution in Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence. It is a body of "peers," that is, equals in rights and rank, who determine not whether an individual is guilty or innocent but whether he is to be made subject to a trial.

The indictment is merely a formal accusation. The grand jury assures itself that the evidence before it is sufficient not to convince of guilt but to justify an accusation. In gathering such evidence, the grand jury is permitted a latitude wider than will be tolerated at a trial. Grand jury proceedings are in private and secret; a trial is public. The grand jury is not governed by the rules of evidence and therefore may have more information than can be set forth in court. Should a great public wrong need to be righted, yet it not be possible for the grand jury to indict anyone, it may hand down a presentment, stating the case and recommending public action, even needed legislation. In practice, the grand jury may protect individuals from the malevolence of their neighbors or even the government.

Hemingway May Be Back

By Roy C. Moose
Editor of the Carolina Quarterly

The news circulating among the lost generation of yesterday and the supposedly lost generation of today is that hard-drinking, hard-loving, and hard-hitting Hemingway is back.

First, he has decided to allow the republication of several of his novels in 25-cent book form. The first is "A Farewell to Arms," which Bantam Books will bring out this month. A second, the title of which has not been disclosed, is scheduled for release in February.

Until now Hemingway has prohibited the appearance of any of his full-length works in the popular edition format. The publishers point out that the reprint edition of Hemingway's classic love story will reach close to half a million readers. The whole idea is to popularize Hemingway with the masses.

But all of this is anti-climactic compared to the "coming-out" of Hemingway in last week's Life magazine. There spread before fifteen million readers (estimate plus propaganda) was an announcement of his new book. Already about 1,000 pages long, the work, which has consumed some six years, is to be a war piece "on the land, seas, and in the air." Even "War and Peace" cannot make that claim.

Publication date was not announced but the build-up of Hemingway undoubtedly portends its release this year.

Moreover, since the success of the movie version of "The Killers" his stories have been the cause of much bidding for screen rights by Hollywood producers. As a result "The Snows of Kilimanjaro," a short story, has brought a record $125,000 and will be a major production.

From the pictures that accompanied the story in Life, the greying Hemingway, drinking his fifth soldier-style, still has enough robust individuality to remain the dean of the lost generation. And he looks capable of producing many more works of "A Farewell to Arms" and "The Sun Also Rises" caliber.

CULTURE: A recent release shows that the publishers of 25-cent reprint books sold a record 135 million copies in 1948, twice as many as in the record year of 1945. At first this gave promise of showing that the "half-baked, uncultural" U. S. was at last hell-bent for culture. That is, until the breakdown of increases showed that twelve times as many western stories were sold in 1948 as in 1945. My guns, Cactus!

DEFENSE: Eudora Welty, the feminine half of Mississippi culture, tears into Edmund Wilson in particular and northern critics in general concerning their condescending attitude toward southern writers in a recent letter to the New Yorker. It seems that the critics north of the Mason and Dixon line think that the writing of Welty, Faulkner, et al is good "despite" the fact that they are Southerners.

Incidentally, Miss Welty's new book is being published very soon, and is worthy of notation. Perhaps the South's top feminine writer, she has been a major force in retaining the focus of contemporary literature on this region.

Power of the Men

Editor:

In your editorial, "Power of the Women," in Sunday's [Tar] Heel, you referred to the lack of activity on the part of the YW[CA]. We have tried to get front page publicity given to our [many] projects, of which there have been nine or ten, but have [only] gotten back page items. On the other hand, the YWCA has [re]ceived front page features on even their minor projects. [There] is something wrong somewhere. Tar Heels Upset Wake Forest; Baby Deacs Top Frosh

Carson Scores 22 Markers In 55-50 Win

By Joe Cherry

WAKE FOREST, Jan. 12—A fighting Carolina quint fought an uphill battle here last night to capture its third Southern conference victory in four starts.

The Tar Heels fell behind in the early minutes of the game when the Baptists forged into shooting of Jim Geary who rang up 12 points in the first half.

After seven minutes of the first half had elapsed, Wake Forest held a 10-8 lead, but put on a sudden spurt that widened the margin to 21-14 at the 12:15 mark. The Deacs continued to pour on the steam while the hapless Tar Heels struggled to catch up. With seven minutes left in the first period, the boys from Baptist Hollow held their widest margin of the night.

Carolina Fights Back

Carolina fought back in the closing minutes of the first stanza, but could narrow the Wake Forest lead very little and trailed, 31-23, when the half ended.

John Tsantes, reserve forward, played a bang-up game during the first half and managed to keep his mates in the ball game with his excellent play off the boards.

The Tar Heels came out for the second half with renewed vigor. They began whittling away at the Baptist lead in the early minutes of the second half, and had cut the Wake Forest lead to 36-34 after four minutes and 30 seconds of the half had elapsed.

Carolina kept plugging away at the Deac lead and the score rapidly moved to 36-35 and 37-36 as both teams fought for all they were worth in sixty seconds of furious action.

Tsantes was Johnny-on-the-spot when the opportunity popped for Carolina, however. Big John stepped to the free throw line and dropped a charity toss to knot the cout at 38-38 with the pressure at a peak.

Dan Nyimicz then plopped a set shot through the net to put his mates in the lead, 40-38. After this the Tar Heels were never headed.

At one point in the final minutes Nemo Nearman showed a spurt of excellence as he sank four consecutive field goals.

The Scottmen travel to Lynchburg, Va. on Saturday night to meet Washington and Lee in a Southern conference tussel.

Get That Ball, Hey . . .

Tar Baby Five In 43-38 Loss; Harter Gets 14

WAKE FOREST, Jan. 12—A strong Wake Forest freshman crew eked out a narrow 43-38 win over the North Carolina freshman in Gore gymnasium last night in the first of a double-header.

The Baby Deacs zoomed into an early lead, but saw the Tar Babies knot the count three times and go ahead once in the see-saw first half.

Hartley paced his mates in the closing minutes of the first stanza as they overcame the momentary Carolina lead and pushed ahead to take a 22-16 lead at intermission.

The second half was also a slam-bang battle with both quints playing fine ball. The Little Baptists were never headed in the final period, but Carolina was breathing down their necks on several occasions and threatened seriously in the closing minutes of the ball game.

With the Tar Babies rapidly narrowing their lead the Baby Deacs froze the ball in the waning minutes of the game, and took shots only when they were clear.

Dick Harter with 14 points, and Johnny Bowersox with 11 paced the Carolina offensive attack, while Lenny Guyes played well on defense.

Hartley, Meuller and Barham shared offensive honors for the winners, with Meuller and Barham reaping the defensive laurels.

The box score and summary:

Pos.	W. Forest (43)	(38) Carolina
F	Flick 4	14 Harter
F	Barham 3	2 Johnson
C	Mueller 8	1 Guyes
G	Hartley 12	4 Crowder
G	Alucino 7	11 Bowersox

Score at half: Wake Forest 22, Carolina 16.

Substitutions: Wake Forest—Werner (2), Beal (7). Carolina—Eckert (4), Redding (2), Bodwin, Slemp.

Touchdowners Say They're Tops

WSSF Group Sponsors Pool For Benefit

One thin dime that will probably never be missed will contribute to a worthy cause and might possibly win you a lucrative prize of five cartons of Chesterfield cigarettes.

WSSF is conducting a basketball pool for the Carolina student on the basketball game between Carolina's Tar Heels and the Generals of Washington and Lee that will be played Saturday night at Lynchburg. The procedure to enter this pool is very simple and should not involve too much thinking.

Just guess at the total number of points that you think will be scored in Saturday's varsity ball game and jot the sum down on a piece of paper. Then whenever you happen to wander near the Y court, merely drop into the Y and stop at the booth with one or more dimes.

Frosh Matmen Card Four Meets

The Carolina freshman wrestling team, the first to represent the University since before the war, has scheduled four meets so far this season and plans to add several more before the finale with Duke February 22.

Coached by last year's varsity co-captain Irv Zirpel, the freshman squad is rated by varsity coach Chuck Quinlan as a top notch club that will go places this season.

The freshman squad has several outstanding candidates in the middle weights, but is lacking in the unlimited and 121-pound classes. Bob McGimsey, in the 128-pound class and 175-pounder Tom Cox are two outstanding boys who will probably be starters in the opening meet with N. C. State, January 19.

Although no starting list has yet been announced, several candidates look like sure bets. They include Barry Farber at 136, 146-pounders Winder Hughes and Bill Qualls, Barney Boardman at 155, 165-pounder Bob Pickard, and Buddy Dodson.

Of the 20-odd boys out for the freshman squad, only two have had previous experience. Boardman wrestled two years at Woodberry Forest and Farber captained his high school team in Greensboro.

Although trials are now being held, positions are still open for any capable eligible freshmen.

Hall of Fame Voting Begins; Williams Honored by Writers

(From United Press Wire Reports)

Nominations are in order for baseball's Hall of Fame, and everybody has a favorite. Last year 136 former diamond greats were nominated in the early balloting before the final selections were made. Harold (Pie) Traynor and the late Herb Pennock garnered the most votes in last year's poll. Their names appeared on 75 per cent of the ballots.

United Press' Steve Snider picks Mel Ott, Charlie Gehringer, Bill Terry, Al Simmons, Jimmy Foxx, Paul Waner, Harry Heilmann, Dizzy Dean, Hank Greenberg, and Lefty Gomez as his ten choices for the honor.

Each member of the Baseball Writers' Association nominates ten men and if none of the nominees receive 75 per cent of the votes on the first ballot, the top 20 are selected for a run-off, and the three-fourths rule prevails the second time around.

Williams Honored

Lightweight champion Ike Williams and "Dumb Dan" Morgan, the old-time fight manager, were guests of honor last night at the tenth annual dinner given by the New York Boxing Writers' association at Toots Shor's tavern in the Big Town.

Brown-skinned Williams of Trenton, N. J., was presented with the two highest awards in professional boxing. He received the Edward J. Neil plaque for having contributed most to boxing, in and out of the ring, during the past year. He also received Ring magazine's meritorious gold medal, symbolic of the "Fighter of the Year."

Morgan was given the James J. Walker Memorial award for his contributions to the sport during many years. "Dumb Dan," so called because he never stops talking, was one of the greatest managers of the past.

Giermak Sets Record

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., Jan. 12—(UP)—William and Mary center Chet Giermak set a new national scoring record here last night when he accounted personally for 45 points as William and Mary drubbed Baltimore university, 96-28.

Giermak hooped in 21 field goals out of 28 tries and added three free throws for his total.

It Troubles Trouble

THIS newly developed electronic tester looks for trouble . . . discovers trouble before it becomes serious. With it, every telephone line in a Central Office can be checked and tested at the rate of 5,000 per hour. Breaks and weaknesses in wire insulation can be spotted miles away and the trouble eliminated before it interferes with telephone service.

In the telephone business the search never ends for new equipment and new methods that will help make good service even better and keep it low in cost. That's why America enjoys the finest telephone service in the world.

are two indictments. One on us as a group, and one as individuals. The first one is conspiracy to form a party that believes in and teaches the overthrow of the government. The second indictment, the individual one, says that we believe in a party that teaches Marxism and Socialism."

Gates at one point quoted part of the statement released by Chancellor House in which a North Carolina statute was put to use, "I think it is a bad law," he said, "but I won't argue it now."

Gates told the large crowd that surged around him that he congratulated them. "You are showing a spirit that is lacking in some of your University officials," he said.

Gates asked the crowd that it hear his case and "then judge who is right and wrong." He made an example of one of his fellow board members who was indicted along with him in pleading his case. He told how one board member named Bob Thompson has served in two wars and had used force and violence in war. Using the example of force and violence in war, Gates compared it with the force and violence of which the 12 indicted men are accused.

"The point I am trying to make," he said, "is that the ones accused of perpetrating force and violence, happen to be the first victims of the violence of which they are accused of perpetrating."

"Every country that has tried to suppress the Communist party has wound up being Fascist," Gates stated. "No country can suppress the rights of Communism and remain free."

Gates thought it very dangerous for a court to try a political party for its political ideas. "There is no one who has the right to try a political party but the people the 1940 Alien Registration (Smith) act.

"In view of this fact," the chancellor concluded, "I sought competent legal advice on my responsibility under the North Carolina statute. In accordance with that advice I have informed the Carolina forum that we cannot permit the use of University property in staging an appearance by Mr. Gates. We are in no sense attempting to pass upon his guilt or innocence."

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon, Chancellor House issued a second statement on the cancelling of themselves," he said.

Emphatically denying the charges made by the New York federal court Gates said, "I have pleaded not guilty and I go on trial Monday to plead my case."

Gates' speech.

House's statement said:

"This morning's newspapers carried an announcement of a proposed meeting and address, in one of the University buildings, by one of the 12 persons under indictment in New York, in the U. S. courts, charged with subversive activities.

"No application had been made by anyone of the University authorities for use of this building for such purposes, and no permission for its use had been given by anyone in authority connected with the University.

"Having in mind general statute, section 14-11, which prohibits the use of any building belonging to the University for any of the purposes denounced in the statute, it seems advisable to issue this statement that use of the building will not be permitted, and that the meeting advertised cannot take place in any building of the University.

"Pending determination in the federal courts of the guilt or innocence of the advertised speaker of the crime charged against him, it seems manifest that such use of the building might subject the University authorities to a conflict with the statute mentioned."

The statute House referred to stated that "it shall be unlawful for any public building in the state, owned by the state of North Carolina or any political subdivision thereof, to be used by any person for the purpose of law under which he was forbidden to speak in Memorial hall at 6:45 last night is a copy of the Smith act "under which I am indicted."

Gates pointed out that neither the Smith act nor this law are laws which bar the commission of acts or deeds. "They merely oppose the advocacy of ideas. As such, they are thought suppression laws, contrary to the whole American legal tradition."

In speaking of Chancellor House's official action, which came at 4 o'clock yesterday, Gates said, "It seems to me that the Chancellor, despite his denial of it, is judging me guilty of such alleged ideas before I've been brought to trial."

He went on to say, "Because the law which he cites bars the use of state facilities for the use of propagating such ideas. How does he know I have such ideas? On the contrary, I came here with the purpose of denying those ideas.

"Furthermore, my speech was to have been, not a defense of Communism, because I was not invited to speak on that subject, but a speech on the meaning of the indictments. I came in defense of the American Bill of Rights."

Gates hotly contested the action brought against him by the University. After later developments resulted in his speech being delivered in front of the local high school, Gates returned to the Daily Tar Heel to give his impression of the reception he received.

He was asked if he would defend the United States against Russia if we were to be attacked. He replied, "I would defend the United States against any attack from anywhere. As long as Socialism is in power in Soviet Russia, it will be impossible for them to attack this country."

Regarding the speech, Gates said, "I thought that the students showed a much higher maturity than the chancellor, despite a few in disagreement with my beliefs. They allowed me to present my point of view and I think the chancellor will learn a lesson from the students.

"The issue involved was not only my right to speak but their right to listen to me. I sincerely hope that the students at the University won't allow this incident to pass unnoticed but will do whatever is necessary to insure that freedom of speech remains a principle of the University."

University Budget Set At 22 Million

By Roy Parker, Jr.

Expenditures of $10,306,498 for operating expenses and $11,420,067 for permanent improvements during the 1949-51 biennum were recommended for the University by Gov. Kerr Scott in his state budget message to the General assembly yesterday.

The recommended budget asked for a legislative appropriation of $4.356,814 for operating costs. An estimated $5,949,584 was to be raised by University fees during the two-year period. The entire permanent improvement budget would be met by legislative appropriation.

Most of the operating budget went for salaries, with pay for faculty members and administrative personnel amounting to $7,830,758.

The permanent improvement requests included an appropriation for the $3,262,000 medical school and teaching hospital at Chapel Hill asked for by the Medical Care commission. A $1,000,000 dental school was also suggested, but would operate on a self-sustaining basis.

Additions and improvements to the University campus would include a new Commerce school costing $1,985,000, three new dormitories at $1,000,000, $1,150,000 in improvements to the chemistry building and a $638.000 addition to the law building. Other permanent projects would include enlargement and improvement of University service plants, an additional $400,000 for enlargement of the library, and a $175,000 venereal disease laboratory.

University requests to the Budget commission for permanent improvements asked for $18,160,874. Among requests not included in the budget recommendations were pharmacy, journalism and public health buildings, a religious center, a new Institute of Government building, ROTC building, and several classroom buildings.

The recommended budget was $2,160,874 under the total requested by the University, but $1,067,717 over the expenditures of the last biennum. University estimates of revenue from fees were increased by $2,128,000 in the Budget commission recommendations.

A total of about $22,000,000 in general fund appropriations and $40,000,000 for permanent improvements was recommended for state institutions of higher learning during the next two years.

The joint appropriation commission begins public hearings on the budget today.

Scott Hands Legislature Huge Budget

Calls for Total Of 382 Millions

RALEIGH, Jan. 13.—(UP)—Gov. Kerr Scott today handed the General assembly the biggest budget in North Carolina history—calling for spending more than $382,000,000 in the next two fiscal years while trimming some taxes a trifle.

Scott indicated, however, that the budget did not call for certain tax cuts which he advocated. He said his suggestions for lifting the sales tax on cafe meals and splitting taxes with local governments would cost the state $10,000,000 in the next two years.

The governor added that the state must have more taxes or more federal aid if it spends more money.

"We cannot in the aggregate go further safely without new taxes."

Scott's message said:

"For road building and improvement the proposed budget sets up expenditures of $98,000,000. This is $11,000,000 less than was appropriated for this biennium, when the highway fund reflected the accumulated wartime surplus. . . . Obviously this will fall far short of accomplishing the broad-scale program of all-weather road building I propose, and could not meet the repressed desire of the people for dependable bus routes and service roads for industry and agriculture."

CICA Schedules Dance Tomorrow For Pine Room

Music by the Town Talkers orchestra and a Pete Strader skit will provide entertainment at the Carolina Independent Coed association dance tomorrow night in the Pine room of Lenoir hall from 9 to 12 o'clock.

All non-sorority girls are invited whether they are members of CICA or not, as well as inactive members, graduate coeds, stray Grecks and town girls. Invitations may be obtained from Eloise Jacobi, Spencer dormitory.

New members of the group will be honored at the dance, and will appear in the figure with chairmen of the dance committees. They are Carolyn Bishop, Roxie Ann Walters, Betty McMahon, Lillian Wilson, Margery Bradley and Jo Ann Carpenter.

Legislature Resolution Backs Up Dr. Graham

By Herb Nachman

A resolution reaffirming "our complete confidence" in Dr. Frank Graham was unanimously passed at the first 1949 meeting of Student legislature in Di hall last night.

Introduced by Andy Cornish, the resolution was aimed directly at Futon Lewis, Jr., radio commentator who last night repeated charges that Graham was cleared by the Atomic Energy commission over the objections of its advisers on loyalty matters.

The resolution, which was wired to Lewis last night, is as follows: "We do hereby reaffirm our complete confidence in the patriotism and devotion to the principles of American democracy of Dr. Graham, we do further recognize his great contributions to human progress and freedom in the state of North Carolina, the United States and the world."

Following Elections board Chairman Al Winn's report on the December election results, 26 new members of the legislature were sworn in by Speaker Jim Godwin. Page Dees (UP) was the only new legislator not present to be sworn.

Progressives Plan Truman Discussion

Trends in the Truman administration and in the 81st Congress will be analyzed during the meeting of the Young Progressive club tonight at 8 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge 2 of Graham Memorial. The title of the report is "Prospects for Truman Progressivism in 1949."

Bill Evans and Sandra Sanders, members of the club, will jointly participate in the discussion of Truman's State of the Union speech, Forrestal's proposals for heating up the "cold war," and emergency powers to curb civil rights.

A floor discussion and question period will follow and after the meeting a social will be conducted.

Hanft Speaks At Di Senate Inauguration

Jerry Pettigrew Takes Over Chair

"Democracy is not something that can be put in the stockings of nations by an international Santa Claus," said Dr. Frank Hanft of the University Law school Wednesday night at the inaugural ceremonies of the Dialectic senate.

In his speech following the inaugural address of Jerry Pettigrew, president of the Di for the winter quarter, Dr. Hanft insisted that democracy "gives us a chance to realize the best or the worst in us."

Citing post-World War I Germany as an example, Dr. Hanft stated, "Democracy is an unmitigated curse for a people who have not developed adequate powers of self-discipline."

Speaking on "The Responsibilities of Students as Campus Citizens," Dr. Hanft charged the group with the duty of learning to "discipline themselves and respect the rights of others."

Pettigrew, a senior pre-medical student, spoke on the emotional meanings of words and illustrated his thesis with two different word pictures called up by the word "communism." The new CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—(UP)—Industrialist Henry J. Kaiser charged today that the Federal Reserve board is "sabotaging" the presidential program for continued prosperity, and demanded that consumer credit controls be relaxed.

Bad Checks

CHARLOTTE, Jan. 13.—(UP)—Police Chief Frank N. Littlejohn today broadcast an alarm for a check-passer who fled leaving behind bad checks totaling nearly $30,000 in four cities of North and South Carolina.

Salary Raise

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(UP)—The Senate tonight passed a bill raising President Truman's salary to $100,000 a year and giving him a $90,000 annual tax-free expense account.

Crash Kills Five

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 13.—(UP)—Five men were killed tonight when a small twin-engined Naval plane crashed and burned soon after taking off from Weir Cook municipal airport, officials reported.

No Policy Change

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(UP)—President Truman denied today that the Palestine crisis has hurt relations between the United States and Great Britain and said there has been no change in U. S. foreign policy in the Middle East.

Atomic Doctors Warn Major Cities Are Unprepared for Atom Bombing

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—(UP)—Three atomic physicians warned tonight that the nation's major cities are unprepared to cope with an atom bomb attack, which would kill one-third of their population outright.

"Medically the United States is hardly better off with an atomic bomb attack on one of its major cities than the Japanese were at Nagasaki," they said.

They urged organization and mobilization steps in all large cities so that doctors may save at least another third of the population.

The physicians, Drs. Leon O. Jacobson, J. Garrot Allen and Robert S. Stone, all formerly connected with the Manhattan project, wrote in the Journal of the American Medical association.

"One-third of the population of a bombed city will be killed outright or will die in days to weeks no matter how soon they are brought to medical attention," they said, "but another third of the population would survive providing medical care is quickly and adequately provided for."

They said the remaining third would have a "fair chance" of surviving without medical aid unless epidemics break out or transportation or other basic needs are disrupted.

The doctors warned, however, that any mobilization plans must consider the possibility that an enemy may loose a flood of radioactive isotopes on a city. They said whole cities could thus be made contaminated and uninhabitable.

Graham Replies To Lewis, Upholds Action By House

President Frank Porter Graham yesterday replied to charges leveled against him by radio commentator Fulton Lewis, Jr., and at the same time upheld Chancellor Robert B. House "in the decision to follow the ruling of the attorney-general in his interpretation of the state law to deny the use of a state building" for a speech Wednesday by John Gates, Communist editor of the Daily Worker.

In a lenthy telegram sent to Lewis yesterday afternoon, Dr. Graham answered several questions asked him by the commentator on his clearance for access to atomic energy secrets. (The complete text of the message to Lewis may be found on page 2.) Deep in the wire, the president of the Greater University brought up the question of Communist Editor Gates' being refused permission to speak on University property.

"At the University of North Carolina," Dr. Graham said, "we stand for the lawful freedom of our students to have their own political organization. The far largest number are Democrats, the next largest number are Republicans, and the third largest number are States Rights Democrats.

"There are a number of followers of Norman Thomas and a fewer number who are followers of Henry Wallace who include a dozen or so Communists to whom we accord and will continue to accord the lawful freedom of this community."

Dr. Graham said he personally holds that membership in the Communist party is not a per se proof of an individual's crime against the government. However, he said, he upholds Chancellor House in his decision concerning Gates' speech under the attorney general's interpretation of state law.

The North Carolina educator was not in town Wednesday when the Gates affair occured. He returned to Chapel Hill yesterday after a trip to Lake Success, N.Y.

Commentator Lewis said in a broadcast Wednesday night that Dr. Graham was cleared by the Atomic Energy commission over the objections of its advisers on loyalty matters. The university president replied that he has "always been opposed to communism and all totalitarian governments.

"I opposed both Nazi and Communist aggression against Czechoslovakia, and earlier Russian aggression against other countries," he told Lewis.

The radio commentator last night repeated three questions which he had asked Dr. Gra-

Atomic Group Repeats Clearance On Graham

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(UP)—The Atomic Energy commission reiterated today that despite the fact Dr. Frank P. Graham had been associated with organizations labeled subversive he has been cleared for access to atomic secrets.

Graham is president of the University of North Carolina and of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies, a nonprofit organization of Southern universities at the Oak Ridge, Tenn., atomic plant.

At the time of his clearance, the commission said that although Graham had been associated with groups under Communist influence, his integrity and loyalty had not suffered.

Radio commentator Fulton J. Lewis, Jr., charged in a broadcast last night that the commission's action in clearing Graham was taken over the objections of its advisers on loyalty matters.

The commission would not comment on Lewis' charge. Morse Salisbury, its information director said:

"With reference to inquiries on the matter of the clearance of Frank P. Graham, the reasons for the action were set forth in the commission's memorandum of decision which has been made public.

"For the reasons given therein, the commission believes that the decision it made was the right one."

Lewis charged that Graham was cleared over the objections of the commission's security officer, Rear Adm. John Gingrich, and of its Security Advisory board headed by former Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts.

The radio commentator said the advisory board at a meeting last May adopted a motion specifically disapproving Graham's clearance. He said commission chairman David Lilienthal, accompanied by commission general manager Carroll E. Wilson, entered the meeting and asked the board to withhold action until further evidence could be produced.

Lewis said Lilienthal admitted to the board that he already had admitted Graham to atomic secrets and that refusal to certify him would be embarrassing.

So, Lewis said, the motion was scrapped and there is nothing about it on the record. The next thing the board knew about the Graham case, Lewis said, was when the commission last month unanimously cleared him.

In explaining its action last

State Talent In 'Pinafore'

North Carolinians hold most of the leading parts in the joint Playmaker-music department showing of "H.M.S. Pinafore" by Gilbert and Sullivan now in rehearsal under Gwynn McPeek and Foster Fitz-Simons, musical and dramatic directors. This popular nautical opera will be presented in Memorial Hall Jan. 28, 29, and 30.

Heading the list of principal players are the following singers from the Old North State: Sam Greene of Shelby, "Boatswain," Andrew Griffith, of Mt. Airy, "Sir Joseph Porter," Richard Smith of Burlington, "Dick Deadeye," Barbara Young of Chapel Hill, "Cousin Hebe," Mary Helen zum Brunnen of Salisbury, "Little Buttercup," and Milton Bliss of Thomasville, "Carpenter's Mate." Dan McIntyre of Red Oak is the stage manager for this production.

Other principals are Carl Perry, Schoalfield, Va., "Ralph Rackstraw," Lucille Arnott, Persia, Tenn, "Josephine," and William Collins, Des Moines, Ia., "Captain Corcoran."

'Utmost Confidence'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13—(UP)—President Truman today expressed utmost confidence in Dr. Frank Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, who has been cleared by the Atomic Energy commission for access to atomic secrets.

Contrary to a published report in New York this morning, the president said he doubted whether there was any objection to Graham. That report said the commission's action in clearing Graham was taken over the objection of its advisers on loyalty matters.

Zionism Subject Of IZFA Group

"The ABC's of Zionism" was the subject of the International Zionist Foundation of America study group's discussion last Wednesday. Led by Morton Rubin, this was the fifth in a series of study groups.

The discussion concerned the various streams of thought running through Jewish history which led up to the statehood ideals.

Jewish nationalism, as such, began around the middle of the 19th century. The earliest settlements in Palestine were philanthropic colonies sponsored by Baron Rothchiede and others.

Virginia School Board in Contempt For Refusing to Stop Segregation

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 13.—(UP)—Federal Judge Sterling Hutcheson declared a Virginia county school board in contempt of court today in a case brought by Negro groups to break down segregation in the public schools.

Hutcheson said the Gloucester county school board and Superintendent J. Walter Kenny were in contempt for failing to meet a U. S. district court order to end discrimination against Negro pupils, whose high school was "in dilapidated condition."

The citations may carry jail sentences and heavy fines, but Judge Hutcheson deferred sentencing until April.

The decision climaxed a long court battle over alleged discrimination. Negro attorneys for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which sponsored the case, said the real purpose of the suit was to break down segregation in Virginia, as a test of the traditional Southern segregation laws.

Judge Hutcheson entered his order to end discrimination in the schools last April. The order said "unequal plant facilities" were in use, with the school for Negroes inferior to that for whites.

Hutcheson said the Gloucester training school, the Negroes' high school, was "old, and comparatively speaking . . . approaching dilapidation" in comparison with the white school, Boteourt high.

Now and Then

COLUMBIA, Tenn., Jan. 13—(UP)—Cooper Frierson took his regular "airyplane ride" to celebrate his 95th birthday today and listed three requisites for longevity.

"There's only three ways to insure yourself a ripe old age—minding your own business, a drink of whisky now and then and going to church as often as possible."

Dr. Frank P. Graham's Telegram To Fulton Lewis, Jr.

January 13, 1949

Mr. Fulton Lewis, Jr.
Barr Building
Washington, D. C.

Returned this morning from Lake Success and New York where served as adviser on Indonesian situation and find your telegram here. In view of your questions and implications I hope you will use my statement to provide context for my answers.

Know nothing of any action except decision Atomic Energy Commission.

I have always been opposed to Communism and all totalitarian dictatorships. I opposed both Nazi and Communist Aggression against Czechoslovakia and the earlier Russian aggression against Finland and later Communist aggression against other countries.

I was for aid to Britain against Germany when Germany had the pact with Russia. I was a member of the William Allen White committee and the Fight for Freedom committee.

During the period of my active participation, the overwhelming number of members of the Southern Conference were to my knowledge anti-Communists. There were several isolationist stands of the Conference with which I disagreed. The stands which I supported as the main business of the Conference were such as the following: Federal aid to the states for schools; abolition of freight discrimination against Southern commerce, agriculture, and industry; anti-poll tax bill; anti-lynching bill; equal right of qualified Negroes to vote in both primaries and general elections; the unhampered lawful right of labor to organize and bargain collectively in our region; agricultural cooperative societies; tenant farmers' union; soil conservation; the industrial development of the South; minimum wages and social security in the Southern and American tradition. It was for a number of years one Southwide organization open to all human beings for building up the South. There has been no general meeting for about two years.

I have from the beginning been a member of Americans for Democratic Action which bars Communists from membership. I belong to the wing of the A.D.A. which supported Truman all the way.

I have continued to support the Baruch-Acheson-Lilienthal plan for the inspection and control of atomic energy resources and consider the Russian refusal to cooperate a major setback for whole world.

I was on Committees against Hitler, Mussolini, and Franco in Spain; for aid to China against sending scrap-iron to Japan; for civil liberties and other such committees during last score or more of years. I joined with generals of the U. S. Army during the war in sponsoring a salute to the Red Army holding the gate at Stalingrad. I am still glad that the gate held and pray that the energies of Stalingrad will not be turned for further aggressions against freedom. The overwhelming majority of the people along with whom I sponsored these committees were well-known as loyal Americans. If members of these committees had ulterior aims it was without our knowledge or approval. From past experience I am aware of Communist technique of infiltration into organizations with good purposes. However, I do not now renounce any stand I made for human freedom.

I supported the major domestic and foreign policies of Woodrow Wilson and Roosevelt including such Roosevelt policies as lifting the embargo, providing the fifty destroyers to Britain and lend lease to the allies. I have from the beginning supported the Marshall Plan.

I support Mr. Jessup's strong statement of the American stand in the Security Council against Communist and Dutch attempts to destroy the Republic of Indonesia.

At the University of North Carolina we stand for the lawful freedom of our students to have their own political organization. The far largest number are Democrats, the next largest number are Republicans, and the third largest number are States Rights Democrats. There are a number of followers of Norman Thomas and a fewer number who are followers of Henry Wallace who include a dozen or so Communists to whom we accord and will continue to accord the lawful freedom of this community.

While personally holding that a membership in the Communist party is not per se proof of an individual's crime against the government, I uphold Chancellor House in the decision to follow the ruling of the Attorney General in his interpretation of the State law to deny the use of a state building to a man under federal indictment on the grounds of being involved in a conspiracy to overthrow the government by force. I uphold the right of the 12 members of the University faculty to declare against the indictment.

Our faculty with all their intellectual freedom are conservative or liberal in the highest American tradition and will be protected in their freedom as honorable University teachers and lawful and decent American citizens.

I have been called a Communist by some sincere people. I have been called a spokesman of American capitalism by Communists and repeatedly called a tool of imperialism by the radio from Moscow. I shall simply continue to oppose Ku Kluxism, imperialism, fascism, and Communism whether in America, Indonesia, or behind the "Iron Curtain".

Sincerely yours,

Frank P. Graham

Government 'Philosophy'

By Herb Alexander
Chairman of the Carolina Political Union

There have been numerous diverse reactions to President Truman's "fair deal" State of the Union speech—ranging from avid New Deal support of his program to cries of "Socialism" from the Republican Old Guard and George Sokolsky. It is not the State of the Union address with which I wish to deal; it is instead a search into what the essence of our present philosophy of government is.

The proposals for public housing, slum clearance, health insurance, and broadened social security could conceivably lead the United States onto the same road taken by Great Britain with the advent of the Labor Party victory in 1945. Or they could be seen as merely a broadening and elaboration of the New Deal philosophy of government regulation and control of hitherto uncontrolled industries and utilities for the purposes of preventing abuses of power, raising the standard of living, and maintaining a stable economy. This is a concept which has been called, among other things, "social control" of free enterprise. It is based on Bentham's utilitarian idea of "the greatest happiness for the greatest number," and as applied at present, holds as one of its basic tenets the fact that the national government, being the only force created and sustained by society which is capable of exercising restrictions on the excesses of business, labor, or any other element, can and should protect the people from such abuses of power.

"Social control" does not mean nationalization, for industry remains in private hands. Neither need it mean regimentation. However, the inherent danger in such a system is that the government might ask for excessive power in the name of the interests of the people. Such power in the hands of government might lead to the abridgement of some of our freedoms. It seems to me that the danger would lie not in giving sufficient power to the government, but in giving too much power. I am convinced that a reasonable amount of power could be judiciously used to stabilize our economy, ensure full employment, stimulate production, and create happiness and security—all without loss of personal freedom.

'By Popular Demand'

Shakespeare for the Millions

By Margaret Webster

Is Shakespeare a boring task—an imposed classic to be studied with reluctant labor for the satisfaction of the examiners and then forgotten as rapidly as possible? Why this emphasis on Shakespeare? What has he to say to us? And why should a professional company, the first of its calibre in the school and college field, select Shakespeare as their voice and leader in their trek across the campuses of America?

It is to be feared that some such thoughts as these may run through the minds of sceptical sections of the student body when confronted with forthcoming performances of "Hamlet" and "Macbeth" by the Margaret Webster Company. Yet Shakespeare has more adherents among their number than they know, and the reason we bring them Shakespeare, the reason we bring them these two particular plays, is quite literally "by popular demand." For those who have learned to know Shakespeare alive, vital with spirit which is beyond the reach of time and speaking with a voice still matchless in magnificence, precision and range, have learned that to make a friend of Shakespeare is to gain a great possession.

There are certain things—a few rare and precious things—which are the common heritage of man. Differences of language are overcome, antitheses of race and history are annulled; wars do not bring these things within the range of conflict, and in defeat they are not destroyed. They stand for unity, for the universal binding force which underlies humanity, and they do so because they bear in them a reflection of humanity itself with all its glories, miseries, common little things of everyday necessity, and dreadful capacities for terror and for tragedy. Beethoven belongs to no one country nor to any exclusive period; nor does Michael Angelo nor Van Gogh—nor Shakespeare, he above all. The Pilgrim Fathers knew him. To all the stream of peoples from the whole of the known world who have flowed into this country for close to three hundred years Shakespeare has been a known name and very often a known being. He is so now.

It is our contention, and we shall hope to prove it in action that our share in Shakespeare belongs not only to the past but to the present, and, future also. "Hamlet" is a play which has passed into the common language of phrase and proverb. Here are the universal impulses of men, the thoughts which trouble and bewilder them, the problems of the spirit, of being and not being, of loyalties and faiths; can we ever justify the resort to force, does violence breed violence and come to a violent end? What happens to love in the shattering of illusion? Here too, more simply but just as presently, is the picture of a young man—a young man of very particular fineness of mind and spirit, but in other respects a young man of today—confronted with a series of dreadful events which rock all his established values and leave him to reconstruct his faith and his world. The problem, except in the intensity of its dramatic form, is not uncommon, and it is certainly not of the past alone. For this reason we shall play "Hamlet" in a costume of no period; one which will endeavour to combine the glamourous association and pictorial romance of a royal Court with the stripped, clean lines associated with our modern clothes which, in many respects, are much closer to the costumes of earlier times than we are apt to realize. This will not be "Hamlet" in modern dress but a Periodless "Hamlet," "not for an age, but for all time."

"Macbeth," it seems to us, is more closely linked to the trappings of a barbarian world, to primitive impulse and savage imagination, not because it is more limited in application but because it deals with the deepest forces which lie at the base of man's nature—his inheritance from darkness, the terrible drive back to the abyss. "Macbeth" is an unbridled play. In it the forces of evil, Tolstoy's "Power of Darkness," made tangible by Shakespeare in his symbol of the Witches, take possession of two people of high ability and authority and through them almost wreck a nation. We ourselves, now alive, have seen an even more terrible example of such an event; it came near to wrecking our world. Here we watch it in little—and in the dramatic form of a melodrama, a "thriller" even, which has never been surpassed in the theatre for sheer excitement.

(The Margaret Webster Company productions of "Hamlet" and "Macbeth" will be presented in Chapel Hill next Monday afternoon and evening. Miss Webster is a noted Shakespearean actress.)

British Policy In Palestine Shortsighted

By Jonathan Marshall

It is regretable that when nations form their foreign policies they give so little consideration to the rest of the world.

England is probably the most notorious example of this shortsighted method of governing. Of course, a nation that is so dependent on colonial markets and raw materials to process is in a precarious economic position.

This column does not mean to imply that England is bad in all respects, or that she hasn't done more than her share in contributing to the world's physical and mental wealth, for she has long been a leader.

In the field of foreign relations, however, she has exerted a very negative influence. The most recent example of this is the current controversy with the new state of Israel.

In an effort to protect her oil interests in the near east, England has attempted to play sides against each other. Hitler may well have learned the use of one of his most potent weapons from British relations with the Arabs and Jews.

England's resources and propaganda outlets are far greater than those of the infant Jewish nation, and for that reason we may well expect her to carry on a strong campaign to discredit Israel during the coming months.

After the United Nations passed on the division of Palestine, all nations should have made an effort to see that the plan was carried out. Instead Palestine was made a political football. England wanted to protect her oil interests, and in order to do this she had to maintain good relations with the Arab States—they were not satisfied with the UN division.

Both the Jewish and Arab sides were guilty of violating the UN decision; however, neither group is any more guilty than the non-belligerent larger nations.

It is obvious that England has been supporting the Arab States. The Israel military successes have weakened the governments of most of the Arab nations almost to the point of collapse. England cannot allow this, for it would result in chaos, and chaos would seriously threaten the British position in the near east.

Although little concrete evidence of English aid to the Arabs has been presented, the fact remains that the English have given some help. Their action in not recognizing the Jewish nation is tantamount to saying that England will not abide by UN decisions, and it is a terrible insult to the people of Israel.

The Jews were definitely wrong in shooting down five English planes; regardless of where the planes were, it was a political boner of the worst type. On the other hand, the English have only aggravated the situation by sending their protest "To the Jewish Authorities in Tel Aviv." Of course the Jews resent this slap in the face.

The new nation of Israel could easily fall into the camp of either the Western Allies or the Russians. If we want to keep this potential ally on our side, the United States must act now and stop sitting on the fence watching.

The people of Israel were valuable allies of the English and Americans during the recent war, but we have not treated them like allies. The United States must see that the Palestine situation gets a fair hearing before the UN, and then it must see that the UN decision is upheld.

The biggest weakness in the UN so far is that its decisions have not been enforced. If it is to survive and to preserve world peace, we must make the UN succeed. As the most powerful nation in the world, America has a definite responsibility.

Write Away

Till Proven Guilty

Editor:

It is plain that Mr. Gates, who is indicted on the charge of advocating forcible overthrow of the government, did not advocate, advise, or teach a doctrine that the government here to "advocate, advise, or teach a doctrine that the government should be overthrown by force" but rather to deny that he advocates such. Yet the Chancellor used the above law to justify his cancellation of the meeting.

Futhermore, such action implies that the Chancellor has already judged Mr. Gates to be guilty, four days before the trial. Mr. Gates begins. This is in violation of a basic principle of American justice, that a man is presumed to be innocent until proven guilty.

Such action by the University authorities means that a Communist is not free to speak on this campus, and therefore the students are not free to listen to a Communist. Once this principle is established, who then shall judge who is a Communist? Obviously, the same authorities. Will this restriction be extended to include the writings of Communists? If it is, what is to freedom of the press at the University?

The student body and the faculty must immediately protest this usurping by the Administration of the power to tell us what and what we can and cannot hear. If their decision is not protested, the University of North Carolina can no longer claim to be a citadel of free speech in the South. One more institution in America will have yielded to the anti-Communist hysteria and will have given up the fight to defend our cherished liberties from the forces of reaction.

Brickbats for Reporters

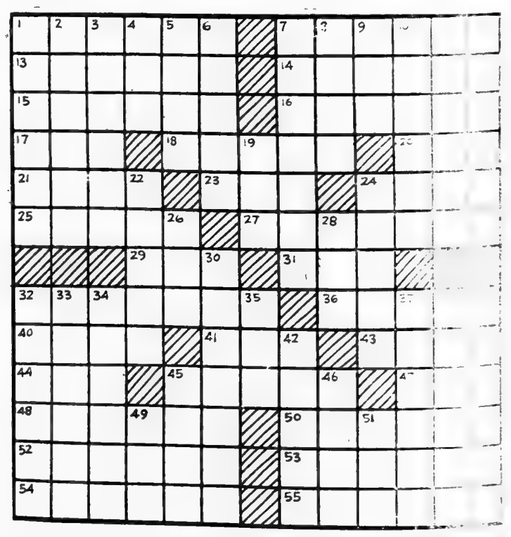
Editor:

Last night's Gates case was certainly nothing to be proud of. However, this morning's Daily Tar Heel takes the cake. Hats off to reporters McKeel, Hauser, Nachman, and whoever wrote the advertisement for the Communist paper The Worker to appear in the Tar Heel. Are the Daily Tar Heel reporters Communist? It would seem so from the beautifully slanted story they wrote. It would seem so from the three days of front page publicity that was granted Mr. Gates and the Communist party. Approximately four and one half columns of space was devoted to write up Mr. Gates in todays paper. Are you of the Daily Tar Heel following a childhood impulse to play up sensationalism? To quote a line from McKeel's story, "Gates asked to speak if they wanted more. . . ." Gentlemen, Mr. Gates is not worth it. Why try to make him one? If the policy of the Tar Heel is to bar Communist why not bar communist advertising? The only redeeming note of thinking in the paper was struck in the editorial. Congratulations.

I request a statement from the Carolina Forum and the Communist party of Chapel Hill to answer the following questions:

1. Who first suggested having Mr. Gates speak?
2. Who paid Mr. Gates' expenses?
3. Why was this particular date chosen for Mr. Gates?
4. Why was no one notified until a few days before Mr. Gates' appearance and why was it then done in a sensational manner?

Kimsey K...



Here are answers to the above questions as listed by [illegible] Mitchell, chairman of the Carolina Forum.

1. Hans Freistadt, representing the Communist party of Chapel Hill, asked the forum to co-sponsor Mr. Gates' speech, for the Communist party had already begun negotiations.

2. The Carolina Forum, as is its usual policy, pays for publicity and for personal expenses of the speaker while in Chapel Hill.

3. He spoke at this particular time because the subject of speech required him to speak before his trial, Monday, because the request for co-sponsorship did not come until final week of the fall quarter.

4. The Forum did not receive the information that Mr. Gates had accepted until Jan. 6, and publicity releases did not go out until Jan. 9. As has been the custom in the past, the Forum in the preceding week asked the YMCA office for use of [illegible]. Never in the last several years has it been necessary to ask speakers with any administrative official.

MONOGRAM MUSINGS

By Bill Pritchard

Open Letter to Monogrammers

ACCORDING TO THE CONSTITUTION of the Monogram club, elections should be held at the next meeting, following nominations which should have taken place this past Tuesday, for the officers who will guide the Club through the winter and spring terms. However, due to the unusually poor attendance at the last meeting, President Gus Johnston deemed it wise to wait until next week to have nominations, and the following week for elections.

It seems a shame that any organization as large as the Monogram club should have to delay anything as important as elections for lack of attendance: but that's exactly what happened, and it will happen again next Tuesday unless some of you monogrammers get out and round up your teammates and let them know about the meeting and its importance. Of all the meetings of the year, the two when elections are held are by far the most important. It is at these times that you, as members, select the man that is going to do the work for the Club for six months, and believe me, if you don't get a man who will work as president you may as well kiss your club goodbye for there are very few of you who are willing to help him. Therefore, it seems only logical that the least, (and that's the very least) you can do is to devote one hour of your time each six months toward securing aa capable and engergetic president to run the club, with or without your help.

Nominations will be held at the Monogram club meeting next Tuesday night at 7:30, in the clubhouse, for the election of officers. It is urged that all members active or inactive, attend.

Reception Committee

WITHIN ONE OR TWO WEEKS, a new permanent committee will be set up in the Monogram club. It will be known as the reception committee, and will have as its job the reception and entertainment of high school and prep school visiting athletes who are here as prospective UNC varsity material.

The need for such a committee has been recognized for some time, and it was only natural that it should fall the lot of the Monogram club to set it up, since one of the objectives of the Club, as stated in the constitution, is "to strive for the advancement of athletics at the University."

An outline of this committee would reveal a group of three to five members of the Club, headed by a chairman, that would be available upon due notice by a coach to arrange for the escort and entertainment of prospective athletes during their stay at Carolina. This committee would not do all of the work itself. Rather, it would make arrangements with other Club members to do the actual receiving and guiding.

The committee will not be for the benefit of any one sport or coach, but rather, will be at the disposal of all. It is hoped that through this effort, the Monogram club will be taking another stride forward bigger and better athletes and athletics at the University.

New Monogrammers

THE AWARDING OF fall letters (with the exception of football, due to the postseason game) has been ratified by the Athletic council and the Monogram club, as of last Tuesday night's meeting. A total of twenty-seven (including one manager) letters were awarded in soccer and cross country. Of these, sixteen were repeat performers, having lettered in the past in this or another sport.

The new chenille monograms are now available to all club members at the Carolina Sport shop for $1.55 apiece. From now on all sweaters will be issued with this type letter, but anyone who will not win another monogram or who wishes to replace their old one, must buy one of the new ones outright. The old letters can easily be ripped off with a razor blade or scissors and a new one just as easily sewed on. The change is not compulsory, of course, but the chenille is the standard monogram now, and it is the hope of the Club that the complete transition will be effected as soon as possible.

George Marshall Key Figure In Professional Grid War

(From United Press Wire Reports)

George Preston Marshall, Washington Redskins' owner who has been labeled the chief "stumbling block" to peace in professional football, yesterday denied the charge that he led opposition to the inclusion of the Baltimore Colts in the National Football league.

Marshall was blamed for the break up of a recent "peace" meeting between the AFL and the All-America conference. The Redskins owner's objection to the inclusion of Baltimore in an amalgation of the two leagues reportedly caused the breakup.

Marshall said yesterday, however, that he had no objection to the union of the two leagues, but added that the other NFL owners would probably oppose the Colts because Baltimore is "not a money town."

When the peace meeting broke up in Philadelphia, AAC representatives said that the National league had proposed accepting the Cleveland Browns and the San Francisco Forty-Niners, and advocated the abolition of the remainder of the AAC. All-America owners said they could consider "no proposition which does not include Baltimore."

Tar Heels Travel To W & L For Next Tilt

Cagers Get Rest After Defeating Wake Forest Club

Coach Tom Scott's Carolina Tar Heels, who fast are becoming one of the most unpredictable teams in this area, got a day of rest from their travel-filled schedule yesterday. The rest was well-deserved after the team's fine rally which it pulled to defeat Wake Forest, 55-50, on Wednesday.

But the locals will be on the road again Saturday—this time bound for Lexington, Va., and a game with the Washington & Lee Generals. The Tar Heels will be seeking their fourth loop win of the year against but one loss.

Encouraging

The Carolina performance in the win over Wake Forest certainly was encouraging to Coach Scott. The local cagers had turned in a sad exhibition of basketball on Monday night as George Washington stomped them, 64-41.

Several days earlier Wake Forest had drubbed this same George Washington club, 50-38, and the Deacons therefore were installed as favorites over the Tar Heels. But with Coy Carson dropping in 22 points, the Carolina entry was able to pull somewhat of an upset victory.

State Edged

The Carolina freshmen did not fare so well as the varsity. They dropped a 43-38 decision to the Wake Forest yearlings.

In other action last night concerning Big Four teams, State's Wolfpack went down to its seventh loss of the season as Louisville eked out a thrilling 72-71 win. The game was played in Memorial auditorium, home court for the Wolfpack, before a packed house. The winner wasn't determined until the last second of play, as the visitors counted a field goal as the gun sounded.

The defeat was the first for State in 26 games in Raleigh.

To Defend Title?

NEW YORK, Jan. 13—(UP)—Chairman Eddie Eagan of the New York Boxing commission revealed last night that heavyweight champion Joe Louis plans definitely to defend his title in June.

Eagan contacted Louis, who has held the world crown for 11 years, Tuesday night in Topeka, Kans. and asked him point-blank, "Exactly what are your title plans?"

Joe replied, "I'll defend in June against anyone, but I would prefer to meet either Ezzard Charles or Lee Savold. I would prefer to meet the winner of a bout between them."

Duke, State Battle in Durham In Feature Loop Game Tonight

DURHAM, Jan. 13.—Duke and N. C. State, the two top teams in pre-season Big Four rankings but somewhat of a disappointment thus far, battle tonight in Duke's indoor stadium.

Both clubs were defeated in their last outings and will be attempting to regain lost prestige. Duke dropped a 56-46 decision to weak Virginia Tech in its most recent start, while State was beaten 72-71, by Louisville in a real thriller staged in Raleigh Wednesday night. The defeat was State's first in Raleigh in 26 games.

Coach Everett Case's Wolfpack from State, which lost only three games all last season, already seven games while winning six. Most of the defeats have been by close margins and to good teams, but still the 1943-49 State record is a far cry from pre-season expectations.

The Duke record is somewhat better, but the loss to VPI considerably detracted from it. However, Center Ben Collins did not perform against VPI because of a hand injury. But Collins still remains on the ailing list and will be slowed up against State tonight.

State rates as pre-game favorite, despite the seven losses. But previous games between the two old rivals in Durham have turned out to be rough and tumble battles. State has been victorious in two of its last three games with Duke, but the victory margins have been narrow.

Freshmen teams of the two schools will meet at 7, with the varsity engagement getting underway at 8:30.

American Legion Considers Plan For Junior Boxing

NEW YORK, Jan. 13—Prominent representatives of the American legion are considering a nation-wide junior boxing plan for boys younger than 16. The mitt program would parallel the American legion's grand junior baseball system, that is one of the most stimulating competitions in American sports.

Chairman Eddie Eagan of the New York Boxing commission disclosed the significant American legion boxing plans last night, at the same time that he revealed Joe Louis had promised officially to defend his heavyweight crown in June.

Eagan's disclosures were made during a talk at the annual dinner of the New York Boxing Writers' association in Toots Shor's Tavern.

Big Eddie, a former Olympic and National Amateur champion, told reporters after the dinner: "If the American legion plans become a fact, they will be the biggest shot in the arm to the sport since the days of John L. Sullivan."

He pointed out that the Legion's junior baseball program got more than a million youngsters to play that game each year than would not have participated otherwise.

HANDBALL DEADLINE

Today is the last day handball team entries will be accepted by the Intramural department.

The teams are made up of five members who compete in two doubles and one singles match. Fraternities have entered a large number of teams, while dormitories have not responded as quickly.

Tracksters Lose Terrell, Taylor For Indoor Meet

Coach Dale Ranson announced yesterday that ace hurdler Dick Taylor and relay man Laddie Terrell will not accompany the nine-man track squad to Washington today for the Evening Star Indoor games on Saturday night.

Terrell, who was to anchor the Carolina entry in the Southern conference mile relay, turned up with a bum leg and will not be able to compete. Taylor, previously entered in the invitation 70-yard high hurdles, cannot participate because of a bad cold.

The rest of the travelling compliment, however, will leave at 1:30 o'clock today by automobile.

Coach Ranson hopes to enter Bob Morrow in the hurdles in place of Taylor. Freshman sensation Bill Albans and conference champ Bob Moody will compete in the high jump. Other entries are Julian MacKenzie, the mile; Sam Magill, two-mile and a relay quartet of Stan White, Percy Flowers, Clarence McClain and Bill Crimmins.

The other entries in the conference relay are Virginia Tech, Maryland and Duke.

ham, and to which Graham replied in his telegram. They were:

LEWIS: "Are you aware of extensive Communist infiltration into the student body at Chapel Hill?"

GRAHAM: ". . . . a dozen or so Communists to whom we accord. . . . .the lawful freedom of this community."

LEWIS: "Are you willing to resign publicly from all those organizations which have been labeled subversive, Communist, or Communist-front, now that you have clearance to atomic secrets?"

GRAHAM: "From past experience I am aware of Communist technique of infiltration into organizations with good purposes. However, I do not now renounce any stand I made for human freedom."

LEWIS: "Will you comment on the statement made by 12 University professors in a Winston-Salem newspaper wherein they were opposed to the federal grand jury indictment?"

GRAHAM: "I uphold the right of the 12 members of the University faculty to declare against the indictment."

Continuing his answer, Dr. Graham said, "Our faculty with all their intellectual freedom are conservative or liberal in the highest American tradition and will be protected in their freedom as honorable University teachers and lawful and decent American citizens."

The University president concluded his message to Lewis with:

"I have been called a Communist by some sincere people. I have been called a spokesman of American capitalism by Communists and repeatedly called a tool of imperialism by the radio from Moscow. I shall simply continue to oppose Ku Kluxism, imperialism, fascism and Communism whether in America, Indonesia or behind the Iron Curtain."

month, the commission said Graham had been a champion of free speech and civil rights and that this had caused him to associate with several organizations "influenced by motives or views of Communist derivation."

But it added that Graham's associations "have neither impaired his integrity and independence nor aroused in him the slightest sympathy for communism or other anti-Democratic or subversive doctrines."

Graham has served on the President's committee on civil rights and as a U. S. representative on the United Nations Security council committee for good offices in the Indonesian dispute.

legislature posts, a split in the Student party resulted in six of the nine elected offices in the legislature going to University party legislators.

Joe Leary, new chairman of the UP, was elected speaker pro tempore over Ed Washington (SP) by a vote of 31 to 13. The position of parliamentarian went to SP candidate Jim Southerland with 35 votes over CP candidate Bill Patterson's six votes. Southerland will replace George Rodman while Leary replaces Tag Montague.

Ed Best (SP) won out 30 to 16 over Bill Prince, another SP candidate, for the post of clerk to replace Jack Worsham. Charlie Fox (UP) took sergeant-at-arms replacing Ed Washington.

The committee chairmanships were filled as follows: Herb Mitchell (UP), Ways and Means by acclamation; Andy Cornish (UP, Finance, by acclamation; Jack Worsham (CP), Rules with 32 votes over Al Lowenstein (SP) with seven; Ted Leonard (UP) won the chairmanship of the Elections committee with 37 votes over Herb Alexander (SP) with five.

An earlier attempt to arrive at a non-partisan slate had apparently failed for the balance of power was held by a united UP and a faction of the SP.

Acheson Promises He Will Be Firm

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 —(UP) —Dean Acheson today promised to be firm with Russia and keep subversives out of his department if the Senate confirms his nomination as secretary of state.

The suave, moustached diplomat testified at a public hearing of the Senate Foreign Relations committee called to examine his fitness to succeed Gen. George C. Marshall in the State department.

of the year-long program arranged by the Student Entertainment committee with funds from part of the blanket student fee paid by all students at registration.

Scotty Venable, entertainment committee chairman, has announced a policy barring faculty members, their wives, student wives, and townspeople might attend the event. Graham Memorial hall doors will be opened at 7:30 o'clock. At that time student wives, faculty wives and townspeople will be admitted for a small reserved section to which townspeople will also be allowed to buy admission at 7:30. Admission for the entertainments will be $.50.

The Trapps will be on stage promptly at 8 o'clock. Their program will feature a capella mixed singing and the playing of the recognizable and unknown folk music of many lands. Recently, with the arrangements of such popular American folk airs as "Home on the Range," "My Old Kentucky Home," and "Oh, Black Joe" have been added to the program. Also, with their theme song, Mozart's "Song of Universal Brotherhood," the eighteenth century Austrian "In Dulci Jubilo" and such old Christmas carols as the English "God Rest Ye Merry Gentlemen," the French "Angels We Have Heard on High" and the Tyrolean "Shepherds, Quickly Wake!"

Fondest Dream

Post Office Crossing Will Have New Light

By Don Maynard

Chapel Hill pedestrians will realize their fondest dream in the very near future—they will be able to cross Franklin street unmolested by scurrying motorists through the courtesy of a shiny, modern traffic light system installed at the U-turn end opposite the Post Office.

Heretofore, students desiring to enter the intersection of Franklin and Henderson streets were obliged to wait until the space between bumpers was sufficient to enable them to squeeze through and maneuver across the street.

Now, with the aid of the new signal light, recommended by the Institute of Traffic Engineers and designed exclusively for the Chapel Hill intersection by General Electric, students will have 21 seconds out of every minute to cross. No longer will they find themselves in the middle of Franklin, foot poised, waiting for a break as cars come from every ... Sawyer Declares Americans Must Meet Challenge

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 14—(UP)—The American people must admit the persistence of the Communist concept today and the need to appraise its strength and its challenge, Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer warned last night.

Sawyer spoke before the Richmond Chamber of Commerce.

"We cannot bask contentedly in the assurance that because people don't want it Communism will not come to us," he said.

The present-day appeal of Communism is directed at those who believe the good things in life are not properly distributed, Sawyer said. "Those of us who don't believe in Communism must endeavor to make life pleasanter and more tolerable not for a few but for all."

Sawyer said the nation must care for its natural resources. He said the United States already is dependent on the rest of the world for much of its petroleum, iron and other metals.

Health Authority To Lecture Here

Dr. C. E. A. Winslow, international figure in the field of public health, Professor emeritus of Yale and editor of the American Journal of Public Health, will lecture in Gerrard hall at 8 o'clock Tuesday. His subject will be "The Task of Health in the World Today."

Dr. Winslow, former professor of public health at Yale University and recent president of the National Housing association, is the author of numerous articles and books on Public Health and its history. In addition, he has written on Public Health Nursing and is the biographer of William Thompson Sedgwick and Dr. Herman Biggs.

Laundry Announces Claim Requirements

The University laundry yesterday reminded students that all claims must be supported by the laundry ticket which is attached to the bundle, and must be filed within 48 hours with the laundry office, 106 W. Franklin St.

CPU Debate Will Concern Negro Issues

School Question To Be Discussed

The admission of Negroes to Southern colleges and universities will be discussed at 8 o'clock Sunday evening by the Carolina Political union in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

Dick Simpson, junior in sociology, will present a brief factual report on the legal basis of segregation in education and will present some of the main arguments for and against such segregation.

Following the factual report the floor will be opened by Chairman Herb Alexander for a round-table discussion. All interested students and faculty members are invited to attend and participate in the discussion.

Latin Immaturity Is Haring Subject

Political immaturity on the part of Latin American governments has been the chief cause of their poor showings in connection with foreign investments, Dr. Clarence H. Haring, Robert Woods Bliss professor of Latin American history and economics in Harvard university, said here in an address last night.

He was introduced by Dr. S. E. Leavitt, director of the Institute of Latin American Studies which, along with the department of political science, sponsored the address. The Spanish club assisted with arrangements.

Dr. Haring is spending several days in Chapel Hill and is speaking informally at several history and political science classes and holding conferences with graduate students in these departments.

Dr. Haring traced the history of foreign capital in Latin American countries since their independence from Spain.

Annual Revels Of Playmakers Slated Tonight

21st Program Will Be Free

The Carolina Playmakers will hold their 21st annual Twelfth Revels program in the Playmaker theater at 8:30 tonight. All students and townspeople are cordially invited to attend, and no admission will be charged.

The annual Revels program, which is on an "everything will be forgiven" basis, is divided between the staff and students in the dramatic art department, with the staff presenting the revel scene from Shakespeare's comedy, "Twelfth Night," and the students acting burlesque scenes which parody the Playmaker productions of the fall quarter.

The student section of the program, which is written, staged, and acted by students, is traditionally kept secret until the night of the production. Since much of the material in the program is aimed at the Playmaker Staff and at members of the radio department faculty, they are not allowed in the theater during revels rehearsals.

The staff section of the revels, which will open the program, is being directed by Samuel Selden. Roles in the Shakespeare scene will be acted by Jane Grills, Earl Wynn, Foster Fitz-Simons, Robert Shenkkan, and Jurgensen.

The title, "Twelfth Night Revels," comes from the fact that, in Elizabethan times, the period from Christmas until twelfth night (January 6, the traditional performance time here) was set aside as a festival period, and the Lord of Misrule held sway.

Army Will Require Three-Year Terms

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14—(UP)—The Army will require recruits to sign up for at least three years, beginning today.

Officials said two-year enlistments have been cancelled to slow down the rate of volunteers and to get more actual service out of each recruit.

Draft calls for February and March already have been cancelled, and further steps to ease off the enlistment rate are now under study.

Poet Frost Plans Engagement Here

Robert Frost, internationally known American poet, will come to Chapel Hill next week on a combined lecture and visiting tour, Charles Eaton of the University English department announced yesterday.

Frost will arrive in Chapel Hill next Wednesday and will stay at the home of Dr. Clifford P. Lyons, chairman of the English department.

He will deliver one of his famous "Lecture Recitals" next Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in Hill hall. The lecture will be free and the public is invited to attend.

On Friday, Frost will visit University creative writing classes and discuss writing problems and techniques with the students.

Frost is famed as an educator as well as a poet. He has taught at Amherst, Harvard, and Dartmouth, and has received many honorary degrees. He has won almost every honor that can be bestowed upon a poet, and has been awarded the Pulitzer prize four times, more often than any other American poet.

The famed American poet has been intimately associated with New England during his life, and most of the themes for his poems are drawn from the New England scene. His works include "North of Boston," "Mountain Interval," "New Hampshire," "West Running Brook," and "Witness Tree." His latest volume is "Steeplebush."

Musical Comedy Is Set for March

"The Beggar's Opera", a 1728 forerunner of the modern musical comedy, will be given its first big production since its great 1922-23 American revival when it opens for a two-day run in Memorial hall, March 10 and 11.

The production, under co-direction of Dr. J. P. Schinhan and David Samples, is sponsored by Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia and Sigma Alpha Iota, music fraternity and sorority; the music department; the Carolina Playmakers, and Sound and Fury.

Casting will be done the last of January in Memorial hall, the exact time to be announced later. The musical calls for a large cast with a wide variety of roles.

Death Plane Claims Three As 36 Jump

From Altitudes Of 250-400 Feet

FT. BRAGG, Jan. 14—(UP)—A C-82 "flying boxcar" packed with paratroopers of the famed 82nd Airborne division went into a death dive today and 36 men bailed out to safety before the plane crashed and killed three crewmen.

The pilot and copilot escaped through a hatch after the plane smashed into the one tree between it and a clearing where it might have landed safely.

Another survivor was Sgt. Robert Lee Hodgkiss, Jumpmaster of the paratroopers and the last in line to bail out. His turn came too late, but he miraculously came through unhurt when the plane crashed and burned.

Witnesses said the paratroopers started tumbling out at an altitude of less than 400 feet, and the last plunged into the air at about 250 feet—perilously low for parachuting.

Hodgkiss had a "free fall" chute which required pulling the ripcord by hand. There was not enough atlitude for him to use it.

TEP Fraternity Hears Hedgepeth

Answering questions on subjects ranging from socialized medicine to the degree of contagion of leprosy, Dr. E. McG. Hedgepeth, head of the University Infirmary, presided at an informal question and answer session at the Tau Epsilon Phi house Wednesday evening.

Dr. Hedgepeth had spoken at the TEP house previously and he was invited to inaugurate the new speakers' program, which the fraternity is initiating.

The questions actually started flying at the dinner table and instead of making a formal speech after supper Dr. Hedgepeth decided to continue answersented by the various brothers. ing whatever queries were pre-

When asked his opinion about the proposal of the American Medical association to assess its members $25 for "educational purposes," Dr. Hedgepeth replied that he was opposed to its use as a lobbying fund against socialized medicine legislation.

Dimes Drive Is Underway Out in County

$8,500 Goal Set by Officials

The March of Dimes campaign began in Orange county yesterday with a quota set at $8,500, E. C. Smith, local chairman of the appeal for funds to fight infantile paralysis, said yesterday.

The quota set last year was $4,250, and Smith said the amount was doubled this year in order to handle the increasing number of cases. In North Carolina last year the chapter spent $400,000 raised in the state, and received from national headquarters $1,366,410 during the epidemic.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—(UP)—The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis opened its 1949 "March of Dimes" fund-raising campaign today. The goal this year is $30,000,000, almost double the amount raised in 1948.

The foundation said that the additional money is needed because the reserves were depleted by last year's epidemic of polio, which was the second worst in the nation's history.

Smith stated that there are 2,509 hospital cases at present in the state, and that it is costing the chapter $7,000 a week for hospital care.

There is an urgent need for contributions, Smith continued, as all chapters have depleted their treasuries and have called on the national chapter, which has depleted its treasury. Students are asked to contribute freely as it is for a cause which was felt here in Chapel Hill last year, some students' wives and children having been attacked by the disease.

The Daily Tar Heel will sponsor the campus drive with Ed Joyner and Dougald MacMillan directing it. Chairmen for men's and women's dormitories, fraternities and sororities will be assigned. Boxes will be placed at a number of conveniently located places on the campus.

Governor Opens March of Dimes

Launching the 1949 March of Dimes campaign last night, Governor Kerr Scott, in an address broadcast over a statewide network, urged North Carolinians to give dollars instead of dimes this year.

"Last year the polio problem was almost 10 times worse than in previous years, and we must be 10 times more prepared," he declared. "We should have a new slogan this year—'Not Dimes But Dollars.' Dollars are necessary in the new crisis as a result of the worst epidemic of infantile paralysis in the history of North Carolina. The infantile paralysis problem in North Carolina has outgrown the dime."

Budgeteers Want Boost Up to $150

Ask for $288 For Non-Staters

After marking up a deduction of $1,692,377 in the appropriations requested by University officials, the state Advisory Budget commission has recommended minimum tuition fees of "at least" $150 a year at the three branches of the Greater University.

Students of the three branches of the Greater University pay $81 in tuition costs each year while out-of-state students are charged $288.

The commission, in discussing a raise in tuition fees before the legislature in Raleigh, recommended that the Board of Trustees of the University increase the tuition charges.

The Advisory Budget commission, a six-man board, is chairmanned by Edward Pate, of Lautinburg. Pate is a member of the Board of Trustees and also of the board's executive committee.

A meeting of the executive committee may be called at any time. This committee is composed of 12 members. However, the entire board of trustees meets twice a year. This board is composed of 100 trustees, the governor as an ex-officio member, plus any ex-governors from the state, and the superintendent of schools. The full board meets in June and February.

The Advisory Budget commission pointed out that the $81 fee has been in effect "for a long time."

"If that amount was proper years ago," the commission added, "$150 per year now, based on greater opportunities offered and because of the tremendous increase in the cost of the services provided, is not excessive, and would not be as great as $81 was a few years ago".

State appropriations for the higher educational institutions have been increased in the proposed budgets, it was pointed out, "but it is felt that all the increasing demands of these institutions cannot be met out of the state appropriations and that some institutions must help themselves by increasing tuition charges."

The commission suggested that a minimum tuition of $75 be charged at East Carolina Teachers college and a minimum of $50 at Western Carolina Teachers college and Appalachian State Teachers college.

Town Men Vote Not to Back Upcoming YMCA Fund Drive

The Town Men's association voted at its Thursday night meeting not to aid the YMCA in its forthcoming fund drive "because the Y has become divorced from student activities."

An association spokesman said the resolution was passed because the members felt the Y was "taking too much interest in the European situation and neglecting the campus."

As guest speaker at the Thursday night meeting, H. W. Wentworth, chairman of the Chapel Hill Junior Chamber of Commerce and a director of the Merchants' association, spoke on eating conditions in town. Wentworth conferred with leaders of the TMA and assisted in the selection of a committee to investigate the situation. Dave Sharpe was named chairman of the committee.

During the regular business meeting, association members heard a motion introduced concerning candidates for the Student legislature from the town districts. In releasing their report of the resolution, however, spokesmen stressed that the TMA is essentially non-political.

The motion read: "In case the candidates for political office representing the town districts not be acceptable to the Town Men's association, the associtaion will sponsor other candidates independently.

Navigating Off Course

Coed Turns Up In NROTC Classes

By Sam Whitehall

There was a low murmur of voices in the celestial navigation classroom of the Naval ROTC as midshipmen got together after the Christmas holidays to shake hands, correlate their New Orleans tales and exchange at-home holiday adventures.

Abruptly—the buzz stopped. All eyes turned to the classroom door as a girl entered, books in hand.

She was Helen A. Crockford, a senior in the University, who has the distinction of being the first woman student ever to be enrolled in the Navy program at Chapel Hill. Miss Crockford, daughter of chemistry professor H. D. Crockford—former head of the navigation department here during the years of war and preflight schools—is a mathematics major who plans to graduate at the end of this quarter.

Aside from the consternation Miss Crockford caused on her first day in class, there have been mixed reactions to her presence among the future naval officers. Several midshipmen have been heard objecting good-naturedly to her navigating with them on the grounds that "she spoils our fun in class."

Lt. Commander George H. Goldsmith, USN, Miss Crockford's instructor, commented on the situation. "This is a very unusual condition and certainly curtails the professor's jokes," he said.

Dr. Crockford was silent on the matter.

Though voices were tense with excitement at the thought of next summer's cruise with Miss Crockford, a pretty brunette, disappointment soon replaced the dreams of moonlit nights on the signal bridge as grapevine word proved she was not a regular NROTC student. She has nothing to do with the WAVE'S, but is merely taking advantage of the opportunity all University students have to study courses the Navy offers, as electives.

Program for Religious Week In Process of Completion Now

Plans are now being completed for Religious Emphasis week, which will be held Jan. 24 to 27, chairman Don Shropshire announced yesterday.

The religious program under the theme "Religion, its Reality and Relevance," will reach students through seminars, evening addresses, classroom appointments, and dormitory visits.

The week will begin Monday morning with an address by the main speaker, Dr. John A. Redhead, Jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Greensboro. All University students will be excused from class for this convocation address, which will begin at 11 o'clock.

Eleven clergymen and outstanding religious leaders, invited to come to this campus to lead the religious program, will speak to students in the classrooms from 8 until 12 o'clock by invitation of the professors. These leaders will also conduct the afternoon seminars.

Among the topics to be discussed in these seminars are "Religion and Labor," led by David Burgess, one of the organizers of the Congress of Industrial Organization, "Fundamentalism," conducted by Frederick Bronkema, professor of Bob Jones University, and "Human Relations," led by Rabbi Joseph Raunch.

Dr. George E. Kelsey, field secretary for the Federal Council of Churches, will discuss "Personal Religion," while Methodist Preacher Marvin Vicks will lead the seminar on "Marriage."

Other topics discussed will be "Modernism," led by the Rev. Charles Jones, and "Protestant Theology" by Dr. Bernhard Anderson.

Students on the Religious Emphasis committees will conduct worship programs each afternoon at 5:15. Each evening Dr. Redhead will give an address, and other religious leaders will visit dormitories, sorority and fraternity houses.

THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Legalize Tapping

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14—(UP)—Attorney General Tom C. Clark today recommended to Congress legislation to legalize wire tapping by U.S. intelligence agents and to eliminate loopholes in espionage laws.

Official Injured

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14—(UP)—Communist shellfire injured an American official in the U.S. Information Service offices and damaged the U.S. consulate in Tientsin, China, today.

'Fear, Insecurity'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14—(UP)—Russia has created so much "fear and insecurity" in the world that free nations must get together and arm for their mutual defense, the State department asserted today.

Acheson Approved

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14—(UP)—The Senate Foreign Relations committee unanimously approved Dean Acheson's nomination as secretary of state today after hearing him assert that aggressive Communism is fatal to free governments and people.

Lesson In Logic

By Fullof Bullis, Junior

1. Communists and their allies are unscrupulous and they tell lies whenever it suits their purpose.
2. They want to know America's atomic secrets.
3. Frank Graham may look sort of holy, and he may not sound like a Communist, but this is because he's very clever; and the Communists may all the time be attacking him, but this is because they are all shrewd, the unscrupulous lying Reds, and are covering up for their friend Frank Graham.
4. This very same Frank Graham has been declared eligible to gaze at these atomic secrets which the Communists want to know about.
5. Thus, Communists now have access to atomic secrets.
6. This jeopardizes the safety of the entire nation.
7. The innocent reader must not ever forget that all Communists and their allies, including Frank Graham, tell lies, the liars.
8. I hereby and therefore demand that Frank Graham publicly deny that he is a Communist and I call upon him to send me at once his resignation from all organizations which I don't approve of.
9. Thus I shall restore the safety of the Nation, since no longer will the lying Reds have access to our atomic secrets.

The Voodoo Done It

Just what have these past few balmy days signified? Has spring arrived prematurely? With warm days and clear moonlit nights, the sap has begun to flow, the boy squirrels give the girl squirrels the inquiring eyebrow, and something seems to be up.

According to the newspapers, the rest of the country is shivering under thick layers of snow and the red in the thermometers is slightly blue. Why is Chapel Hill and surrounding areas so comfortable? The Daily Tar Heel, edited by curious and suspicious people, has investigated.

The whole sordid story centers around the class in Folk Singing among the Aboriginal Chug-lugs of the Central Congo Basin. The class was chanting one of the original native songs several days ago when the cold front, which had been advancing upon the southern part of the country, suddenly wheeled, broke and fled in terror. The song, which has not been translated exactly yet, is an ancient device used to control weather conditions; in fact Africa still has a wonderfully warm climate due to the fear cold fronts hold for certain native songs.

Several professors are now trying to break the spell, for complaints are already pouring in from universities in the areas affected by the cold spell. Since the fronts cannot spread southward, they just sit on our western and Yankee brethren and shiver. The officials are concerned lest charges be brought against this institution and it is believed that if the professors of the Congo Basin department cannot solve the situation, Roy Acuff and the Sons of the Pioneers may be called in.

So consider the warm weather and feel the menace it bears for the University, which has always disclaimed any black magic practices. Let us all hope that good old rainy, miserable, muddy, chilly Chapel Hill weather comes back.

Suggested Message

TO A VERY COMMON 'TATOR

All eight members of the Communist Party of Chapel Hill thank you for the free publicity you have been giving us. We now have hopes of acquiring yet a ninth member!

Anything Look Different?

If today's Daily Tar Heel looks any different to you, it isn't your eyes going bad. It's just an experiment being tried by the DTH staff with the aid of Orville Campbell and his Colonial Press printshop.

The front, back and sports pages of today's paper are set, as usual, mostly in 8 point type. The difference is in the amount of space between each line of type. The lines are set closer together, which means more news can be put into the paper and the Daily Tar Heel will be taking another step toward giving the student body a better newspaper.

The technical change, which is here for only a one-day stand, naturally increases the cost of the paper. The extra cost was borne by Campbell, who was editor of the DTH for 1941-42. He, as well as the entire Daily Tar Heel staff, would like to see the change become permanent.

These Days

Israel Here Permanently

By George E. Sokolsky

The British, it would seem to me, are risking too much in their direct intervention in the Palestine war. Already the Israeli guerrillas (and that is the most that they can be) have defeated all the Arab armies sent against them. They have even defeated the Egyptian army, which was supposed to amount to something. The British have used war planes to intimidate Israel, and the Israelis shot the planes down. Then the British mobilized their Mediterranean fleet at Malta.

These Jews will fight for Palestine. Maybe in all the complexities of modern life, the simplicity of unabashed nationalism may no longer be understood. But there it is. Zionism is not a refugee movement; it is not retaliation for wrongs done; it is not an attempt to solve a current problem; it is one of those amazing historic movements which continues, with or without reason, to reassert itself in each generation.

Take, for instance, the case of the Maccabees. At this distance, this Hasmonean revolt against the full force of the post-Alexandrian Hellenic world does not seem practical. Yet they did fight and they did succeed in their mission. Palestine might have remained a Jewish state during these thousand of years were it not that subsequent Hasmoneans became corrupt and even indecent. The core of Israelish civilization is religious faith, a firm belief and acceptance of God's law, and when they desert their core, they cease to possess the strength to survive, which is true of all peoples. It is interesting to recall that old Mattathias on his deathbed realized that Israel's mission is the law—that is, natural law, the law of God. He said to his victorious sons:

". . .Now therefore, my sons, be ye zealous for the law, and give your lives for the covenant of your fathers. Call to remembrance what acts our fathers did in their time; so shall ye receive great honour and an everlasting name. Wherefore, ye my sons, be valiant, and show yourselves men in the behalf of the law; for by it shall ye obtain glory. . . ."

The same spirit prevails in the new state of Israel and it is undoubtedly carrying them through a great travail. When Israel started to hold this small strip by military power very few believed that they could possibly succeed. Certainly few believed that they could accomplish so much alone and unaided. The general assumption was that the combined power of the Arab states, armed by Great Britain, would reduce Israel to a memory of an abortive attempt at statehood. But that did not happen. Instead, the small Israeli army defeated all the Arabs. This was contrary to British plan and policy. It needs to be noted that Israel, in this war, has had the physical assistance of no country and the goodwill of some only after prolonged debate. Arms were purchased wherever available and smuggled past the British blockade.

What Great Britain risks is the conclusion that its policy is not only unwise but unfair. It risks the prospect of an antagonism among many people who would like to strengthen and support Great Britain. It risks the prospect of the defeat of aid from this country. There seems to be neither logic nor flexibility in British policy in Palestine — only that same stubbornness over an error which has marked George Marshall's policy concerning China. It seems to me that Great Britain is risking too much over nothing that can any longer matter to the empire. Israel is a fact that will not down.

As Another Saw It

A Fine Line

(Reprinted from The Raleigh News and Observer)

"Bob House is drawing a fine line," said an observant lady in a discussion of free speech and the refusal of University authorities to allow a Communist editor to speak in Memorial Hall. "The fellow is under indictment and the Legislature is in session."

That certainly is an eminently practical view. But nothing is so clear from this incident as that the doctrine of free speech even in the seat of freedom depends upon the heat around it. It seems only recently that the University authorities, acting upon the theory that University students should be permitted to hear the spokesmen of every variety of political opinion, including the least popular, welcomed to Memorial Hall both Earl Browder, head of the Communist party, and Hiram Evans, Imperial Geewhiz of the Ku Klux Klan. Of course, the whole situation with regard to Communists in the United States has changed in recent years since the so-called "cold war" with Russia began. An iron curtain has been dropped down between the two great powers. Under such circumstances it is important that this country do everything possible to protect its security. Under such circumstances it is also important that we protect our liberties. The mouthings about freedom of speech of this Communist editor in a street speech at Chapel Hill was, of course, nauseous silliness as it came from a man speaking for a system which denies all liberties. As such a man he is impertinent even to mention the word freedom. No such creature of Communism, however, should ever goad us as free men from the devotion to our own liberties which include the right to hear anything from anybody.

No revolution impends in North Carolina. No repression of free speech is indicated. The State of North Carolina and the authorities of the University of North Carolina had better err on the side of freedom than on the side of those men on earth today who fear freedom more than anything else in the world. We would be in a pretty bad fix if we set out to defend freedom in the world by denying it first at home.

'Loyal but Inept'

Forum Action Criticized

By Russell G. Baldwin

I cease to wonder at the remarkable spread of Communism throughout the world the past several years. The Communists are a shrewd lot. Or is one to suppose it a mere coincidence that the editor of the Communist Daily Worker was brought to the University at such a crucial time as at present? It matters not whether the situation occurred by design or by coincidence. The important consideration is that it might easily have been avoided had the members of the Carolina Forum been alert-minded individuals.

To bring a nationally discredited Communist to the University at the very time when the Legislature is in the process of voting on appropriations for the University is inexcusably inopportune, to say the least. One cannot help but get the impression that the Communists of Chapel Hill are smarter than the Carolina Forum of Chapel Hill. If there is any one issue which has hurt the University financially more than all others, it is Communism. Most citizens of North Carolina depend on the newspapers for their information about the doings of their tax-supported University. Since freaks always attract more attention than do the normal, it is only natural that those not acquainted with the real facts of the situation have a distorted picture of the Communist element at the University.

I have no doubt that the members of the Carolina Forum are loyal to the University; but loyalty, gentlemen, does not excuse ineptitude. I am told that, in a precautionary move, you invited members of the Legislature and representatives of the press to hear Communist Gates. Whether this step was taken as a precaution or as a last-minute attempt to rectify your mistake has little bearing upon the immaturity which characterizes your action. Gentlemen, what you have done is to dress the child in red clothing before sending him into the bull-pen.

To the members of the General Assembly, I would address a plea for understanding and forbearance. I beg of you to consider the FACTS instead of being misled by the enemies of the University. If you let the Communist issue influence your vote on appropriations for the University, you will be playing directly into the hands of the Communists. They are using every means within their power to discredit and to destroy the University and they know that their most powerful weapon is to foster ill-will between the University and the people who own it, who send their sons and daughters to be educated in its hallowed halls. The University will be a bulwark against Communism so long as it remains free and strong. The moment it becomes weak or reactionary, the aims of the Communists will have been served.

Ellington: Psychologist?

Paul Weston
 Deep Purple
 I Only Have Eyes for You

These two display the genius of this man Weston. He uses strings heavily but without losing the melody in uncohesive runs. Both of the tunes are played in their proper tempo, with music for dreaming and dancing the idea behind them. "Eyes" is a little better than "Purple" but only because the latter should be done with a vocal. A Capitol release.

Bill Eckstine
 Fools Rush In
 Don't Worry about Strangers

Bob upholds the Crosby tradition on fine vocals on "Cat" and there isn't enough of the Andrewses to spoil the record, but the tune isn't good enough for anyone to pull it up to a fair rating. "Strangers" is one of the few recordings that I have ever heard by the Andrews Sisters that was good enough for a fair rating, but this is a fast, comic novelity that they can do well.

Lewis Jordan
 Why Did You do it Baby
* Pecking and Poking

These two are certainly the antithesis of each other. One is Jordan at his best and the other at his worst. "Baby" is low-down blues with plenty of rhythm and song as blues should be sung. "Pecking" is another "Look Out" but without any particular humor.

Duke Ellington presents "Mood Ellington"
 Album Rating

Duke goes psychologist on us in these selections. Some of these are the Duke's impressions of types of people and places — mood interpretation at its best. Others are for enjoyment only and still another is to produce a mood in the listener; the last being "Turquoise Cloud". Lawrence Brown's terrific trombone shine particularly on "Hy'a Sue" and "Golden Cress." The boy is nothing short of marvelous. Oscar Pettiford on bass gives the whole band life. Few pack the punch that this guy displays every time he picks up that old bull fiddle. His drive sparks all of the rhythm pieces in this album. The album is filled out by "New York City Blues", "Lady of the Lavender Mist", "The Clothed Woman", "Three Cent Stomp," and "Progressive Cavote." If you have ever had any desire to have terrific music in your collection, by all means don't miss this album.

Much More Serious

Editor:

As serious as is the denial of the right of John Gates to speak on University property, much more serious is the consequent denial to students of their traditional and undeniable right to hear any point of view to which they care to listen.

If the students are to turn over to the Administration the right to determine what they shall hear, how long will it be before they are forced to surrender also the rights to say, read, and think what they please?

Does the Carolina Forum have any reality now that it is established that there is one viewpoint that must not be presented?

Those who are alarmed at this restriction on freedom of inquiry must not remain silent now. Protest becomes more difficult as freedom diminishes.

Albert W. Williams

(Editor's Note: The Daily Tar Heel will run a representative cross-section of letters received concerning the Gates affair. The volume of mail received has made it impossible to print the complete text of all letters on this topic.)

Passing Sentence

Courageous Aldermen

By Jonathan Marshall

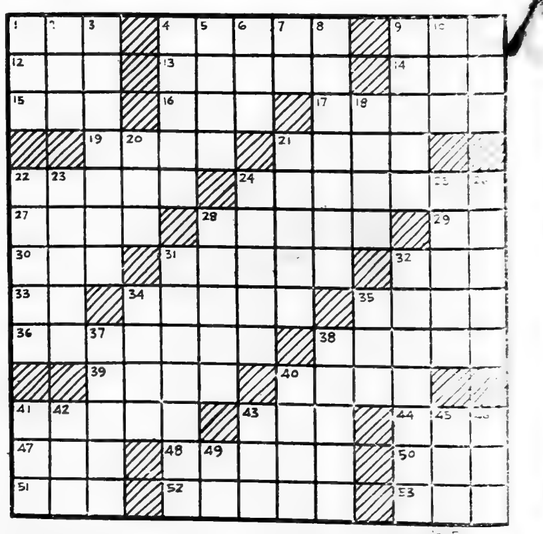
We in America often fail to follow one of the fundamental principles of democracy. Democracy can only be successful if the citizens participate in it.

One need only to read the newspapers to see evidence of this fact every day. In our national elections little over half of the eligible voters participated; this figure is even lower in many cases for local elections.

Surveys appear constantly to remind us that a certain percentage of the people do not know who their congressman is, never heard of European relief, or even do not know the name of the President. When people do not know who their elected officials are or what the issues are that are before their legislatures, democracy fails, and it becomes oligarchy — or rule of the few.

On Wednesday night two members of the Chapel Hill Board of aldermen took a courageous stand in the public interest. They attempted to prevent the passage of a bill until there was time for the public to be heard. The aldermen were Dr. A. W. Hobbs and Mr. E. S. Lanier.

Five representatives of the taxicab companies in Chapel Hill appeared before the Board of Aldermen and requested a raise in taxi rates. There was no advance notice, and there was no public hearing on this issue which affects the whole town.



By a vote of four to two, over the protests of Dr. Hobbs and Mr. Lanier, the Board granted the cab companies a ten cent raise in fares to be effective on February 1.

The issue was not whether or not the increase in rates was justified, but whether the people had a chance to testify on the bill. Apparently the cab companies said that they were not making money and needed an increase; they did not have to present their books and prove it.

The increase was probably justified, for the rates have not increased since before the war. The action of the Board of Aldermen, however, is both undemocratic and irresponsible. If cab companies had asked for a 50 cent raise, there would have been just as much reason for the Aldermen to pass it as a ten cent raise—unless there was a hearing.

The fault lies basically with the voters in Chapel Hill who seldom attend the meetings of the Board of Aldermen. With little show of interest by the people, their representatives can hardly be expected to consult them. There may come a time when a serious issue rides through the Board of Aldermen because it is not given a public hearing, but perhaps that is what is needed to awaken the sense of responsibility in the voters that is required for a successful democracy.

Dr. Hobbs and Mr. Lanier fought for an important issue, although the particular case was insignificant. They are to be congratulated for their courage and their sense of responsibility.

Riding the Rumor Trial

RUMORS AROUND CHAPEL HILL have run as rampant during the past week as did Charlie Justice during the late grid season. The local grapevine has been kicking a pair of choice tid-bits through the Chapel Hill dust all week but no official word on either of the two major rumors had been released late yesterday afternoon.

Both yarns center around the North Carolina football team, and both have caused considerable speculation on campus. The first involves a possible North Carolina-Notre Dame football series, and the second has the entire varsity coaching staff, with the lone exception of head coach Carl Snavely, leaving Tar Heelia.

Other signs along the rumor route indicate that a number of graduating Tar Heels will be inking professional football contracts in the near future. Among the most likely future pros are defensive stalwart Mike Rubish and offensive spark Bob Mitten. Both are ticketed for the big leagues if reliable reports are correct. And other Carolina gridmen may soon crash the play for pay racket.

Irish Story Red Hot

THE NOTRE DAME FABLE seems extremely plausible at this point. It is a known fact that the Irish tried to schedule a 1949 bout with Carolina earlier this year, but at that time previous schedule commitments halted proceedings.

Although the matter was hushed up after the first failure, it was not forgotten. With the Tar Heels on the rise as a national power and a Southern opponent lacking from the Notre Dame schedule, the Irish officials wanted very desperately to get Carolina on their '49 card.

It is now reported that Carolina will play an eleven-game schedule next season and that Notre Dame will be one of the major features of the slate. An announcement from the Athletic department concerning the matter is thought to be forthcoming.

Should the Mid-Westerners be included on next year's card, the Tar Heels would have a total of three inter-sectional tilts. Louisiana State and Georgia, a pair of Southeastern conference powers are already lined up for next fall.

Coaches Could Cause Calamity

SHOULD THE QUARTET of top-notch Snavely assistants leave Chapel Hill they would cause an unprecedented calamity in the athletic department. True, coaches have come and gone at UNC before, but never have four grade-A sidemen hopped a Southbound train at one time.

Although this story, like the fable of the Three Bears, may be nothing more than a fairy tale, it is enough to send cold chills on an elevator trip up and down the backs of the football-happy Carolina alumni.

The juice squeezed from the Chapel Hill grapevine indicates nothing definite but points to some very probable incidents that could take place at any time.

The hearsay material garnered from various sources at this time points to the definite resignation of Coach Jim Gill. Gill has been tied in with the head coaching post at both Virginia Military Institute and Nebraska. VMI officials recently denied that Gill had the job in the bag, and hinted that another coach might be all but signed to a contract.

The most logical reasoning, however, points to Gill's taking the Nebraska post, if any. Upon calling his home late yesterday afternoon it was learned that Coach Gill was out of town and would not return until Sunday night. No information of his where-abouts could be garnered, however, and the whole hush-hush affair points to a plane trip to the West, a conference with the Nebraska Athletic department, and a possible contract. At this point, no one would be very surprised if the hefty gentleman returned from Nebraska, or Virginia, as the case may be, with a fat parcel in his coat pocket. But we could be wrong.

Writing on the Wall

THE WRITING ON THE WALL further indicates that George Radman may take over the head coaching reins at up-and-coming Newberry college, and that Russ Murphy may retire. Freshman coach Crowell Little, like Gill, was also linked with the VMI job, but the heavy-set varsity mentor has been mentioned more often in connection with the position.

Should Gill, Radman, Murphy, and Little decide to take other positions in order to better themselves, Coach Snavely would be left with one varsity coach and a bucket-full of tears.

Cagers, Track Team See Action Tonight

W & L Is Opponent In Conference Tilt At Lynchburg, Va.

Coach Tom Scott's Carolina basketballers journeyed up to Lynchburg, Va., this morning and will attempt to record their fourth Southern conference victory of the season tonight when they meet the Washington and Lee Generals.

The visiting Tar Heels, fresh from a 55-50 triumph over Wake Forest this week, will be favored to cop tonight's engagement. Although George Washington handed them a sound thrashing on Monday, the Carolina performance against the Deacons indicates the team is still in the running for conference honors. Wake Forest, incidentally, had beaten George Washington by 12 points before losing to Carolina.

The Generals will be the host club tonight, but the game will be played on a neutral court in Lynchburg.

Usual Starters

Coach Scott is expected to call on his usual starting lineup for the battle. This unit lists Coy Carson and Hugo Kappler at forwards, Nemo Nearman, center, and Dan Nyimicz and Rip Ryan at guards.

Howard Deasy, elongated reserve center, also is slated for considerable action. He may be used for Nearman at center, and on occasions Coach Scott may employ both his tall boys at the same time in the double pivot system.

Carson is the man the Generals will have to watch most closely if they are to defeat Carolina. The hustling Tar Heel forward from Asheville looped 11 field goals through the nets against Wake Forest to be the high scorer for the evening with 22 points. He possesses a wide variety of set shots, push shots, and hooks from close range. Carson is hibh scorer for the season.

Ninth Win

Carolina will be gunning for its ninth win of the campaign as compared to but two losses—to NYU and George Washington.

In another important conference game, N.C. State battles Duke in, Durham tonight. Ben Collins, ace Duke center, is bothered by a hand injury. And his loss, serves to make Coach Everett Case's Raleigh outfit an even heavier favorite.

A full house of nearly 9,000 is expected to turn out for the State-Duke fray. Both teams will be seeking to regain lost prestige. State already has lost seven games, and Duke has dropped two in a row—to Temple and VPI.

Carolina Frosh Have Game Slated In Gym Tonight

Coach Jim Hamilton's Tar Baby cagers will provide the local sports entertainment for the weekend when they meet Pfieffer junior college in Woollen gym tonight at 8 o'clock.

A revamped lineup will take the floor against the high scoring visitors from Salisbury. Frank Eckert will possibly replace Buddy Johnson at forward while another probable change may see Chapel Hill's Lawrence Cheek opening in place of Ham Crowder at guard.

Hooking Dick Harter at forward, Lenny Guyes in the pivot, and John Bowersox at guard will round out the lineup.

A week ago the local yearlings dropped a hard fought 60-42 decision to Duke's roofscraping freshmen. Pfieffer was also trounced by the Blue Imps, their defeat coming in the Duke gym, 97-69, in December.

Since then, the visitors have been making point-prolific performances in their contests with Carolina junior college foes.

Wake Forest's Baby Deacs gave Hamilton's charges their second setback in Wake Forest last Wednesday night, 43-38. The victims of the Tar Babies include Louisburg College twice, and the freshmen quintets of Catawba, Elon, and Guilford.

Johnson and Bowersox, with 94 and 89 points, respectively, are leading the freshmen five's scoring thus far. Harter has accounted for 63 points, Crowder 62, and Guyes 26 for the yearlings.

Tony Galento Says He'll Fight Louis Without Any Gate

By Oscar Fraley

ORANGE, N.J., Jan. 14.—(UP) —Ten years after the night he stood within fleeting seconds of the world's heavyweight championship, two-ton Tony Galento paused today on the threshold of wrestling greatness and offered to fight Joe Louis "absolutely for nothin'."

"I'd murder the bum," the 360-pound Newark nightstick growled with a refreshingly new vocal attack.

Tony, still short but piled wider than ever, yearns for the ring even though his manager, Willie (the Beard) Gilzenberg, insists that he remain among the grunt and groaners. Even the fact that strangler Lewis is taking over as czar of the torso thespians, with the unprecedented possibility that there soon may be but one wrestling champion, Tony can't be placated.

"I get sick when I see these bums who call themselves heavyweights today," quoth Tony as he finished six games of handball. "I'll take any two of them on the same night."

Much Tougher

Galento, never one to be overly modest, insisted that wrestling was a much tougher dodge than exchanging padded blows.

"Okay, so people say wrestling is an act," he grunted. "Well, nobody ever hurt me fighting. But since I've been wrestling I've got football knees, a chipped elbow and a banged up back."

Tony patted a hairy chest and asserted that a wrestler, particularly one who had been a boxer, could beat a fighter any time.

"I've learned a lot in this racket," he said. "If I could get that Louis again it would be a real rough fight and I'd knock him out. I'd fight him for nothin', too, for any charity they want. I'm 38 but I'm in better shape than I was 10 years ago. Louis is all washed up."

After a year and a half in the mat game, Galento is starting to know his way around.

Beaten 'Champeens'

"I been beatin' all these guys who call themselves world champeens," he said. "Guys like Orville Brown, Marvin Westerberg, Herman Rhode, who also calls himself 'nature boy,' and Rudy Dusek. In over 125 bouts I never been pinned."

Tony lost two on disqualifications, though. It seems that he forgot he was a wrestler and reverted to his boxing instincts, using his famed left hook to stiffen Frank Sexton at Cleveland and Orville Brown in Kansas City.

"They made me mad," Tony muttered like a kid caught in the cookie jar. "They either put their thumb in my eye or jabbed me. So I leave 'em have it."

Ranson's Team in Washington For Evening Star-AAU Meet

By Frank Allston

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 14 — Carolina's nine-man track team arrived here tonight to participate in tomorrow's Evening Star-AAU Invitational indoor games in the huge National Guard armory.

Coach Dale Ranson got his charges in bed early in order that they might get plenty of sleep before the gruelling task ahead of them. A light workout on the armory board track has been planned for tomorrow morning. The meet is scheduled to get under way at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Ranson is expecting great things of his high jumping duo of Jack Moody, Southern conference champ last year, and freshman Bill Albans, who tied Moody in the practice meet with Duke. Both boys appeared to be in top shape upon arrival in the nation's capital.

Ace Performers Out

The Tar Heel cinder-beaters were dealt a pair of knockout blows when it was announced that two ace performers in events that Ranson was counting on finishing high in would not be able to compete.

Dick Taylor, high hurdling standout and Sugar Bowl performer, had been missing practice because of family illness and then he turned up on Thursday with a bad cold. Coach Ranson will probably enter either Bob Morrow or Albans in that event as a substitute for Taylor.

Laddie Terrell, anchor man on the mile relay team, injured his leg Wednesday and was forced to remain in Chapel Hill. Terrell's injury eliminated the necessity of picking a relay quartet from the five who were showing up the best last week.

Mile Relay Team

The four quarter-milers who will run against Maryland, Virginia Tech and Duke in the Southern conference mile relay event are Stan White, Bill Crimmins, Clarence McClain, and Percy Flowers.

Two of the top performers on last fall's Tar Heel cross country team will run in distance events for the Blue and White. Sam Magill will do the two-mile stint while Julian MacKenzie will travel a mile on the boards.

The loss of Taylor and Terrell seriously impaired the Tar Heel chances of finishing high in those two events.

Coach Ranson still, however, envisions a performance worthy of Carolina teams. Ranson is looking especially for the first two places in the high jump which Moody and Albans conceivably could bring to the Tar Heels.

Hogan Looks Good

PEBBLE BEACH, Cal., Jan. 14.—(UP)—Defending Champion Lloyd Mangrum and little Ben Hogan, the sweet swinger who finally returned to form with a loud bang yesterday, shared the favorite's role today as a field of 96 professionals and their amateur partners teed off in the first round of the $10,000 Bing Crosby Pro-Amateur golf tournament.

Mangrum, winner of the Los Angeles Open last week, took it easy during practice rounds here. But Hogan, one of the hardest workers in golfdom, set a new record at Cypress Point yesterday when he fired an unbelievable 33-30-63 on a course that many consider one of the toughest in the world.

Frosh and Jayvees Stage Swim Battle Here on Saturday

The Carolina freshmen and jayvee swimming teams will clash this afternoon in Bowman Gray Pool at 3 o'clock. Both teams are of almost equal strength and close competition is predicted for all events.

Coach Bob Ousley's freshmen won their first victory of the season last Saturday over the VMI frosh squad, 44-31. The Tar Babies have been showing a marked improvement week by week and are expected to have a winning season from now on.

Ousley has been drilling his boys hard all week. Looking good for his performers have been Cecil Milton, Kirby Ambler, and Bob Raskin.

Jayvee Coach Mike Morrow has also been working his mermen overtime. The jayvees haven't had a meet this season.

The jayvees and freshmen, however, aren't the only ones who have been working, for Coach Ralph Casey has had the varsity men going at full tempo all week.

The Tar Heels are preparing for their meet next Saturday against LaSalle university. LaSalle is the strongest swimming team ever to meet a local team in Chapel Hill, and Coach Casey knows his boys must be at their peak to win.

Nevertheless, the Tar Heels have had some encouraging news this week. Steve Osborne who missed the VMI meet and ten valuable days of practice with a pulled leg muscle has returned to the fold.

Marshall, Embry Discuss Pro Football Peace

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 14.—(UP)—A personal meeting within a few days between George Preston Marshall, owner of the Washington Redskins, and Robert Embry, owner of the Baltimore Colts, was lined up today as the next move in attempts to establish peace in professional football.

One club owner of the All-America conference has said that it was Marshall's objection to accepting the Colts into the National Football league that created last month's "peace" thing between the two loops.

Embry, who said he was "certain that the two leagues will reach an agreement satisfactory to both," said last night he would meet with Marshall some time before the leagues hold their separate meetings next week. The AAC will gather in Chicago next Tuesday and the NFL on Monday.

Embry said the exact date of the meeting with Marshall had not been set, but expressed confidence that when peace is reached "Baltimore will still be in the setup."

Earlier this week, club President Dan Topping of the AAC New York Yankees called Marshall the "stumbling block" to peace and said it was his objection to the inclusion of Baltimore in an amalgamation of the two leagues that broke up the "peace" meeting in Philadelphia.

Marshall denied yesterday that he had any objections to the Colts, but said the other NFL owners might not want to accept them because "Baltimore is not a money-making town."

Dan Topping has offered to wipe out his franchise, but the New York Yankees of the All-America football conference continued to sign college players today at a feverish pace.

Six new college players were signed today by the Yankees, making a total of 20 rookies since the end of the 1948 season.

Topping announced earlier this week that he would give up his franchise and become merely a landlord if that would help bring peace between the AAC and the National Football league. And Owner Ted Collons of the NFL Boston Yanks said he had reached tentative terms with Topping for renting Yankee stadium next fall.

Players signed today included Tackle Bill Stanton of North Carolina State.

How will you greet him?

Many will toast this fellow's arrival with champagne and cheers.

And when they shout "Happy New Year"—they know it will be just that . . . for them.

There'll be others, of course, whose cup will be bitter and cheerless. To them 1959 will promise just one more year of disappointment and failure—another year of "have-not"!

How will you "see in" that year ahead?

Your answer lies in the plans you are making today for the future happiness and security of your family and yourself. It lies in a systematic saving plan—one that builds and builds for the future.

Many are finding the best answer in U.S. Savings Bonds—the wisest, surest of all investments. These Bonds are guaranteed by the U.S. Government—guaranteed to pay you back $4 for every $3 you put in, after ten years.

Old Alma Mater

'UNC Much Different' Czech Student Asserts

By Charlie Gibson

"Carolina is much different" is an understatement when Kitty Kleiner, Czechoslovakian now studying for a master's degree in economics here, gives a vivid description of educational conditions at her first alma mater—Charles university in Prague.

Kitty, who is typical of approximately 60 foreign students here, has several natural differences between Charles and Carolina to mention—facts about the dating situation, sports enthusiasm, and classroom procedure, for instance. These comparisons she chuckles about. But then, too, she has all-too-serious realism to remember about the very same war-created needs in her hometown which the World Student Service fund hopes to offset with such funds as the WSSF contribution the University is making this week.

Charles university was founded in 1348 and celebrated its 600th anniversary last year. As Kitty recalls it in pre-World War II days, Charles was a campus just as carefree and lively as Carolina but where skiing and soccer were the rage instead of football. There lecture attendance was not compulsory and most quizzes were oral. Charles coeds usually paid their own way when dating just one boy at a time and "not 25 or so mixed in together on different nights."

However, the Charles university which Kitty last saw in 1946 was radically changed; it wore all the scars of seven years of war. The day the Nazi flag went up over Prague in 1939 its university was closed, many of the best professors and thousands of students being herded off to German forced labor camps where inherent tuberculosis became more widely spread because of poor sanitation.

Those who came back and many others who worked actively underground against Nazism are anxious to resume their education, Kitty says.

Consequently, there is now a tremendous 10-year backlog of students mid-way through college hoping to be able to graduate. Instructors are scarce since qualified new ones have not yet been trained in sufficient numbers to replace the former experts slaughtered wholesale during the war.

Students are so grateful for Charles' slow recovery, though, that they stage no rallies in protest of rather severe university regulations. After giving a 10-week summer vacation, their school requires each student applying for readmission in the fall to present a certificate vowing that he has spent six of his 10 weeks at some constructive job, such as harvesting or reconversion building, to alleviate the drastic labor shortage existing in Prague.

When twice as many students flocked to the same number of classrooms with only half the instructors on hand before the war, the only accommodation that Kitty's political science class could find was an outdoor circus tent. At one time Charles was faced with again having to close the same doors that Germans once barred because the university in peacetime could not get enough coal to keep classrooms heated. Then students did rally to the cause, voluntarily going back to the coal-digging trade the Nazis taught them to keep Charles and its furnaces going at all costs.

Yet according to Kitty, Prague students are not complaining a lot. Completely impoverished youths appreciate the meager scholarship of 2,000 crowns or $49 per month which their government affords them in an all-out, tax-supported effort to educate the rising Czechoslovakian generation. The Charles student body at large thoroughly appreciates, too, the food, American text books, shoes, clothing, and tuberculosis sanatoria which WSSF is giving wherever aid is most needed.

Kitty, having won a B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation scholarship to Iowa university last year and here for 1948-49, considers herself very lucky.

Noted Speakers To Lead Forums In Frat Houses

A noted group of speakers will lead fraternity house discussions which get underway next week under general supervision of the YMCA, Claude Shotts, Y secretary, announced yesterday.

Authorities in several fields have accepted fraternity invitations to speak on various subjects related to social and college life as continuation of the discussion program begun last quarter.

Among the speakers appearing at discussions this quarter will be Mrs. Arnold Nash, wife of Prof. Arnold Nash of the University religion department, the Rev. Charles Jones, pastor of the Presbyterian church, and Dr. R. A. Ross of the Duke university sociology department. Tentative speakers include Dr. Frank Graham, president of the University, and William Carmichael, controller of the University.

Gene Turner of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity is the general chairman in charge of the house discussions. Chairmen of individual fraternities are Joe McLeod, Chi Phi; Dennis Smith, Chi Psi; Ed Smith, DKE; Sam Magill, Delta Psi; Morton Glosser, Tau Epsilon Phi, and Larry Cohen, Zeta Beta Tau.

-Navigate-

A Chapel Hill native and resident, she first became interested in celestial navigation after listening to her father and friends discuss the subject. Celestial navigation is the art of steering a course by means of the heavenly bodies, a worthy subject for study by convertible owners.

Suggestions have been made that as a representative of the coed population she might profitably study another Navy course: Tactics and Techniques. However these courses deal only with the handling of naval vessels.

It has been reported that approximately 85 women on campuses throughout the country have taken courses in this manner. Such women are not required to enroll in the NROTC program nor to assume any obligation. It is necessary only for them to register for the course as they would any other divisional elective, and attend instruction under a Naval officer. Credits obtained in this manner are acceptable towards graduation.

-Traffic-

light will consist of two sections, operating simultaneously. One will be located on a pedestal in front of the Post office and in the middle of Franklin. The other is to be of the overhead type suspended above the eastern end of the Franklin-Henderson intersection.

It is expected that this new traffic setup will result in a no-parking ordinance for the area directly in front of the Post Office. U-turns will undoubtedly be eliminated, officials said.

Gilbert Ray, City Manager, estimated the cost of the new light at approximately $1,000. Asked for the date of installation, Ray said, "We can't say exactly. Everything must be in exact readiness before we move a peg."

It was estimated that it will take three days to completely install the light. Officials hoped to start pouring concrete for the safety island also to be constructed in about a week.

The lights facing east and west along Franklin, and the one facing Henderson will be tricolored; red, amber and green. In addition to the colored signals, for automobiles, pedestrians will have to obey "wait" and "walk" signals. The complete cycle of light changes will take approximately 60 seconds and will be divided into seven phases:

Phase 1: Green east and west on Franklin, red on Henderson and "wait" for pedestrians. Traffic may move only along Franklin street.

Phase 2: Green and amber "caution" on Franklin, red on Henderson and "wait" for pedestrians. Cars must stop if they have not entered the intersection and move out of the intersection if they are already in it.

Phases 3&4: All lights red, no traffic may move. "Walk" for pedestrians—this is the only chance pedestrians have to legally cross the street, approximately 15 seconds.

Phase 5: All traffic halted, pedestrians must "wait." This is to insure that all pedestrians crossing the street have moved out of the path of automobiles. They have approximately 6 seconds to clear out of the way.

Phase 6&7: Red on Franklin, green on Henderson and "wait" for pedestrians. This period will last about 10 seconds.

Grey Culbreth, of the University's Utilities division in charge of installing the traffic signal, mentioned the importance of complete obedience of traffic signals to the successful operation of the light.

"In mostly any kind of traffic problem," he said, "it is imperative that the walking public understand the traffic light's purpose. If a person walks through a red light which is against him, he defeats the whole purpose of that light. A traffic light is not alone to control and protect the riding public, but the walking public as well."

Setting up the light will take approximately three days. During that time traffic will be cut off from the south side of Franklin, leaving that space clear for the workmen and the area before the Post Office free for traffic. Motorists' cooperation was urged by the Utilities division.

Bible Group Meet Will Be at 9:30

Dr. Claiborne Jones announced yesterday that the student bible study group of the Episcopal church will meet at 9:30 instead of 9:45 on Sunday morning as was previously announced. The group will continue to choose topics of interest to individual members under Dr. Jones' leadership.

An extremely determined young woman who has a distinct aversion towards navy caps, be they regulation or a Lily Dashe creation, she has no definite plans for the future, except that she is not aspiring to a commission in the United States Navy.

A teacher of Sunday school, active member of the YWCA, WAA and Town Girls' association, Miss Crockford will leave third-year midshipmen at the end of this quarter wondering just who is going to wear the bell-bottoms in her family.

Trial of Reds May Start Sans Foster

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—(UP)—The history-making trial of the national "board of directors" of the U. S. Communist party, opening here next Monday, very probably will proceed without William Z. Foster, ailing and aged party chairman, it was learned today.

The 12 Communist leaders lost today their final pre-trial skirmish to avoid facing a jury on charges of conspiracy to overthrow the government by force and violence. Federal Judge Harold Medina turned down a defense petition for a 90-day postponement.

McLemore to Speak To Medical Group

Dr. G. A. McLemore, 70-year-old doctor from Smithfield, will speak at a meeting of the Alpha Epsilon Delta medical honor society Monday night at 7 o'clock. The meeting will be held in the Horace Williams lounge in Graham Memorial.

The following premedical students will also be initiated into the honorary society: Harrison Barbee, Greensboro; H. C. Fordham, Greensboro; Charles Fulghum, Selma; Mel Horowitz, Greenville, S. C.; and Jay Joseph, Vineland, N. J.

All premed students and interested persons are invited to attend the meeting.

Pretty College Senior Takes Seat In State Legislature of Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 14 — (UP) — Jane Ann Noble, pretty college senior, said today she probably will learn more political science as a state lawmaker than she would if she had stayed in school.

Miss Noble, 24, a photogenic brunette, forsook her sorority house for the statehouse when the legislature convened last week. A duly elected member of the House of Representatives, she is believed to be the youngest woman ever to serve in the Indiana General assembly.

During the legislature's 61-day session she will miss all her classes at Depauw university where she is majoring in political science.

"But what could be a better way to learn about government than serving in the state legislature?" she asked.

"People ask me every day why I ran for a seat in the legislature. I really don't know, except that I like to know something about everything, and this is a good way to find out."

She said that "might be rough for some girls to understand. But I think women should take an active part in politics," she said.

IT'S TRUE . . . HERE AND NOW!

Tar Heels To Play Notre Dame In Fall

Budget Will Be Discussed In Council Session Today

State College Selected Scene Of Latest Meet

The Greater University of North Carolina Student council will meet at State college in Raleigh this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The University budget, now under consideration by the General assembly, is expected to be the main item on the agenda at the meeting called by Fred Kendall, president of the State college campus government.

The meeting, which will be attended by delegates from the three schools composing the Greater University, will be held at the YMCA on the State college campus. The Carolina delegation will consist of Jess Dedmond, president of the student body; Jim Godwin, Dortch Warriner, Bill Mackie, Page Harris, Bill Miller, Ed Tenney, Jim Vogler, and Miles Smith.

The first meeting of the Greater University council was held last October with delegates from State and Carolina attending to discuss means of cooperating to prevent vandalism between the student bodies of the two schools.

In December a constitutional committee was established, which is scheduled to present its final proposals to the council today. According to a statement of principles drawn up at the December meeting, the purpose of the council is "to attempt to lead the student bodies to an understanding of the realities of the University consolidation act and the benefits to be received from implementing the Greater University idea."

RETIRING AFTER 30 YEARS of service in the upper chamber, Senator Arthur Capper (standing bareheaded in the train's vestibule) waves to a delegation which gave him a send-off at Washington's Union station. The Kansas senator, who did not run for re-election this term, started his senatorial career on March 4, 1919.

Baity Will Deliver Report at Meeting

Professor Herman G. Baity of the University sanitary engineering department, will deliver a report before the 96th annual meeting of the American Society of Civil Engineers in Hotel Commodore, New York, Jan. 19-21.

Margaret Might Have Accepted If TD Had Only Been Mentioned

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Jan. 15.—(UP)—Margaret Truman, who rejected the bid of a Rutgers university freshman to accompany him to the junior prom, might have gone if she'd known Tommy Dorsey was going to play, the disappointed student said today.

William Shuit, 21, got a personal letter of thanks and regrets on White House stationery from the president's daughter.

"I forgot to tell her Tommy Dorsey was going to play. Maybe she would have come if she'd known that," Shuit said.

The young Army veteran, and Miss Truman have never met. But Shuit, of Suffield, Conn., said he had hoped she would accept his invitation to the college dance.

In reply, Miss Truman wrote:

"Dear Mr. Shuit,"

"Thank you so much for the cordial invitation extended to me to be your guest at the junior prom to be held at Rutgers next month. I am very sorry I cannot accept as I am sure I would have a most enjoyable time and, too, I should like to visit the university, but I have already made plans for February which prevent my coming to New Brunswick.

"Again, many thanks for your letter, and I do appreciate your thought of me.

"Most sincerely,

"Margaret Truman."

Exams Are Open For Student Aid

The federal government has announced an examination for student aid in the branches of engineering, chemistry, mathematics, metallurgy, physics, meteorology, and geology. Applications are available in the office of Placement service in 209 South building.

The program is designed to give sophomores and juniors an opportunity to become acquainted with scientific research in federal government agencies so they may be in a better position to make a decision as to their careers, Joe Galloway, director of Placement service said.

Closing date for applications is Feb. 1, he said.

Seniors Can Apply For Fellowships

Three fashion fellowships covering full tuition of $900 for a one year course will be awarded to graduating senior women, Joe Galloway announced yesterday.

The fellowships, sponsored by the Tobe-Coburn school for fashion careers, are offered to senior women graduating before Aug. 20. They are awarded for the next school year, Placement Service director Galloway said. No two fellowships will be awarded in the same school.

Contestants register before Jan. 31, write on fashion test topics in February, and winners will be announced in April.

These fellowships are offered to graduates who wish to train for executive positions in fashion coordination, buying, styling, fashion reporting, and personnel.

Blaze Reveals No Equipment Phone Trouble

Quonset Oil Fire Causes Damage

A torn telephone directory, a slow-to-answer Chapel Hill telephone operator and the lack of fire extinquishers in the quonset hut area narrowly missed resulting in a serious blaze yesterday afternoon in hut 19.

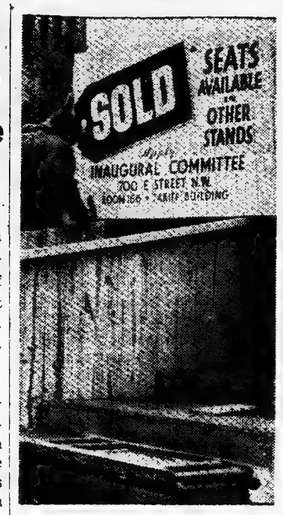
As it was, a quick-thinking student phoned the police department and received aid to stop a growing oil fire before it made strong headway. The student was Ed Coley from Elizabeth City, a resident of the endangered building.

Coley said the hut's oil heater began leaking, formed a pool of fire on the floor and leaped into flame. He said occupants of the hut, worried for fear an explosion would occur in the oil drum outside the building, turned off the fuel line.

The student dashed to the phone only to discover that the fire department number was not in the torn book. A frantic waiting period for the operator to answer a dialed "0" was rewarded by silence. He then called the police department to send firemen who quickly brought the blaze under control. No fire extinquishers were available in the area for the students to use.

The only serious damage, Coley reported, besides the heater, was a pile of dirty clothes.

It's Molasses Day In Boston, Mass.



BOSTON, Jan. 15—(UP)—It was noon of an unseasonably warm January day when lunchtime strollers in Boston's north end heard a rumble and looked up to see a black wave, 35 feet high, bearing down upon them.

A woman screamed. A horse reared, whinnied and bolted. Then all the strollers ran for their lives.

Some escaped, but others were caught, engulfed and smothered in the 2,300,000 gallons of crude molasses that thundered through the ruptured walls of a waterfront storage vat.

It was 30 years ago today that the great molasses flood of 1919 broke upon Boston. It killed 21 persons and dozens of horses. It crumpled eight wooden buildings. For weeks, it held the north end in its sticky grip.

Much of the molasses poured into the harbor, but it left the low-lying area covered by a knee-deep bog of sticky syrup which held its victims. Thrashing lumps were dying horses. Smaller mounds were the bodies of men and women.

ALL SIGNS in Washington seem to indicate that the Inaugural day ceremonies in the nation's capitol will draw one of the largest crowds in its history. A workman is pictured putting up a "sold out" sign on grandstand seats located directly across from the White House. The big show is on Jan. 20.

Shakespearian Plays Slated For Tomorrow

The Margaret Webster Shakespeare company will appear in productions of "Macbeth" and "Hamlet" in Memorial hall tomorrow afternoon and evening. This is part of a special series of professional theater attractions being sponsored by the Carolina Playmakers this season.

These plays will feature Carol Goodner as Queen Gertrude and Lady Macbeth, Joseph Holland as Claudius and Macbeth, Alfred Ryder as Hamlet and Malcolm, and Virginia McDowall as Ophelia and Lady Macduff, with music arranged by Lehman Engel and the scenery and costumes designed by Wolfgang Roth. Matinee performance will start at 2:30 and evening at 8:30.

The company will be on tour from September through April with these two popular tragedies. In all, it will visit more than 80 cities to give more than 175 performances. Miss Webster has just announced that due to the eager response to this tour, she will stage "Othello" and "Twelfth Night" for another "Shakespeare-On-Wheels" next year.

Town Girls Meet Tomorrow Night

The Town Girl's association will meet Monday night at 6 o'clock in the Episcopal parish house for their monthly social supper. Contests will be held and prizes awarded.

FPG Relation To Atom Study Is Cleared Up

Is 'Titular' Head Of Research Group

OAK RIDGE, Tenn., Jan. 15.—(UP)—The Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies today issued a formal statement clarifying the relation of Dr. Frank P. Graham, its president, to atomic research here.

The statement followed radio commentator Fulton Lewis, Jr.'s charge that the Atomic Energy commission gave security clearance to Graham against the advice of its security board.

Dr. Graham, who is also president of the University of North Carolina, was elected head of the institute in October, 1946.

The institute's statement said that Graham is not the active director of the research work but rather "the titular head of the institute." Graham was in Oak Ridge on June 28, 1946, the statement added. The council which he heads meets only once a year at the atomic city.

The Institute of Nuclear Studies is a cooperative venture by 19 Southern universities. It was formed before the Atomic Energy commission took over management at Oak Ridge.

The institute now has a contract with the commission to use research facilities at Oak Ridge to advance the study of science.

But the statement explained that the institute members rather than the AEC elect the council chairman, who also is president of the board of directors. Graham holds this post.

Dixiecrats Ousted From Committee

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—(UP)—Administration leaders in an unusual action today removed two States Rights Democrats from the House Un-American Activities committee.

Republicans called it a "purge." Democrats denied it.

The ax was swung by Democratic members of the House Ways and Means committee. It was felt by Reps. John E. Rankin, Miss., and F. Edward Hebert, La., Southern Democrats who have fought the Truman administration.

Under House Democratic rules, members of the party on the Ways and Means committee nominate Democratic members of the other committees. Their action is subject to approval by the House Democratic caucus which meets Monday. But there was no doubt in this case that it will be ratified at that time.

Yankee Stadium Selected As Site

By Buddy Vaden

The University of North Carolina Tar Heels will meet the University of Notre Dame on Nov. 12, 1949, in New York city's Yankee stadium in the first game of a two-game football series, University Athletic Director Robert A. Fetzer announced late last night.

The date and place of the second game, to be played in 1950, has not yet been established.

The announcement came after a week of speculation and rumor. First hint of the Tar Heel-Irish contest leaked out when Shirley Povich, Washington Post columnist, wrote that the Tar Heels would drop William and Mary from the schedule to take on Notre Dame.

Although the 1949 schedule has not yet been completed, the athletic department has made no statement concerning the elimination of William and Mary from the schedule. Other speculating had it that Maryland was the team to be dropped. But there is a possibility that neither will be eliminated and Carolina will attempt an 11-game schedule for next year.

With the Carolina-Texas series ending by Carolina's striking 34-7 triumph over the Longhorns in Chapel Hill last fall, South Carolina has been added to fill out the schedule. The Tar Heels will travel to Columbia, S. C., on Oct. 8 to renew a 24-game series in which the Chapel Hill teams have won 16, lost four and tied four. The last game with the Gamecocks was in Chapel Hill in 1944, the South Carolinians winning, 6-0.

It has been a long time since a Carolina team has made an appearance in New York. The last time was in 1942 at the Polo grounds when the Tar Heels and Fordham fought to a 0-0 deadlock. The last trip the Blue and White made north of the Mason-Dixon line was in 1945 when they suffered a 49-0 shellacking at the hands of the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

Frank Leahy's Notre Dame squad finished last season without a defeat, but with a tie with Southern California, and was voted second best team in the country behind Michigan by an Associated Press poll of sports-writers.

The Tar Heels, undefeated in 1948, but with a 14-6 setback at the hands of Oklahoma in the Sugar bowl, were rated third by the same Associated Press poll.

The Carolina-Notre Dame series should throw some light on the controversial subject of whether or not the brand of football played in the South is inferior to that of Mid-Western and Northern ball.

Coed Senate Plans Forum Next Month

17 Schools Asked To Attend Session

Seventeen schools have been invited to the University Feb. 25 and 26 to discuss problems pertinent to student government in coed and girls schools, Edie Knight, chairman of the committee organizing the forum, announced yesterday.

Sponsored by the Coed senate, the forum is an outgrowth of a recommendation made by Jess Dedmond in his State of the Campus address last fall.

Of the 17 schools invited, Hollins and Woman's college have accepted. An invitation has been issued to Dr. James Wood to appear as the keynote speaker. As yet, Dr. Wood has not accepted.

The purpose of the coed committee in scheduling the forum is to study student government both from coed and girls' schools. Another aspect of the forum is to study the problems that arise in order to better the student government organizations, the chairman explained.

Commissions will be set up to discuss the honor system, point system, extra-curricular activities, and various branches of student government.

Other members of the committee include Gussie Young, recording secretary, Mary Ann Daniel, corresponding secretary, Patsy McNutt, Fran Angas, Barbara Lowe, Joan Lucas, Sue Stokes, Emily Ogburn, Helen Bouldin, and Emily Baker.

'An Act of Spite' Sergeant Asserts

COLUMBUS, Ga., Jan. 15—(UP)—Sgt. B. J. Odum, of Ft. Benning, believed today that someone is trying to break up his recent marriage, it seemed he had grounds for his reasoning.

In the last few days, said Sgt. Odum, these things have happened:

1. $500 worth of his wife's clothing was stolen.
2. Sugar was poured into the gas tank of his car.
3. He began receiving telephone threats from anonymous men and women.
4. An attempt was made to burn down his home.

Sgt. Odum told Police Chief John G. Newberry that he believed the final incident, at least, was "an act of spite."

Use of Law Library Limited to Groups

Use of the law library has been limited to the law school faculty, staff, and students, law librarian Lucile Elliott said yesterday.

Other members of the University faculty and graduate students, with special permission, will be allowed use of the library.

Very crowded conditions and a great shortage of books has forced this restriction. Miss Elliott also said that no books may be checked out of the library without special permission during rush periods and examination week.

W.S.S.F. ROUNDUP

Saturday tabulations were unavailable last night for the latest count towards the 1949 University contributions to the World Student Service fund. With the exception of a daffy auction slated as a climax for Tuesday at 7:30 in Hill hall, the main WSSF stunts conducted during the past week are all in their final stages.

Door-to-door solicitations and dime balloting for "Miss Pay-Off" in the Y lobby will continue until 5 o'clock Tuesday. However, all votes will be secret hereafter and no further announcement of various contestant standings will be made until the auction Tuesday night.

Any organization desiring to sell still more 50-cent auction tickets to count as five votes each for their "Miss Pay-Off" nominee can draw another allottment of ducats from the YWCA office tomorrow morning.

Mystery Thrillers

Bill's 'Who-Dun-Its' Are Tops

By Sam Hirsch

"Shakespeare wrote a fine mystery thriller, and the best of all detective 'who-dun-its,' which he named 'Macbeth' and 'Hamlet,' respectively," yesterday declared Dr. George Coffin Taylor, teacher of Shakespeare at the university, when he learned of the forthcoming Playmaker-sponsored productions of these two plays. The Margaret Webster Shakespeare company will do them in Memorial Hall tomorrow afternoon and evening.

"You know," Dr. Taylor, distinguished scholar and author of the recent "Essays of Shakespeare" and "William Shakespeare, Thinker," went on, "I am devoting the first six days of my course in the tragedies to a thorough study of 'Macbeth' and 'Hamlet.' We usually don't get to them until late in the quarter, but I'd like my students to be familiar with these plays before they see Miss Webster's company act them out. It's really impossible to get at Shakespeare, the actor, unless you see his plays acted as he intended us to do when he wrote them."

He paused, and his eyes brightened. "What a fine chance to see Shakespeare's two most popular tragedies on the stage—and both in one day! Whew!" he snorted, and shook his head in a characteristic way that made his prince-nez quiver, "That's going to be some day!"

Dr. Taylor is scheduled to review these productions for the newspapers. He is especially suited for this assignment, having designed and co-authored the Ginn Publishers' unique interlinear editions of "Macbeth," "Hamlet," "The Merchant of Venice" and "Julius Caesar."

Important Things

YMCA Quarterly Released; Now Available for Students

Charlie Fox, chairman of the YMCA Finance committee, announced the publication yesterday of the YMCA Quarterly, a publication designed to bring to students a "general idea of the more important things the Y is undertaking this quarter."

Edited by Doug Smith, Montvale, Va., and published by the Finance committee of the Y, the Quarterly is being distributed free to all members of the Y and faculty.

An introduction by Pete Burks, president of the Y, defines the Y "as a fellowship of men on our campus who are seeking a deeper understanding of themselves and the world in which they live. Its purpose is to provide a means through which men may conduct their search and may express their growing understanding. The program of activities grows out of the interests and needs of students and may change from year to year as these needs and interests change."

Contained in the Quarterly are reports on the various activities to be undertaken, like the Religion in Life week to be held here Jan. 23-28, the winter YM-YW conference to be held in February at Montreat, and a tribute to Harry Comer, former secretary to the Y for 24 years.

Officials of the Finance committee stated, "Students who desire copies of the YMCA Quarterly may stop by the Y office and obtain them."

Not a Rich Man's School

The University of North Carolina is not a rich man's school, and as is clearly stated in the state constitution, it was never intended to be. There are few people in the state who wish it to become one now. Yet that, in effect, is what the recommendations of the Advisory Budget commission would make it if those recommendations were put into effect.

The Advisory Budget commission sliced $1,692,377 from the appropriations requested by the University. But this does not represent the total cut in the request. In addition the commission considerably increased the budget item marked "receipts"—which means that less money will be supplied by the legislature and more money must be raised from the University's fee sources.

The budget commission has recommended that the board of trustees increase the tuition fee to a minimum of $150. This means that North Carolina students would have to pay almost double the tuition fee they are now being charged. Governor Kerr Scott has recommended salary increases for all state employees, and the logical assumption is that this would apply to employees of the University. This would means a corresponding increase in dormitory rents, food prices at University-owned dining halls, and charges for other self-sustaining services such as laundry.

This increase in costs to students would be putting the burden upon those who can not afford to carry it. The election of Kerr Scott and of Harry Truman were significant in showing that the people of the state and of the nation do not want the financial burden put upon the "little man," but rather upon taxes based upon ability to pay.

It would be interesting to know how many legislators and trustees are in the financial class of the students now in school. Most of them by now have reached a position where an extra $100 or so may not mean much to them. But to many students an extra $100 means the difference between having or not having the opportunity of an education.

The plain and simple truth is that many students can not afford an increase in tuition.

Following the war many veterans came to the university who could not have done so without the aid of the GI bill. They made good students. They will make better citizens of the state because they had the opportunity of an education. It is the younger brothers of these students who, having no GI bill, will be excluded from the University if tuition is raised.

Someone—it sounds like Thomas Jefferson—once said that civilization must constantly be reinforced from the rear. When we close the door of education to the economic rear we are closing the door on a lot of brains, because brains and economic position do not always go hand in hand.

Visit the Legislature

College students—and particularly we of this state-supported University—should be extremely interested in the functioning of our local government. If we are indifferent to such matters, then fears for the future of our state would be well founded.

The North Carolina legislature has opened a new session which will continue for two months. Bills will be presented which will concern this university and the students enrolled in it. It behooves each of us who cares a whit for good government or professes to think on a college level not to miss the opportunity to see the Assembly in action or inaction as the case may be. Our mere presence in the gallery may influence legislators if only to the extent of making them aware of our interest. We in turn may benefit by learning more of the procedure by which we are governed.

Men are tattooed with their special beliefs like so many South Sea Islanders; but a real human heart with divine love in it beats with the same glow under all the patterns of all earth's thousand tribes.—O. W. Holmes.

Color Line In Education

By Dick Simpson

Negroes have been segregated in universities, as elsewhere, since the beginning of education for their race in the South. Every southern state maintains two systems of colleges, one for whites and one for blacks, and private institutions are likewise separate for the two races. This segregation has been under violent attack lately by Negroes and their friends, chiefly with regard to graduate and professional education. It has become a burning issue in a number of southern state universities, with Negroes seeking admission to "white" schools and a welter of court decisions being handed down.

Those who oppose Negro attempts to enter white universities declare that public opinion throughout the South is strongly behind the present policy of segregation. Breaking down the barriers, they say, would run counter to the will of the majority, and thus violate democratic principles. Furthermore, many warn that if Negroes were allowed to go to school with whites there might be so violent a reaction by white people that the progress of the Negro would be retarded, not advanced.

American college life, they add, involves social contact among students, and not merely academic work. The presence of Negroes and whites on the same campus might lead to "social equality," and the participation of both races in the same social activities, which they consider undesirable. To house and feed the Negroes while preserving segregation and social distance might present a ticklish problem.

On the other hand, those who would admit qualified Negro students to state universities point to the inconsistency of keeping many citizens in inferior, ill-equipped schools with the American ideals of democracy, which demand that everyone be given an equal opportunity to earn for himself the good things in life. If Negroes are forced to attend colleges whose libraries are small, whose faculties are poorly trained, and whose buildings are overcrowded and dilapidated compared with those of white universities in the same areas, and which often do not even offer courses in important subjects, equality of opportunity can hardly be said to exist. Gross inequality obviously exists, in every state from Delaware and Missouri to Texas and Florida. In fact, so poor are the Negro institutions that only one state (North Carolina) provides its Negroes with an institution good enough to meet the minimum standards of the Association of American Universities, whereas every white state university meets these standards.

Whites have refused either to support Negro institutions adequately or to admit Negroes to their own colleges, except when compelled by the courts to do so. A few Negroes have attended the Universities of Maryland, Missouri, and Oklahoma. No bloodshed or intermarriage is known to have resulted.

In the past decade, a number of Negroes have gone to court to gain admission to white law and graduate schools when the Negro colleges in their states offered no courses or inferior ones. The federal courts have ruled repeatedly that segregation is constitutional only if the facilities for both races are equal. The first such ruling came in 1938, when the Supreme Court forced the University of Missouri to take Lloyd Gaines into its law school, since none was available at the state Negro college. This decision has been reaffirmed in numerous other cases.

Texas and Oklahoma have hastily set up Negro law schools, with a handful of part-time professors and a few books, to provide in each case for one Negro.

Contempt Deserved

'Man of Distinction'

(Reprinted from The Raleigh News and Observer)

It may very well be that Frank Graham has sometimes been too eager to align himself with every cause which seemed to him to promise service to the advance and freedom of man. This Fulton Lewis, Jr., radio commentator, who has the gall to question Graham's patriotism, has been more selective about the giving of his name. Indeed, so far as is known the only and recent use of his name he has permitted has been endorsement for publication of Calvert whiskey.

In that whiskey company's series of advertisements which undertake to persuade that "men of distinction" drink Calvert whiskey, Mr. Lewis recently appeared in a full-page colored picture of himself sitting smirking in satisfaction with a glass of whiskey in his hand. It is not in the record what the whiskey company paid, if anything beyond photographic flattery, to Fulton Lewis, Jr., for the service in the cause of Calvert. Maybe he felt that he was sufficiently paid off by the publicity.

Frank Graham, thank God, is no such "man of distinction." He is a native, Christian North Carolinian whose whole life has been devoted to the faith in the fulfilment of all the possibilities for men in decency and dignity and freedom. No man in America has lived a life more devoutly devoted to opposition to totalitarian and every other type of tyranny in his State, in his country, and in the world. He stood up against Russian aggression in Finland long before Calvert or anybody else had ever heard the sanctimonious voice of this Lewis engaged in his efforts to smear the characters of better men.

The ablest and most devoted men in America who are entrusted with the keeping of American security at its most vital point have, as members of the Atomic Energy Commission, expressed their full trust in Frank Graham after the fullest investigation which that agency properly gives to those who have access to its restricted information. He does not need the approval of this Lewis who seems to feel that because he has been chosen to smirk for whiskey, his snarl is important in the evaulation of patriotism.

Undoubtedly, in his efforts to serve his fellowmen Frank Graham has upon occasion been found in the company of the poor and the bitter, the mistaken sometimes and the misled. He has moved untouched even among the lepers of our times. And so long as he lives where men need freedom, faith, and hope, Frank Graham will not hold back from such men because some among them may be diseased. He will give his name now and in the future, as in the past, to causes and purposes which seem to him to serve freedom and humanity.

There is a difference in "men of distinction." This Lewis sells his name, to help sell liquor, for cash or flattery, publicity or a chance to smirk pompously in full color. Frank Graham gives his out of his heart for his fellowman. That difference is as easy to understand as the true patriotism which Frank Graham clearly lives and this contempt which this Lewis definitely deserves.

Wide Are The Gates Viewpoints

Editor:

. . .In re John Gates:

Apologies are in order for the impossibility of allowing a question period, as had been planned for Memorial Hall. At an outdoor meeting on a dark street, in the presence of certain elements, it seemed unlikely that it could be handled in an orderly fashion. I regret this as much as those who had questions to ask, inasmuch as Mr. Gates is usually at his best answering questions; I hope that next time a speaker of Mr. Gates' views comes to Chapel Hill, a hall can be found for a more comfortable meeting, with questions.

The most obvious fact about the meeting, completely ignored by the commercial press, was interest with which the crowd of students followed Mr. Gates for four blocks and listened quietly as he spoke. The usual gutter elements were present, of course (no more than 50, I am sure); they were especially enraged and provocative upon realizing that Mr. Gates made a dignified speech and did not exactly conform to the stereotype of a Communist. . .

Editor:

. . .Tonight I went up to Memorial Hall, expecting to hear the editor of the "Daily Worker" speak. Instead I found a darkened and locked building, with a crowd milling around before it. After inquiry, it was learned that Chancellor House had barred Mr. Gates from speaking in a University building, basing this refusal on a North Carolina law which prohibits a speaker in this state to advocate overthrow of government by violence. It would no doubt be useless to point out that Mr. Gates had no intentions of advocating violent overthrow of the government, but was simply to explain the case of the twelve men recently indicted by a New York federal grand jury for "conspiracy".

I was shocked when I learned of the University's trampling on our rights of free speech and assembly supposedly guaranteed by the Constitution. This-an institution world famous for its "liberalism" and "progressivism"-has finally thrown off its mask and revealed the truth.

It makes me sick at heart. . .

. . .As for Mr. John Gates, Hans Freistadt, Bill Robertson, et al, there is no need for comment.

Rank Communism is atheistic, therefore not Christian. It is not enough for their arguments to be intelligent to be worthy of consideration, they must be truthful.

They have said that the philosophy of Jesus Christ was Communistic. ("All that believe wore together and had all things in common, dividing them to all as every man had need.") True, in part. But he had one requirement of all men: first they must be born again, born of the spirit of God. Then out of the holiness of their hearts, they would share their goods with each other as the early Christian church did.

"Jesus answered, verily, verily, I say to you, Except a man be born of water and of the spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."

Editor:

. . .We uphold Chancellor House's timely decision, maintain that Gates' right of freedom of speech was not violated, and that the date set for his appearance was most inopportune.

In no wise does the Constitution stipulate that an orator's prospective listeners provide him with assembly halls and/or soap boxes; moreover a property owner (in this case a sovereign state) certainly has the right to regulate matters pertaining to freedom of speech, religion, or politics that may be carried on within the limits of his property. It seems to us that Gates said what he came down South to say, and to a mixed audience of free persons who were in no manner forced to listen or prohibited from listening. The Matterhorn made from this mole hill incident is certainly as unjustified as the popular broad and foolish interpretation of the Freedom of Speech concept.

Gates' appearance in Memorial Hall would have certainly accomplished what Communists in the world wish: the hamstringing of a free nation's institutions, especially the institution of higher learning. We, through personal experiences, know what the people of North Carolina think of UNC's sometimes too liberal learnings. We maintain that Gates' appearance on university grounds would have been most inopportune in that it would have defeated or slashed whatever appropriations for the growth of this institution that the State Legislature, in session, was considering, by creating unfavorable publicity. Fortunately, though, the appropriations have been recommended by Gov. Scott and will probably be made. The time and effort expended by university officials, influential alumni and students may not have been in vain. Chalk up one for Democracy.

I should like to commend the stand taken by the Daily Tar Heel in its editorial concerning the appearance of John Gates on this campus. It demonstrated both courage and a belief in democratic principles, which does credit to the Daily Tar Heel and to the student body as a whole.

Wednesday night, January 12, 1949, was a night for miracles in Chapel Hill.

Miracle No. 1—John Gates, a prominent Communist party member was locked out of Memorial hall.

Miracle No. 2—This representative of the Communist party spent his entire time in the speech he delivered anyway by pleading for the right of every man to be heard regardless of belief. Wow!

Miracle No. 3—Presented with an audience willing to let him be heard, this supposidly articulate Communist refused to talk to response to the efforts by many students to ask him sincere questions about the political beliefs held by his party. Double Wow!

Your headlines and your editorial have made it appear that the Communists scored a great victory. On the contrary, I believe they were presented with a golden opportunity to make an impression and fumbled the ball. . .

. . .With many others I read with sincere discouragement of the totalitarian suppression of a speech that was to be delivered by "one John Gates" in Memorial Hall. North Carolina is a university which has gained a nationwide reputation for its liberal attitude and in an age when more and more of our thought is being channeled into a ridid dogmatism by a careful selection of the political, social and economic thought it seems to me a great shame that one of the few "democratic" institutions that we have left should succumb to such meanness of spirit and short sightedness of outlook.

That a legal technicality was invoked to prevent this free assembly is only the flimsiest excuse. . .

These Days

I Earn Too Much

By George E. Sokolsky

So collection day has come around again. And I have become a collector. I thought I earned a living for my family by writing columns, speaking on the radio, advising industrialists about their troubles, delivering lectures, putting in more hours of work than makes sense, traveling on trains and planes.

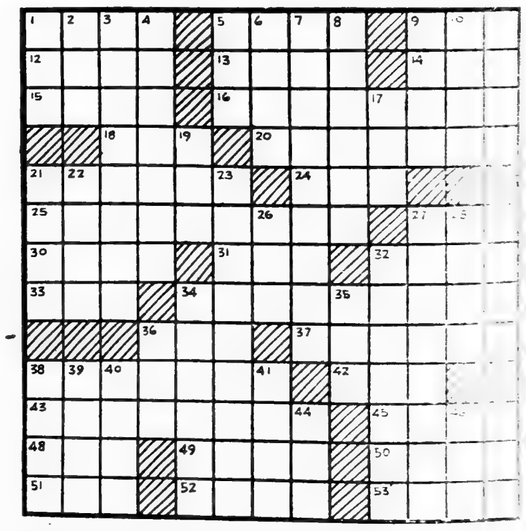
But my main business is collecting money. I collect money principally for the government of the United States. True, it costs something to operate this business of mine, but after that is charged off, and the landlord is paid, and the butcher and the grocer get theirs, the collection goes to the big boss.

My first pay was $3.00 a week as an office boy during summers. I was a very little office boy. I have been earning my daily bread, more or less, since then. It was my ambition to earn enough to create a family, provide a home and an education for my children, and to leave something for a widow when I died. I don't think such an ambition abnormal or preposterous.

So I worked hard, tried this and that and sometimes took great risk in the hope of improving the general situation. But apparently I earn too much. The big boss says so and he demands so large a share that to pay him—after the high cost of living—I may have to borrow. Maybe I shall have to borrow from him by paying him a penalty of six percent, which by his own definition could be usury. Yes, the main business of a lot of people is just to collect money for operations and taxes, with nothing left over to take care of the future. And that is the gist of our problems—the future. Even with high taxes, most of us get by these days, even on a shockingly self-confused basis. But what about the future? What are we laying up for a rainy day?

There are many Americans whose work span is comparatively short—their earning power reaching a swift peak and then moving downward as sclerosis sets in. Such often believe themselves to be very big shots while they are collecting. But no one remains everlastingly acceptable. The day comes when the world begins to be less acceptable and what counts is not what one receives but what one has saved. The important thing is to save—to put money in the bank, to make investments, to buy insurance—to provide against the future.

No one likes to live on charity—on private or governmental charity. Certainly no one in good health and working hard can with cheerfulness toward the day when, his usefulness lessened, he will receive an old age pension or unemployment insurance. There is no satisfaction in looking back to the thousands of dollars he has collected for the collector of internal revenue in the days of his old days. It is sounder to save, to keep money, to get old age fully out of the earnings of the better years.



That was the attitude of the America which is now called upon to sustain the western world, but that is not the American of the future. While we were earners and savers, we were building a wonderful America; as collectors, we are unable to build. We work; we collect; we pass it on.

Only the "smart boys," the liars, the cheats, the frauds, save; only those who take the cash and put the cash in their pockets can accumulate savings. But who wants to cheat? The decent person wants to wonder when he will be caught. Who cares for his family when he ought to be collecting for the government?

And yet our system is based upon the family, on the ambition of the father to do the best he can for his children and the ambition of his children to serve their children. Lack of savings makes us all dependents—and dependents are not free men.

The income tax is not merely a revenue collecting measure. It is a device of the social revolution. It changes society and turns free men into the things of the government. It leaves the man without a future—and therefore without independence and courage.

Marietta Licks Capital By 100 - 99, Maybe

MARIETTA, O., Jan. 15.—(UP)—The game was over and the players were on the way home but worried officials today were still not certain who won last night's wild and wooly basketball contest between Marietta college and Capital university.

At the end of the game and five overtime periods, officials added up the running tallies and gave Marietta a victory over Capital by a score of 100-99. The scorekeepers, however, could find only 99 points among the individual tallies of the Marietta players.

Referees Tom Vernia and Don Hair of Chillicothe said they agreed with the running account and listed the game a Marietta victory.

Capital university coach Bill Bernlohr said he counted it a 99-99 tie but that there had been no talk of rescheduling the game.

The regular time period ended with the game tied at 64-all. At the end of the first overtime period it was 72-72; in the second, 82-82; in the third, 90-90; and the fourth, 95-95.

Marietta surged forward in the last overtime to win, maybe.

N. C. State Downs Game Blue Devils In 53-52 Thriller

DURHAM, Jan. 15—N. C. State College, who started out this year's basketball season as the hottest club in the South, had trouble with Duke University last night in Duke Indoor stadium, but managed to eke out their ninth win of the season, 53-52. as Paul Horvath saved the game with a set shot with one minute to go.

The game was close all the way. with the lead changing hands nine times during the course of the hotly contested Big Four game. Seven times the score was tied up.

Dick Dickey, the Indians Hotshot, played his best game of the season as he scored 21 points for top scoring honors of the game. Ceep Youmans led the scoring for the pressing Duke cause with 15 points.

As the clock showed one minute to go Horvath sank a set shot to give State a three-point, 53-50 lead. Blue Devil Bob Duff scored a field goal as the seconds ticked off to put the Durhamites one point behind State and with seconds to go.

State attempted to freeze the ball but let it slip once into the hands of Youmans who got clear for a set shot. As the Durham rooters held their breath, the ball hit the hoop and bounced out into the possession of State.

That was the ball game.

Wilkinson Signs

NORMAN, Okla., Jan. 15.—(UP)—Football coach Bud Wilkinson announced today he has signed a new contract with the University of Oklahoma.

The announcement came after Wilkinson notified University of Wisconsin officials that he no longer wished to be considered as a candidate for a vacancy there.

Wilkinson did not reveal terms of the agreement with Oklahoma, but university president George L. Cross said it calls for a five-year contract as head coach and for longer tenure as athletic director and professor of physical education.

Jayvee Swimmers Lose to Freshmen

The Carolina freshman swimming team pulled a couple of fast ones yesterday and defeated the Carolina jayvees, 43-25, in the second intrasquad meet of the year yesterday in Bowman Gray pool. In the last meet of its sort, the jayvee squad came out on top.

Freshman Kirby Ambler was one of the youthful standouts of the day as he completed the 100-yard freestyle event in the fast time of 55.8 seconds.

Milton wins 220

In the 220-yard freestyle, Freshman Cecil Milton won the event with the excellent time of 2:24.9.

The jayvee squad was completely shut out of the medly relay as the freshman combination rapidly improving freshman unit.

In the 400-yard relay, both teams were disqualified as one of the freshmen missed a turn and a jayvee members, to even things up, jumped ahead of time.

UNC Freshman Jumps 6-5 To Set Record in D. C.

By Frank Allston, Jr.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 15.—Bill Albans, Carolina freshman track and field sensation, set a new record for the high jump in the Washington Evening Star AAU Invitational games here tonight as he cleared six feet, five inches to beat Olympic star Dave Albritton in that event.

Bob Morrow, Carolina's entry in the hurdles events, finished fifth in the 70-yard high hurdles.

Sam Magill and Julian MacKenzie, both Tar Heel distance runners, finished fifth and sixth in the two-mile run and the one mile, respectively. Jack Moody, Southern Conference champion in the high jump, tied for third place with Brown University's Dick Phillips with a jump of six feet, two inches.

Albans created quite a sensation in the huge Armory in Washington as he made his first appearance in Carolina livery. Said Coach Dale Ranson of his feat, "We are exceedingly well-pleased with Bill's first representation with the University. In fact, I think all of our boys have done well."

As the crowd roared, Albans was presented with a trophy at the judges stand. Along with Jack Moody he received a medal also.

The Carolina mile relay team, running in the Southern Conference invitational mile medley, placed third behind Maryland and and Duke. Maryland's team of McGowan, Salvanelli, Ostrye, and Matthews won the event with the good time of 3:29.6.

Olympic star Fred Wilt, of Indiana, set a new record in the two-mile run, when he turned in a time of 9:09 for the course.

The Texas A&M relay team which beat the University of North Carolina in the Sugar Bowl won the invitational mile relay with a winning time of 3:26.1.

Harter Leads Frosh Basketeers To 73-43 Win over Pfeiffer JC

by Lew Chapman

Carolina freshmen cagers resumed the victory trail last night at Woollen gym when they put to rout a completely outclassed five from Pfeiffer junior college, 73-43 in a wild scoring contest.

Coach Jim Hamilton's lads notched their sixth win of the current season against two setbacks by simply outrunning and outscoring their foes. The small attendance was treated to a galaxy of well oiled plays and a devastating fast break as the yearlings rolled up their highest score to date.

Harter High

Although forward Dick Harter, a Pottsdown, Pa.. contribution to the starting quintet amassed the high scoring honors with 16 well earned points, three other Tar Baby courtsters hit double figures, indicative of a well balanced squad. John Bowersox utilized his deadly sets and graceful hooks to collect 15 markers while floorman Ham Crowder accounted for 13. The Carolina center, 6'5" Lenny Guyes enjoyed his best night of the year by scoring 10 credits.

Despite the final score, the tussle started off as a tight game. The Panthers of Pfeiffer inaugurated the scoring on an early foul and the battle waged through the first 12 minutes nip and tuck as the lead changed hands three times. But a charity toss by Frank Eckert after 13 minutes put the Tar Babies ahead, 19-18, and this opened the doors for a floor of eight straight Carolina points. Bowersox's nine markers paced the yearlings to a comfortable 31-20 intermission lead.

Wide Open

Hamilton's charges broke the game wide open from the start in the second half. Frequent Carolina substitutions only enhanced the terrific pace as the Panthers were practically run into the floor. Harter amazed the crowd with several beautiful shots this half and was easily the standout as he tallied 12 in the last 20 minutes. Buddy Johnson, present frosh high scorer, also broke into the scoring column this half with three field goals and a foul to total 7 points.

Only when Mentor Hamilton emptied the bench in the closing minutes did the torrid pace abate but by that time the victory was well in the bag.

The lineups:

Carolina (73)	Pos.	Pfeiffer (43)
Johnson (7)	F.	(7) Watts
Harter (16)	F.	(3) Loudermilk
Guyes (10)	C.	(10) Sherill
Bowersox (15)	G.	(15) Patterson
Crowder (13)	G.	(6) Owens

Substitutions: Carolina: Eckert (1), Barr, Smith, Schraft, Redding (7), Hill, Reuning, Godwin, Cheek (2), Slomp (2).

Pfeiffer: Miller, Caudle, Wiles, Amburn (2), Garrison, Schropshire.

'Winter Wonderland' Theme Of Alpha Gam Pledge Dance

"Winter Wonderland" was the theme of the pledge dance of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority Friday night in the ballroom of the Carolina inn.

Each pledge was introduced by riding into the ballroom on a sleigh to the platform. She then was presented a gift by Becky Holton, President, and walked down to the center of the floor where she joined the figure formation of a snowman. The pledges, who were attired in white, carried a bouquet of blue and white daisies and held black and white streamers for the snow man.

Before the presentation of the pledges, Sam Green sang the traditional Rose song of the sorority. A waltz was played during the figure formation. After the snowman was created, Sam sang "Winter Wonderland" as snow fell from the ceiling.

The pledges introduced with their dates were: Barbara Thomas, Winston-Salem, with Dick Anderson, Burlington; Lucile Ridley, Washington, D. C., with Charlie Rights, Wilmington; Eleanor de Graffenried, Winchester, Va., with George Stutz, Chestnut, Pa.; Kitty Altizer, Christiansburg, Va., with Harold Lloyd, Raleigh; Jo Anne Armstrong, Winchester, Va., with William Childers, Lenore; Pat Chandler, Albany, Ga., with Hal Holden, Charlotte; Barbara Nell Crawford, Raleigh, with Lloyd Stanley, Carolina Beach; Mary Ann Happer, Kinston, with Joe Williams, Rocky Mount;

Byra Mitchell, Woodbury, N. J., with Doug Smith, Mouleville, Va.; Margaret Neal, Lockport, N. Y., with Porter Gray, High Point; Eleanor Hope Newell, Orlando, Fla., with Buddy Vaden, Washington, D. C.; Svea Ogg, Clearwater, Fla., with John Williams, Raleigh; Lucille Olive, Charlotte, with Charles Vachee, Frankie, Va.;

Sally Osborne, Jacksonville, Ill., with Charles Bahrens, Washington, D. C.; Marion Powers, Rutherfordton, with Bill McDonald, Forest City; Kitty St. John, Pennlyn, Pa., with Joseph Rogers, Washington; Sandra Sisk, Asheville, with Jack Glenn, Asheville; Ellen Smith, Barnesville, Ga., with Ig Heniford, Loris, S. C.; Frances Swain, Winston-Salem, with Charlie Nichols, Greensboro, and Allene Warren, Dunn, with Bob Fairly, Salisbury.

The entire ballroom was covered with greenery blanketed with snow. The orchestra platform was banked with greens, also. Two large murals of winter scenes hung from the walls. The seats for the chaperones were made into sleighs with silver stardust and snow on them.

Pledge Dances, Pinnings Mark Coed Activities

Coed dances continued to predominate campus social activities this week-end as the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority and the Carolina Independent Coed association honored their new members Friday and Saturday nights, respectively. The Delta Delta Delta sorority next Friday night and the Alpha Delta Pi's Jan. 28 will complete the seasonal pledge dances.

Tri Delts, dancing to the music of Johnny Satterfield, will introduce pledge sisters to the University at the Carolina inn. The ADPi's, occupying the same scene the following week-end, will dance to the music of Chic Burroughs.

Chi Omega sorority members were entertained Thursday evening by the Beta Theta Pi fraternity. The entertainment consisted of a buffet supper from 6:30 to 8 o'clock.

The Christmas holidays sent many pin-ups and engagees back to the campus. Among those newly engaged is Pi Phi Liddy Bet Myatt to Ray Holsten. Elizabeth Eddy, a University alumna since December, is now sporting Les Dameron's Lambda Chi pin.

ADPi pledge Lil Young and active member Shelley Roper received diamonds during the holidays, respectively from Sigma Chi Bud Early and Captain David Booker of the U S Marine corp. Helen Phillips received Gus Graham's DKE pin Christmas Eve.

Two Tri Delts became pin-ups recently.—pledge member Sara Gobble to DKE Ben Woods, and Betsy Emory to Lambda Chi Bill Rogers. Heath Hartsell of Concord became Mrs. Jack Wiggins over the Christmas holidays.

Marriage Topic Of Sermons By Habbel, Jones

BAPTIST: "Who Influences Your Life?" will be the question discussed by Dr. S. T. Habbel in his sermon this morning at 11:00. Immediately preceeding the service will be a student Sunday school class at 9:45, and a new class for young couples, "Mr. and Mrs.," which will be taught by Mrs. Paul Mariotte. Norman Cordon, former Metropolitan opera star, will speak to the BSU tonight.

METHODIST: Brooks Patton, Wesley Foundation director, will teach the student Sunday school class this morning at 10:00, and Dr. F. W. Hanft, professor of law, will teach the married students' class. The Rev. Mr. Henry G. Ruark will speak this morning on "How Do You Know Your Sins Are Forgiven." Tonight at 5:45 Wesley Foundation will have the first in a series of seminar discussion programs.

The groups will meet simultaneously for the first three Sundays and then meet together the fourth Sunday. Tonight, before the discussions, Dr. Arnold Nash, religion professor, and Jan Menshaw, will give a report on the "Ecumenical Student Conference" held during the Christmas holidays in Lawrence, Kansas.

EPISCOPAL: Holy Communion will be celebrated this morning at 8:00. The Rev. Mr. David Yates will preach at the 11:00 service. Tonight, following a short worship service at 8:00, the congregation will have a discussion on "Successful Marriage and the Christian Family," the topic of the program of the church for Epiphany. This topic will also be discussed at the Canterbury Club Tuesday night at 6:00.

Chi Psi Wing Makes House Largest Here

After five long months of construction, the new wing to the Chi Psi house is a realization, and the brothers moved into the addition on their return from the Christmas holidays.

The alumni-backed project is valued at 50,000 dollars and gives Chi Psi the largest fraternity house on the University of North Carolina campus and one of the biggest in the South.

The addition of the wing affords a host of improvements to "The Lodge." Of primary importance is the new chapter room, whose addition brings to an end crowded fraternity meetings. On the social front, the new dining room will provide more than ample floor space for all Chi Psi dances. an added feature of the dining room is a ceiling composed of sound-absorbent layers, similar to a radio station, which greatly cuts down the noise in the room. This will prove especially beneficial when a dance band is playing.

Officers Elected, Initiations Held By Fraternities

Delta Sigma Pi held its annual pledge dance in the ballroom of the Carolina inn Saturday night following formal initiation ceremonies. Chic Burroughs and his Carolinians furnished music for the affair. Pledge class officers are: president, Carl J. Hinson, Rock Hill, S. C., and pledge captains, Lea Van Winkle, Sanford, and Bill Luke, Abbieville, Ga.

Frank Gossett, junior from Charlotte, was recently elected president of Lambda Chi Alpha. He succeeds Warren Wildon in this post and will serve until next January.

Other chapter elections were: Robert Holmes, vice-president; Joe Duke, secretary; Joe Knight, treasurer; Albert Stuart, rush chairman; Tom Abbott, ritualist; Steve Cole, social chairman; and Peyton Cox, IFC representative.

Senior Larry Cohen, Greensboro, was recently elected president of Zeta Beta Tau. Jake Rosenbloom, Rocky Mount, is the new vice-president.

Thursday night the Sigma Chi's serenaded Joy Kalt, who is pinned to the newly elected fraternity president, Bill Maceyko.

The pledges of Zeta Beta Tau entertained the pledges of Tau Epsilon Phi and Pi Lambda Phi at a party at the ZBT house Friday night.

The Chi Phi's began winter quarter with the initiation of ten of its pledges. The new initiates are: Joe Neikert, Portsmouth, O.; Frank Kinard, Newberry, S. C.; Bob Rockholtz, New London, Conn.; Bill Byatt, Springfield, Mass.; Nat Swann, Pelham; Earl Fitzgerald, Pelham; Ken Archer, Charlotte; Bob Colley, Elon College; Stacy Duncan, Benson; and Doug Thompson, Norfolk, Va.

During the Christmas holidays PiKA Mal Kenny and Marie Phillips, Chocowinity, were married. Bill Allison, also a PiKA and Virginia Rhodes, Charlotte, became engaged.

The most recent Chi Psi pinning is that of Bob Watson and Ester Cheek, Chapel Hill. During Christmas Dot Smith became pinned to Chi Psi Tom Hurtz.

Independents Launch Year's Entertainment

The Carolina Independent Coed association, honoring new members, presented its first dance of the year Saturday night in the Pine room of Lenoir hall.

Against a night club setting, independent coeds and stray Greeks danced to the Town Talker trio. Carrying out a New Year's theme, crepe paper and balloons were hung throughout the room.

During intermission time dance chairmen and new members Betty McMahan, Carolyn Bishop, Margery Bradley, Lillian Wilson, Roxie Ann Walters, and Jo Ann Carpenter formed a figure. Each was presented a small bouquet at its completion. Following the figure presentation, a Pete Strader skit was performed.

Committee chairmen are Jo Ann Carpenter, decorations; Mary Ellen Reeves, tickets; Joyce Harris, publicity; Marty Hinkle, music; and Margaret Booth, refreshments. Eloise Jacobi, president CICA was in charge of the f... presentation.

Fall Average Shows Chi O High Ranking

Level of 3.134 Is Topped by 11

The Chi Omega sorority and the Delta Psi fraternity ranked highest in scholastic averages for the fall quarter. The averages were computed at the office of the dean of students on the basis of rosters of both active and pledge membership as submitted by the fraternities.

The fraternity average is 3.134. Eleven fraternities rated a higher average than this, and 17 of the 28 fraternities fell below it.

Values for the letter grades are assigned as follows: A, 1.00; B, 2.00; C, 3.00; D, 4.00; E, 5.00; F, 6.00; absences, 6.00; absences excused and incompetes are not computed.

Fall quarter of the past school year the Delta Delta Delta sorority and the Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity lead other fraternities in scholastic rating.

Following are the scholastic averages and relative rank of the men's and women's social fraternities for fall quarter:

Chi Omega, 2.348; Delta Psi, 2.393; Alpha Gamma Delta, 2.435; Pi Beta Phi, 2.478; Alpha Epsilon Pi, 2.592; Delta Delta Delta, 2.625; Alpha Delta Pi, 2.654; Pi Lambda Phi, 2.849; Tau Epsilon Phi, 3.065; Delta Kappa Epsilon, 3.120.

Sigma Chi, 3.121; Pi Kappa Phi, 3.149; Chi Phi, 3.173; Kappa Alpha, 3.174; Phi Gamma Delta, 3.178; Lambda Chi Alpha, 3.219; Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 3.250; Phi Delta Theta, 3.269; Sigma Nu, 3.730; Pi Kappa Alpha, 3.2739.

Alpha Tau Omega, 3.274; Kappa Sigma, 3.296; Sigma Phi Epsilon, 3.302; Zeta Beta Tau, 3.315; Chi Psi; 3.351; Beta Theta Pi, 3.422; Phi Kappa Sigma, 3.494; Zeta Psi, 3.602.

Group Discusses Y-Teen Program

"Bringing about an adequate Y-Teen program in Chapel Hill is a privilege and a problem which must be met by the community," the Y-Teen advisory board decided at its first meeting.

Dr. William Morgan was elected chairman of the board, made up of interested parents and representatives of the Junior Service league, the Board of Aldermen, Kiwanis club, Rotary club, and Community council, meeting to discuss the Y-Teen problem in Chapel Hill.

A description of the ideal Y-Teen program was given by Mrs. Charles McCoy, director of the Y-Teen program in Raleigh.

Jane Webb, president of the senior Y-Teens in Chapel Hill, presented the need for a fuller program, discussed the present problems of the group, and made as suggestions for a solution an adequate community sponsorship and a director to work with the teen-agers of Chapel Hill.

Dr. Morgan appointed Mrs. Reece Berryhill, Mrs. H. R. Ritchie, and Mrs. Spike Saunders as a committee to help with the Y-Teen program at present.

Mrs. N. B. Adams was named representative to the Community council from the campus YWCA and Jean Somervell, head of the Junior Y-Teens, was named alternate.

Rankin, Hebert Are Victims of Purge

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(UP)—House Democrats today ratified a leadership "purge" of two anti-administration Democrats from the controversial Un-American Activities committee.

The victims were Reps. John E. Rankin of Mississippi and F. Edward Herbert of Louisiana, both of whom supported the States Rights ticket against President Truman in the November election.

Rankin accepted the decision calmly but Herbert protested vigorously.

A HUMOROUS NOTE IS INJECTED by President Truman in his acceptance of an invitation to his own inaugural ceremony. When he received the bid from members of the 1949 Inaugural committee, the President jotted down a little memo in the upper corner, which read: "Weather permitting, I hope to be present—HST." Below, Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the U.S. Mint, presents the Chief Executive with a gold inaugural medal which bears his likeness. Watching the White House ceremony is Melvin D. Hildreth, Inaugural committee chairman.

Cordon, Wynn Will Run Auction In Hill Tonight

By Charlie Gibson

This evening at 7:30 the stage of Hill hall will become an auction block on which Norman Cordon, Metropolitan opera star, and Earl Wynn, University radio school head, will sell attractive coed dates and miscast faculty slaves to the highest bidders. All proceeds of the evening will go to the World Student Service fund.

Jerry Weiss, chief executor for the final novelty stunt to end the WSSF drive that started a week ago, said yesterday, "This daffy auction will be a repeat performance of the highly successful bartering that WSSF put on this summer to raise funds for the worthy international student charity. We appreciate the faculty's and the coeds' co-operation in what should be great fun."

In addition to a football autographed by the Tar Heel eleven, auction-goers tonight may purchase the services of a homework-doer, a personal dry-cleaning deliveryman, a chauffeuress, dinner musicians, a personal Lenoir hall waiter, a tennis instructor, a

Dissolution Set For Discussion

The United World Federalists have scheduled a special business meeting to discuss dissolving the club, Marie Wicker, president, announced yesterday. The meeting will be held next Thursday in Roland Parker lounge 3, Graham Memorial.

At a regular meeting of the group last week, it was decided that without greater support from its members and more interest on the part of the student body, little could be accomplished to further the aim of the organization.

Prepare to Lead

Fifty Leading Coeds Named To Junior Council of YWCA

Fifty outstanding junior coeds have been chosen as members of the YWCA junior council, Martha Davis, vice-president of the YW announced yesterday.

The council will meet in Horace Williams lounge from 7 o'clock until 8 o'clock on Jan 20 and 27, and Feb. 3 and 10 to hear members of the YWCA Cabinet outline functions of the campus.

The chief purpose in holding the council is to familiarize leading coeds with the many possibilities open in Y work and to prepare the girls for offices in next year's Y.

On Jan. 20 at the first meeting of the council a brief history of Y organization and development will be given by Mary Anne Daniel, president of the campus YWCA. Following this a member of the Y advisory board will give the history and organization of the Y on the Carolina campus, its correlation with other campus organizations and affairs, and its significance. A discussion period will follow each meeting.

Reports from officers of the YWCA will head the Jan 27 meeting. Also a summary of the highlights of the year's work will be given with emphasis on the annual YWCA-YMCA winter retreat.

At the third meeting of the group on Feb. 3, reports from the Y committee chairmen will be given. Ideas and suggestions from the junior council concerning committee functions will follow.

Highlighting the month's introductory period will be an after dinner coffee hour at Mrs. Frank Graham's held by the Y Cabinet. Junior council members will meet advisory board members at this time and a short talk by Dr. Arnold Nash will close the last meeting.

Retreat Topic Of YM-YWCA Is Announced

Montreat Chosen Site for Program

"A Christian's Responsibility" has been selected as the topic around which the YM-YWCA winter retreat will center, Anne Carlton and Fred Thompson, co-chairmen of the program committee for the conference, said yesterday.

The retreat, which will include some 125 students and campus leaders, is scheduled for Feb. 18-20 at Montreat, Presbyterian conference grounds near Asheville.

Each student attending the retreat will choose a discussion group and meet with the commission leader and other students for detailed talks about that subject.

Eight commissioners or discussion groups have been set up under three main headings. Under the first division, "Your Responsibility to Yourself," two commissions will be held, the first of these being "What can we believe about God, prayer, and other bases of faith?" Second will be "What difference does my religion make in thoughts, actions, and purpose."

Under the second general heading of "Your Responsibility on the Campus" one discussion will center around social aspects of campus life including such subjects as the fraternity and sorority question. A second group will discuss the political aspect of campus life while a third commission will have "Academic aspects of life" as its title.

There will be three commissions under the general heading of "Your Responsibility in the World." "Civic Rights" is the first commission under this heading and a second is "Labor problems and economic tensions." The last commission is "International problems" which will deal with world government and relations with Russia.

Volunteer Unit To Hold Meeting In Bingham Hall

A volunteer naval reserve air unit will hold its beginning meeting Friday night at 7:30 in Bingham hall, Lt. Robert E. Simpson, USNR, announced yesterday.

The Navy is offering a four-point program for the benefit of reserve personnel who wish to become associated with the air reserve unit.

Naval reservists may accumulate retirement points, receive individual training, take a two-weeks training cruise, and make week-end flights by joining the new unit.

All naval veterans, including non-flying personnel, may join the local unit. Veterans who have received honorable discharges may re-enlist in V-6 with a good possibility of receiving their old rates.

Canterbury Club To Hear Anderson

The Canterbury club will hear the Rev. B. W. Anderson speak at 6 o'clock this evening on "The Importance of the Bible in a Christian's Life" in the Episcopal parish house.

MAKING a whirlwind "March of Dimes" tour of 27 cities in 26 days, comedian Bob Hope puts the first signature on a map drawn on the D-6 plane in which he will travel. Known as "The Flying Autograph Book," the map will be signed by mayors of each city visited in the trip.

Coed Drinking Is Debate Topic At Phi Tonight

Drinking privileges of University coeds will serve as the topic for discussion at the Philanthropic assembly meeting in Phi Hall, New East, at 7:30 this evening.

Fraternity house regulations concerning restrictions on coeds will be under special consideration. Speaker Dave Sharpe has extended an invitation to all coeds to present their side of the question. As customary, anyone wishing to speak will be granted the privileges of the floor.

In an executive session following the debate amendments to the constitution, which was ratified unanimously by members in last week's meeting, will be voted upon.

The amendments deal with membership recruitment, privileges of the floor, finance committee reports, initiations and inaugurations, wearing of the Phi pin, and procedure.

NAACP Group Conducts Meeting

The youth committee of the NAACP and a number of interested persons met Thursday night at the Community center to make plans for organizing a youth council to be affiliated with the local NAACP.

Nat Bond, president of the state conference of youth councils and college chapters and president of the North Carolina college chapter of the Youth council of the NAACP was present to give advice to the group.

The Youth council, an interracial group, is open to all young people from 12 to 25 years of age who are interested in combating intolerance, discrimination and prejudice of any kind.

Rendezvous to Open Friday Night; Stage Rebuilt, New 20-Foot Bar Added

The newly-decorated Rendezvous room will be open for business beginning Friday night, Arnold Wilson, manager, said yesterday. Plans are now underway for the first radio program and floor show of the quarter.

Completely renovated in green, chartreuse, and red, the room will be lighted indirectly. An oak paneled, 20-foot bar will take the place of the former, inadequate service facilities. The stage has been rebuilt, and a new cyclyorama back drop has been added.

Arnold explained that he plans to have an open fire in the room every night during the quarter, and marshmellows will be sold at the bar. Students may toast them over the fire.

The brightest addition to the room will be the red coat on the piano and the plaid drapes.

Complete plans concerning Friday night's show will be announced tomorrow.

Council Meets, Plan Program, Picks Officers

Fowler Elected Group Chairman

By Sam McKeel

Meeting at State college in Raleigh Sunday night, the Student council of the Greater University of North Carolina adopted a constitution, elected temporary officers, and discussed future activities.

Elected to fill temporary posts until the last meeting in the spring, when the constitution states that officers will be elected, were: chairman, Martha Fowler, president of the student body of the Woman's college; vice-chairman, Virgil Mims, of State college; secretary, Marilyn McCullom, of Woman's college; and treasurer, Page Harris of the University.

The constitution, drawn up recently by a constitutional committee received much discussion and many minor changes before being passed. As it stands, the constitution is so worded that it will prevent any one of the three schools from monopolizing the leadership and meetings of the council.

The constitution further states that there shall be at least one officer elected from each school, and for the sake of expediency and efficiency the chairman and secretary shall be elected from the same school. The constitution also states that each school has equal representation.

Two committees were formed at the meeting. The first was an interim committee to meet with University officials and discuss ways and means of the council, and to hear any suggestions that the officials may have on the future activities of the group. The second committee was a project committee to handle all future projects that may be suggested by members of the council.

Mumford Will Speak To Meredith Group

Lewis Mumford, author, lecturer and social prophet, and at present visiting professor in the three colleges of the Greater University of North Carolina, will deliver an address this evening at 8 o'clock in the auditorium at Meredith college.

The subject of the lecture will be "The Use and Misuse of Utopias," an interpretation of our age in terms of social conditions of the present-day world.

Professor Mumford, a native of New York state, is an alumnus of the City college of New York, Columbia university, New York university, and the new school for Social Research in New York.

'Prove It's There'

'Finding Of Fort Raleigh' Is Topic of Harrington Speech

By Laura Hearne

"It has been a thrilling experience to actually find Fort Raleigh—to prove that it is there," said Dr. J. C. Harrington, regional archeologist of the National Park service, in his talk on "The Finding of Fort Raleigh" at the 16th annual meeting of the North Carolina Archeological society Saturday afternoon in Wilson hall.

Heretofore, there has been only the legend and "tantalizing documentary evidence" that the fort actually existed. However, in the summer of 1947, Dr. Harrington, directing the work of a small group of laborers, found tangible proof of the Fort's site on the northern end of Roanoke Island. He has reconstructed the size and type of fort in a small model which was on exhibit at the meeting. The search was continued last summer but as yet no structural material used on the fort has been found.

Among the articles that have been discovered are "two brass buckles, a lot of wrought iron nails, quite a few big iron spikes about 8 inches—which we know from Jamestown excavations are typical of that period, and a few lead balls for muskets that were not dateable." Being able to tell what period to assign the discoveries to is sometimes a major problem of the archeologist.

"Contrary to popular belief that the fort constructed by the "Lost Colonists" for protection against the Indians, we don't think so at all. The English weren't afraid of the Indians; they were disdainful of them. We believe it was built for protection against attack from the sea by Spanish raiding parties," the speaker stated.

Between the site of the fort,

Parking Permits To Be Cancelled In Steele, Carr

By Margaret Gaston

Campus parking permits issued to residents of Steele and Carr dormitories will be cancelled at the end of this quarter, March 24, in compliance with action taken by the Safety committee, Chairman Steve Millikin announced yesterday.

Letters to this effect have been mailed to students living in these dormitories at the request of the committee. Steve Millikin, chairman of the committee, said yesterday.

Millikin pointed out that action of the Board of Trustees reserved central parking areas on the campus for faculty members, commuting students, and others approved by the University Safety council.

Since the decision to restrict these parking areas came after students had made arrangements for dormitory rooms for the year, Millikin continued, the Safety committee approved the issuance of campus parking permits to the residents of dormitories adjacent to these parking lots for the duration of the current academic year.

However, since the parking space is inadequate and since the trustee regulation is expressly intended to restrict these lots from the parking and storage of automobiles owned by students living in centrally located dormitories, the Safety committee has found it necessary to take action, Millikin said.

A recent meeting of the Safety council approved a recommendation to Chancellor House which would place the area behind Hill hall from Cameron avenue to the County Health office and also the area from Cameron avenue to the Alumnae building on the restricted areas. If House approves the recommendation, he will in turn recommend this action to the board of trustees.

Another recommendation made by the council to House, and in turn to the trustees, is that no parking be allowed on the west side of Raleigh street from Cameron avenue to Raleigh road. Parking on the west side of Raleigh street from Franklin to Cameron avenue is already prohibited.

The 12-man Safety council is made up of three students, two faculty members, two town representatives, and one representative from both the highway department and the administration.

Winslow Talk Will Concern Public Health

Noted Authority Speaks Tonight

Dr. C. E. Winslow, noted world authority on public health, will address a Gerrard hall audience tonight at 8 o'clock on "The Task of Public Health in the World Today."

Here for an examination of the School of Public Health, Dr. Winslow will speak under the joint auspices of the Carolina forum and the School of Public Health.

Former professor of public health at Yale university, Dr. Winslow retired three years ago and has since then been editor of the Journal of Public Health. He is in charge, for the American Public Health association, of accrediting schools of public health. At the present there are nine such schools in the United States, and one in Canada.

Dr. Winslow said. "We are tremendously interested in the University of North Carolina. It is the only school in the South and takes care of the whole Southeastern part of the United States."

SDA to Discuss Action by House

The recent action taken by Chancellor House in denying the use of Memorial hall to John Gates, editor of the Daily Worker, will be the topic of discussion at the Students for Democratic Action meeting tonight at 7:30 in Horace Williams lounge.

Prior to the discussion, Hugh Marshall, instructor in the political science department, will deliver an address on civil rights and Communism. The purpose of the address will be to present a political and legal background for the discussion of Chancellor House's action in the Gates affair.

Everyone interested is invited to attend.

Pensive Publius

Student Activities are Sick

Definition: A wheel is that which makes or performs in a circle. Publius is a wheel. Since coming to the University he has obtained keys from everything from coeds' hearts to the Orange County Dog Sterilization association. Truly he has made a name for himself. This morning, however, he was worried. Several of his pet campus organizations are dangerously near breaking up. Some had long been sick inside, but now the malady was breaking into the open.

A friend had just said with considerable indignation that one organization had asked for some assistance from him. "It was clearly understood when I joined that the organization could use my name but would not expect me to work," fumed the friend. "Something of an advisory capacity, you know."

Publius thought of the apathy of the freshmen concern- might be contributing to the sad state of his organizations. The "paper membership" of all these boasted of a truly august company.

Pubius thought of the apathy of the freshmen concerning campus activities despite his benign efforts to arouse their interest. He knew that most of the groups were counting on new blood to give them new activity, but he saw now that a group must have vital, meaningful activity to attract new members of any value.

In the second place Publius realized that looking down his nose at those who looked down their noses at his pet organizations had done nothing but give all concerned a better view of the unpaved sidewalks. "Maybe they are right in some of their criticisms," he thought. "Duplicate effort is a glaring short coming in several cases."

Then a host of weaknesses flashed in his mind. The flattery of new fields caused many students to shift from one activity to another rather than buckle down to work in one field. Conscience-satisfiers infiltrate everywhere. This is the "I felt that I just had to do something" group. Too many students do too little by trying to do too much, while too many others, lackadaisical, dowdy, indifferent, do nothing from force of habit.

That we should do unto others as we would have them do unto us—that we should respect the rights of others as scrupulously as we would have our rights respected—is not a mere counsel of perfection to individuals—but it is the law to which we must conform social institutions in national policy, if we would secure the blessings and abundance of peace.—Henry George.

If you have knowledge, let others light their candles at it.

Legislate Tolerance

By Jonathan Marshall

President Truman's civil rights program presents an interesting psychological problem. Can tolerance and equality be gained through legislation or not?

Perhaps one of the greatest points of friction in the way of real equality for the Negro people is the fact that citizens in the South resent being told that they are wrong, being told what to do, and being told to change their way of life. The greatest fault seems to lie in the approach, and not in the idea.

Too many self—righteous Northerners try to cram civil rights down the throats of the Southerners. By doing that they make the task twice as difficult. People always resent being told what to do, and yet, something should be done. The question is how to attack the problem.

It is almost impossible for any sensible person to argue against equal educational opportunities for all people, the right to vote, or protection against lynching. Those concepts are basic to any successful democracy.

The struggle by the extremists to exclude Negroes from educational opportunities is a serious block in the path of helping the colored people to make a positive contribution to American life. Regional universities will do little good.

Of course the Negro people are less educated when they have no chance to train good teachers: the number of Negro doctors is pitifully low also. The physical and mental consequences are that they cannot develop adequate leadership.

The first place to attack the problem is on the grade and high school level. By making the schools more attractive and training good teachers, there will be a chance for the Negroes to show that they are capable.

Recent actions at several northern schools have been encouraging. Yales elected a Negro captain for next year's football team; at Amherst a Negro was elected to a fraternity; and at Colorado, last spring, a Negro was chosen as the University's outstanding senior. Last year a poll conducted by the SDA showed that the graduate students at Carolina were overwhelmingly in favor of having Negroes accepted to the graduate school here.

No matter how good it is, a regional university for Negroes could not possibly offer all of the advantages that the great Southern universities such as our own offer. It would be almost impossible to get enough qualified teachers, and there would always be a sense of falsity built up by its isolation.

If it does nothing else, the Moorehead Planetarium may provide the vehicle for Negro graduate students at Carolina. Unless, of course, the Supreme Court reverses itself, or Mr. Moorehead builds a planetarium in North Carolina for Negro students.

North Atlantic Pact Week

By Charlie Kauffman

Last week the Western Union Powers got together on one controversial point and gingerly lifted the veil that for eight months has obscured the progress of the London negotiations. The look-see was disappointing. The North Atlantic Security Pact in its present form does not hold for the European participants any real expectation of success.

The premises upon which the negotiations have been conducted is the Vandenberg resolution which met with the almost unanimous approval of the Senate last June. It was introduced in the Senate as a substitute for the security apparently not being realized as a result of our theretofore "complete cooperation" within the U.N. framework in the efforts toward maintaining "world peace." Thus, in the acceptance of this resolution, we have again by-passed the U.N., and we are now on the brink of being actively engaged in the defense of the world against the "aggressors" of Moscow. We have assumed that we are capable of supplying that security from attack to the nations of Western Europe, a feat the U.N. has been unable to realize in any part of the globe after three years of the most concentrated efforts. Paragraphs 1, 5, and 6 of the Vandenberg resolution express the desire on the part of the U.S. to conduct such a program through the U.N., at the same time pointing in a rather off-hand manner to the obvious inability of the U.N. to cope with the threats to peace already upon us. But can the North Atlantic Pact close this void?

As it now stands the pact would obligate the U.S. to: 1) accept the principle that an armed attack against one would constitute an armed attack against all signatories: 2) assist any signatory attacked though there would be no obligation to supply troops: 3) to agree to consult with the other signatories if any one so requested on any threat to peace anywhere in the world.

The purpose of this pact is to create an alliance so strong that no adventurous nation in Europe would dare begin an aggressive war. Yet, as it now stands, any signatory would be completely free to remain neutral in case another was attacked: the European signatories would always be uncertain as to the stand of the U.S. France, as usual, would constantly be on the brink of a national nervous breakdown, and without a reasonably strong France immediate and effective military action by the Western Powers on the continent would be impossible.

If this pact is to develop into a long-term security program the other members must be assured by a full military alliance that the U.S. will take immediate action without the prolonged formalities of notes typewritten at midnight, gradually watered-down neutrality declaration, and lend-lease agreements.

The pact, if ratified as it is now shaping up, can be effective as long as this country's present level of production can be maintained, and only so long as the bipartisan foreign policy of the U.S. in Congress is in force here.

We are not speaking in terms of what the Soviet Union might or might not do this year or in 1950: the Brussels Pact is a 50-year commitment, and if ratified with serious intent on our part will shape largely our foreign policy for years to come. But there can be no security in a pact which will not require all the powers to act together in case of attack. Considering the pact as acting only in the near future with the U.S. as all other signatories, not actually obliged to declare war for mutual defense, there can obviously be no real feeling of security in London and Paris; the pact can act as nothing more than a day-to-day stimulus. We will never, in the forseeable future, see the day when Russia can't at her discretion, shake to the foundations all the capitals of Europe. Unless, of course, our State Department gets down to brass tacks, draws up a real alliance within the Western Union, and proceeds immediately to fully implement it.

From the Inside

Practical Considerations

By Jim Southerland

The smouldering rift in the Student Party quietly erupted at the Student Legislature session Thursday night.

Several SP legislators led by Tom Kerr, former SP legislature floor leader, threw their support behind an unofficial tri-partisan slate of officers for the new legislature instead of walking into the first session like sheep going to slaughter.

Highly incensed by this "corrupt political deal with the University Party," the numerical majority of the SP led by Al Lowenstein, present SP floor leader, is still bitter because some of the party's most competent men refused to bow before ostentatious morality and close their eyes to the practical considerations of political action.

With the SP split widening, with the UP shifting—following the election of Chairman Joe Leary, leader of the UP reform element—and with the Campus Party struggling under the competent chairmanship of Banks Talley to recover from its last quarter defeat, a major realignment in campus politics is almost inevitable.

In the spring elections the student body will probably be faced with three strong, active parties seeking student support for distinct political philosophies.

The redistricting law gave the student body a chance to know the men for whom it was voting. A major political realignment would allow the student body to understand the parties within which the elected representatives must work.

The Student Legislature is off to a good start with a competent slate of officers. Now it is up to the political parties to roll out their respective legislative programs and fulfill the campaign promises they made in the fall.

It is all well and good for the politicians to begin strengthening their political structures and to prepare for the spring elections, but all three parties will probably stand or fall on the records they make in the legislative hall.

Play politics and make all the master political moves in the book-but never forget that the students are not interested in the technics of politics. They want action. Find out what they want and get to work giving it to them.

Cleaning House Would Help Lawyers Gain Respect of Public

By George E. Sokolsky

The American Bar Association has a committee which is complaining that motion pictures, radio, and comic strips treat the lawyers badly. Arthur J. Freund is chairman of the special committee to influence the various media to change their ways, to give the lawyers a break. Mr. Freund said:

"The lawyer, the judge and courtroom procedures are all too frequently depicted in an unfavorable manner. Whereas the doctor is almost always represented as a kindly, charitable and capable professional person, the lawyers is usually portrayed as cruel, selfish, tricky and unethical. . ."

There can be no question but that lawyers, like the rest of us, have a just complaint that others do not see them as they see themselves. The constant repetition of apparently useless questions; the tripping of simple people who cannot be as smart as the lawyers; the unbelievable buncombe in the summing up; the judge falling asleep on the bench during the long sessions—if reporters wrote literally what they saw and heard, lawyers would be unhappier than they are. Perhaps we fail to realize their ordeals and the wisdom of their course.

Maybe the rules of evidence cannot be revised so that a witness can tell his story as he saw it or heard it. Why it is necessary to confuse him by constant interruptions, objections and arguments so that no jury can possibly get the picture exactly as the witness saw it? I once served on a jury and I am sure that after the lawyers and the judge stopped arguing about what is or what is not admissible evidence, no juror could give an intelligent decision.

The real point of this committee's purpose is to get the comic strips to quit producing crime strips, but obviously the crime, adventure, horror comic strips are published because so many want to read them, as so many prefer detective radio programs to listening to Shostakovich.

One of the memos got out by that committee makes an interesting point. It says:

". . .The feeling of the lawyers that something should be done is the result of the deliberations of both the federal and the state agencies. The lawyers are not appealing for anything; they are merely pleading for the dignity of the court. The effect of crime movies and radio broadcasts comes from actual reports from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the respective judges and prosecuting attorneys throughout the United States."

Tar Heel Cagers Prep For Indian War

With TAR HEELS

By Dick Jenrette

Around the middle of January last basketball season, the sports writers of this state and the Southern conference were unanimous in their opinion that N. C. State was the team to beat in this neighborhood. But this year the Wolfpack of Coach Everett Case already has been beaten on seven occasions. And the close 53-52 squeeze by Duke this past weekend indicates State may be in for a few more defeats.

The question of what has happened to the mighty Wolfpack is certainly the most intriguing problem in Southern conference basketball today. Coach Case has essentially the same material back this year that carried the Wolfpack to a record of 29-3 in 1948 and then into the National International tourney in Madison Square Garden.

Leo Katkaveck, who plays pro ball for the Washington Caps, is the only major loss from last season's club. The absence of Katkaveck's fine floor game undoubtedly has hurt State, but not to the extent of seven defeats in the still-young cage season.

Bench-Warming and Discontent

It seems that the 1949 Wolfpack has lost something of the spirit and drive which made it the terror of the South last year. With a wealth of material on hand, Coach Case apparently is having a difficult time in keeping up the morale of his team. The presence of so many good players on one team means that many potential starters will be sitting on the bench; and that breeds dissatisfaction.

Such is the case of Norm Sloan, who last year was one of the most highly-regarded guards on the State team. When Katkaveck graduated, Sloan obviously assumed that he would be elevated to a starting berth. In fact Norm was so enthusiastic that not a day went by this summer that he didn't work out in Frank Thompson gymnasium in Raleigh.

But Sloan was in for a disappointment. Coach Case elected to replace Katkaveck with Vic Bubas. So Sloan spent a number of games sitting uncomfortably on the bench. The situation couldn't go on like this, so last week Sloan quit the State team. He now plans to devote his athletic abilities to football.

The Escapades of One Ed Bartels

And there is, of course, the case of big Ed Bartels, who was finally kicked off the State team for breach of training rules. Bartels, a 6-5 operative who was All-Southern last year and rated State's top backboard player, managed to get himself into so many escapades in Raleigh that the usually staid North Carolina capital was flying with rumors for several weeks. Some of Bartels' activities aren't appropriate for print.

Bartels' controversial escapades around Raleigh involved some of the other members of the State team, with even All-American Dick Dickey entering into the gossip. But since Bartels has been removed from the team, Dickey seems to have straightened out. He racked up 21 points against Duke on Saturday to beat the Devils almost single-handedly.

Case seems finally to have attained training discipline on his team. But the incidents of the past month must have been a severe blow to his pride.

Duke Will Cause Plenty of Trouble

State still rates the favored position in the battle for the Southern conference title, but the team will have to show considerable improvement over its play to date. The Pack has been plagued by bad luck, and most of the seven defeats have been by close margins in games that could have gone either way. But last year State's opponents rarely came even close to winning.

Looking at the other Big Four Teams, excluding Carolina, Duke seems about thebest of the crop. The Devils don't have a lot of talent this year, in comparison to State, but they make it up in spirit and fight. The loss of Ben Collins, regular center who is laid up with a cracked bone in his hand, will hurt. But if Coach Jerry Gerrard's charges can retain the drive they showed against State, then the Durham school is headed for a lot of wins this winter.

Scottmen Accent Zone Defense To Halt Giermak

Carolina's basketball team settled down, yesterday to preparation for Thursday's game with a tough William and Mary quint in Woollen gymnasium.

The Carolina five, riding the crest of a two-game conference winning streak, will take three games of intensified practice before going on the court against the Indians. The Williamsburg five is currently tied with the Tar Heels for fourth place in the Southern conference with a record of four wins and a single defeat.

Coach Tom Scott placed the accent on defense yesterday as he prepared to stop the Indians' high scoring center Chet Giermak. Giermak is pacing the conference scorers with 264 points in 17 games.

Common Foes

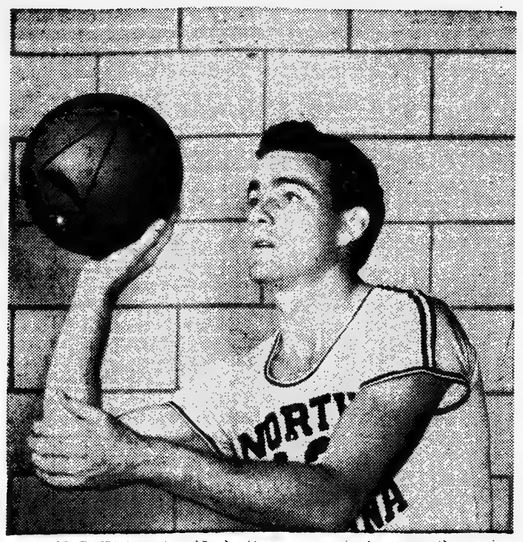
The two fives have engaged a pair of common foes so far this season. Both team stopped the Washington and Lee Generals, Carolina by 69-52 and William and Mary by 42-39. Carolina recently downed Virginia Tech, 56-48 while the Gobblers turned in an upset Saturday night, topping William and Mary, 54-52.

All indications point to a close ball game here Thursday. As an added incentive, the Tar Heel cagers can remember that their football brothers had a perfect record spoiled by a tie with W &M last fall.

Then, too, a scoring duel between the high scoring Coy Carson of Carolina and W&M's Giermak may materialize.

Zone Defense

The type of defense which Scott is likely to employ against the Indians and Giermak in particular is a sliding zone defense with two men on the big Williamsburg center. This defense was employed very successfully by Virginia Tech Saturday after W & L had used the system before when they came within two points of upsetting the Indians.



Wildcats Play

Chapel Hill high school's Wildcats, unbeaten in five starts, will meet Hillsboro tonight at 8:15 in the local high school's tin can in the feature game of a triple header.

The junior varsity quints of the two schools will open the hardwood action at 6:15, with the girls teams due to clash at 7:15. The local jaycee lads have a record of one win and two losses, while the girl cagers will be after their first win, having lost three games.

Coach Bill Grice will probably start Doug Harrell and Tom Maultsby at forwards, Hilbert Williams at the pivot position, and Captain Bob Phillips and high scoring Ivalee Hill at guard positions.

Big Five Scoring Leader

COY CARSON, Tar Heel offensive spark, is currently pacing the Big Five scoring. Carson, a forward, has bucketed 192 points in a dozen games for a 16-point average. All-America Dick Dickey of North Carolina State is trailing Carson in the Big Five scoring column.

Swimmers Drill For Next Meet With LaSalle

The Carolina varsity swimming team is continuing preparations for one of their biggest home meets of the season with LaSalle next Saturday. The Tar Heels weren't even given the weekend off as Coach Casey drilled his boys both days.

After yesterday's workout Coach Casey said he was satisfied with the progress his mermen had been making. Realizing that LaSalle will have a powerful team, Coach Casey left an open date on the schedule last week in order to get his boys ready for this week's tussle.

The Tar Heels have already trounced Duke and VMI soundly, but they must turn in a better performance against LaSalle.

All the local men are off the injury list for the first time of the season. Jerry Cook returned Saturday after a case of flu. Looking especially good in yesterday's practice was Jim Thomas, distance star of the Tar Heels.

Jim broke the Southern conference record in the 440-yd. free-style in the VMI meet and is being relied on for points in both distance events. Also turning in good times in time trials over the weekend were his distance mates, Sam McCauley and Bob Hutton.

COED BASKETBALL

Coed basketball club will meet this afternoon at 4 o'clock in Women's gym according to an announcement by Louise Horner who was elected president at last week's meeting.

All girls interested in playing basketball are invited to the meeting.

No Sooner Tilt

A Sunday night call to Coach Bob Fetzer revealed that rumors flying through the Old North State concerning a possible 1949 meeting between Carolina and the University of Oklahoma were nothing more than fairy tales.

Coach Fetzer, University Athletic director, returned from the NCAA meeting in San Francisco only a few days ago and stated that he knew nothing about a Carolina-Oklahoma meeting this year.

CINDER MEET

Coach Dale Ranson announced yesterday that there would be a very important meeting of the entire track squad in room 304 Woollen gymnasium at 4 o'clock his afternoon. Ranson emphasized the necessity of attendance by all track team members at this meeting.

COED CAGE TOURNEY

Names of players on all coed basketball teams must be turned into Billie Crawford in Women's gym by Wednesday noon. The tournament will begin next Monday, and each organization is allowed to sponsor a maximum of two teams.

Snavely Remains at U.N.C.

Coach Carl Snavely yesterday denied reports that he had discussed a head coaching post with officials of the University of Nebraska.

It had been widely rumored previous to Snavely's statement that he was not interested, that the "Grey Fox" was the number one choice of the Cornhuskers' Athletic department for the head coaching reins.

CARL SNAVELY

Assistant Coach Jim Gill had also been linked with the Nebraska vacancy.

It was never likely that Snavely would leave Carolina, however. The Pennsylvania Dutchman has put out some of the best teams in the history of the University since his return here and is apparently well satisfied with his present position. "King Carl" has taken two Tar Heel grid machines to the Sugar bowl in his three years at the Carolina helm.

Last winter Snavely ixnayed a three-year contract with the professional Los Angeles Dons of the All-American conference. The contract offered Snavely by the pros at that time called for a reported $25,000.

When quizzed about the contract possibility Snavely stated that he "hadn't talked with school (Nebraska) officials on the subject."

It is general knowledge that Coach Snavely has a five-year working agreement here but has never signed a contract. This fact was probably one of the main causes of the unfounded rumor.

Meeting Tonight

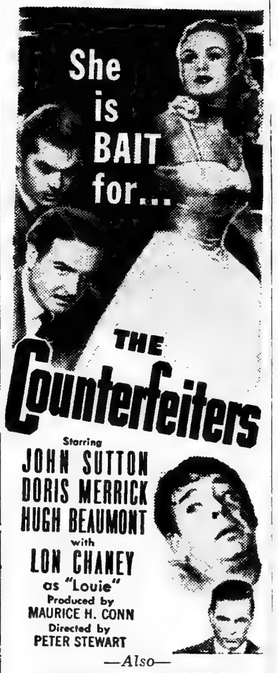
There will be a very important meeting of all members of the Monogram club at 7:30 tonight in the clubroom. President Gus Johnston urges all members, active and inactive, to be present.

A major part of the program will deal with the nomination of officers for the next six months.

State Clings to Loop Lead;

RALEIGH, Jan. 17—(UP)—South Carolina State's Wolfpack set onto its Southern conference lead by only a narrow shred of points today, hard pressed by fast-rising Furman club.

State's lead hung on a single free throw hooped in by Warren Mayer last Saturday. That one point gave Coach Everett Case's boys a 53-52 win over Duke's Blue Devils, and preserved the Wolfs undefeated conference record.



Furman also had a clean slate in conference play. However, the Baptist club has 168 points to 140 for its opponents, while State's total stands at 183 to 136 for its opponents.

The Wolfpack, apparently recovering slowly from its disastrous holiday tour, meets Furman in South Carolina tomorrow night, in a game that could cost State its lead. However, Case's whiz kids were rated strong favorites over Furman.

Symphony Drive Goes Over Top In Chapel Hill

The Chapel Hill membership drive for the North Carolina Symphony orchestra went over the top to the tune of $19,025.15, symphony officials announced yesterday.

Phi Gamma Delta was the only organization to report 100 per cent membership. Those receiving honorable mention are Kenan, Carr, Smith and McIver dorms, Sigma Nu and Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternities, and the YMCA.

Benjamin Swalin, director of the symphony, stressed the fact that membership cards are good at all performances except those privately sponsored.

personal butler to serve coffee and doughnuts in the first period class for three days, or cigarette girls.

All these services will be performed by administrative personnel well known for other types of work. The list of would-be domestic servants includes Robert B. House, chancellor of the University; Katherine Carmichael, dean of women; Twig Branch, coed adviser; Fred Weaver, dean of students; Bill Friday, assistant dean of men; Arnold Nash, religion school head; William Wells, dean of arts and sciences; E. L. Mackie, dean of awards; Roy Armstrong, dean of admissions; Mary Godbee, YMCA secretary; and Dorothy Dashiell Smith ,assistant to the dean of women.

The presentation of "Miss Pay-Off of 1949" will be the last event on the program tonight. The identity of the charity beauty queen will be kept secret even from the contest entries themselves until after the auction proper. Results of dime balloting in the Y lobby until 5 o'clock yesterday will name one queen and a court of either two or three attendants, all of whom will be given cut flowers while the winner receives a specially engraved bracelet.

These same "Miss Pay-Off" candidates will be the coeds sold for dates to be arranged within the next two weeks. Each girl bought will give her escort-to-be prize merchandize valued at $2 or more which various Chapel Hill merchants have donated to the charity. Bidding will be by cash or by WSSF pledges to be paid at a later date.

Also to be announced are the men's and women's dormitory, the sorority, and the fraternity which make the largest donation to WSSF before 5 o'clock today. Special tribute will be paid to the winners' individual door-to-door solicitors.

Cigarettes will be awarded, too, to the student or students who predicted the total score of the Carolina-Washington & Lee game with the closest dime guesses last week.

Admission to the auction will be 50 cents. Tickets will be on sale in the Y lobby today and at the door of Hill hall tonight.

which was built about 500 feet from the water, and the ocean is a row of dunes 12 feet high. however, the dunes were not there when the fort was built in 1585. "We have found under the dunes objects of European origin so we know they are post-settlement."

When the search is resumed they hope to find a graveyard to indicate how many of the colonists were alive when the group disappeared, and evidence of the houses, as well as a great deal more of the Fort. "We have only scratched the surface so far," said Dr. Harrington.

Two other talks made during the meeting were Dr. John Gillin's on "Recent Trends in Archeological Theory," and Joffre L. Coe's "Recent Archeological Discovery in North Carolina." Dr. Gillin, professor of anthropology at the University and research professor in the Institute for Research in Social Science, is a past president of the society. Coe, also on the University staff, is the only professional archeologist in the state.

Officers elected for this year are: H. M. Doerschuk of Bladin, who was re-elected to the presidency; Mrs. Charles A. Cannon, Concord, vice-president, replacing I. Harding Hughes of Raleigh; Harry Davis, Raleigh, secretary-treasurer, and Joffre Coe, editor of the society's publications. Dr. Raymond W. Adams, professor of English, is the retiring secretary-treasurer, and Douglas G. Rights of Winston-Salem, last year's editor.

The group will hold its next annual meeting at Cherokee in the fall, according to an announcement made by President Doerschuk.

Borello Elected Wallaceite Head

Joe Borello was elected chairman of the Young Progressives of Chapel Hill in a meeting last Friday. Other officers include Phil Couch, vice-chairman; Dorothy Blake, secretary; Becky Williams, treasurer; Bill Evans, educational committee chairman; Mike Pochna, social chairman; Doris Friedland, publicity chairman; Paul Morehead and Gene Jones, members-at-large.

At Friday's meeting, Bill Evans and Sandra Saunders spoke briefly on the progressive viewpoint in regard to President Truman's State of the Union message and what it bodes for the future.

Dimes Campaign Starts On Friday

The annual March of Dimes campaign will begin on campus Friday night, under the sponsorship of the Daily Tar Heel, Dougald McMillan and Ed Joyner, managers for the drive, said yesterday.

The initial move for the week-long drive will be made at the re-opening of the Rendezvous room. Each person will be asked to contribute 50 cents to the annual collection when he enters the door.

All the money collected will go to the state-wide fund for treating polio patients in North Carolina.

Working in cooperation with the groups sponsoring the drive, the Sigma Chi sextet will present an original commercial to promote contributions. The other numbers on their program will include more compositions by Hank Beebee, graduate student in the music department.

Mark Barker, student and announcer for station WDUK, will act as master of ceremonies for the floor show and 15-minute radio program to be broadcast at 9:30. Solo vocals for the show will be sung by Anita Gates and Ray Williams.

Although the 50-cent contribution is not required for admission into the room, all students are asked to cooperate in sponsoring the drive by giving generously.

The next move in the polio campaign will be made at the beginning of next week when individual dormitory, fraternity and sorority representatives will be announced.

IN WASHINGTON, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Linda Brown, 4, San Antonio, Tex., the 1949 March of Dimes poster girl, contribute their dimes to the drive for funds to aid the fight on infantile paralysis.

Mistaken Identity

The strange characters seen running around campus these days with moustaches and sideburns in various stages of cultivation are not Playmakers doing a period piece or members of the Sunday Afternoon Motorcycle society of Carrboro, a pair of them explained yesterday.

They are just KA's getting in form for their annual Old South ball in Raleigh soon.

Sale of Tickets For Local Opera To Start Today

Tickets are on sale today for H.M.S. Pinafore, annual Gilbert and Sullivan opera scheduled for Memorial hall, Jan. 28, 29, 30, announced John W. Parker, business manager of the Carolina Playmakers yesterday. "All seats downstairs will be reserved and may be obtained at Swain hall or Ledbetter-Pickard's. Balcony seats will not be reserved and first-come first-serve will be the rule up there," he added.

The joint Playmaker-Music department production is being staged by Foster Fitz-Simons and Sam Selden, and the music conducted by Gwynn McPeek. Costumes have been designed by Irene Smart and James Byrd will light the show. A unique setting has been designed by Gordon Bennett, graduate assistant in the dramatic art department, and when completed, the stage will be transformed into a ship with the mainsail serving as the curtain, and the auditorium will become the ocean.

This is the first time such an idea has been worked out since a production in the huge Hippodrome in New York floated a ship in the center and had Little Buttercup rowed out in a rowboat while she sang her first song, "I'm called Little Buttercup."

LONDON, Jan. 18—(UP)—Minister of Labor George Isaacs told Commons today that about 150,000 18-year-olds will be drafted this year.

Seminar Here Will Be Led By Anscombe

Religion, Science Planned as Topic

Dr. Francis C. Anscombe, former instructor at the University, will lead the seminar on "Religion and Science" during Religious Emphasis week, which will be held Jan. 24-27, chairman Don Shropshire announced yesterday.

Dr. Anscombe, who received a master's degree at the University in 1924 and was an instructor in history here while working on a doctor's degree, is now acting pastor of the Moravian church at Clemmons and emeritus head of the history department at Salem college. An honorary member of the American Institute of Banking, he is also a lecturer in various civic clubs in North Carolina.

Dr. Anscombe, who is a member of the astronomical society and an honorary member of the Winston-Salem Torch club, is the former pastor of several Friends churches. He is now the lecturer of the Current Events Winston-Salem Women's club.

The seminar leader has been an instructor at Earlham college and the head of history departments at both Guilford and Salem colleges. Having taught summer school at the University's Woman's college in Greensboro, Dr. Anscombe has been a lecturer of the Duke Institute of International Relations and was an instructor of the American Institute of Banking.

Dr. Anscombe attended Kingsmead college in England and received his bachelor of arts degree from Earlham college in 1916. After receiving his master's and doctor's degrees from the university, he attended the Wake Forest Law school, Hamilton college of law, and passed the North Carolina bar examination in 1931. Dr. Anscombe has done graduate work at Johns Hopkins university.

Recital Slated For Hill Today

A student recital will be presented this afternoon in Hill hall at 4 o'clock. The program is as follows: "Prelude in B minor," from "Well Tempered Clavier" (J. S. Bach) and "Impromptu in G sharp minor" (Chopin), Robin Scroggs, piano; "Sonata in F sharp minor" (Beethoven), Robert MacDonald, piano; and "Children's Corner" (Debussy), James Woodard, piano.

The public is invited to attend.

Alpha Chi Sigma Pledges Six Men

Six men were pledged by the local chapter of Alpha Chi Sigma, professional chemical fraternity, in a ceremony held Tuesday evening in the chapter room at Venable hall.

They are John G. Broughton, Carl T. Durham, Jr., Thomas A. Hosick, Jerome Lancaster, William C. Mathis, Jr., and John R. Rives, Jr. Frank B. Tutwiler, president of the fraternity, was in charge of ceremonies.

Activities of the fraternity include having speakers of interest to the general public; and annual awards are presented to juniors and seniors outstanding in chemistry.

Football Fever

Football fever is starting early for 1949, Bill Shuford of the Alumni association reported yesterday.

Bill said applications for tickets to the North Carolina-Notre Dame football game have already reached the Alumni office, and a request for room reservations for next fall's Georgia contest had been received.

But Bill warned prospective ticket-buyers to save those checks. It's far too early, he said.

Dialectic Senate Plans Discussion On Mercy Killing

Legal mercy killing will be discussed by the Dialectic senate at 8 o'clock tonight in the Di hall on the third floor of New West building.

The bill proposed by the Ways and Means committee of the Di states:

"Be it resolved by the Senate of the Dialectic Literary society, that, the Dialectic senate goes on record as favoring the enactment of a statute permitting euthanasia (mercy killing) with the following provisions:

"1. That the consent of the patient be given in a signed legal statement, and that there be signed statements from three competent physicians, one of whom is a specialist in the field of medicine concerned, that the patient is suffering from an incurable ailment which causes him extreme pain.

"2. That the administration of the provisions of such a statute be under the strict supervision of the respective states.

"Following the introduction of the bill by Banks Talley, chairman of the Ways and Means committee, the floor will be opened for discussion by both members and visitors.

Band Directors To Attend Clinic

Approximately 80 high school band directors throughout the state have been invited to attend a band clinic to be held at the University on Saturday, Jan. 29, in order to choose music for the forthcoming district and state band contests.

The purpose of the clinic is to allow the high school directors to gain acquaintance with some or all of the music on this year's band contest list. The University band has been divided into two groups, the Blue band and the White band, in order to read through the music for the visiting directors.

Band leaders of Davidson college have been invited to assist Director Earl Slocum in conducting the clinic.

Policy Dispute Causes Break In SP Ranks

Warriner Leads Faction Walkout

Eight members of the Student party, including three legislators, bolted from the party ranks during a stormy meeting in Graham Memorial yesterday afternoon.

Following the defeat of a motion introduced by Nelson Taylor, president of the Town Men's association, which would have bound all SP members to support party nominees "without reservation", Dortch Warriner, attorney general of the student body, announced his withdrawal from the party. Joining Warriner in the walkout were Tom Kerr, Ed Best, and Jim Southerland, all members of the Student legislature. Also included in the bolt were Toby Selby, Bob Fentres, and Banks Mebane.

Securing the floor early in the meeting, Taylor introduced his resolution and called for the active support by party members of all candidates nominated by the party. The majority of the party members held out for individual rights to support any candidate.

On the defeat of the motion by a 21-12 vote, Warriner stated that he could no longer remain in a party which refused to support its candidates unanimously and led the walkout of the eight members.

Commenting on the rift, which has occurred twice within the last two months, SP Chairman Gran Childress said, "The persons who bolted today bolted because they believed every member of the party should support every candidate without reservation. We are happy about the bolt because those of us who remain in the party disagree with their political philosophy. The split has unified the Student party and no longer will we be defeated on the proverbial 'divide and conquer' theory," he continued.

"If we do lose we will have lost fighting for a political philosophy in which we believe, and of which we are not ashamed," Childress added.

Speaking for the bolting faction, Tom Kerr stated yesterday, "The 'right wing' broke with the SP because of a basic disagreement on political theory. We feel that any man flying a party banner must support the decisions of the majority of the party or get out," he said. "We asked this of others when we were a majority and now we have acted upon it when we are not in the majority."

Cosmopolitan Club Scheduled to Give Four Movies on Life in India Tonight

Four movies on life of India will be shown by the Cosmopolitan club tonight at 8 o'clock in Phillips hall, president Hannes Johnson announced yesterday.

The first of the films, introduced by Uttan Chand, graduate student from Punjah, India, is entitled "Our Heritage." This will trace the historical development of Indian history from ancient times to the present.

The second film entitled "Music of India," will concern the popular instruments of India and will show the difference between Indian music and that of European and western music. Another movie will tell of Indian's native dances.

The film entitled "The Kashmir Story" will trace the development of the present day conflicts between the Prince of Kashmir and the governor of the Union of India.

University students from India will be present in native costumes at the showing of the films, which were obtained from the Indian information service in Washington.

Powe Named 'Miss Payoff' During Auction For WSSF

By Charlie Gibson

Mary Louise Powe was crowned "Miss Pay-Off of 1949" as a high-light of the daffy auction held in Hill hall last night to end the University fund-raising drive for the World Student Service fund.

Miss Powe, senior from Durham sponsored by Beta Theta Pi fraternity, was chosen queen of the campus charity drive by dime balloting in the Y lobby. Close behind the 1,688 votes which she amassed was Louise Horne, WSSF maid of honor, with 1,623. Miss Horne is a junior from Sanford and was sponsored by Pi Kappa Alpha.

Other beauty attendants announced by auctioneers Norman Cordon and Earl Wynn were Ferne Hughes, a senior from Rainelle, West Virginia, sponsored by Pi Lambda Phi; and Betsy Ross, freshman from Chapel Hill sponsored by Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

The four finalists and the other "Miss Pay-Off" entries were all presented with bouquets or corsages through the courtesy of Chapel Hill florists. The queen also received a specially engraved bracelet.

After these coeds were sold as dates and various faculty members were bonded into novel servitude to the highest bidders—all for the international student relief, recognition was also given to outstanding door-to-door solicitors. Gussie Young from Alderman dormitory and Dick Ferguson from Kappa Alpha fraternity were lauded as outstanding canvassers, Gussie having personally raised $103 and Dick having solicited $100.06.

Although all five campus sororities contributed to WSSF only through the "Miss Pay-Off" contest, there was a close race among the men's dormitories to vie for most charitable contribution. Almost a three-way tie resulted between Everett, where James Gilbert solicited $37; Lewis, where Lacy Beel raised $36.94; and "C" dormitory, where Ed Beasel collected $36.35.

Five cartons of cigarettes were also divided between Tinsley Campbell and Sol Monsour, who tied in the dime guessing contest to predict the total score of the Carolina-Washington & Lee basketball game last week. Although predictions ranged from 74 to 138, no one hit the correct final total of both teams' scores—121 points. However, both the winners missed that figure by merely one point, Campbell predicting 120 and Monsour guessing 122.

Dick Gordon, WSSF drive finance chairman, stated last night that a total report of the funds raised during the past week and a half will be released tomorrow.

CPU Backs Admittance Of Negroes, Gates Talk

The Carolina Political union in Sunday night's meeting approved both the action of the Carolina forum in inviting Communist John Gates to speak at the University and the immediate admission of qualified Negro graduate and undergraduate students to the University.

CPU members and visitors voted to admit negroes to the graduate school by a vote of 23 to 2. The vote was 16 to 9 concerning the question of admission to undergraduate school. Several visitors did not vote.

The resolution supporting the invitation of John Gates by the Carolina forum, which also condemns the action of Chancellor R. B. House in refusing to permit Gates to speak, read:

"Whereas, It is the tradition, principle, and policy of the Carolina Political union to uphold the right of student organizations to sponsor speakers representing all shades of political opinion, to speak at the University before all who care to listen; therefore, be it resolved, that the membership of the Carolina Political union approves and supports the action of the Carolina forum in co-sponsoring John Gates to speak at the University.

"Be it further resolved, that the membership of the Carolina Political union goes on record as disapproving and disagreeing with the interpretation of North Carolina statutes by Chancellor R. B. House in refusing to permit John Gates, Communist editor of the Daily Worker, to speak in a University building on January 12, 1949.

Drawing Classes Set For Tonight

Evening classes for instruction in drawing and sketching will be held tonight from 7 to 10 o'clock in Person hall and will continue through March 9, the apartment announced yesterday.

John Allcott, Kenneth Ness, John Rembert, and a new member of the faculty, Emma Lu Davis, sculptor and industrial designer, will be the instructors.

There is no fee for instruction, but there will be a $5.00 fee to cover materials used, model fees, and lab assistant fees. Single classes will be 75 cents each.

Interested persons are asked to register for instruction in Person hall or call Miss Warren at 3801.

Reports on Two Cases Heard Recently Are Released by Men's Honor Council

Reports on two cases recently heard by the Men's Honor council were released yesterday.

In the first case, a student testified before the council that he had become "rattled" on an exam and had copied another student's paper with the consent of the other student. The other student admitted that he had given the aid.

Since either giving or receiving aid on a test is a violation of the Honor code, both students were suspended. However, the fact that both students reported themselves will be taken into consideration when they apply for readmission.

Another student was reported for looking on another student's paper during a final exam in Latin. When questioned by the council, the student readily admitted getting information from the other student's paper. The person from whom the information had been taken had given the student a chance to report himself, and on his failure to do so, had reported it to the council. The guilty student was suspended from school.

Communists Seek Dismissal of Trial

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—(UP)—The 11 top Communists in the United States sought dismissal of federal charges against them today on grounds their trial jury will be picked from the "silk stocking" classes that have the most to lose under a Communistic state.

The defense challenged the jury system after William Z. Foster, veteran chairman of the U. S. Communist party, was judged too ill to stand trial on the charges of conspiracy to teach and advocate the violent overthrow of the government.

Federal Judge Harold R. Medina severed Foster's trial from that of the others over vigorous defense objections that he was the party's "flag bearer" and the "indispensable" man in fighting a government attempt to "execute a major political party."

In attacking the jury system, the Communist leaders charged they were selected from the social register, "Who's Who in New York," financial directories and telephone books which could be scoured to make sure the majority came from the Park avenue and Fifth avenue sections rather than Harlem, Brooklyn or the Lower East Side.

Up a Tree

Bill Wolf and Russ Twiford, a pair of energetic ATO's, had a possum on their hands yesterday and didn't know what to do with him.

They caught the animal, they said, in a tree growing beside Spencer dormitory. They spotted him there night before last.

They didn't offer a satisfactory explanation, however, of just why they were looking in the general direction of Spencer when they first caught sight of the varmint.

For Good of the Whole

Four months ago a plan for a Greater University student council was born. The council was formed after much work by many people. At the last meeting, at State college last Sunday afternoon, a constitution was adopted. This constitution stipulated that the name of the organization should be the Student Council of the Greater University of North Carolina.

That is what the council was formed to be and what it is today. It is made up of representatives from the three branches of the Greater University. Eleven members from each school comprise the Council. This was also a stipulation of the constitution.

When the council was formed, its main purposes were set forth in a statement of principles, drawn up by the State college delegation and approved by the council. To take a few excerpts, the statement says the council believes that unity and cooperation, and the development of a friendlier spirit among the students of the three units of the Greater University is an idealistic objective worth striving for; and that it, the council, will attempt to lead the students to understand the realities of the University consolidation act, and the benefits to be received from implementing the Greater University idea at the student level.

In a recent issue of the Technician, the State college campus paper, one Mr. Al Dugan, a columnist, devoted a full paragraph in running down the council. He said "State is participating in the Greater University Council. The object of this group in our opinion is to pressure the legislature into appropriating unheard of sums to the Greater University. Of course, it's all a Carolina idea and guess who will get the biggest appropriation? Nextweek we will give you our plan for financing a new stadium and twenty new buildings without Carolina's brotherly help."

This comment by Mr. Dugan shows a lack of knowledge of what the council is all about. Had Mr. Dugan investigated before he made the statement, he could not honestly have made it.

If the same idea is imbued in many students, then the purpose of the council is defeated before it is given a fair chance, a fair chance to prove that it was formed for the benefit of all units of the University and not just one.

It is fortunate that Mr. Dugan's view is a minority one at State college. This is demonstrated by the fact that the work of the State delegation, and especially of Virgil Mims, has been one of the prime reasons that the council has progressed as far as it has.

Pensive Publius

Concerning a Problem

Definition: A problem is anything that is required to be done.

As he lighted a Roy-Tan, Publius thought that in the case of his campus activities the converse, or doing nothing, was the problem. Many of their problems arose from doing nothing constructive.

Being in ROTC, Publius remembered how difficult it was for him to keep closed up and in step when he was at the end of the platoon. On the other hand, when he was up front he had no trouble keeping up or in step. "Maybe my organizations are like that," Publius reasoned. "Once behind, they have to struggle even to bring up the rear in students' interests."

A stigma is sometimes astigmatism. Publius had spent half the afternoon explaining to one of his friends that the ABC was not a Red group and that its motto was not really "A Red in every bed." Had his friend taken the trouble to attend a meeting before launching his tirade, everyone would have been happier. Publius had learned in politics that there is no defense against a sneering laugh. If you get mad, you're a cad and your attempts at reason are laughed down. Publius knew that this weapon was leveled at student activities in nearly every form.

The lack of new members in most of his organizations worried Publius. This shortage causes a vast amount of work to be thrown on the shoulders of a few loyal members. Trying to carry out programs designed for a large, enthusiastic group, the few conscientious members have no time to win new members or increase their own knowledge of the theory behind the organization, the thought behind the action. Soon the organization becomes as drab and uninteresting as the Y court without its celebrated rodent.

Courageous And Unselfish

By Don Shropshire

Someone once said that the only way to avoid criticism is to say nothing, do nothing, and be nothing. It is only in the light of this statement that one can understand why Dr. Frank Graham is continually "under fire" from self-appointed critics throughout the land.

For ages, men such as Fulton Lewis, Jr., have constantly been responsible for confusing the minds of simple people in the evaluation of persons who dared to be different enough to fight any move to harm humanity, and who joined forces with others to protect God-sent individual freedom. For ages, some well-meaning people have kept such critics in business by relying on their judgment, without giving a thought to the high probability that some very basic, selfish motives may be solely responsible for the opinion advanced. Some of us flock to sensationalism as do bugs around a light on a summer evening.

The results of all this have been that we have come to suspect anyone who goes out of his way to unselfishly and devotedly serve his fellowman wherever needed and regardless of the difficulties involved.

Worst of all, "Christian" people have even doubted the sincerity of those of their own group who insisted on living day by day the convictions which dominate their lives and give it meaning. In fact, it has become so rare to see one of the latter, that some are immediately convinced that such a person is a misfit in our society and should not shoulder responsibilities, especially those which involve the people of the world.

Few people since the founding of this nation have so tirelessly and courageously defended the rights and privileges of mankind as has Dr. Graham. So few people, as he, have set their sights on the Higher Power, and then set about vigorously to apply that philosophy of life in their relationships with other people.

Actually, it seems that it should be encouraging to see someone else do those things which some of us are unable or unwilling to do ourselves, but it seems, too, that the opposite generally holds true. Some are inclined to call such indispensable personalities almost any name which happens to be in style at the time, without thought and without due consideration.

To the world, Dr. Graham has spoken movingly, acted influencially, and lived nobly. For this, his "reward" is bound to be criticism from many points. But his fight in the field of human relations will continue with increasing effectiveness, as he continues to maintain his obvious and admired straight-forward conviction of being true to his God and the people of His creation.

Israel: Two Opposing Views

Editor:

As one of the two English members of the student body of this University, I am moved to submit a reply to the article by Mr. Jonathan Marshall printed in your issue of Friday, January 14, under the title, "British Policy in Palestine Shortsighted." I do not claim to be an expert in international affairs, but feel the article in question to be unnecessarily biased in favor of the Israelite point of view. There is another side to the question, which your readers may like to consider before reaching their own conclusions.

The present state of affairs in Palestine seems to me to be one of those historical tragedies which have occurred all too frequently in this century. It is a tragedy in that both sides feel they have an indisputable right to a certain area of the earth's surface, and are prepared to fight for that right rather than to risk losing part of it in the process of arbitration. The Jewish claim is well-known and well-publicized in this country. The Arab claim is perhaps less well-known; their chief justification lies in the fact that they held the territory in question in undisputed occupation for over 1000 years. They did not conquer it from the Jews; they conquered it from the decadent Byzantine Empire.

In cases such as this, where two parties have conflicting claims, it is surely intelligent to approach the problem judicially, allowing each side to state its claims, but not acknowledging their right to any part of the disputed territory until a final peaceful settlement has been made. It is unfortunate that such a judicial approach to the problem has been weakened by the outbreak of war between the two parties. It is still more unfortunate that America should have prejudiced the possibility of a peaceful settlement in advance by recognizing the prior right of the Jews to part of this territory; this was the implication put upon America's recognition of the state of Israel not only by the Arabs themselves, but by informed opinion in Great Britain. Was it shortsighted in the part of His Majesty's government to attempt to keep the dispute on a judicial basis?

The Arabs feel their claims to be at least as justified as those of the Jews; the British government has had a long and intimate experience of Palestine's problems. These two aspects of the problem are entirely absent from Marshall's discussion of it.

His article shows evidence not only of this kind of bias, but also of a certain lack of logic; I quote two of his statements in this connection:

"It is obvious that England has been supporting the Arab states."

"Although little concrete evidence of English aid to the Arabs has been presented, the fact remains that the English have given some help."

He further says: "Their action in not recognizing the Jewish nation is tantamount to saying that England will not abide by UN decisions."

Does he expect his readers to believe this in the present world situation?

S. K. Lawry

Editor:

I was very pleased to read Jonathan Marshall's fairly concise article on "Shortsighted British Policy in Palestine" in Friday's Daily Tar Heel. I feel that such an article is long overdue since the Palestine situation has been a vital issue for quite some time.

There were several points, however, which I would like to elucidate. First of all he made mention that there has been "little concrete evidence of English aid to the Arabs." A memorandum submitted to the United Nations Palestine Commission on February 2, 1948 makes known the fact that the Arab Legion led by an ex-Nazi collaborator, one Abdullah, is both British trained and equipped. Israeli fighters have also encountered many English planes piloted by both Arabs and Egyptians, which brings me to my second point—the writer called the recent shooting down of five English planes by Israeli artillery "a political boner of the worst type." Is he aware of the fact that one pilot admitted he was inside Israeli territory? And how can soldiers fighting for their very lives be expected to know the nationality of a hidden pilot—after all, in time of war anyone who is not an ally would be considered an enemy. Besides what right has England to interefere—she was certainly not so instructed by the UN. England had her chance—a year ago she decided to surrender all responsibilities to the UN.

Although, like Marshall, I am an admirer of England's many contributions to the world, I can't refrain from condemning what radio commentator Agronsky so aptly called "Foreign Minister Bevin's apparently pathological hatred of Israel."

It is indeed to the interest of both the United States and the UN to support the infant state. In the midst of a decadent and feudalistic Middle East, Israel stands out as a bulwark of democracy. The historical orientation of Israel has always been towards the larger hopes of mankind; towards the realization of human dignity, national freedom, social justice and the conception of "one-world."

UNC: Hope of Many Needy Students in State

By Jess Dedmond

The General Assembly shall provide that the benefits of the University, as far as practicable, be extended to the youth of the state free of expense for tuition. So reads Article 9 Section 7 of the Constitution of North Carolina. This has been the philosophy in which our University has operated. And working in this philosophy Carolina has accommodated untold numbers of the states' youth and sent them out to serve state and nation.

In the dark days of the thirties many youths from the highways and by-ways of the state sought out Chapel Hill with empty empty pockets but determined hearts. They came here because Carolina was renowned as a place where an alert mind, an ambitious spirit, and a will to work would see a man through to a college degree. But in view of the recent recommendation of the Advisory Budget Commission an era of hope may well be coming to an end.

The Advisory Budget Commission has recommended an eighty-five percent increase in tuition rates for the Greater University to apply to in-state students. What does this mean to the youth of the state? It means, if put into effect, that inflation has hit education at Chapel Hill at the final resting place. It means possibly that our University is headed in a new direction. It may no longer be the hope of many needy students as a place where is always a fighting chance. No one knows how many prospective students will be discouraged from seeking an education by such a raise. There may be ten or there may be five hundred ten. Whatever the number it will be too large.

A few figures may serve to illuminate this point. In the year 1938-39 twenty percent of the student body earned half the expense of their education at Chapel Hill. In the same year approximately seventeen percent found it necessary to secure loans from the University Loan Fund. Perhaps the percentage doing the same today is smaller, but these are not normal times. In normal times the percentage may be expected to be essentially the same.

North Carolina cannot afford to discourage any part of its youth from seeking an education at the state's institutions of higher learning. In that belief I oppose any and all increases in tuition. Let us hope that the Board of Trustees will weigh carefully the proposed raise and stand squarely for the principle that courageous youth will not be discouraged from seeking educational opportunities in our state university.

These Days

'Desirable' Immigration

By George E. Sokolsky

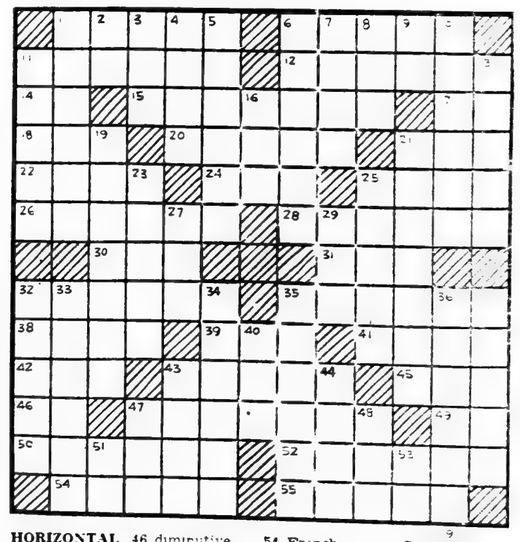
For the year, ending June 30, 1948, 170,570 immigrants entered this country from all the earth. This figure does not include displaced persons who were admitted in recent months. The largest number from Europe came from three countries: Germany, England and Italy. Canada surpassed all countries, sending 21,794 persons.

It is most interesting that women, children and elderly persons constitute an unusually large share of these immigrants. There are few mechanics; few skilled workers. For instance, those who declared that they had occupations were clerical workers and similar workers. Lots of the immigrants were persons in the professional and semi-professional categories. For many years more than half of the immigrants report no occupation at all. That does not mean that they have no way of earning a living; many of them are housewives who for traditional reasons are accounted occupationless; others, a most valuable group, are venturesome young people who are moving to greener pastures.

This country has been importing agricultural workers since 1942 from Mexico and the British West Indies. During the war Mexican workers were brought in to work on the railroads. No data is available about Puerto Rican immigration to the United States. The Puetro Ricans are American citizens; they move about as one might between Ohio and Pennsylvania. Many of them have settled in large cities like New York to which they were, in many instances, brought for political reasons, to be stuffed into horrible, filthy slums, to live under unspeakable conditions, to become the prey of politicians who, for tiny bribes and small favors, got the votes they regimented. This has become a dangerous situation that calls for investigation and solution, but then politicians are involved and politicans often have their way.

The question is: what kind of immigrants do we need? What kind should be welcomed? This question always arouses emotional responses. Each national, religious and racial group seeks to protect its kindred. It would prefer to open the gates to the United States for its own without restriction.

It was this attitude which made the displaced persons of the 80th Congress a political issue. Obviously, the number to be admitted (205,000) was too small to satisfy everyone and therefore any formula would have produced the charge of discrimination. Any limitation would involve selection, choice, elimination. Even the quota system is discriminatory in the sense that it favors the northern European in preference to all other peoples. It does discriminate against the Oriental, against the African, against the southern European.



Therefore, it is smart to eliminate the term discrimination from the discussion. We need rather to inquire as to precisely what kind of person the United States needs to import in the year 1949. For instance, do we need farmers or mechanics? Do we need European doctors or do we need workers in certain skills? Do we require clerical workers or hard-knuckled peasants to do the jobs that Americans no longer like to do?

It would seem that that is a sounder approach to the problem. The United States is becoming increasingly populated. True, there has not been a year that failed to show an increase. We now estimate our population at 147,000,000. The increase since the 1940 census shows an 11 percent addition (14,000,000 persons) and it was not all due to immigration. In 1948, 2,291,000 marriages were performed, the largest number since 1930. By the ordinary course of events, this, of itself, will produce a large increase by the time of the 1950 census.

It is impossible to consider immigration on any basis without some consideration to the general question of the size and character of the American population. Ours is no longer a homogeneous society, if it ever was. Some 50 nations and more than 250 religious bodies and all the colors of skin known to the human race have become part of the American nation. The process of assimilation is slow and incomplete and produces problems of its own. No immigration policy can altogether ignore these factors, although there are differences of view as to how important cultured homogeneity is.

At any rate, these are the factors in the immigration problem that need to be considered before new legislation is passed.

Out of the Frying Pan

HERE IT IS the middle of January and we're still beefin' about the late grid season. But not without just cause—somebody picked up all our marbles. Or rather a whole gang of 'em did. The honorable Grantland Rice for one, but he shall not go unpunished for his ill deed saith the writing on the wall—and between the lines.

It seems the said Mr. R has brought the wrath of nation's football writers upon himself because of a couple of phrases he used in picking "his" All-America team for Look magazine. And we'll bet a pretty penny that Look would be just as happy if the whole nasty incident had never occurred. The mag, too, is on the verge of being dragged into a lawsuit because of Mr. R's ballot tampering.

See Taylor of the Des Moines Register-Tribune revealed several weeks ago that the National Football Writers association is considering filing suit against both Look and Rice because Granny used the name of NFWA in conjunction with his own picks. So it seems that the Dean of American sports writers has jumped out of the frying pan into the proverbial fire.

There Ain't No Justice

THINGS WERE PLENTY WARM enough for the elderly gentleman before the threatened lawsuit. Grid fans from every corner of the nation, particularly the Southern section, were up in arms against Rice because of his failure to put Charlie Justice on his unbeatable-A first team. Seems the old boy learned a wee bit too late that there should have been Justice.

It is reliably reported by a member of the NFWA that Fred Russell of Nashville, Tenn., who had a hand in the counting of the writers' ballots, has stated that Rice made three changes after receiving the writers' picks.

To him there was no Justice, so for him there should be no justice. Or so they say.

Choo Choo Ranked High

ALTHOUGH HE WAS relegated to a second-string berth, the Carolina Choo Choo was among the top vote-getters. He and Dandy Doak Walker, the Southern Methodist strong boy, were neck and neck when the final ballots were counted.

As previously mentioned, the Justice shift was not the only one made by Rice, who stated in his Look article that the team was picked in "collaboration" with the NFWA, but the other changes were not revealed. Look advertised it's All-America picked by Grantland Rice "with the assistance of 440 members of the Football Writers Association of America."

It has been unofficially stated that Frank Leahy, coach of the ever-powerful Irish of Notre Dame, called on Rice after the selections were in and counted and said that he would like to see Emil Sitko, (Notre Dame, of course), on the first team. When the results were published he was and Justice was not among the elite.

Not Even Close

RICE'S EPILOGUE PAINTED-a picturesque scene of "Emil Sitko of Notre Dame and Charlie Justice of North Carolina in keen competition' for a first-string post. But did he really believe it? It is doubtful if a half-dozen fair-minded writers in the country would call it close between the two.

Leahy is also rumored to have caused last-minute changes in the Collier's All-America, and because of this unwarrented action will be asked to resign from the All-America board. As of now it's all in the hear-say stage, however.

It is actually inconceivable how anyone could fail to name Justice as one of the best backs in the nation. The diminutive Tar Heel was far away the best all-around college back in the nation in 1948. This is easily borne out by statistics, which never paint an unstained picture, but can always be relied upon when in doubt.

The final statistics released by the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau placed the Asheville Ambler among the leaders in every offensive department.

State Tops Furman As Clock Goes Bad

GREENVILLE, S. C., Jan. 18—North Carolina State's five, with the aid of a faulty clock, rolled up 61 points in a lengthened first half and added 20 more in a 12-minute last half to top Furman, 81-57 here tonight.

Sam Ranzino racked up 21 points to lead the Casemen to victory while teammate Bob Hahn chipped in with 20. Ebington took scoring honors for the locals with 20 points.

Chapel Hill High Defeats Hillsboro

The Chapel Hill high school Wildcats roared to their sixth straight win of the season last night when they whipped Hillsboro high in a conference game on the home court before 700 partisan fans.

Forward Ivalee Hill paced the scoring for Coach Bill Grice's charges as he looped 14 points in. Arnold Kirk was Hillsboro's top scorer with eight points.

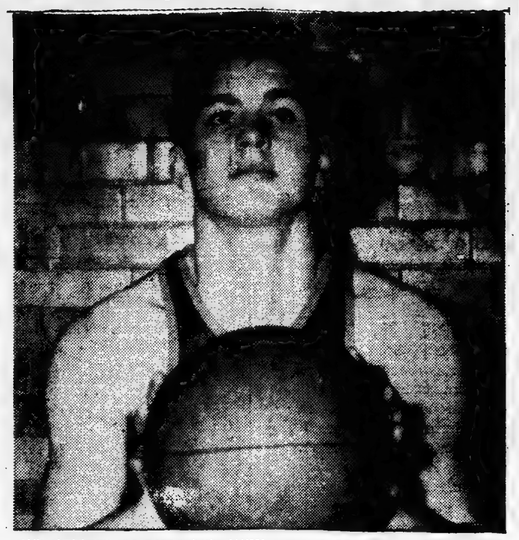
Carolina Seeking Method To Check Indians' Giermak

Emphasis fell on the "Stop Giermak" strategy in the Carolina basketball practice yesterday as Coach Tom Scott continued to make plans for halting the high-scoring center of the William and Mary Indians, who invade Chapel Hill on Thursday night for a Southern conference battle in Woollen gym.

The Tar Heels have good reason for worrying about the scoring antics of Chet Giermak. The big Indian, a 21-year old junior from Chicago, ranks as the top scorer in the conference to date. Giermak had his biggest night against hapless Baltimore, when he marked up 45 points in a 96-28 slaughter.

In view of Giermak's lustrous record, Coach Scott has instigated a new defensive measure this week. The Carolina mentor probably will employ a zone defense in an effort to stop the threat of Giermak's jump and hook shots.



But William and Mary is far from a one-man team. In fact the Indians lead the entire conference in season scoring honors. After 19 games, Coach Barney's Wilson's outfit boasts a total of 1,253 points to 876 for the opponents. This gives William and Mary an average of some 66 points per game.

Despite the impressive Indian scoring antics, the game rates as a tossup. Carolina will have the added advantage of playing on its home floor, and on a basis of comparative scores for two games has an edge. Both teams scored wins over Washington and Lee, Carolina by 69-52 and William and Mary by 42-39. Also the Tar Heels beat Virginia Tech, 56-48, while William and Mary dropped a 54-52 upset decision to the Gobblers. Virginia Tech employed an effective zone defense in scoring its win.

William and Mary has an overall record of 16 wins and three losses. Defeats were administered by Seton Hall, Virginia Tech, and Villanova. Carolina's won-lost mark now stands at nine wins and two losses.

Other standouts on the William and Mary team besides Giermak are Ed McMillan and Jere Bunting, guards, and Charlie Sokol and Bob Holley at forwards. Sokol was All-Southern in 1946 while playing at South Carolina.

Charity Champ for Indians

ED (FUZZ) McMILLAN, William and Mary guard is noted for his ability to convert on chances at the free-throw line. McMillan has an average of better than 80% so far this season.

Rodgers, Kennedy Ink Pro Contracts

Pro football invaded Tar Heel ranks once again yesterday when Bob Kennedy and Hosea Rodgers, half of the 1948 Carolina backfield, were signed to contracts by the Los Angeles Dons of the All-America conference.

Rodgers, a 26-year-old native of Brewton, Ala., was a pillar of strength on the Tar Heel eleven and tore many an opposing line apart from his fullback slot, while Kennedy, a red-haired youngster from Bergenfield, N.J., is a swift operator from the wingback position. Both should fit in well with the Don's single wing offense.

This pair joins two other Tar Heels who have already joined the play for pay ranks. Previously end Joe Romano signed with the Detroit Lions while tackle Ted Hazelwood made commitments to the Cleveland Browns.

Cage Programs

Something new in spectator convenience at Carolina basketball games will be available to the fans at the William and Mary-Carolina battle here Thursday. Coaches Tom Scott, Pete Mullis, and Jim Hamilton, along with George Hogan have worked up a full-sized program.

These programs were available at last week's game with George Washington and plans call for publication before each of the remaining games. Proceeds from the sale of the programs will be put into a basketball scholarship at Carolina.

Beginning with the next issue after the William and Mary game, the programs will include a scoring chart to enable the fans to keep up with the individual scoring during the game.

Carolina Opens '49 Mat Schedule At State Tonight

The Carolina wrestling squad will open the 1949 season tonight with a match against the State grapplers at the Raleigh institution. The freshman match will start at 7 o'clock with the varsity following.

Tonight's match will mark Carolina's first defense of the state crown which they won last year by topping State, Duke and Davidson and which they are favored to repeat.

Carolina will be paced in the meet tonight by Carrol Fisher, Phil Kemp, Ray Swigart and John Stoioff. All of those boys were on the squad last year and Kemp went to the conference match, but failed to reach the finals.

Oscar Gupton, 165, was to wrestle tonight, but is still suffering from a head injury received in an auto accident in the fall. Gupton's loss is sure to be felt by Coach Chuck Quinlan's operatives, but Ray Swigart will replace Gupton against the Wolfpack.

Phil Kemp, who recently stabbed himself in the hand while deer hunting, has recovered and will go in the 155 classification.

Carroll Fisher, who grappled last season in the 155 weight group will take the mat tonight in the 145 class. John Stoioff will go in the 175 class.

Other Tar Heels wrestling tonight will be Joe Augustine, heavyweight; Paul Edmundson, 121; Ed Turnley, 128 and Hollis, 136.

The Tar Heel frosh boast only two men with previous wrestling experience. Barney Boardman, 155, wrestled at Woodberry Forest school in Virginia and Barry Farber, 135, captained his high school team at Greensboro.

Objection Over-Ruled

ATLANTA, Jan. 18—(UP)—Two Georgia legal experts said late yesterday that they know of no legal objections to Negro stars Jackie Robinson and Roy Campanella playing for the Brooklyn Dodgers in exhibition games here April 8-9-10.

The Ku Klux Klan has raised the only protest to the Negro pair's participation against the Atlanta crackers.

"Georgia has laws dealing with segregation in the school system, transportation, intermarriage and such," said state attorney-general Eugene Cook. "But I know of no laws that forbid Negroes playing baseball against whites."

Atlanta city attorney Jack Savage said that there was no city ordinance against Negroes and whites playing baseball together.

RECORD TO Mc KENLEY

SYDNEY, Australia, Jan. 18—(UP)—Herb McKenley of Jamaica, world quarter-mile record holder, bettered the existing mark for 300 yards today by speeding the distance in 30.4 in an exhibition track meet.

'Short One' Costs $100 In Local Court Session

By J. L. Merritt

A drink and a half may not be much whiskey for some people, but that amount was enough to cost Milton Askew, Jr., former University student, $100 and costs in the Chapel Hill Recorder's court yesterday.

Askew was arrested last Nov. 21, the night following the Duke-Carolina game, for drunken driving. He pleaded not guilty to the charge and requested jury trial.

Askew's case occupied the entire morning session of the court and various witnesses testified on his behalf. All the witnesses testified that they had seen Askew on several occasions during the night and he appeared perfectly sober to them.

But police officer R. L. Blackwood, who made the arrest, declared Askew had a half-pint of whiskey in his possession when arrested, and was unable to drive straight. Askew testified that he had only taken a drink and a half of whiskey all night, and that he was perfectly sober when arrested.

The jury returned a verdict of guilty after deliberating and Judge Henry Whitfield fixed the amount of the fine. Askew gave notice of appeal to the Superior court in Hillsboro.

The Askew case was the only trial completed yesterday morning, and the jury was still tied up over the case of Joshua Brewer, Negro, charged with drunken driving and resisting arrest, late yesterday afternoon.

New Blizzard Heads For Plains States

CHICAGO, Jan. 18—(UP)—A new blizzard with gale winds and drifting snow bore down on the plains states today while sleet storms glazed highways and disrupted transportation in the Midwest and Southwest.

Heavily-drifting snow cut visibility to near-zero in South Dakota and blocked roads in the western part of the state. Western Nebraska and Iowa braced for the new blow.

A bitter cold wave accompanied the storm and temperatures plunged below zero in the North. The outlook was for readings of 20 to 30 below in the Dakotas and Minnesota by tomorrow.

The blizzard struck in areas battered by three others almost without let up since the new year opened. It was expected to heap new snow on the huge drifts already piled up across the plains.

Margaret Truman Asks Contributions

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18—(UP)—Margaret Truman asked the people today to contribute to the annual March of Dimes fight against infantile paralysis in memory of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The president's daughter interrupted her inaugural week activities to take part in the March of Dimes broadcast from the White House. Sen. Margaret Chase Smith (R.-Me.), Author Betty Smith of Chapel Hill, N. C., and actress Shirley Temple also spoke.

Hedgepeth Clarifies Medicine Statement

In an attempt to clarify his incomplete statements appearing in Saturday's Daily Tar Heel, Dr. E. McG. Hedgepeth stated that he thought the $25 American Medical association assessment was probably not the best way to combat the evils of federal medicine, but that a strong positive program by physicians themselves was the best answer to the problems of the economics and distribution of medical care.

Positions Open For Alaska Jobs

Openings for qualified single men for aircraft communication posts in Alaska at starting salaries of $3,718 a year are now open, Joe Galloway, director of the University placement service, announced yesterday.

Successful applicants will be assigned to airways communication stations operated by the Civil Aeronautics administration in Alaska. Men selected will be in line for eventual promotion to higher-grade jobs paying up to $6,540 a year. Additional earnings can be made by working overtime.

Basic qualifications for the job include the ability to transmit and receive Morse code at 30 words per minute, touch typewrite at the rate of 35 words per minute, and have 18 months of aeronautical communications experience or the equivalent in education and experience.

Additional information may be secured from the placement service office, room 207, South building.

WSSF Drive Nets Campus $2,306

By Charlie Gibson

The eight-day World Student Service fund drive here on campus netted $2,306.71 for the international student charity, according to final tabulations released yesterday by Dick Cordon, local WSSF finance chairman.

Gordon broke down the overall tally to show that relief aid for students in war-devastated countries was raised during the past week in the following ways: Door-to-door solicitations and personal contributions, $901.73; "Miss Pay-Off" beauty contest, $771.62; "Take a Foreign Student to Dinner," $329.23; daffy auction, $298.03; and basketball predictions, $5.10.

Dortch Warriner, chairman of the fund-raising campaign sponsored on campus by the Council for Religion in Life, stated yesterday that "Although the amount of this year's WSSF contribution is less than last year's we credit part of the shortcoming to the fact that cash collections were pressed in preference to pledged funds which students last year paid on year-round installments.

To facilitate bookkeeping since the drive had to be cancelled from the fall as originally scheduled to this winter quarter, arrangements now have been that the smaller number of pledges this time will at least be paid up properly and promptly around Feb. 1.

"We WSSF workers do appreciate the co-operation that the student body, the faculty, and the Chapel Hill merchants gave for what we consider a very worthy cause," Warriner concluded.

The official drive ended Tuesday night with the daffy auction in Hill hall at which attractive coed dates and faculty slaves were sold to the highest bidder. The record price bid as a charity contribution came when a football autographed by Tar Heel players brought $38.

Warriner added that although the drive proper is finished for another year, WSSF contributions will still be accepted in the YMCA office at any time.

UNC Debaters Issue Schedule

Tentative debates with the University of Georgia, Duke, Elon, Wake Forest, East Carolina Teachers college and Georgetown, have been scheduled for this quarter by the University Debate Council, Earl Fitzgerald, president of the council, announced yesterday.

University debating teams are expected to visit Duke, Elon, Wake Forest, the United States naval academy, American university, and William and Mary. A University debating team is also expected to attend the South Atlantic Forensic tournament at Hickory on March 3.

Tryouts for a freshmen debate team will be held this afternoon at 3:30 in Graham Memorial. Bill Bostic, Jack Rock, Don Davis, William Prince, Bill Dawson and Jack Greene are especially requested to be present at the tryouts.

Also all upper classmen who are interested in trying out for the debate team are invited to attend the tryouts.

Comptroller Hits Hoover Committee

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(UP) Comptroller Lindsay C. Warren tonight blasted the Hoover commission on government reorganization for a plan calling for sharp cuts in the staff and functions of his General Accounting Office.

A source close to the commissioner retorted promptly that the GAO accounting system is "archaic and senseless" and the logical answer is to chop down its employee force.

The GAO is an arm of Congress which audits all government spending accounts and is known as Congress' "Watchdog of the Treasury."

Speed Demons To Slow Down For New Light

Safety Fixtures Start Tomorrow

Tomorrow marks the deadline for local speed demons who have been using Franklin street as a race track the past few years, Grey Culbreth, superintendent of utilities, announced yesterday.

Culbreth said the two stop lights now under construction in front of the post office and the intersection of Franklin and Henderson streets will be completed and in operation after today.

City workers have been pounding away at the Franklin street cement this week, and motorists have been forced to slow down to an unaccustomed low speed while passing the torn-up pavement and workers.

Both motorists and pedestrians will benefit from the new light system, Culbreth said, but the biggest benefit will be received by the pedestrians.

No longer will people crossing Franklin street have to dodge wildly around the streams of U-turning cars. The stop lights will halt traffic, both on Franklin and Henderson streets, while walkers cross the streets. And motorists will have a chance to turn from Henderson street into Franklin street without having to wait for an open space between the cars on Franklin street.

Pledge Cards To Be Signed

New students who entered Carolina for the first time this quarter will meet tonight in the Men's council room, second floor Graham Memorial, for the purpose of signing Honor code pledge cards, Page Harris, chairman of the Men's council, announced yesterday.

As there are approximately 100 new students, students whose last names begin with A-L will come at 7 o'clock, and the remaining number will come at 7:30. The signing of the pledge cards is required of all new students, so students are requested to be present at the designated time so that the matter can be expedited.

Honor council members Page Harris, Charlie Smith, Chuck Northend, and Bruce Sanborn will be present to explain the Honor code and the functioning of the Honor council, and to answer any questions asked by the students.

CHARLIE LOUDERMILK

New President Of IFC Group Is Loudermilk

Young Is Named Vice-President

Charlie Loudermilk, junior from Atlanta, Ga., was elected president of the Interfraternity Council in special elections at the council's regular meeting this week.

Loudermilk replaces Jack Thompson, Sigma Chi, the retiring president, Thompson and Loudermilk had done considerable work together prior to the election, and both attended the National IFC meeing in New York this fall.

The new IFC head is also president of Chi Phi fraternity and a member of the University party steering committee.

Others elected to executive positions on the IFC are Ted Young, vice-president; Bob Montgomery, secretary; and Jim Johnson, treasurer. Young is a member of Phi Gamma Delta. Montgomery is a Chi Psi, and Johnson, a KA.

Elections for positions on the IFC court were not held, but are scheduled for the meeting next week.

Loudermilk, after his election, said he hoped he would be able "to continue the fine work which Jack Thompson has already done in the IFC. It is our goal to build the Interfraternity council into a stronger unit to promote greater cooperation and good will among fraternities at Carolina."

Retiring officers of the IFC besides Thompson are Bill White, vice-president; Joe McCloud, secretary; and Ted Young, treasurer.

Dr. Nash to Speak At VPI Discussion

Dr. Arnold Nash, head of the University department of religion, will be one of several outstanding religious leaders heading discussions during Religious Emphasis at Virginia Polytechnic institute in Blacksburg, Jan. 23-26.

A committee of 100 students and faculty members have planned the program, which will include group meetings, discussions, programs in local churches and a display of religious books.

Robert Frost Will Lecture In Hill Hall

Poet Sponsored By English Dept.

Robert Lee Frost, internationally known distinguished American poet, will give a free public lecture tonight at 8 o'clock in Hill hall. This is a return visit for Mr. Frost, as he spoke here last year and several years ago.

Frost arrived in Raleigh yesterday morning, and will be in Chapel Hill until Sunday.

The lecture is being sponsored by the English department, and its head, Dr. Clifford P. Lyons, is host to Frost during his stay here. He will meet with the creative writing classes of Charles Eaton tomorrow and discuss writing problems and techniques.

Poet Frost has received almost every honor that can be bestowed upon a poet, and has been awarded the Pulitzer prize four times—more often than any other poet. He has received many honorary degrees and has been associated with many colleges in his long career as a teacher and poet.

Recently published works of Frost's are "Steeplebush," and two book-length poems entitled "Masque of Reason," and "Masque of Mercy," dealing with the import and interrelations of justice and mercy. Designed to complement one another, the two poems are longer and more extended than other work of Frost.

Phi Meet Splits Over Bill to Ban Coed Drink Rule

The audience at the Philanthropic assembly meeting Tuesday night was in favor of lifting the ban on coed drinking in fraternity houses, although Phi members defeated a resolution to that effect.

Phi members defeated the resolution by a margin of two votes. When the audience was polled for its opinion, the motion received a majority of one vote.

Bill Duncan, leading proponent of the resolution, called for the end of a system that permits coeds to make spectacles of themselves on U. S. highway 15 but prohibits moderate social drinking in fraternity houses. He pointed out that drinking is an age-old social which even Puritan John Alden recognized. Duncan stated that heavy whisky traffic has necessitated the construction of a non-curved highway from Chapel Hill to Durham.

Helen Bouldin, Herbert Yates, Peter Burks, and Douglas Carter argued against the bill.

Miss Bouldin declared, "It just wouldn't look right," for girls to drink. Yates warned about the possibility of an "unfortunate incident" if the ban were lifted and reported that in a poll he found 66 per cent of the coeds and 85 per cent of the men opposed to removal of the restriction.

In an executive session the Phi instructed the Ways and Means committee to invite Dr. Frank Graham to speak to the assembly.

Two Men's Council Vacancies To Be Filled By Board Today

ELEVEN OF THE TWELVE top Communists in America, on trial for advocating the overthrow of the government, pose for photographers in an anteroom of the Federal building in New York. The twelfth, William Z. Foster, Communist national chairman, is suffering from a heart ailment and could not attend. Seated (l. to r.) are: Robert Thompson, chairman of the New York state Communist organization, Henry Winston, former head of the Young Communist league; Eugene Dennis, general party secretary; Gus Hall, former head of the Ohio Communist party, and John Williamson, now under a deportation warrant and known as the, "No. 4 Communist in the U. S." Standing (l. to r.) are: Jack Stachel, director of the party "agitation propaganda" division; Irving Potash, vice-president of the Fur and Leather Workers union, under deportation warrant; Carl Winter, director of the Michigan organization; Benjamin Davis, Jr., member of the New York City council; John Gates, editor of the Daily Worker, and John Gilbert Green.

Appointments Will Be Made By President

Group Is Composed Of Party Leaders

A tri-partisan selection board will meet this afternoon to choose candidates for two vacancies on the Men's Honor council, Student council Chairman Bill Mackie announced yesterday.

The board will present its slate of eligible candidates to Jess Dedmond, president of the student body, late this afternoon, and Dedmond will choose two men to fill the junior and graduate school vacancies on the Men's council. Dedmond's appointments must be confirmed by the Student legislature tonight.

The board, meeting at 2 o'clock in Graham Memorial, will be composed of the chairmen of each of the three campus political parties and one other representative of each party, and the chairmen of the Student and Men's councils as non-voting members.

In addition to Mackie, those sitting on the board will be Page Harris, chairman of the Men's council; Gran Childress, Student party chairman; Joe Leary, University party chairman; and Banks Talley, Campus party chairman. The three other party representatives had not yet been chosen late yesterday.

All persons who consider themselves qualified to a seat on the Men's Honor council and are either members of the junior class or in graduate school, are urged to appear before the tripartisan selection board by board members.

C. A. E. Winslow Talks to Audience On Public Health

The present day trend in public health is toward concentration on social and economic environment, said Dr. C. E. A. Winslow, international authority on public health and editor of the Journal of Public Health, in a public lecture in Memorial hall, last night.

He spoke under the auspices of the University School of Public Health and the Carolina forum.

In tracing the development of public health, Dr. Winslow explained that the physical environment was the first interest in connection with public health and sanitation. This interest led to education in personal hygiene for the individual human being. For the last 20 years, therefore, great emphasis has been placed on such phases as child welfare and the prevention and treatment of tuberculosis, veneral diseases and similar maladies, he said.

Dr. Winslow, former professor of public health in Yale university, discussed the challenges of public health in the future. He cited poverty, medical care and social security problems as examples of the major challenges of today and the future.

Worst Cold Wave Batters Midwest

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—(UP)—Frigid winds up to 100 miles an hour forced 20,000 school children home at Detroit today as the winter's worst cold wave spread over the nation.

The wind tore down power lines at Detroit, crippling schools, and elsewhere across southeastern Michigan.

Gusts up to 75 miles an hour uprooted trees and knocked down power and telephone lines in Ohio.

The gales slammed into Canada, leaving behind a big storm system that had kicked up a tornado in Mississippi, a blizzard in the Dakotas and heavy sleet and snow in the midlands.

GAR Head Won't Go To Inauguration

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan 19—(UP)—Theodore A. Penland, 99, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, tonight reluctantly canceled his plan to attend President Truman's inauguration despite last-minute assurances that he would be warmly received in Washington.

Mixed Agenda Will Confront Solons Tonight

Two bills concerning reorganization of the Carolina forum, non-partisan speakers organization, and one appropriation bill for the campus March of Dimes drill will occupy the time of the Student legislature tonight.

The legislature, meeting at 7:30 in Di hall, New West building, will also vote on two presidential appointments to fill vacancies in the Men's Honor council. President Jess Dedmond will make the appointments before the meeting tonight from a list to be approved by a tri-partisan selection board meeting this afternoon.

Ed Joyner and Dougald McMillan, co-chairmen for the March of Dimes drive on campus, said yesterday that a bill would be presented to the legislature to request an appropriation from student funds for the drive. The campus goal is one dollar from each student in the University.

Both forum bills deal with reorganization of the speaking group.

Mumford Will Talk To Meeting Monday

Lewis Mumford, noted city planning expert and architectural critic, will address an open meeting of the North Carolina chapter of the American Institute of Architects on Monday at 11 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

Freshman Group Will Make Plans, Elect Officers

Program plans for the remainder of the year will be made by the YMCA Freshman council when it meets tonight at 7 o'clock in the YMCA, Bob Barrus, secretary announced yesterday.

Permanent officers, to replace the temporary officers who served during the fall quarter, will also be elected at the meeting, and problems relating to the series of discussions to be held this year will be worked out.

The freshmen council will sponsor a ping-pong tournament among the freshmen of the University, Duke, Wake Forest, and State. Other projects which will be of service to the freshmen class will be planned later this year.

Y Junior Council To Hear Speaker

Mrs. Walter Spearman, member of the Y advisory board, will speak at the first meeting of the Y Junior council tonight in Horace Williams lounge at 7 o'clock.

Maria Davis, vice-president of the YW, will welcome the new council members and a brief history of the Y organization and development will be given by Mary Anne Daniel, president.

Mrs. Spearman will discuss the history and organization of the YWCA on the Carolina campus, its correlation with other campus organizations and affairs, and its significance.

THE WORLD IN BRIEF

May Call Judge

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(UP) — Eleven U. S. Communist leaders, charging that the jury system here has been "captured by Wall street and Park avenue," said today they might call to the witness stand the senior federal judge of this district to prove their point.

Music for the Millions

By Don Maynard

"A course designed to take the stuff-shirt out of classical music" is the way former Metropolitan Opera star Norman Cordon describes "Listening to Music," non-credit music appreciation course to be offered for the first time here tomorrow evening.

Invariably, when the average person is asked why he dislikes opera or the classics, his answer is, "It's too high-hat," or, "I can't understand opera." It is with these two stumbling blocks in mind that several members of the music world have formed a class for adults, to "initiate the average music-lover into the mysteries of opera and symphony."

Beginning tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, the course will consist of 10 weekly meetings to be held in the choral room of Hill hall. David Serrins, graduate student in music, will serve as instructor. Cordon, director of the North Carolina music program, and William Newman of the music department will be present at the first meeting.

Opening the 10-week series tomorrow, an informal discussion of "Verdi," to be presented by the Metropolitan opera Saturday, will be held. The story, music, composer's life, elements, problems and the history of the opera will be covered. In addition, the elements, forms and composers' lives of symphonies to be heard will be explained. The latter study will be in conjunction with the North Carolina symphony.

A regular feature of each meeting will be the use of recordings to illustrate lectures, and a question and answer period.

Interested persons may register in advance at the University Extension division in Swain hall. There will be an enrollment fee of $10.

Boomer from Candler

Mountain Man Arnold Wilson Will Run Rendezvoas Revels

By Rita Adams

The man who will hold the reins in the redecorated Rendezvous room this quarter will be Arnold Wilson, a real mountain boomer from Candler—"just six miles from Asheville." He plans to open the room tomorrow night and also help initiate the annual March of Dimes drive on campus by collecting contributions at the door.

Arnold—beg your pardon, he had "druther be called Butch"—is really a family man at heart what with a wife, a dog, two cats, and a house out near Carrboro. In fact, Melinda, his wife, works as a business partner and makes sandwiches to be sold at the new bar. This home-fixed food plus an open fire constitute Butch's plans for creating a comfortable and inviting atmosphere in the Rendezvous room.

Three of Butch's co-workers also hail from the hills of this state. They are Allen Thompson, Joe Bassett, and Harrison Tisdale, all of whom are from Asheville. Skip Hoyle breaks the record by claiming Chapel Hill as his home.

Having done work in the Rendezvous room for "better than a year," Arnold is a junior and plans to go into production management work when he finishes school.

At Long Last

Pneumatic drills hammered on Franklin street yesterday as the Town of Chapel Hill began installation of a specially designed, $1,000 traffic signal on the post office corner.

It was about time. For years the corner of Franklin and Henderson streets has been the town's chief traffic hazzard for both motorists and pedestrians. Particularly with the increase in the car-owning population of the University since 1945 has the U-turn corner presented a problem in snarled traffic and pedestrian safety. At least two persons have been struck by automobiles there, and its total of dented fenders can only be estimated.

When the new stop light is put into operation students and towns people may, for the first time since horse and buggy days, be able to cross from the University campus to the post office without endangering their lives.

Pensive Publius

More Collard Greens

Definition: Success is the favorable termination of a venture. From this it was logical to Publius that some of his campus activities are going to be extremely successful in the eyes of their ill-wishers. The lives of many of them are already in the process of terminating in so far as usefulness to the campus is concerned. It occurred to Publius that these hard times for campus activities might be a success for him too. Clearly some campus activities serve no purpose other than to bring together a select group of heroes, zeroes and Neroes with no practical purpose other than the depopulation of the arboretum and the commerce reading room down at the Phi Beta House. Such groups deserve to die. Those organizations containing sound, workable principles will be recognized by the interested student, and on a practical foundation they can be built into groups like those that have held the attention and respect of the campus in the past. Now is the time for this evaluation.

The sincere but vague appeals for new members for campus activities have been like a coed in an overcoat—not enough is seen to arouse interest. New members must be won by convincing them that the hours invested in a given campus activity will furnish valuable experience and information for later years as well as contribute to campus life and advocate some worthy ideal.

Publius knew that only one thing can prevent campus activities from being like the confident boxer who went to Harry's the night before his big fight—beer today, gong tomorrow. This is to make a pragmatic outlook inseparable from the more common theoretical or idealistic views. Else the organization's thinking will spiral up until it attains a height exceeding even that of a coed's nose, and its usefulness will become effete.

It never was easy, it never will be easy to accomplish anything of great or fundamental significance, but the inner satisfaction derived from such accomplishment should prompt us all to lend a hand in the reformation of campus activities. Their problems are human problems, and their solution is complicated by the fact that humans must resolve them. Complete reorganization must come first to remove the disinterested element that now poisons the usefulness that the groups may have. Then, while preserving the ideals of the organization, a simple program advancing its aims must be begun. What campus activities need, then, is a simpler diet of collard greens and corn bread instead of the beer and pretzel fare upon which they now exist.

These Days

Forerunner Of Socialism

By George E. Sokolsky

Of all of us in Petrograd in October, 1917, John Reed was most stirred by the Bolshevik revolution. He wrote a little book, "Ten Days that Shook the World," in which he said in 1919:

"It is still fashionable, after a whole year of the Soviet government, to speak of the Bolshevik insurrection as an 'adventure'. Adventure it was, and one of the most marvelous mankind ever embarked upon, sweeping into history at the head of the toiling masses, and staking everything on their vast and simple desires. . ."

John Reed did not live long enough to discover that the ten days that shook the world produced not freedom but slavery. Many followed Reed into Russia. Young men and women, in particular young intellectuals, viewing the inequalities of the world in which they live and from which they benefit, often confuse the word for the act, the promise for the deed.

And so for 31 years, the vast propagandistic organization of international Communism has been focusing attention on the faults of every country. In the United States, young people found inequalities, discriminations, prejudices which disturbed them: in fact, among the rich, the socially elect, those benefiting by every advantage in life, young men and women who in the 1890's and early 1900's might have gone into reform movements or social work, found an outlet in fighting against the efforts of the depression, against the inequalities of opportunity.

They joined what became Communist front organizations. A young man I know first joined various organizations favorable to more popular movements in China and other Far Eastern countries. He soon found himself involved in movements against discrimination of Negroes. He found that his huge contributions (he is a millionaire) were acceptable everywhere. His counsel, his education, his personality were always welcome.. Nearly all the people he met on one committee were on another—and they were an interesting crowd, writers, poets, artists, revolutionists. He is now a bigshot in American Communism.

Did he drift? Maybe. Maybe he drifted as a boy drifts into any gang. But there is more to it than that—much more.

But here is what happened not to the particular young man I have in mind but to others like him. They got jobs in various departments of government. They fell into a pattern. They produced an altogether new form of administration, one as closely modeled on the Russian pattern as was possible in the United States. They used a new language; wrote new history books; established a new concept of economics for our country.

They used their power to build here the welfare state—a state in which by taxation, by administrative law, by decrees issued by administrative agencies, the middle class would be driven into the proletariat, and the proletariat would become the spoils of labor unions which they controlled by gaining the administrative positions in them.

While the war helped them to move into important positions, they nevertheless were not sufficiently efficient to succeed altogether. It is a miracle that they did so little, for the revolutionary forces let loose in 1917 were moving swiftly and effectively throughout the world. They failed in the United States, but the resistance of the American people was being worn down. A new generation appeared which had come under their influence. It could not accept Russia not even Communism—but it did not possess the background, the knowledge, the ideals to resist the welfare state—the inevitable forerunner of socialism.

Praise for Webster Players

'Macbeth', 'Hamlet' Top-Notch

By Dr. George Coffin Taylor

Chapel Hill crowds feasted their eyes and ears on the afternoon and evening of January 17 as they seldom have a chance to do in the field of the major arts. After witnessing "Macbeth" and "Hamlet" performed all the way from Madam Modjeska's Lady Macbeth in 1897 to Maurice Evans as Hamlet, I got many new revelations of character and lines in Margaret Webster's production in Memorial Hall sponsored by the Carolina Playmakers.

From "Macbeth" the audience got a sense of grandeur and sublimity in crime to be got nowhere else, together with a sense of the inevitability and splendour of the moral law, "Here upon this bank and shoal of time," risking the life hereafter, we get what's coming to us. The splendid orchestral accompaniment of Shakespeare's blank verse to the deeds of his people were rendered superbly by these young devotees because, I fancy, they realize the perfection of the utterance. And the modern musical accompaniment with just enough bagpipe in it written by Lehman Engel, gave the natural Scotch accent to perfect it.

Joseph Holland as Macbeth certainly satisfied me. His amazing physical energy, his majestic bearing, his peculiarly clear sympathetic enunciation pitched to all quarters of the auditorium, his sudden fits and starts, his swift shifts from emotional breakdown to splendid self-control gave his performance perfection and finish.

David Lewis as Macduff, who was in the cards to kill Macbeth, gave flexibility and power to a character stiff and rhetorically moral by tradition. The audience was with him 100 percent when he put Macbeth out of his misery. Carol Goodner played Lady Macbeth under great disadvantages in Membrial Hall due to the bad acoustics and uncomfortable wooden benches. Like Modjeska, she played the part, not of a Medea of great physical proportions, but of the slight woman who lived on her nerves instead of her muscles. Being good to look at, she was, of course, misinterpreted by a certain percentage of students of low mentality and bad taste, when she kissed her husband. Miss Goodner can, when she wishes, speak her lines with great power, and could have been heard more perfectly if she had done this in all cases. The actor playing Macbeth can take care of himself, but some Lady Macbeths have run away with the show, just as the drunken porter has a tendency to do when admirably acted, as this afternoon by Carl Don.

Arthur O'Connell put across the part of Banquo, the most difficult character to get sympathetic appreciation from an audience. Altogether, the play was successful. The costuming, with its delightful color and variety of background, was beautifully designed by Wolfgang Roth. The witch scenes were played grotesquely and admirably by Dion Allen, Janet Ward and Carl Don.

The omission of lines and passages were most judicious. I missed three lines which could have been so serviceable for us today. Says Malcolm to Macduff, trying him out, "Nay, Had I the power, I should pour the sweet milk of concord into hell, uproar the universal peace, confound all unity on earth."

* * *

Keeping a large audience, even an academic audience, on the highest emotional and intellectual levels for three and a half hours is an immensely difficult task these days. But this Miss Webster's company certainly succeeded in doing on the night of Jan. 17.

Superficial readers of "Hamlet" always delight in displaying their wisdom by saying at the performance, 'tis is not exactly my interpretation," just as the greatest authorities have never agreed on exactly what he is like. The actors have generally given their own personal impressions of his character. Alfred Ryder gave us an exceptionally creditable performance as Hamlet. He emphasized the extraordinary sensitivity of the main character side by side with his deadly irony and still more daring physical bravery in crises. He spoke his verse and prose lines with simplicity and clearness, and held the attention of the audience even in his philosophical ruminations.

The parts of King Claudius, villainous murderer of his brother, Ophelia, a frail and delicate girl, and Polonius, loquacious and tedious old father, are exceedingly difficult to play as the audience of today takes none too kindly to them. I have never seen another actor give so much dignity, charm and subtle malignity to Claudius as did Joseph Holland, and I have never seen Ophelia or Polonius as successfully presented by Virginia McDowall and Arthur O'Connell. David Lewis managed successfully to take the part of Horatio out of the usual mere foil to Hamlet and gave the role fresh vitality. Lee Payant gave us a convincing Laertes. Frederick Hunter acted the affected courtier, Osric, a most difficult part, to perfection. He could succeed in a far more elaborate role.

Carol Goodner looked her part and put it across with power, even when she introduced new stage business by drinking the poisoned liquor with a clear beforehand knowledge that it was fatal. All the subordinate parts were played without a slip.

Altogether, this was a successful production as was proved by the spontaneous and prolonged applause.

Passing Sentence

Not in Nevada, Virginia, Not in New York

By Jonathan Marshall

It was sure nice of Margaret Webster to bring "Hamlet" and "Macbeth" to Chapel Hill. It was also swell of the company to put on two shows for us, and a lot of us appreciate it real much.

Ya know, it was pretty swell of the University to put so many tickets on sale to the general public—and especially to high school kids. No kidding, some of them probably had never seen Shakespeare before, and it was a real good chance for them to get some education. It's certainly gratifying to see such a hunger for knowledge.

Miss Webster and Company undoubtedly had much the same feeling that actors in Shakespeare's own time had while on stage. Enthusiastic, is the only word to characterize the afternoon audience that witnessed "Macbeth," but what it was enthusiastic about this columnist couldn't discover.

Sitting high in the balcony of Memorial Hall, midst cokes, coughs, whispers, clattering seats, constant motion, and giggles, oh yes, high school students too, it was hard to hear the actors. That is an understatement, it was impossible.

This columnist has had the pleasure of watching stage productions in many places including Nevada, Colorado, Virginia, Pennsylvania, and New York City, and never before has he seen an audience that even approached this one in rudeness.

One boy in the balcony got up and went over to whisper to some friends—not once, but three or four times. Two girls nearby spent most of the afternoon talking about their last night's dates. One row back some girls made the ice in their cokes last throughout the whole second act. A large part of the balconyites returned to their seats late for the second act.

It is hard enough to hear in Memorial Hall, but when audiences are so completely rude, it is impossible.

Write Away

No Deals or Double-Crosses

Editor:

In answer to the article by Jim Southerland concerning "Practical Considerations" in student politics, it seems to me that he states a popular misconception about the purposes of student government and student responsibility.

Many legislators, and others, think that action is all that is necessary. They do not quibble about the means of attaining that action. House trades, deals, double-crosses — anything is acceptable just so long as action is taken.

Action, in the form of good, sound laws, is desirable. Effective and efficient government is important. So is training in politics. But Student Government should also mold honest, courageous, and sincere leadership. Student Government, as all government, is created for the benefit of the people who live under it and not for the political purposes of the leaders. Students connected with their government should set examples of clean politics, and log-rolling is not clean.

Means determine the ends, and corrupt means will inevitably bring corrupt ends. We want action but we want action honestly arrived at, action for the benefit of all of the students, action of which we can be proud.

I am a legislator also. I have pet projects or ideas which I would like to see enacted, but if they get enacted it will be on the merits of the principles involved and not because I was pledged votes for my bill in return for my vote for others' bills whether they be good or bad. Good government cannot be achieved except through honesty and devotion of effort to the needs of the student body.

More on the Gates Affair

Editor:

The incident of Wednesday nite shows conclusively that Communism is contrary to the true order of animal nature (in which man is certainly included). While the purpose of Communism is to better the lot of the proletariat, to make political, economic and social equality a reality—the reception that Mr. Gates received demonstrates that the common man is unworthy of these efforts; that he is mentally immature; nay he is stupid beyond belief; political responsibility, and certainly beyond social and economic equality. His actions during the last century indicate that he has been allotted too much of a political voice. We must return to a system of government in which the fatuities of the common man cannot jeopardize, by merely expressing his vaporous will through the unrestricted use of the ballot, the well being of the man of substance. It is inherent in nature that the strong shall dominate the weak; this is clearly embraced in Darwin's theory of evolution, and is quite obvious in the life of the jungle, where the laws of nature operate unhindered. This is also bountifully illustrated by page after page of scripture. The reaction of the common man to such "liberal" movements, like decision, polarized or otherwise Therefore, I urgently appeal to all men of intellect and character to act to reverse this unnatural movement, which takes government and property from the hands of those who are best endowed, and places them in the grasp of the incomprehendible rabble.

Tar Heels, Indians Battle In Loop Test Here Tonight

Carolina Favored Over Virginians In Loop Tussle

By Zane Robbins

William and Mary's up-and-coming Indians will storm into Woollen gym at 8 o'clock tonight for a Southern conference bout with the Tar Heels. A freshman game featuring N. C. State and Carolina will precede the feature tilt at 8.

Coach Tom Scott has been drilling his boys hard all week in an effort to keep them at the peak they reached last week against a potent Washington and Lee quintet. The Tar Heels hit on a 44 per-cent accuracy mark from the floor in their 69-52 win over the Generals.

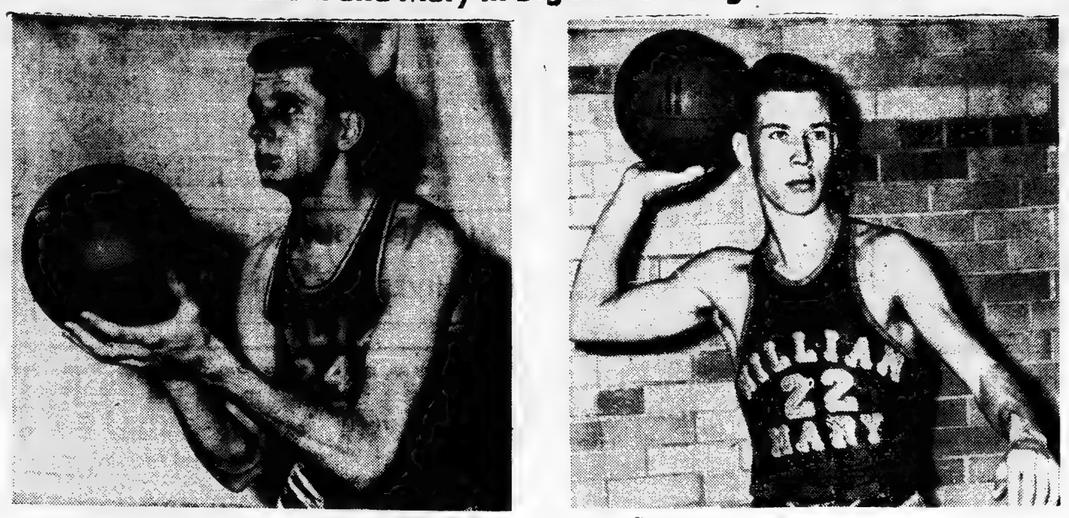
Defensive Measures

Offense has played second fiddle in Woollen drills this week, however, as Coach Scott has gone all out during the past few days to devise a Giermak-halter. Chet Giermak is the big boy in the Indians' offense and is currently pacing the Southern conference scorers. He tallied 45 points in a single game against Baltimore university earlier in the season.

Scott has been experimenting with various defensive styles this week, but it is expected that he will employ either a sliding zone or a straight zone against the point-happy Virginians. The Williamsburg Warriors are the scoringest gang in this section. In 19 outings they have rolled up 1,253 points, an average of 66 per game.

Balanced Attack

Giermak isn't the whole show as far as Coach Barney Wilson's crew is concerned, however. "Fuzz" McMillan, ace charity shot artist, is one of the best guards in the conference and teams well with Jere Bunting to give the Indians one of the best track-court combos in the loop.



Charlie Sokol, a former All-Southern performer at South Carolina, and Bob Holley at forwards give the Old Dominion cagers a formidable backboard combination.

Carolina fans may rest assured that tonight's tussle will not be William and Mary all the way. The Scottmen are "up" for this one in an attempt to better their loop standing.

Despite the potent scoring attack boasted by the Virginians, Carolina will hold a razor-thin edge in tonight's get-together on the basis of performances against mutual foes.

The Tar Heels blasted Washington and Lee, whereas the Indians eked out a narrow three-point victory over the Generals. VPI handed William and Mary a conference set-back, and Carolina lapped an eight-point defeat on the Gobblers.

Lead William and Mary in Big Battle Tonight in Woollen

CHET GIERMAK, left, and Jere Bunting, right, will be the leaders in the high-scoring offensive which William and Mary's Indians throw against the Tar Heel cagers tonight. Giermak is the top scorer in the Southern conference, while Bunting is the sparkplug of the attack with his dangerous set shots. Tap-off time is 8 o'clock for the important game in Woollen gymnasium.

Grid War Continues; AAC To Operate

CHICAGO, Jan. 19. — (UP) — The All-America conference ended all hope of peace in professional football today with flat announcement that it will "operate independently" next year.

The announcement, made after a two-day meeting of club owners, smashed hopes of a merger or an agreement with the older National Football league and meant that the costly pro football battle will continue.

Olympic Champ Joe Verdeur To Swim Here on La Salle Club

By Bill Burgess

Students at Carolina will have the opportunity this weekend of watching the performance of the fabulous swimming sensation, Joe Verdeur. Joe will be swimming on the team of the La Salle Explorers that meets the Tar Heels in Bowman Gray Pool on Saturday.

Verdeur, who is a breaststroke specialist, has broken the world breaststroke records 12 times and has two National Collegiate and six National AAU championships to his credit. He has established world's records over the 220-yd, 200-yd., and 200-meter distances in the man-killing breaststroke.

All Strokes Well

Joe, however, can swim all strokes equally well. This was evidenced when he broke the American record in the 300-yd. individual medley in the time of 3:22. This event is not recognized in most countries so there is no world record.

His present world record in the 200-yd. breaststroke is 2:14.7, an incredible performance. For his outstanding work, he was awarded the Outstanding Collegiate Swimmer award for 1948.

During the summer Joe made the American Olympic squad. He set an Olympic record in his specialty, but this was nine seconds below his world record. In December he placed third in the annual poll of sports writers for the outstanding amateur athlete in the country.

A Hard Worker

This handsome six-foot junior of the La Salle dental school is coached by Joe Kirk. Verdeur was a physical instructor in the Navy, and he now is going through college by stoking furnaces and using his GI rights.

Verdeur specializes in the butterfly version of the breaststroke, in which the arms are lifted out of the water and swept forward through the air. It is the most dramatic but also the most tiring motion in swimming. His loose shoulder joints enable him to propel his arms windmill fashion from the beginning of the race to the end—at a pace no one in the world has been able to match.

The 190-lb. champion is more than an outstanding swimmer, he is an outstanding young man. To quote the 1949 Swimming Guide, "He has a great personality, the genuine humility of a real champion, and is consequently extremely popular with competitors and coaches everywhere."

Justice Awarded Williams Trophy

NORFOLK, Va., Jan. 18.—(UP) — Notre Dame Coach Frank Leahy said tonight that his assistant, Ed (Moose) Krause, probably will take over as Athletic director at Notre Dame sometime this year.

Leahy said he hadn't been able to devote much time to his job as athletic director.

"Besides, I want to give more of my time to football from now on," the Notre Dame coach added.

Leahy flew here today for the Mid-winter Sports festival of the Norfolk Sports club. Another guest at the meeting was North Carolina Coach Carl Snavely, whose Southern Conference Tar Heels have signed to play Notre Dame this year.

Charlie Justice, All-American North Carolina tailback, was awarded the Leigh Williams Memorial trophy at the meeting as the outstanding player of the Southern Conference.

Washington Meet Shows Increasing Track Interest

By Frank Allston, Jr.

The Washington Evening Star's invitational indoor track meet in which Carolina participated last Saturday night went even further to prove that track is rapidly becoming a top rate spectator sport.

Better than 7,000 people packed the District of Columbia National Guard armory on Saturday to watch some of the nation's best collegiate and amateur tracksters in action. Included in the array of stars which the Star and the District AAU brought to the nation's capitol were eight members of this country's 1948 Olympic squad.

Foremost of course, was the upset Carolina's own 24-year old freshman Bill Albans accomplished in the high jump. Big Bill went over the top of the bar at 6 feet 5 inches to top Olympic high jumper Dave Albritton and set a new meet record. Southern conference Jack Moody tied for third in the same event at 6-2.

Tar Heels Finish Well

Several other Carolina boys finished well up near the top in their respective events, but the Tar Heels didn't capture any other of the top three positions.

Perhaps the most exciting race of the night was the mile run which found another favorite falling by the wayside. Browning Ross of Villanova, who did the distance in 4:13 last year, was expected to repeat, but lost out to Yale's George Wade in a close finish. Wade's winning time was 4:18.1.

In the two-mile run, Olympic star Fred Wilt, running under the colors of the University of Indiana, toured the 14 laps in 9:09 to whack almost half a minute off the record. Wilt and Curtis Stone, Shanahan Catholic Club of Philadelphia, fought for the lead most of the way, but Wilt ran away on the last two laps and almost lapped the tiring Stone.

Varsity Matmen Lose to State; Frosh Win In First '49 Matches

By Buddy Vaden

RALEIGH, Jan. 19—The North Carolina State wrestlers defeated the Carolina grapplers, 21-11 here tonight in the first Tar Heel match of the season. The Carolina freshmen won the preliminary match, 18-16.

State started the meet off with a bang as Frank Steed pinned Tar Heel Paul Edmundson, 121, in his first match of his varsity career, in 27 seconds of the third period. Bill Rickard followed the example set by Steed and decisioned Charlie Harless, 11-4 in the 128-pound classification.

In the 136 class, Wolfpack grappler Ruston Rudolph pinned Ed Turnley in 1:07 of the third period. Turnley was also wrestling varsity for his first time.

First Carolina Victory

Carolina scored for the first time in the 145 class when Carrol Fisher pinned Rubin Beal one minute and 49 seconds after their match had started. Fisher's effective holds were a body press and a chicken wing.

Phil Kemp closed the scoring gap as he turned in the second Tar Heel victory in the 155 class. Kemp decisioned John Poplin, 8-4.

State's Don Troxler, however, set the home club back on the winning path with a craddle pin of Ray Swiegart in 1:45 of the second period in the 165 group. Swiegart was wrestling in his second varsity match. He suffered a cracked rib in his first meet last year and was out for the remainder of the season.

Stoioff Wins

Charlie Musser, undefeated State heavyweight, downed Joe Augustine in the unlimited classification, 10-1 in their match. At the end of the first period both boys were still standing and it was not until midway in the second period that Musser scored.

Musser received two points for a take-down in the second frame and from that point on was never headed. Augustine was also fighting his initial match for

Religious Emphasis Meet To Be Led By Rabbi Rauch; Nine Talks Planned

Rabbi Rauch of the Temple Adath Israel in Louisville, Ky., member of the national Committee on Church and State, will lead one of the nine seminars during Religious Emphasis week, to be held Monday through Thursday, chairman Don Shropshire announced yesterday.

Rabbi Rauch, who is a member of the Executive committee of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, is also a member of the Mayor's Inter-Racial committee and an arbitrator between labor and management. After the first World war, he was a confidential government investigator of the food situation in Central and Eastern Europe.

A past president of the Hebrew Union College Alumni association and a member of the Board of Governors, Rabbi Rauch is the author of "The Hamburg Prayer Book," "The Meaning of Torah," and others. He is a 32 degree Mason, honorary life member of the Elks, and a member of the Rotary club.

Rabbi Rauch, who was born in Austria, graduated from the University of Cincinnati, and received his doctor's degree from the University of Chicago. The University of Kentucky awarded Rabbi Rauch an honorary doctor's degree, and he received his doctor of divinity at the Hebrew college in Cincinnati. He did further graduate work at Columbia university and Cambridge university in England.

The University got over 20 per cent of the funds recommended for N. C. institutions of higher learning by the State Budget commission for the 1949-51 biennum.

Michigan Movie Will Be Shown

The rugged natural beauty of Lake Michigan at all seasons of the year is depicted in the color movie, "Lakelore," to be shown at 8 o'clock this evening in the elementary school auditorium by the Chapel Hill Bird Club.

The movie is the second in a series of five being given by the club. Originally scheduled for the Pick theater, this and the remaining movies are being shown at the school because the theater is being turned into a store.

squad served notice that they will be a power both inside and on the cinders with their Washington performance.

Coach Jim Kehoe's Terps copped the Southern conference mile relay in the rather disappointing 3:29.4. The Maryland quartet of George McGowan, Paul Ostrye, Mario Salvanelli and the aging Ed Matthews took an early lead and led all the way although Carolina's Percy Flowers almost caught Matthews at the tape.

George Guilda, another Villanova performer, broke the meet record in the 600 with a fine 1:13.2 stint.

Jim Gehrdes, Penn State, came within a tenth of a second of setting a new world's indoor record in the 70-yard high hurdles as he sped the distance in 8.5 seconds to edge Georgetown's Billy Mitchell in that event. Carolina's Bob Morrow, picked fifth by the judges, was only a few steps behind the leaders in a closely packed finish.

In all the Star's big meet was considered a success. There were no serious mishaps or mix-ups that usually plaque a big meet. Everybody went in happy and they all left the same way even though there were quite a few disappointed losers.

Frosh Win, 18-16

Despite having to start off with a five point handicap, the Tar Baby grapplers turned in a 18-16 victory of the the Red and White frosh in a preliminary to the varsity match.

Jenkins of State won the 121 class by forfeit because the Tar Babies did not have a man who could weigh in at that weight.

Draft Suspension May Be Extended

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20—(UP)—The draft "holiday" may be extended for several months beyond March, sources close to the Defense department said today.

They based the prediction on a heavy rate of enlistments, which they said "overwhelmed" the Army during the first 10 days of January.

Defense Secretary James Forrestal released figures today showing that the armed forces had reached just about the total strength possible under the president's "tight" budget for fiscal 1950.

Total armed force strength as of Dec. 31 was 1,621,000. This consisted of 675,000 in the Army, 447,000 in the Navy, 411,000 in the Air Force and 88,000 in the Marines.

The Army is the only service which has found it necessary to draft men to fill its quota. Volunteers kept the others up to their limits.

The new budget, however, cut the Army ceiling from the 879,000 figure planned for to 675,000. Since this has been reached, the Army will be able to take men only to fill expiring enlistments for the next 18 months, unless Congress increases its funds in the meantime. Eighteen months would carry through the 1950 fiscal year ending June 30, 1950.

Defense officials said they had no data on the exact rate of expiring enlistments.

In December the Army called a draft holiday for February and March because it was getting all the men it needed through enlistments.

Well-informed sources said today the increasingly heavy rate of volunteering may cause that holiday to be extended for several months, though they added it would be premature to say it would continue until June 30, 1950.

YMCA Drive For Members Begins Feb. 1

Goal Is $5,000; Money to Be Split

The YMCA membership drive will begin Feb. 1, with its goal set at $5,000, Charlie Fox, Finance committee chairman, reported yesterday.

Money obtained from the drive will be split among sections of the campus three ways with $1,500 is earmarked to go to fraternities, $2,000 to dormitories and $1,500 to town men. Solicitations will be made by door-to-door canvassers, with the exception of men living in town. These town men will be asked to donate at the Y building. Money may be paid at the time the solicitator comes around, or pledged.

"All donors will receive membership cards and receive benefits of the YMCA throughout the world," Fox said. "This membership card indicates that the bearer endorses the purposes of the Y, identifies him as a bona fide student of faculty member of the University, entitles him to the courtesies of any and every Y in the world and entitles him to the privileges of a 'visiting member' in practically all city associations."

Gathering funds in the fraternity division will be Dave Schermerhorn and George Grover. In the dormitory divisions Miller, Nash and Whitehead, Henry Bowers; Steele, Old East, Old West and BVP, Jim Gwynn; upper quadrangle, Griffis Worthington; lower quadrangle, V.L. James; dorms A, B, C and Alexander, Bill Bostic and the quonset huts, Jim Goldstein. John Van Hecke will collect funds from the town men.

A supper will be held on the eve of the drive, Jan. 31, to which all solicitors are invited. Time and place of the supper will be announced soon.

Weather Bureau Issues Warning

CHICAGO, Jan. 20—(UP)—The weather bureau warned of a new blizzard bearing down on the Dakotas and Nebraska today as a mass of cold air settled over the nation.

The cold wave that brought sub-zero temperatures to north central states spread eastward, but was losing its bitter chill on the way. It was expected to reach the Atlantic coast tonight.

Temperatures moderated in the Midwest, but new snow fell in Iowa and Utah and the weather bureau warned of the approaching storm.

Entries Are Listed For Drama Festival

Twelve one-act plays have been entered to date in the original play division of the Carolina Dramatic association's festival contest to be held at Chapel Hill, April 6, 7, 8, and 9, John W. Parker, executive secretary of the state organization, announced yesterday. This contest will end tomorrow.

These new plays will be judged by professional writers to be selected soon. The winners of first, second and third places will be awarded $100, $50, and $25 as provided by the coveted Betty Smith Award given annually by the famous novelist and former playwright. Last year's winner, Ruth Groce, graduate student in dramatic art, is the present holder of the Kay Kyser dramatic scholarship.

Duncan Says Yackety Yack Is Completed

53rd Annual Has Gone to Printer

The 53rd annual Yackety Yack, "bigger and better," has been completely laid out and sent to the printer, Bill Duncan, Yack editor, announced yesterday.

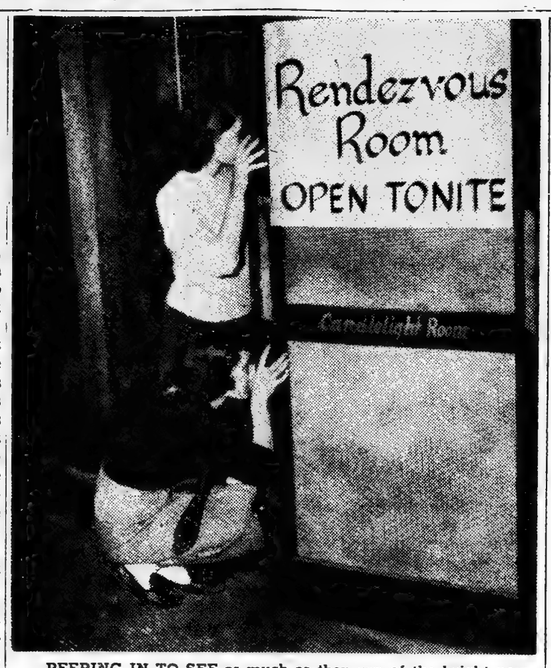
Frank Fleming, vice president of Lssiter press, printers of the Yack for nearly 15 years, was well-pleased at the promptness with which this year's edition was prepared. "This was the earliest I have received the final contents of the Yack since I have been printing it," he said. "Barring unforseen occurences the book will be ready for distribution May 15."

Climaxing approximately six months of preparations and work, the $46,000 Yack features an entirely new layout, a total of over 12,000 pictures and 28 pages of snapshots. An extra five pages over last year's edition was made possible by increasing the number of individual class pictures, officials said.

This year's book will include pictures of all class buildings, their department heads and deans, pictures of administrative officials and personalities of the finance division, and 14 pages devoted to a "takeoff" on the Yack, "The Last Yaff."

Compiled along the theme of "Yesterday and Today," the '49 annual compares earlier Carolina with the modern University. Editor Duncan remarked on the early completion, "Everyone on the staff has given me full cooperation. I would especially like to thank Bill Claybrook, Bert Kaplan, Alice Sharpe, Bill Steele, Jerry Wiess, Ted Fussell, Merrily Brooks, Larry Fox and Lewis Hicks of the University photo lab."

Approximately 10,000 manhours were spent getting the annual together in an attempt to give complete coverage of the campus. Initial preparations were started last June, though actual work began last September.



N. Y. Trustees Vote 86 Million

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 20—(UP)—The New York state university board of trustees today proposed to spend $86,077,700 during the next five years, to carry higher education within commuting distance of 95 per cent of the college-age youths in the state.

In its first annual report to the legislature, the 15-member board said the university needs $37,191,515 for 1949-50 expenses.

It asked for an immediate grant of $12,000,000 to start development of two medical centers, establish four-year and "community" colleges and provide graduate and research facilities. Another $25,191,515 will be necessary for scholarships, grants to New York city colleges, and operation of 31 institutions already under state control.

The report said the five-year program would increase the enrollment in state-sponsored colleges from the present 28,302 students to 64,000.

PEEPING IN TO SEE as much as they can of the bright new decorations in the Rendezvous room are Anita Gates (top) and Alice Sharpe. The room will open this evening with "Polio night" for the benefit of the campus March of Dimes drive.

'Polio Night'

Rendezvous Will Open With New Decorations

With the help of all the building department personnel and the handy-man crew of Graham Memorial, the Rendezvous room is nearing completion of its redecoration. According to the plans of Manager Arnold Wilson, the Room will open its doors to the public for the observance of "Polio night" at 8 o'clock this evening.

Instead of waiting until all of the details of the renovating job are taken care of, Wilson is going to open a few days before completion time so that the March of Dimes campaign can be begun in the Rendezvous room. Each person who enters the room tonight will be asked to contribute 50 cents to the annual polio fund.

The only thing missing for the opening night will be the new drapes, since the material of which they are to be made has not yet been delivered. Besides this delay, the indirect lightning is not quite finished. Other than these two things, Wilson said yesterday that the new decorations are ready for public inspection.

Literary Society Plans Open Meet On Monday Night

Chi Delta Phi, honorary literary society on campus, will hold its first open meeting of the quarter Monday night at 8 o'clock in the main lounge of Graham Memorial.

Prof. Walter Prichard Eaton, well known author and drama critic, will be the speaker of the evening. Eaton is guest lecturer in the department of dramatic art here this year. He came to Chapel Hill last October from his home in New Haven, Conn., where he was professor of playwriting at Yale university for 14 years.

Before going to Yale, Eaton was a professional writer and had been a lecturer on dramatic criticism in the Columbia university School of Journalism. Prior to that he was drama critic for the New York Sun and the American magazine.

Professor Eaton's best known full length play is "Queen Victoria," written with David Carb in 1923. Some of the theater books

Two More Names Are Added to List For Religion Week

Dr. Gordon Ellis, associate professor of education, and Dr. J. Neal Hughley, professor of social science and economics at North Carolina college in Durham, will lead seminars during Religious Emphasis week, which will be held Monday through Thursday.

Dr. Ellis, who will be co-leader of the seminar on vocational choice with Director of Placement Service Joseph Galloway, came to Chapel Hill this winter from Iowa State Teachers college where he was dean of men. He is at present engaged in state-wide field work in the area of guidance.

Dr. Hughley, who served as a pastor in Oklahoma and Kansas before taking his teaching job, will lead the seminar on Church and Socio-economic Systems.

Judge Warns Defense Lawyer for Reds To Weep 'In Moderation' Before Bench

NEW YORK, Jan. 20—(UP)—A federal judge suggested to a defense attorney at the trial of 11 U.S. Communist leaders today that if he must weep in the courtroom he do so in moderation.

Judge Harold R. Medina made the remark to George W. Crockett, Jr., of Detroit, Negro lawyer who broke into tears yesterday while protesting that there was discrimination against his race in picking federal juries in New York.

Crockett rose during an arguments to apologize for his "yesterday's emotional outburst."

"Yes," said Medina, dryly. "I think it is better when counsel refrain from weeping in the courtroom. You certainly wept and wept profusely in the sight of the law."

"I trust your honor does not forbid me to weep in the future, Crockett said.

"Oh," said Medina, "sometimes those emotions cannot be controlled."

"I appreciate your honor's permission to give vent to my emotions," Crockett said.

"In moderation, of course," Medina replied.

First of Legal Institute Series Will Begin Here This Evening

The first of four legal institutes to be held throughout the year under the sponsorship of the North Carolina Bar association will begin here this evening with registration at 5 o'clock at the Institute of Government building.

Director Albert Coates of the institute of Government estimated that the attendance will be about 75 lawyers and bar officials. The president of the Bar association, Richard E. Thigpen of Charlotte, said the association's committee on post-legal education has planned the institute to give lawyers and local bar officials practical aid on current problems such as advising clients on income tax returns, to help formulate basic courses in taxation for local city and county institutes, and for discussions of the recommendations of the Special Commission for the Improvement of Administration of Justice in North Carolina.

Justice Samuel J. Ervin of the Supreme Court of North Carolina; Francis J. Paschal, Durham, research director of the Special Commission for the Improvement of Administration of Justice, and Fred B. Helms, Charlotte, will lead a discussion on the recommendation of the commission following a luncheon session at the Carolina Inn at 1:30 Saturday afternoon.

Holsten Gets Council Post; Legislature Supports Drive

By Herb Nachman

The Student Legislature last night unanimously approved Jess Dedmond's appointment of Roy W. Holsten, junior from Glen Rock, N. J., to fill a Men's Honor council vacancy and passed a resolution supporting the campus March of Dimes drive.

Dedmond, who was not available for comment last night sent word to the Legislature that he had not decided who is to fill the second vacancy on the council.

Holsten's name, along with other applicants for the two posts, was submitted by a tri-partisan selection board composed of representatives of the various campus political parties and the Men's council.

The March of Dimes resolution, introduced by legislator Joe Leary reads in part, "That every student be hereby urged to contribute one dollar to the March of Dimes campaign in order to reach a goal of $7,500 for campus contributions."

Another resolution, introduced by Bill Prince, which passed the assembly was in the form of a protest regarding poor conditions in the Quonset huts. Prince pointed out that the resolution was drawn up to urge the administration to revoke an order which would vacate all but seven of the huts by Sunday. "This would cause extreme overcrowded conditions i nthe area," Prince said.

The only bill to pass the body last night was legislation designed to set up a special committee to study the reorganization of coed government. The bill provided for the committee to be appointed by the speaker of the Coed senate. It was introduced by legislator Patsy McNutt.

Three bills introduced by Joe Leary were referred to committee. The bills were:

1. A bill appropriating $1,100 to the Student Entertainment committee to alleviate the debt which the SEC incurred with Graham Memorial.

2. A bill which would make the elections board responsible for printing and proofing of all ballots in campus general elections.

3. A bill which would require the Elections board to appoint monitors to enforce the elections laws in and around the polls and to inform them of the procedure of holding the polls.

The Legislature approved Herb Mitchell's request that the bill defining and amending the Cam-

George Demas To Get Legion Award Of Valor

Cadet Capt. George Demas of the Air ROTC unit will be presented an Award of Valor in a special ceremony and review of the unit next Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Col. Bryon R. Switzer announced yesterday.

Demas will receive the award from Col. Harold L. Hardee, chairman of the North Carolina American Legion ROTC committee, in the auditorium of Murphy hall.

Prior to the awarding of the medal the unit will stage a full-dress review and inspection in honor of Col. Hardee and a special guest who will accompany him to Chapel Hill.

Demas won the award for his participation in 43 combat missions in the European theater of operations as a member of the United States Air Force in World War II.

Col. Hardee will also explain to the cadets the establishment of the American legion medal by the North Carolina department of the legion, to be presented annually to the outstanding cadet in the unit, Col. Switzer said. This medal will be awarded later in the year, he added.

Other members of the University staff who will take part in the ceremony are Col. F. Carlyle Shepard, veterans adviser, and Maj. Roy W. Armstrong, admissions officer.

4,940 Veterans Receive Aid Here

Over 4,940 veterans received assistance from the University veterans advisement and guidance center during 1948, Gene Gaskill, veterans vocational adviser, announced yesterday.

Gaskill reported that 1,020 veterans were given vocational advisement in 1948 to help them determine what occupations they should enter. Other phases of advisement given by the guidance center included personal adjustment counseling with veterans and informal interviews.

Vocational guidance is required of all disabled veterans beginning school or on-the-job training under public law 16. However, it is optional for veterans under the GI bill.

Truman Begins Term of Office, Hits Commies

Pledges Leadership For Peace, Freedom

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20—(UP)—Harry S. Truman began a new term as president today with a ringing challenge to world Communism.

He pledged the leadership of this most powerful nation and its arms and economic resources to peace, freedom and a better way of life for all mankind.

The man from Missouri who confounded the political experts officially became president of the United States in his own right at 12:29 est. Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky was sworn in as vice president.

Mr. Truman delivered an inaugural address that was a calculated challenge to Soviet Russia. He promised that he would make a fight for world democracy comparable to his own uphill struggle to win him the highest office in the land.

The inauguration itself was an occasion of solemn simplicity. But it was attended by the most elaborate festivities in the nation's history.

Ku Klux Measure Killed in Georgia

ATLANTA, Jan. 20—(UP)—After three hours of fiery debate in which the Ku Klux Klan was held up as "a shining symbol of the Southern way of life," the Georgia House of Representatives today killed a bill to unmask the organization.

The vote was 89 to 65 against the proposal. Fifty-one members did not vote.

Proponents of the bill denied it was aimed directly at the Klan.

But Rep. Julian Bennett, eloquent young representative from Barrow county, attacked the bill as "aiming to do away with an organization that saved this country during reconstruction days" after the Civil War.

Rebel yells and the stamping of feet greeted Bennett as he told the legislators they would be listed with such Southern heroes as Robert E. Lee and Henry Grady if they would vote to kill the measure.

Pharmacy Sorority Holds Pledge Rites

Kappa Epsilon, national honorary pharmaceutical sorority, held pledging services Wednesday night for girls recently elected to membership.

Jean Snyder, president, conducted ceremonies for Margaret Booth, Allene Warren, Sarah Peagram and Betty Sparks. Following the pledging a social was held.

Hillel Services To Hear Morton

Neil Morton, executive secretary for the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen, will be guest speaker for the regular Hillel services tonight at 7:30 in the Roland Parker lounge at Graham Memorial.

Her subject will be "Religion and Social Action." Miss Morton has had many years of training in the religious field. She is a graduate of Flora McDonald college and has studied at the Biblical seminary in New York city.

For a number of years she served on the executive board of the Southern Presbyterian church, Richmond, Va. and has also been in charge of a children's and young people's work home in Bristol, Tenn.

Virtue Its Own Reward

The perennial question of teacher's salaries will soon be placed before the legislature. In the past, these proposals have taken the form of percent-increases, but at last forward-looking state leaders have come to realize that twenty or whatever percent of nothing is still nothing. This time, with Governor Scott backing it, a flat $2,400 minimum wage will be asked.

This bill will have and will need considerable support to overcome the inertia usually accompanying such appropriations. No doubt, it will be argued that this is too much for this state to pay; that the cost is too high. The future condition of North Carolina's schools may well depend on wise legislators who will point out that, conversely, a slipshod educational system, resulting from a lack of qualified teachers is an infinitely higher price in terms of lasting values.

We have become used to depending on the faithfulness of our teachers to compensate for our niggardliness. The gap between living costs and salaries is becoming too wide for this devotion to bridge. The teachers' reservoir of patience is running out.

There are in North Carolina colleges energetic, intelligent students of the sort needed to revitalize the schools, who, if they teach at all will not do so in their own state. Instead, they are entering business or anything which will adequately remunerate them for four years study. The incentive of a decent teaching salary would attract many of them.

Georgia, under Governor Arnall, established an adequate teacher's salary. It required political guts to put it across, but the "Peach" state is enjoying a better school system as a result.

A state is no better than its school system which in turn is no better than its teachers. If we hope to see progress in education, or even the maintenance of our old standards we must be willing to pay for it; for virtue will not go on being its own reward forever.

Glad To See You Back

Long one of the most popular places for dating and dancing, the Rendezvous room of Graham Memorial will be welcomed back to the campus tonight by students who have missed its facilities during the first three weeks of this quarter.

Commendations go to Graham Memorial director Bob Watson, program director Lib Stoney, Robert H. Peacock and others who have worked constantly since the Christmas holidays in enlarging and redecorating the campus cabaret so that it will be more pleasing to its users. The Rendezvous directors are also to be commended for the opening night program they have planned and for their cooperation with the polio fund drive in setting a voluntary fifty-cent cover charge for tonight only.

'Clearance' Never Before Necessary

The Forum States Its Case

By Jake Wicker,—Member-at-large of the Carolina Forum)

The Carolina Forum attempted to present Communist John Gates in an address to the campus beeause the Forum felt that such an address would be of interest to the student body. Concern about Communism and the Communist movement is widespread throughout the country and is particularly acute here in Chapel Hill. Gates's speech was to have been a denial of the charges in the indictment against him. The Forum feels that the extensive discussion following his appearance here idnicates that the indictment of the Communist leaders was a matter of interest to the students.

Many questions have arisen since last Wednesday and I shall now attempt to state the Forum's position on a few of them.

First, the Forum knew that Mr. Gates was a Communist. In the past two years at least three outstanding Communist leaders have spoken on the campus without public objection from the Administration. Miss Elizabeth Gurley Flynn spoke in Memorial Hall under the sponsorship of the CPU. Junius Scales has spoken a number of times for various campus organizations. Sam Hall has spoken to classes in the University. There appeared to be no reason why a Communist would not be allowed to speak here.

Second, the Forum knew that Gates was under indictment. According to the Constitution a person is innocent until proven guilty in public trial. The indictment should not have bared Gates from speaking.

Third, the Forum knew that the State Legislature was meeting in Raleigh and that it would consider appropriations for the University. The possible effect of Gates' appearance upon the members of the Legislature was considered. The Forum came to several conclusions. In the first place, the members of the Legislature are not morons. In the second place, appropriations are made in light of funds available, the needs of the institution, and the past record of the University's activities. The Forum does not believe that the activities of the University and its students during the sixty or so days that the Legislature is in session determine appropriations for the University. And thirdly, the Forum does not believe that a majority of the members of the Legislature are opposed to the right of the student body to hear speakers of all different political opinions. For these reasons the Forum did not think its action would prejudice the position of the University with the members of the State Legislature.

Fourth, the Forum recognizes the right of the Administration to deny the use of University buildings to any speaker. Moreover, no statute need be invoked to do so. Use of the University property is at all times under the direction of the Administration. No one's civil or legal rights were violated by the denial of the building for use by Mr. Gates. The University is not obligated to give a platform to anyone, regardless of his political philosophy. However, the Forum does feel that an educational right was violated. Students in a free academic atmosphere should have the right to hear speakers holding any and all views.

Fifth, the Forum did not feel that it was necessary to "clear through the Administration" before presenting Mr. Gates or any other speaker. The Forum has never done so in the past, nor have most other student organizations. . . even when a Communist speaker was being presented.

Sixth, the Forum feels that the student body should know that an "advisory" board composed of members of the Faculty and or Administration is under consideration by some people. This Board would have the right to approve or disapprove the presentation of any speaker to the student body by the Forum.

Dropping Him. . .

Worse Than War

By George E. Sokolsky

The President seems to feel that $6,000 a year is a lot of money; that anyone earning upward of $6,000 is in the middle bracket and should be taxed heavily. It is an interesting point of view because what is involved is the proletarizing of the American people.

For three centuries on this continent, it has been our theory that a man worked to improve the economic and social status of himself and his family. Not having grown out of a feudal society, and with no landed aristocracy of birth existing here, each individual enjoyed equality of opportunity to use his talents and his brawn to his best advantage. Here was, by that process, developed the highest standard of living known to man—and the greatest degree of independence within the law known anywhere on the face of the earth. It was that which attracted immigrants from every country to ours.

The income payments to individuals generally rose, in 1947, reaching the high average of $1,323 per capita. For comparative purposes, it may be cited that the average for 1929 was $680 per capita. If the average is $1,323 per capita, there must be a pull in both directions; apparently what the President seeks is to level down the top to bring up the bottom. In a word, his tax program is unrelated to revenue required by the government but is a process in a social revolution, the characteristic of which is not the redistribution of wealth, but the leveling of income.

The largest number of income tax payments is on incomes between $1,000 and $10,000 a year. It can thus be assumed that the middle bracket starts at $10,000 and runs to $50,000 a year. Above $50,000 the income tax payments begin to taper off. If the income tax exists to penalize high earnings, and therefore the more competent, then the penalties could with greatest fairness be placed on those receiving incomes of more than $50,000 a year, which, of course, would include the President of the United States as a result of recent legislation.

The President, instead, would start the penalties on supervisory workers, management, lawyers, doctors, high school principals, college professors, public officials, including members of Congress, his cabinet, mayors, governors, judges and such. In a word, he wants to level downward by taxing the intellectual and managerial leadership of the nation.

The loss to the individual will not be as great as the loss to the Nation. Free men work for their families or they sloth off. The incentive to achievement is generally the betterment of the family, the provision of a better home, superior education, increased opportunities for those whom one loves. If that incentive is removed, the breadwinner can see no advantage in the extra effort which once brought him an increased income and now produces only a vague collection, the bulk of which is to be transferred to the treasury of the United States.

Free Wigs for All

By George Dixon

Washington, Jan. 20.—Petrillo has just made piano player Truman a member of the Musicians' Union. It was a generous gesture, no doubt, but may lead to complications.

After just having had his salary and expenses raised to $190,000, the Chief Executive is going to look kind of silly if he is called out for picket duty and has to march up and down with a placard reading:

"I refuse to starve quietly. A dirty Scab Has My Job!"

* * *

Commented union member Phil Murray: "Migosh, $190,000! That makes the President almost as well paid as Morton Downey."

* * *

I have a premonition that the action of the district government in washing the paved streets with soap and water bodes ill for the nation capital's kiddies.

I can just hear a mother threatening her brat:

"If you write one more dirty word on the sidewalk I'm going to wash out your mouth with soap and water!"

* * *

Senator Owen Brewster, of Maine, confides he is organizing a baldheaded bloc in the Senate with a view to following the lead of Britain in the matter of advanced legislation.

Senator Brewster, who bade sad farewell to his locks some semesters ago, said he was entranced by the action of the British government in voting free wigs for the nation's bald.

The solon gloated hairlessly over a batch of paper clippings to the effect that the Ministry of Health is issuing 200 toupees a week. Twenty-three wigmakers, engaged in the output, estimate the potential demand for toupees will amount to about 100,000 a year.

The news story states that each wig costs the labor government $40, which means the government will have to appropriate an estimated $4,000,000 a year for this free wigging. But that isn't all. The wigs can be cleaned and pressed every two months at government expense, which will cost another $400,000 a year.

The health ministry is supplying the wigs in all sizes and colors. Women are offered five different models, ranging from patches to full coiffures.

While I am sure the average limey lad would look as good as usual in a government-issued wig, I am not so sure about our senators. Most of them are great individualists, with very individually shaped noggins.

If Senator Brewster makes any progress with his program and we have a "wigs for Congress" movement, we are going to be treated to some rather unnerving spectacles. With all the solons bushed out in government toupees the gallery visitor is likely to think he is looking down upon a collection of bird's nests and rush out and join the Audubon society.

I greatly fear it may tend to detract from traditional senatorial dignity. In time the distinguished solons may come to be referred to as a gang of tufts.

Freedom the Paramount Issue

By Murray Goldenthal

Apathy has long been a sacred American tradition, Hallowed by the years, and glorified in our folklore, it has become as intrinsically American as munching a hot dog, and sipping a coke. From the battle of Lexington to Pearl Harbor it has been the American way to underestimate crises and disregard danger until awakened by the contact of a brick with our heads. There is an element, however, in our present crisis with Russia sufficiently important to cause me to advocate overthrowal of this institution, at the personal risk of being called un-American. The brick that is going to awaken us this time is no ordinary brick, in fact it is quite unusual—it has radioactive qualities.

We are at present engaged in a cold war not of our own making. Reducing the situation to the simplest terms,—we are the strongest nation in the world, not because of our Army, Navy, or Air Force, but because we possess the Atom bomb. With full knowledge of this unchallengable power we have attempted no territorial aggression; on the contrary we have made concerted efforts to achieve a just and lasting peace. We have not been met half way or ever part way by the Russians, who instead have incorporated territory into their orbit and are continuing this policy of imperialism by every means short of open conflict. The only obstacle to their achieving complete domination of Europe has been the opposition of the U.S. keep in mind that it is generally conceded that Russia will have atomic energy within five years, thus giving her the favorable balance of power. Consider then the following question: if Russia has not cooperated for the last three years but has rather undertaken a thinly disguised policy of imperialism—is it likely that she will cooperate, and abandon this policy when she does have the Atom bomb, and consequently the greater power?

I certainly do not claim to know the answer. Every conceivable form of logic, however, forces us to the conclusion that such a likelihood is improbable. We have two alternatives. We can continue our present policy of containment and depend upon the magnanimity of the Kremlin, once it has the supreme power. Or we can force a diplomatic showdown, immediately, at the level—to the end of securing a real peace, without stress and constant crises. If our request is rejected there can be little doubt that the Russians do not want peace. We will then know our enemy and we must demand peace while we are still in a position to demand. If we still receive no response we must take the initiative to preserve the values which we cherish. We would then have a situation analogous to the 1930's when intervention at any time would have averted the slaughter of countless thousands. Our choice is between freedom and domination, not between war & peace. If war should come we would know then that we had tried our utmost to avoid it.

British Record in Palestine Not So 'Judicial' to Zionists

Editor:

In his letter to the DTH, Jan. 19, 1949, our English student-correspondent proposes with somewhat typical British flair for "judicial approaches" a watch-and-wait attitude in the solution of the Middle East controversy between Israel and the Arab states.

As a Zionist, I am familiar with one of the original statements of Zionist ideology in Pinsker's Auto-Emancipation, written almost one hundred years ago. Antisemitism was as rife then as it is in our time, and though the Jews would need friendly neighbors, it would be by their own efforts primarily that they would solve their problems, or at least bring them to a head to where the majority-group community would recognize their responsibilities for solution. On the other hand, Theodore Herzl and the political Zionists some sixty years ago recognized the need for legalizing Jewish efforts attain a homeland. The first Zionist convention which was held at Basle, 1897, declared, "The aim of Zionism is to establish a publicly assured legally secured homeland for the Jewish people in Palestine." It was to these ends that the monarchs of Europe and the Near East were approached to assure "legalities" and "judicial approaches." It was with such "judicial approach" that the victorious Allies in 1917 incorporated the Balfour Declaration (issued by Great Britain) into the League of Nations mandate that was given to Great Britain.

Given these judicial approaches to the problem, why did the mandatory power, Great Britain, proceed to pervert her trust by (1) partitioning Palestine at the Jordan and the creation of Transjordania in 1922; (2) restricting Jewish immigration and land purchase in 1930; (3) reducing Jewish immigration into Palestine to a trickle in 1939—these to mention a few evidences of the respect the British gave to their mandate, judicially accepted and rewarded to them, all without considering the moral implications involved in these perversions or the motives behind them.

First, the motives behind the British perversions of their mandate: (1) desire for friendly Arab allies in the Middle East for Empire security reasons, an understandable desire, yet always conducted sub-rosa while pretending to be "fair" to both sides; (2) desire for Near East oil, also understandable, yet the methods used to achieve these ends speak rather poorly for a mandate nation, a Christian-moral nation who would sacrifice Arab and Jewish lives to colonialism with its poverty and degradation, and forbid immigration of peoples threatened with (and exposed to) extinction at the hands of a Nazi enemy. One wonders at the success of British intentions when Arab Egyptians rise up against the John Bull in their midst, when Iraqi "allies" foment revolt during a crucial period during the second World War, when the Nazi advance in the Egyptian desert is defended by Anzac and Zionist troops, rather than the natives of the land. In truth, while perverting her mandate (a judicial mandate, no less), Great Britain manages to play another role, friend to the Arabs.

The moral issues involved in this double role of the Foreign Office and a current democratic socialist government are too black already—the record involves hundreds of thousands of Jews.

Tar Heels Scalp Indians In Conference Battle, 69-61

Carson Hits For 29 Markers In Wild and Wooly Cage Tilt

By Zane Robbins

A fighting gang of Tar Heels romped over highly-touted William and Mary in a Southern conference thriller last night in Woollen gym. Carolina won, going away, 69-61.

The Carolinians started the night off in fine fashion by grabbing a 13-point lead before the Indians knew the game was on. Forward Coy Carson claimed seven points in the initial spurt and went on to rack up a total of 29 for the night.

A tight sliding-zone defense, a Tom Scott specialty, completely baffled the visitors for the first seven minutes, and Chet Giermak, the point-happy Indian pivotman failed to solve the veil hung around him until mid-way the final period.

Holley Breaks Ice

After Carolina had splurged for six minutes and 30 seconds, Bob Holley caught hold of the ball as it came off the Indian backboard and flipped it in for the first William and Mary tally.

The two teams battled on near-even terms throughout the remainder of the first stanza and the Tar Heels led, 36-22, at intermission.

Carson and Nemo Nearman set the pace throughout the first half and continued to spark their mates through the hectic second stanza which saw the Old Dominion cagers threaten seriously on several occasions.

Nearman Grabs Tip

Nearman took the tip from Giermak at the beginning of the final period and Nyimicz scored with a set after 15 seconds. Carson dropped in another action basket at the 1:10 mark and Bob Holley, Bill Akers, and Giermak retaliated with consecutive field goals for the visitors to run the score to 40-28.

The pattern set in the early minutes of the period held true throughout the last frame until the final five minutes when the Virginians came to sudden life with a flurry of baskets against the Carolina reserves.

With four minutes and 45 seconds remaining in the game, the Tar Heels held a comfortable 15-point lead, 43-28, but the visitors caught fire at this point and proceeded to make things plenty hot for their high-flying hosts.

Akers converted on a free throw attempt after being fouled by Ryan to start the fireworks. McMillan followed with another charity basket, but Carson nullified the plays with a two-pointer.

Off to the Races

Holley scored again on a push. Giermak hooked one in. Bunting made good on a free throw attempt. Charlie Sokol dropped a set, and the Indians were off to the races against Tar Heel second and third-stringers.

The reserves were able to take care of themselves, however, and managed to toss in a few points of their own in the waning minutes of the game.

Nemo Nearman turned in what was probably his best show of the year as he talled 12 points and controlled the backboards all night. He also played well on defense, holding the high-scoring Giermak to a minimum.

Coy Carson exceeded his 16-point per game average by loop-

Cameron Presents Tournament Plans

DURHAM, Jan. 20—(UP)—The 28th annual Southern Conference Basketball tournament will be held here March 3-5, conference officials announced today.

Tickets for the three-day tournament will go on sale Feb. 10, with mail orders only accepted in order to assure fair distribution, said Eddie Cameron, Duke athletic director and chairman of the conference basketball committee.

The entire tournament will be played in Duke university's indoor stadium, Cameron said. Priorities on seat assignments will be based on the time applications are postmarked, he added. No applications mailed before midnight of Feb. 9 will be considered.

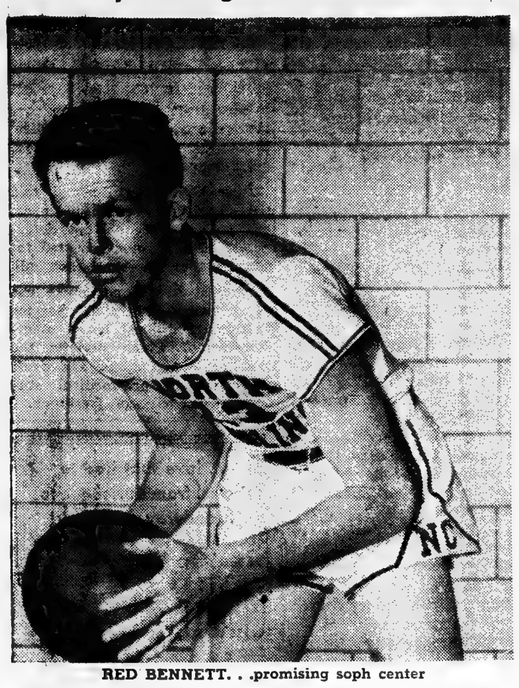
The eight or more teams in the tournament will be selected at a meeting of the conference basketball committee here Feb. 27. Conference records are the only criterion considered, Cameron said.

North Carolina State won last year's tournament out of a field of 10 entries.

Dan Hill, assistant athletic director at Duke, will be in charge of all arrangements for the tournament except ticket sales, Cameron said.

Ticket applications should be ence Basketball tournament, Duke mailed to the Southern Confer-Station, Durham. Price of tournament books is $9 each, with a limit of four books per fan.

Rubish Signs



It was announced late yesterday afternoon that Mike Rubish, stellar Carolina defensive end during the past season, has signed with the Los Angeles Dons of the All-America conference.

The 200-pound Senior from Holidays Cove, W.Va., turned in several excellent performances for the Tar Heels last year and is rated as one of the best flankers on the squad. He is top-notch "pro" material and has been on the verge of signing with a big league club since January 1.

Carolina, Duke Only Schools In State With Lacrosse Teams

By Morton Glasser

The announcement that Carolina will re-instate lacrosse as a varsity sport this year gives the Tar Heels and Duke the distinction of being the only two colleges in the Old North State to offer the game on their athletic programs.

Lacrosse has always been a popular sport in the New England and Middle Atlantic districts, and since the end of the war, is gaining increasing favor in the South.

During 1946 and 1947 several Carolina students organized an informal lacrosse team and held intrasquad scrimmages. In 1944 the sport was organized on a varsity basis, and a team composed mainly of pre-flight students played two contests with Duke, losing their first meet but coming back to triumph in their second tussle.

N C Whips Duke 11-7

The Blue Devils emerged victorious 8-6 in the first contest after racking up two quick scores in the closing two minutes of play to break a 6-6 deadlock. Carolina evened things up in the second meeting by winning 11-7 as Austin knocked in five goals for the Tar Heels.

Acting as student coach of the squad that year was Marshall Austin who attended Drexel college in Philadelphia where he was an All-American lacrosse player. Besides Austin the Tar Heels had the services of another former All-American in Fred Donnelly. The squad consisted of 34 players, many of whom had never had previous experience in the game.

Before 1944 Carolina fielded but was forced to discontinue lacrosse teams in 1940 and 1941, the sport during the war.

Duke, Lacrosse Power bf

Duke, rated among the top five lacrosse powers in the nation last season, has produced several strong teams within recent years. The Blue Devils have attracted many experienced players from Baltimore, labeled as the game's capital, and are considered a good bet to give their opposition again this year plenty of trouble.

The Tar Heels expect to meet the Duke lacrossemen in a home and home series this spring.

COUNCIL CONSIDERS

LEXINGTON, Va., Jan. 20—(UP)—Washington and Lee university's athletic council will meet tomorrow night to choose between 16 applicants seeking to succeed Art Lewis as head football coach of the colonial school.

Swimmers Prepare For LaSalle Meet Here on Saturday

A tank-full of stars will perform for the local clientele in Bowman Gray pool on Saturday afternoon when two of the nations top swimming teams, Carolina and LaSalle, clash in an inter-sectional feature of the 1949 Tar Heel schedule.

The Explorers will bring a well-balanced squad to Chapel Hill in an effort to snap the 33-game Carolina winning skein. Joe Verdeur, Olympic swimmer, will be the top paddle star in the Sabbath day meet, but a quartet of Carolina tankers will be out to put him in the shade with high class performances of their own.

The four, Norm Sper, Dick Twining, Jim Thomas and Jess Greenbaum, have sparked the Carolinians all year, and each holds singular distinctions.

Sper in Backstroke

Sper, who flunked his Olympic diving try-out by the narrowest of margins, .29 points, has been switched to the backstroke event in order to strengthen the Tar Heel chances in that division. He was Southern conference backstroke champ in 1947.

Thomas, holder of the 220-yard South Atlantic AAU freestyle record, is Coach Casey's top distance man.

Twining was named to the All-America swimming team as a sprinter last year and will be counted upon heavily by the Tar Heels in the week-end tilt.

Greenbaum was an honorable mention All-American, and holds the 50 and 100-yard South Atlantic AAU free-style records.

Bob Reagan, an All-America free-style performer, Farrell Devlin, Joe Sweeney, and Lawrence McCarty are among the top-notch LaSalle tankmen.

The Explorers will meet N.C. State in Raleigh this afternoon before coming here tomorrow.

Powerful State Frosh Humbles Tar Babies by Score of 59-46

By Lew Chapman

The first half of last night's lucrative cage doubleheader at Woollen gymnasium proved to be a disappointment to Carolina partisans when in the opening game the Tar Heel freshmen succumbed to a superior five from State, 59-46.

In losing, Coach Jim Hamilton's charges sustained their third defeat as against six victories so far this campaign. The bitter pill to swallow is that all three of the setbacks have been meted out at the hands of Big Four, the yearlings having lost to the frosh of Duke and Wake Forest previously.

The State freshmen came rolling into Woollen gym with an impressive record, having only lost to the potent Duke Blue Imps, and wasted no time in demonstrating to the crowd their prowess. After the first five minutes the issue was never in doubt despite the determination of the fighting Tar Babies.

Carolina had a brief fling at the lead when, following the tip-off, Lenny Guyes and Buddy Cheek, who played creditably at guard in place of the ailing Ham Crowder, dumped in deuces to give the Tar Babies a short-lived 4-0 lead.

But as expected, the youngsters from Raleigh way proceeded to catch fire as tricky Lee Terrill and big Bob Cook, a wonderful pair for State, collected enough points to provide a 10-9 lead for the Wolfcubs after five minutes had elapsed.

State kept rolling as Carolina could not get a concentrated attack into action and had to be content with scattered two-pointers made mostly on long chances. Paced by an unerring duo from Indiana in the persons of Cook and Joe Stoll who collected 27 markers between them in the first half, State held a commanding intermission lead of 39-24.

The Carolina yearlings performed nobly in the second 20 minutes and even outscored the Raleigh lads, 22-20 but the initial deficit was too much to make up. The Tar Babies did nibble the lead down to nine points at one spot in the second half only to see two quick State goals stifle the rally.

For the Tar Heel frosh, forward Dick Harter was again high scorer for the second consecutive game as he poured in 15 credits in his vain efforts. Despite the handicap of four early personal fouls on him, Buddy Johnson managed to notch 10 points while smooth-working John Bowersox tallied eight markers.

For State Cook, their big but extremely agile center, scored 21 and his teammate, Stoll, rolled in 16 points.

The lineups:

Carolina (46)	Pos.	(59) State
Johnson (10)	F.	(3) Holt
Harter (15)	F.	(16) Stoll
Guyes (2)	C.	(21) Cook
Cheek (4)	G.	(9) Terrill
Bowersox (8)	G.	(9) Jackmowski

Substitutions: Carolina: Eckert (1), Redding (4), Reuning (2). State: Wiggins, Anderson (1), Waddell, Lumley, Faulkner.

Ross Wins Crown In Boxing Tourney

Jack Ross, 215-pound Tar Heel heavyweight, decisioned Ray Goforth, a 207-pound Kannapolis mauler, Wednesday night in Raleigh Memorial auditorium in the open division finals of the 11th Annual Eastern Carolinas Golden Gloves tournament. Ross was the only Carolina entry to win in the tourney.

Jimmy Stafford, another Tar Heel, also reached the finals but was ko'd by Ronald Short of Hickory after 1:42 of the second round. Short an open division lightweight, was stamped as the "class of the tourney."

ing in 29 markers to take the offensive honors from William and Mary's "Fuzz" McMillan, who netted 21 for the night and was easily the top man for the visitors.

Rip Ryan was a circus on the court all night with his fancy ball handling and stellar play under the boards.

Hugo Kappler hit for eight points during the night and teamed with Nearman to give the Scottmen an unstoppable backboard combo.

Captain Dan Nyimicz was probably the outstanding defensive man and managed to slip nine points through the hoop in the course of the evening.

'Lousee Lovairs'

'Franch Techneek' Results In Gong for Marsan, Model

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 20—(UP)—Love "Professor" Claude Marsan was found guilty today of corrupting the minds of college boys with a spicy lecture on his three-hour "franch techneek of loffing a woman."

After an hour and 20 minutes of dispassionately reviewing the passionate evidence, a jury of nine elderly housewives and three businessmen gave the gong to the bird-like Frenchman and the red-haired model he used in his act.

Marsan paced nervously in the hall while the jury was talking it over. He raised his eyes in despair when he heard the end was at hand for his crusade to reform "lousee American lovairs."

"Zees means I weel not be able to geev my lectures anee more," he wailed.

The jury found him and his helper guilty on two counts of participating in and giving a lewd lecture to a teen-age crowd in a bar annex Nov. 19. Judge Harold Schweitzer ordered them to show up Feb. 3 for a probation hearing and sentencing.

If probation is denied, Marsan's only audience for his monologues on the slow-and-easy way to keep "ze woman happee" will be in the county jail. The maximum term is six months. Both also may be fined $500.

"Ah, well," shrugged the downcast love teacher. "Eet ees to be expected zat ze path of ze crusader should be 'ard to travel. But I am steel conveenced that meelyons of Americains can benefit by my three-hour lovemaking system. I am very sorree that the girl was conveected. She was eenocent."

The model, 24-year-old Barbara Weir, gave a sharp tug to her tan jacket and snapped to reporters that she thought she was sorry, too.

"The verdict was very unjust," said the redhead, who wore a transparent evening gown at the lecture while the Frenchman realistically demonstrated the first hour and a half buildup of his technique on her.

The jury retired at 10:12 this morning after the handsome, young judge warned them it was no defense that the defendants believed they were reforming the 15-minute businessman type of lover.

"Freedom is not unrestricted license to act according to one's will," said Judge Schweitzer.

The jury's decision that Marsan was no crusader, but a businessman using sex to make a few bucks off curious youngsters, ended a three-day sensational trial.

Harvard Affirms It Will Not Seek Draft Deferments

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 20—(UP)—Harvard Medical school announced tonight it will refuse to seek draft deferments for premedical students lest the medical profession become a refuge for draft-dodgers.

Dean C. Sidney Burwell said the school will continue its present policy of requesting deferments only for men accepted for admission to the school next fall.

He said it will not make use of national Selective Service headquarters' local board memorandum 7 which permits the provisional acceptance and draft deferment of pre-medical students—even college freshmen.

Fox Outlines Member Drive Planned by Y

Budget Requires $9,030 in Funds

"During 1948 the YMCA has strived constantly to increase the effectiveness of its program, thereby performing a greater service to the student body and the University," Charlie Fox, YMCA Finance committee chairman said yesterday in outlining the Y's forthcoming membership drive.

A reorganized Finance committee completed the 1948-49 YM budget, calling for an expenditure of $9,030. Through pledges by students at fall registration, $4,500 has been raised. By means of a three-point program, the approximate $4,500 difference is to be raised.

First, a solicitation of all faculty members will be made, to permit the faculty to share in the work of the YMCA. Secondly, a student drive will be held to permit those students who did not contribute at registration to do so. Thirdly, a drive will be conducted among friends and alumni of the University.

Following a program planned by a cabinet of 26 men, the year marked the organization of the Cosmopolitan club, the Freshman council, a high school club and a two-day freshman camp near Asheboro.

The cabinet met weekly to evaluate, plan and administer its program. Cabinet members headed committees of more than 100 men, taking part in conferences, house discussions and freshman work.

The Cosmopolitan club, composed of most of the University's 55 students from other countries,

Dimes Drive Nets $800 First Week

E. Carrington Smith, March of Dimes chairman for Orange county, yesterday announced first returns from the current campaign at $800, collected in Chapel Hill during the first week.

Outlying district figures will not be available until next week, but Smith said he expects a very successful drive. He said he hopes contributions will go well over the $8,500 quota set for Orange county.

With dime collectors placed in every vantage spot, Smith is looking for University students and townspeople to put their shoulders to the wheel and push over Chapel Hill's quota of $3,000. After the recent epidemic, people are more aware of the presence of polio everywhere and "the students are more interested than ever before in this campaign," Smith said.

Meanwhile, the Daily Tar Heel-sponsored campus drive, with its quota set at $7,500, began yesterday with the placing of more than 40 dime containers in fraternity and sorority houses, women's dormitories, the Scuttlebutt, Medical school building, Monogram club, Lenoir hall, Vet's club, Archer house, GM main lounge and the Rendezvous room. In addition, cans will be placed in several points within the Y building.

Frost Speaks On Narrative In Saunders

Informal Lecture Includes Recital

The strength and importance of good narrative was discussed informally yesterday afternoon in Saunders hall by Robert Frost, four-time winner of the Pulitzer prize for poetry.

Appearing before a large audience Thursday night in Hill hall, Frost gave a lecture-recital, reading and commenting on such well-known favorites as "Birches," "Love and a Question," "Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening," and "Mending Wall."

"Some people don't know the difference between a tellable story and an untellable story," the famous poet told his audience yesterday afternoon which included members of Charles Eaton's creative writing classes.

Frost remarked that much of Henry James and William Faulkner would be difficult to tell because their work usually deals with a state of mind rather than a continuous series of events. He also pointed out that many of O. Henry's stories are "rigged," that the reader knows in advance what is going to happen.

When questioned about the correct proeedure in analyzing poetry, Frost commented that "a poem is like a performance. You can play it, if you know what the game is." The reader can also check into the historical or philosophical background of the poet or poem, the lecturer said, but it is not necessary to do so if the meaning comes across through the reading.

Frost, who is the guest of Dr. Clifford P. Lyons, will be in Chapel Hill until tomorrow. His appearance on campus was sponsored by the English department this year as it was last year.

Truman Calls Soviet Russia 'Dictatorship'

Missouri Solons Hear President

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21—(UP)—President Truman today reportedly described Soviet Russia as a dictatorship instead of a true Communist state.

He is said to have drawn the difference in impromptu remarks to a breakfast meeting of Missouri congressmen and others whom he asked to help avert war by backing his world economic uplift program.

Mr. Truman announced his world plan in his inaugural address Thursday in which he denounced Communism as a threat to peace but did not mention Russia by name.

Congressmen who attended the breakfast said he named Russia specifically and pictured the difference between a Communist state and a dictatorship.

The president is said to have remarked that in Russia all authority is vested in a few men who decide what the people shall have, whereas in a true Communist state all people are treated and share equally.

Expanding further on his world economic program, Mr. Truman said prosperity of the United States would be helped by improving the economic lot of other countries.

Petition Received Against Crowding In Seven Quonsets

By Mike McDaniel

A petition signed by 75 residents of the quonset hut area was sent to the Housing office yesterday protesting the administration-ordered closing of all but seven huts.

A notice from the operations office appeared on bulletin boards Tuesday in the 10 huts slated for closure, stating the numbers of the huts which would remain open, and directing the occupants to move before Monday.

The petition, signed by 75 of the 98 men reportedly now assigned to quonset huts, stated: "We the undersigned, living in the quonset hut area, object to the action of housing authorities in closing all but seven quonset huts. Because this would place a minimum of 12 students in each hut, we petition the Housing office to authorize the opening of two additional quonset huts with a maximum of 10 students per hut."

In reply, a letter was released from the Housing office today, stating:

"This office does not have the authority to make a change in the number of quonset huts to be used during a quarter. However, we believe that within the next week, enough of the boys now in the quonset huts will be transferred to dormitories to remedy the situation, thereby leaving not more than approximately 10 boys to each hut."

The student legislature passed a resolution Thursday night condemning existing conditions in the quonset hut area, and protesting the action of authorities in closing all but seven huts. The policy of closing a hut when the number of occupants had decreased to 10 members reportedly had resulted in much inconvenience on the part of residents, as it necessitated moving quite often. A committee was appointed by the legislature to request that 2 more huts be opened, and that conditions be improved in the hut area.

The committee, consisting of Jack Worsham, Ben Jones, John O'Neal, and Joe Leary, met with Assistant Dean of Students Bill Friday, Ray Jeffries, and Bill Green from the operations office, to request an extension on the moving date until next Friday.

The extension was granted, and a meeting was tentatively set by the legislature committee for Monday afternoon with housing officer James Wadsworth.

Only those huts with good stoves were chosen to remain open, and fire extinguishers are to be placed in these huts, officials said.

Occupants of Nash hall were directed to move into Miller hall the first of this week.

Main Speakers For Y Retreat Announced

Two Ministers To Lead Talks

Dr. George D. Heaton, minister of the Myers Park Baptist church of Charlotte, and Rev. Howard Wilkinson, Methodist minister of Asheville, are to be main speakers at the YM—YWCA winter retreat to be held at Montreat Feb. 18-20.

Dr. Heaton will speak on "What it means to be a Christian in this kind of world" at the Gaither chapel at Montreat, Feb. 19 at 9:15 in the morning.

"Some solutions to our problems" will be his subject that night following a group banquet in the Assembly inn.

Rev. Wilkinson is scheduled to address the group on "Areas for application of our faith" Feb. 18 at 8:15 in the evening in Gaither chapel. He will also conduct the Sunday morning service at 11:15 having as his subject "Dedicating ourselves to the Christian responsibility."

Rev. Wilkinson received his bachelor of divinity at Duke Divinity school and was associate pastor of the First Methodist church in Charlotte prior to accepting a place in Asheville. He has also worked with the Fellowship of Reconciliation.

Dr. Heaton is a graduate of Denison university in Ohio, and of the Southern Baptist Theological seminary of Louisville, Ky. Further graduate study was done at the College of the Bible in Louisville, Ky. In addition to the degrees of A.B. and Th. M., he received an honorary degree of doctor of divinity from Georgetown college.

Dr. Heaton, who is regarded as a pioneer and authority in the field of religious education, is a member of the state board of North Carolina Baptists, and of the Southern Baptist convention as well as holding many other church and civic offices.

UWF Converts Into Work Club Under New Plan

Members of the United World Federalists organization of the University met this week and agreed to convert their group into a work club with no formal committees, spokesmen said yesterday.

The plans for the structural changes of the organization were formulated and presented by Chairman Marie Wicker, who explained that the new plan will afford more time for individual work projects. She added that considerable time has been lost in the past by executive officers whose time has been consumed by administrative duties.

Under the new plan, the active members of the organization will take upon themselves the responsibilities of sponsoring United World Federalists week on campus next month and of preparing scripts for the weekly Tuesday night radio programs.

The members will continue to meet at 5 o'clock each Thursday in Roland Parker lounge 3. The purpose of the meetings will be the presentation and explanation of the projects of the individuals interested in world government. No announcements other than those in the Daily Tar Heel will be made concerning these meetings.

This plan of "putting the members on their own" will be an experiment until the end of this quarter. At that time the group will evaluate its work and decide on plans for spring quarter.
